In the spring, a young man's or (woman's) fancy turns to thoughts of — love. "The Enchanted Cup" by Dorothy James Roberts is an adaptation of the story of Tristan and Isolde. It has been hailed by critics as the best love story of our age. If, however, you are one of those stuffy individuals who has not yet been bitten by the love bug, you might enjoy "The Dead Sea Scrolls" by Miller Burrows. This fascinating book gives an insight to our understanding of Biblical times. Both books are recent additions to our library.

Last week movie goers who journeyed into Maryville found themselves confronted with a decision — "Summertime" at the Park and "The Lieutenant wore Skirts" at the Capitol. The first of these was truly superb as to scenic attraction, the setting being in Venice.

"Good-bye My Lady," a story of a boy and his dog will be at the Capitol early next week.

Spanish Club Has Party

Members of the Spanish club recently had an exchange program with the Spanish club of Knoxville College. Each group provided some entertainment for a visiting group of men from Spain. Everyone enjoyed a mambo demonstration and records.

This week plans were made for having the Knoxville group here for a meeting and dancing. Also nominations were made for next year's officers.

Senior Trip Indefinite

The date has not been set for the senior trip to Alcoa as yet, but it will be approximately a three-hour tour through the plant.

IRC Has Discussion At Meeting In Y Rooms

The last regular meeting of International Relations Club was held in the Y rooms, on Monday, April 16. There was a panel discussion on how the international students feel toward America. Included in the panel were two guests from Knoxville College. A comparison of America and other countries in education and other things were discussed. Keith Ham was moderator.

The next regular meeting will be on April 30, at which Mr. Hamlet will be the speaker. Following this there will be an election of officers for the coming semester. All interested persons are invited to attend.

One student to another: "I don't like to repeat gossip, but what else can you do with it?

It will be a comfort to your widow in her tears to know that you couldn't take it with you.

Sports Spotlights

By Bob Evans

Spring Sports Finally Come To Life

The sportsworld has finally gotten into full swing with at least three or four varsity games every week and an intramural softball game every day. As a matter of afct, things are in such full swing as to make this writer's head swim. There are at present three varsity sports underway: baseball, tennis and track, the first of which is considered a major varsity sport and the second two of which are considered minor varsity sports. However, I think the fans will agree with me that the sport which they consider to be of major importance is that spot in which they are most interested, be they spectator or participant.

Baseball Season Is Ushered In

The official start of the baseball season was ushered in last week with weather which was more reminiscent of football than baseball season. But things have warmed up this week, and as the weather has brightened up so let us hope the prospects of our team have brightened.

I did not get to see the first game of the season in which we were thoroughly trounced by LMU. However, I did suffer through the rather inclement weather on Tuesday to see us pull a reversal of the day before coming out on the long end of the score against Milligan.

Ferguson Forces In Two Runs

Milligan jumped to a quick two run advantage but in the home half of the third Gayle Ferguson, rookie first-sacker, pulled off one of the craziest plays I have ever seen. With Bill Dent on second and Don Hill on first Ferguson singled to left, but he made the mistake of rounding first without checking the other two baserunners. He was halfway to second before he discovered his mistake and in no position to return to first. Consequently, Milligan found themselves in the happy position of having three runners off base.

Fortunately for the Scotties, Milligan did not play their cards right. Milligan threw from base to base trying to get all three runners. Finally, Dent broke for home. The throw from second beat him but he slid into the catcher causing him to bobble the base. Hill scored behind him and Ferguson held up at second.

Prediction

Although the tennis team had the first scheduled athletic contest of the spring season and although baseball is considered the major sport of this season, I would like to predict that good things come in very unheralded packages. In other words, I predict that our newly-instituted and little-recognized track team will fare better than either our baseball squad or tennis team.

Our track team, though it has but four meets this year, is shaping up very well. Many of our school track records are on the verge of being broken and I further predict that some will be broken when our boys really get in shape. The 440, pole vault, discus and javelin records might well be broken this seaosn.

Sewanee Ace Runs 100 In 9.6

Bob Keck ran the 100-yard dash in 9.6 seconds to help the University of the South (Sewanee) swamp Austin College's track squad 92½ to 8½ last Saturday afternoon. Needless to say, Kecks' time broke the Sewanee school record for the 100. Fortunately, the Highlander Harriers do not run against Sewanee in a regularly scheduled inter-collegiate track meet. There is a slim possibility, however, that our track might go to the state track meet. In this case they would meet not only Sewanee, but also U-T, ETS, Vandy, and Memphis State.

Tennis Squad Is Constantly Changed

Coach K. P. Johnson has been continually changing the top six positions. However, all the changes in the starting line-ups are not necessarily due to changes in ladder position.

Coach Johnson has carefully manipulated the starting six, especially positions five and six, so as to find the team's greatest potential strength.

The ladder positions of the squad have changed very little because with matches popping up as frequently as they do and inclement weather to boot, the squad has had very little time to play ladder matches.

Johnson Is Written Up In The Journal

Coach Johnson and the Scottie Netters got a very commendable write-up by Dewey Helmwick in the April 8 issue of the Knoxville Journal. The following is an excerpt from the write-up:

"Ken Johnson, the hard-working Maryville College tennis mentor year in and year out comes up with an outfit capable of holding its own among the area's smaller schools.

"The Scottie coach, who also tutors the track team, has compiled an enviable net record over the eight years he has been at the school's tennis helm. His teams have won 50 and lost 11 against schools in their own league. . . ."

AS I SEE IT....

By Jack Woodhull

Since I am only a freshman, I can't tell you much about previous Maryville College baseball teams. But I think I can tell you about our team this year. So far our record is 4 wins and 2 defeats. We have a young team, but still have some pretty good veterans to keep it going. Among these are Don Moore, Bill Evans, John West, Chuck Dunn, and Bill Dent. Our four triumphs were over Hiwassee (2), Milligan, and Tennessee Wesleyan. The opposition hasn't been too strong except, perhaps Tennessee Wesleyan and L.M.U., but our team has improved a little with each game.

The pitching is starting to develop as shown in the fine game pitched by Jim Cole against Wesleyan last Saturday. In the other half of the doubleheader, Bill Evans also pitched a good game only to lose it by a score of 4-1.

At the moment, Bill Evans is our leading hitter with a batting average of about .500. Don Moore and Bill Dent are also contributing heavily to the cause with an average of .333. In the first couple of games our fielding wasn't very sharp as we committed quite a few errors—both mental and physical. It has improved as we got in shape and had a few ball games under our belts. Also many of us had not played ball together before and as we got used to each other's style of play, we improved.

Looking at the schedule we find that we are to entertain Carson Newman here this afternoon. Carson Newman always has a good ball club and it should be a thrilling ball game as the two teams renew their "friendly" rivalry. Last year we split the two game series, but we are hoping to improve on last year's showing.

Dr. Edward Taborsky Gives Glimpses Behind Iron Curtain In Lecture Here

By Carolyn Cones

The initial speaker in the newly-organized Lecture Series was Dr. Edward Taborsky, connected with the Czechoslovakian government until the Communist invasion, now an author, lecturer, and instructor.

Dr. Taborsky condemned the new Communist policy of "salesmanship"—the expression of the desire for peaceful competition—as a "terrific lie . . . not a change of heart but a change of methods" and added, "They are more dangerous now than ever before."

One of the number of opportunities Dr. Taborsky had to observe the Russian people firsthand occurred in 1943 when acting in the capacity of diplomat, he attended a welcoming banquet in Moscow. While there he noticed the fear that the people had of Stalin—a fear which could even be noticed in the people's reaction when he started to speak.

Dr. Taborsky said that a cue to what is now going on in Russia is the result of Stalin's death—the consequenting collective leadership and the plea of unity where no unity exists.

He stated that the food and living conditions of the common man in Russia are worse after the termination of the five-year plans than before; as a result, the original enthusiasm for the rebuilding of the country has died away. The average Russian today, he said, lives in one room and shares a kitchen with other families.

In 1944 and 1945 many Russians obtained a chance to catch a glimpse on the other side of the iron curtain when they were drafted into the Soviet Army. Dr. Taborsky stated that when the troops came ino Czechoslovakia, the people here alarmed and surprised at the number of peasants being arrested. The reason? The peasants had so much more than the Russians that the latter believed them to be capitalists. The Russian government later experienced trouble when these troops returned home and discussed the better conditions which they had seen elsewhere.

Dr. Taborsky estimated that about 95% of the Russian people were non-communists, or "radished"—red on the outside, white on the inside—but the chance of overthrow through internal means was slight, since the Russians are not by nature a revolutionary people. He added, however, "Time is on the side of the party which uses it best."

Student Vols To Send Literature To Indonesia

The mission field project selected this year by Student Vols is the purchasnig of Christian literature for Indonesia. Money is being collected to be sent to the United Student Christian Council, and disribution of the literature will be done through the Student Christian movement.

Indonesia was chosen for the project, since it is a young country which is looking for guidance and which might be influenced by communist doctrnes.

The goal is one hundred dollars, and approximately three-fourths of this has now been collected. Judy Ross is in charge, and Clem Birkelbach is collecting the money.

Harvey Benson Has New Red Power Mower

By Barbara Wilkie

Harvey Benson, the "official" grass-cutter of Maryville College now has a newer, larger mower to help him in his big job of keeping the campus trim and neat. Those who remember him driving the little green mower will now be able to see him at work with a bright red "Toro Spinner," complete with a "buggy" attached to ride on.

Harvey says it does a good job but is a little hard to handle standing up. It can be operated either standing or sitting. The "Toro" has a 31-inch cut and is more efficient than the other one, which had a 24-inch blade.

Now that it is warmer weather and the rainy season has come, Harvey will probably be seen at his job every week. He didn't offer to let this reporter try it out, but maybe someone else can persuade him to let him work it.

Kappa Phi Plans Several Activities

By Fred Sanner

The Kappa Phis will hold their regular meeting tonight in the Kappa Phi club house. Two important items will be presented before the club members for society approval. The constitutional committee will present the revised constitution and by-laws, and an operational procedure will be established.

The nominating committee will present its slate of officers, after which an election will be held in the early part of next week.

Some recent developments pertaining to the club are the granting of two more rooms in the rear of the office annex for the purpose of relieving the present crowded conditions and the voting of the society freshmen to give the proceeds of their recent spaghetti dinner toward buying new curtains for the club house. The sister society the Bainonians have offered to make the curtains. Club members Chuck Frissell and Butch Christie are in charge of these developments respectively. Freshmen members are also planning a super-extravaganza send-off for the senior members of the club on May 5.

Recently a new publicity program was launched by Kappa Phi for the purpose of centralizing and organizing publicity for the society. Working in cooperation with Mr. Hampton the program promises to be beneficial to the college and the society.

In the future the club plans to have a car-wash for the purpose of erasing a deficit in the treasury. John Williams is chairman of this future project. The project will be advertised to service clubs in Maryville, and "Professors" Crawford and Rogers, "Instructors in car-washing", promise the highest quality simonizing in East Tennessee.

AAUW To Meet Here Saturday

On Saturday, April 28, the Association for American University Women will hold an all East Tennessee Area Workshop at the Fine Arts Center. The business meeting will be held from 10:00 a. m. until 3:00 p. m. with a banquet luncheon given at the college tea-room. Representatives will be present from all of the East Tennessee branches of the Association. The program will be the discussing of programs for the coming year. Miss Katharine Davies, State President, will preside at the meeting.

Frosh Picnic Was On Golf Course

While the seniors struggled with comprehensive exams and sophomores were put through the sophomore tests, the freshman class met on the golf course and enjoyed the annual class picnic last Tuesday, April 17.

The afternoon's fun began at 2:00 with group singing followed by games—all varieties, including football, volleyball, and softball. When everyone had exhausted himself with the sports, the class gathered around a roaring fire and the party was climaxed by a wiener roast.

Working with the class officers in planning and making the party a success were Helen MacDonald and Barbara Thomas on the food committee and Jo Anne Antes who directed the games.

Nancy Marshall was in charge of the food committee; those helping were Pat Hoover, Barbara Packard, Cathy Richtmyer, Janet Maib, Jane Hussey, and Millie Beard.

Chaperones were Mr. Hutton and Miss Cartledge.

Junior Class Has Laurel Lake Picnic

While the sophomores and seniors were undergoing examinations, the juniors took off to Laurel Lake, Wednesday afternoon, returning to campus that evening, hiking, and indoor games. As part of the entertainment Mr. Hutton and Ben Stabley improvised on the piano.

After the game there was a light supper of relish burgers, cole slaw, potato chips, and pop.

Judy Ross was chairman of the committee for the party. Dick Henderson, president of the senior class, and others assisted.

Washington, April 16—Officials in Washington said the U. S. was planning some special economic aid for the Bagdad Pact nations. The amount will depend on the foreign aid bill proposal for a $100,000,000 Middle East regional aid fund.

CHAPEL ECHOES

By Joan Marston

Thursday Miss Sara Perkins spoke in Chapel. Miss Perkins is a missionary nurse who has led a useful and interesting life in China. She went to China in 1926 and worked until the Japanese invasions in World War II whereupon she was interned in a former mission compound. In 1943, six months later, she was repatriated and resumed her work in a hospital in China. She was imprisoned again in 1946 by the Communists and freed in September, 1955.

Miss Perkins also spoke at New Providence Church last Wednesday evening.

Scholarship With Power

Thursday, May 3, is the day for the annual recognition service of Alpha Gamma Sigma members. The speaker at the chapel service will be Paul Rowland, and his subject, "Scholarship with Power." Mr. Rowland was born of missionary parents in Japan, and prepared for college at Holchkiss School, Lakeville, Connecticut. He got his B.A. at Williams College, his M.A. at Harvard University, and his Bachelor of Divinity at Chicago Theological University. Mr. Rowland taught in Japanese government schools and colleges for five years and then worked in England and N. Russia in YMCA overseas service during World War I. He was chairman of the English department in American College at Sofia, Bulgaria for 13 years. In 1936-37 Mr. Rowland was an exchange professor at Brown University and for the 17 years following until June 1955, he was on the English staff of MacMurry College in Jacksonville, Ill.

The purpose of Alpha Gamma Sigma is to motivate high scholarship among the students. Those admitted are members of the graduating class who have a B plus average, or 7.0

Old Percy Is No Longer With Us

Carolyn Cones

It fell with a resounding crash then lay as a fallen giant, majestic even in death. The workmen unshamedly wiped the tears from their eyes, for they realized that they had witnessed—indeed participated in—an event of astounding importance. Another campus fixture was no more.

All that now remains of the venerable old pine which stood before the structure frequented by the science students is a massive stump and a few scattered pine cones—poor reminders of its former glory. This stately woody perennial plant, affectionately termed by student s and faculty alike as "Old Percy" had long been a familiar and beloved part of the campus—an object which by the sheer force of its majesty never failed to inspire or fill with awe all those who gazed upon it.

What a story Old Percy could have told if he had been but gifted with vocal cords or some other medium of communication capable of being interpreted by mere Homo sapiens! He could have told of the many members of that class of warm-blooded vertebrates commonly referred to as birds to which he magnanimously offered asylum. He could haxe expounded on his own

Dr. Campbell Gives Insight Into Problems Of Science

By Joe McNeal

Dr. James Arthur Campbell, highly respected chemist, renowned scientific research worker, and extremely effective speaker in subjects relating science to modern thought, appeared on campus Tuesday, April 24, as the final speaker in the 1956 lecture series. In the course of three lectures and numerous private discussions Dr. Campbll turned thoughtful attention to many varied problems faced by today's scientists and all who would attempt to find the great connecting links between the fields of human knowledge.

Dr. Campbell's talks told a story of a universe where the beauty and completeness of the theory of ordered structures are continually leading toward an understanding of life itself. He spoke of the great fundamental truth of the universe — long sought for and the subject of many conflicts, but never completely realized in the realm of human experience. And he spoke of the seemingly distant ideal of a world where all knowledge will be made available to all men—a world where education will have overcome misunderstanding.

Dr. Campbell's first lecture was given immediately following the chapel service Tuesday. This first speech set the general tone for the discussions to follow, with the speaker reviewing the structure theory in general terms and showing its applications to recent advances in biochemistry. Dr. Campbell called attention to the fact that modern chemis's are technically synthesizing life in the form of new types of virus. The possible effects of this life—synthsis need not, the speaker felt, bring about any drastic revision of current ideas of morals and ethics.

In the second talk at 9:50 in the theater Dr. Campbell discussed the nature of the so-called conflict between science and religion, comparing them to two mountain climbers approaching the conquest of a high mountain—the fundamental truth of the universe. The conflict arises when one or the other claims to have conquered the mountain. In discussing the history of the conflict Dr. Campbell noted that the most heated controversies were the results of over-eagerness on the part of one field or another to announce the solution of a problem. Dr. Campbell spoke in favor of seeking a unifying thread to bind together all knowledge so that the great fundamental truth could be aproached.

In the afternoon in Science Hall the last lecture, a technical discussion of crystals, was given to a group consisting largely of science students and teachers. Even in this specialized topic, the basic theme of the beauty and complexity of structures was evident thus returning to the thought of the first and second lectures.

In addition to these scheduled talks Dr. Campbell spoke to many individuals and small groups during his visit about many phases of modern science and its relation to modern life.

AAUW Is Visiting Our Campus Today

The American Association of University Women's East Tennessee workshop, consisting of from fifty to seventy-five women, is on campus today. In charge is Mrs. Ross McGehee, vice-president of the East Tennessee division. Their day will consist of study sections, a business meeting, and a luncheon meeting in the Home Economics room. There will be a speaker at the luncheon.

Our own Miss Davies is president of the Tennessee division and Miss Martin is State Secretary of this nation-wide organization, which makes studies and does an extensive amount of work in community affairs.

Camera Club Continues Active Program

The Camera Club has made several field trips into the college woods, and is planning a field trip to the mountains soon. On these trips, some suitable scenes are selected and the same picture is made several times by different club members. Factors of good composition are demonstrated, and methods of making better pictures are discussed.

The club encourages its members to buy the best camera equipment, and the dark room is now fully equipped. Shows of slides and prints by the members are held, especially those taken of the Smokies, and a show is being planned soon to which everyone will be invited.

The club has planned two projects for next year; a camera club bulletin board for pictures and club news; and a photo contest for all students, with a prize for the best photo.

Mr. Stork Drops In At Baldwin Hall

By Ruth Wilson

"Spring is sprung,
The grass is riz,
I wonder how
Our kittens is."

That song is now Number 1 on Baldwin's Hit Parade. Why? Well one very intelligent charcoal gray mother cat, recognizing the obvious worth and kindness of the Baldwin inhabitants chose its front porch to give birth to some blue-eyed coal black kittens. (The word "some" appears because there were 5 kittens originally where there are now only three.)

Tippy, Hamburger, and Muttsy have been dethroned temporarily as the kittens claim all the campus attention. (I trust you've noticed that "hurt" look in Hamburger's eyes—yesterday a group of his former fans unceremoniously threw him out of the area where the kittens live.)

Of course a mother cat and three kittens makes an interesting study in the miracle of life, but something — or someone else entered the picture yesterday.

Two of our students discovered a tinier, younger kitten while hiking. It, and a dead brother, had evidently been thrown out on the road from a passing automobile. After bringing the kitten back to campus, the problem of how to care for it was debated. The solution? Why to entreat our lovable mother cat to adopt the orphan—and she did! At last report our little waif was happy and asleep in his new home.

Betty Springstead Is Editing Paper

Editing the paper this week is Betty Anne Springstead, sophomore English major from Roselle, New Jersey. She is trying out for the position of Echo editor.

Election of editor will take place in the near future.

Thetas Entertain Sigs

Tonight at 6:20 in Bartlett auditorium, some of the members of Theta Epsilon will provide the entertainment for the joint meeting of Theta Epsilon and Alpha Sigma.

The entertainment will depict those campus celebrities, the members of the Student Council in action against the crime "cutting campus." Worked into the middle of all this we find a variety show which, needless to say, includes a chorus line.

The director of this extravaganza is Dodie Waters. Those in the featured roles are Ruth Wilson and Wendy Wood.

Maryville Debators Win Third Sweepstakes Of The Season

The Maryville College debaters followed their triumphs at the Smoky Mountain Tournament and at the State Tournament by winning the largest number of points at the Pi Kappa Delta Forensic Tournament which was held April 19, 20, and 21 at T.P.I.

In the men's division, Maryville, represented by Tom Paton and Bob Goodlin, took third place. They received a rating of "good" in debate; and in individual events, Tom Paton participated in the finals for oratory and won a "superior" rating in extempore.

They will leave Davidson May 29, spending three days in New York before boarding the "Columbia" to sail from Montreal early in June.

Joanne will be abroad seven months, but she plans to come back to Maryville for her last semester to graduate with her class.

She will travel through England, France, Germany, and Switzerland and will study at the University of Madrid, Spain.

Think Before You Vote

Within the next few days the 1956 student body elections will be held. In these coming days we all will be called upon to make the important decisions concerning the eaders of the campus govdecisions concerning the leaders of the campus gov-

Very probably some of us will first be asked to sign a petition enabling some candidate to run for an office. More than likely we will be asked to help in a campaign. Then when the color and excitement of the campaigning day are over and the speeches have been given, we will be expected to make the final choice.

Effective student government is the hub of a good college campus. The choices we make, that is the people we elect, are the ones who will carry on the plans and suggestions of this year's organization and also propose and strive to carry out the business of the coming year.

Therefore, let us take this voting very seriously and thoughtfully consider the candidate's abilities and his ambitions. A representative of the entire student body must have the qualities of a good leader. He must not only have ability, but also the willingness to serve long hours for the good of the college. Of course, it is easy to judge his desire to serve from the past large offices he has held, but it is also important to consider his participation in small organizations and less recognized jobs.

We must consider before we cast a vote—are we voting for a good-looking candidate, a friendly smile, a popular name, a straight-A student, or are we voting for a person with firm ideals, good judgments, and a genuine, hardworking interest in the affairs of student government? This person should, of course, represent our views on student government for he will be the one to represent us throughout the coming year. A good student government is imperitive to a well-developed college and to be truly representative it is necessary that each of the students cast his vote.

Get There On Time!

In the springtime many things are overlooked that would not be accepted at other times of the year. As the semester comes to a close, people become lethargic and no longer feel compelled to arrive at appointments punctually. This is not only inconsiderate to others, but also establishes bad habits which are difficult to break. Arriving late at chapel may not only inconvenience the others in the row, but may establish a pattern which will reappear often.

It is not difficult to start earlier if you wish to remain longer outside, and it is possible thus to arrive on time.

It is interesting to note that the people who complain most about not being treated as adults are those who cannot accept responsibility in the form of punctuality.

So, as a matter of courtesy to others and as a duty to yourself, Get there on time!

NEW DISEASE HITS MARYVILLE

By Sue Tourtellotte

What in the world can it be? This strange disease which has taken as its victims the student population of Maryville. Perhaps if I give you some of the most noticeable symptoms, you may be able to diagnose the case. The day before the disease becomes apparent, the victim will usually complain of an uncomely pallor of the epidermis. He also will walk about with his head held unusually high. This symptom must not be construed as a sign of snobbishness. The victim has merely become intensely interested in local weather conditions. Along the same line, he will scan the evening paper for the very latest forecast and will hastily tune in the radio for the bit of information which usually is inserted along with the news broadcast in such a manner that it is very often missed. As you can easily see, our poor victim is very apt to find himself in a frustrated state of mind.

After a good night's sleep, he arises early in the morning so that he will have time to complete his homework before breakfast; thus leaving free those two precious hours before lunch. But wait, has he forgotten something? Today is that long awaited and anticipated day at Maryville—Spring Holiday. Since our friend does not quite comprehend the meaning of this term "holiday", he hastily thumbs through his trusty dictionary. Ah! Here it is—"Holiday, n. any day of exemption from labor or work; hence, a period of recreation or rest." Well, that seems easy enough. But what shall he do first?

It's still too early to carry out his previous plan. As our victim gazes out the window in great deliberation over this problem, what should he see but empty tennis courts. It's not very often that one can have such luck, especially at 5:30 in the morning. Now who shall he find to play with? As he jumps into his tennis attire, he gently awakes his sleepy room-mate by yanking off the covers and rolling him on the floor.

"Golly this must mean I'm improving," he thinks to himself. He has won the last ten sets from his partner, who, incidentally is on the great Maryville tennis team. Do you think maybe he'd do better if he had his eyes open?

Oh well, no time to think of that. It's already 6:23, and for some odd reason upon beholding the eastern sky, our friend is overcome with great joy. However, it still is early so maybe a quick trip to the mountains would be in order. Finally the bus lurches to a stop before a VERY TALL HIGH mountain, Mt. Le,le, well it's French anyway. I won't go into the details of our friend's hike to the top. However, he did happen to make several new acquaintances. They all were four footed, had dark hair, and big brown eyes. Come to think of it, they all seemed to have unusually gruff voices too. Not that he didn't appreciate their friendly natures, but our friend, the mountain climber, decided to take the quick way down. He slid down all the way with only a few obstacles here and there—mostly here.

At long last he arrived back at Maryville. He dashed up to his room like a flash and prepared for his long awaited adventure. Since he is the shy type, he thought he'd better go out incognito—you know, big dark glasses, floppy hat, and an army blanket wrapped about himself, completely charming to be sure. Now where shall he go—either up high or down low. Just to be on the safe side he decides to remain on the ground.

The rest of the story is fairly simple, our victim fell asleep and remained out there for several hours. Some of his friends returning from Knoxville woke him up in time for supper. The external aspects of this disease now began to manifest themselves. About the only way I can describe his appearance would be a cross between an ad for Noxema and a half broiled New England lobster. Now do any of you have any ideas as to what could be wrong with this poor fellow—EH?

Scots & Soda

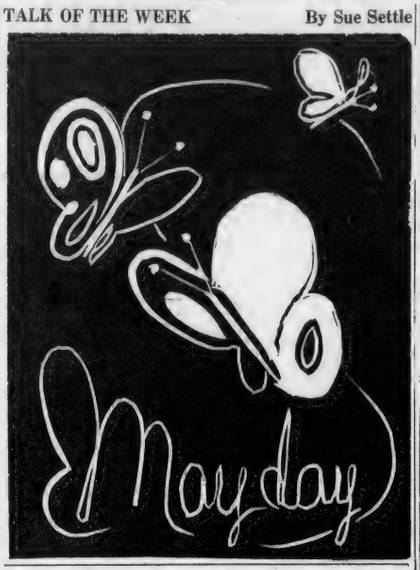
Dear Aunt Mabel,

Well, Auntie, I just got back from Choir tour and just had to sit down immediately and write you a letter. Knowing that you were in the Vesper Choir the whole four years you were in college back in 711, I knew you would just be perishing to hear all about it. You know that famous old saying, "Old Vesper Choir members never die, they just fall down the stairs."

Yes, Auntie, my lifelong ambition has been realized—I've been on a Choir tour. Why, when I was just a little tot, you used to tell me bedtime stories about the Choir. And I remember that full-length, life-size, oil painting of you over your living-room mantel in your robe. The Choir had just voted you "the girl with the best pitch."

Then I came to college, Auntie, and made it the very first time I tried out. It just happened that they needed a girl exactly five feet twelve inches tall for the end of the first row—the girl of that height that they had used last year graduated. All of the girls that tried out in front of me were either a fourth of an inch shorter or taller. When the director saw that I filled the bill exactly, he shook my chubby little hand, kissed my ruddy little cheek, and stepped on my tender little foot. I knew that this meant I was in. After all, no discriminating director would be content with an uneven first row. Of course, height didn't mean everything. I had campaigned a little. The day of try-outs, I wore the blue and white satin outfit that you made me. I could tell this made a big hit with him because when he first saw me he was so overcome with emotion that he had to leave the room for a while.

Well, Auntie, you know all that. The tour is what I want to tell you about. I also want to tell you how much I appreciate your writing our Congressman about it. Without his influence, I might not have been chosen to go. Of course, your donating the money for a women's dorm helped too. Besides, I'm the only one in the Choir who can hit three notes at once. I'll never forget the look on the director's face when I gargled on a low note during the Founder's Day performance. Then there was the time I yodeled on a high note. I could tell then by his expression that I was his favorite member. He likes my Choir spirit, too. I am so playful that I keep everyone in stitches—one time in a burst of exuberance, I tripped two girls as they marched down the stairs from the platform. So you see I would have been chosen even if you hadn't gone to all that trouble.



The tour was wonderful, but rather exhausting. Although we didn't sing until 11 a.m., our director would get us up at 3 a.m. and take us on cross country runs. You should have seen us in our track outfits running around Times Square. There were two rather bad casualties that we had to leave in Bellevue Hospital, but then there were too many on the front row anyhow.

Auntie, I was the hero, I mean heroine, of the trip. During the most important concert of all—Carnegie Hall, of course—the girl on my right side fainted. I caught her just in time and holding her upright, continued to sing in my usual lovely throaty voice. I had just gotten a good hold on her when a sudden movement on the other side of me caught my eye—the girl on my left was fainting. Not in the least disturbed, I continued to make joyful noises. Then the director went down. As the concert ended, I was supporting the two people o neither side of me and the director, TOO. Oh well, it's all in the day's work. After

The Student Art Show . . .

Many interesting exhibits are being featured at the sudent art show in the Fine Arts Center Gallery. A good crowd attended the opening last Tuesday night to view sculpture, ceramics, oil paintings, watercolors, pastels, balsa wood constructions, collages, serigraphs, and crayon drawings.

The exhibit will be up all during May and is worthwhile for all students to see. Be careful when you walk through it, however, the balsa wood constructions are very, very fragile. The ceramics are also to be seen and not touched!

Recitals and Concerts . . .

The U-T Concert series has drawn large crowds of students from Maryville this year. (In fact the bus has usually been too crowded.) Next year's series promises to be quite good. The Swedish Chorus is coming October 30; Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo will appear again November 28; the Boston Pops Orchestra will play January 17; Artur Rubinstein, pianist, will appear February 8; the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra is scheduled to appear March 9; and Jennie Tourel, soprano, will sing March 19, concluding the series.

Here on campus recitals are coming up at a fast rate. Myrna Ginaven will present her senior recital in piano Monday at 8:00 in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall. She will be assisted in one number by the string ensemble.

The Maryville College Little Symphony, directed by Ralph Moore, gave an enjoyable concert Thursday night. Next week Madigal singers and the Vesper Choir will give concerts. John Hutton, Jr., is the director of both groups.

Entertainment Downtown . . .

Monday and Tuesday the Capitol Theater is featuring "Glory," starring Margaret O'Brien. Wednesday and Thursday "Invasion of the Body-Snatchers" with Kevin McCarthy is scheduled, and "Southwest Passage," starring Rod Cameron and Joanne Drew will be on the screen Friday and Saturday.

Interesting Titles . . .

The New Book Table in the library is filled with interesting titles: "Personality Through Perception," "Musical Autographs from Monteverdi to Hindemith," "Primer on Roman Catholicism for Protestants," "Papa's Wife," "Profiles in Courage," "Surprised Tropansky, Jim Colquhoun, and Sam Buffat in charge. The topic of the meeting will be announced later.

Y's To Install Officers

Separate installation services will be held Sunday afternoon, May 29 for the YM and YW officers and cabinets for the coming year. The time and places for the services was announced in chapel this morning.

On Sunday, May 6, a joint meeting of YM and YW will be held with the new program chairmen Ann Murray, Barbara Wilkie, Joe by Joy," "The Theology of Paul Tillich," and "Mr. Tampkins Explores the Atom."

This week the library display table featured wild flower paintings. Next week's display will be on careers. Books on the theatre are displayed on the bulletin board.

And this just about concludes the campus round-up of culture fo rthe week!

Sports Spotlights

Williams Smashes School Record

Fleet-footed Joe Williams, the Scottie half-miler, smashed the long-standing mark of 2' 0.6" for the 880 set by Hitch in 1933. He lowered the mark to 1' 59.4" in last Saturday's meet with Tusculum.

In that same meet Charlie Garrison was just nine-tenths of a second off the school record of 51.4 seconds in the 440, and in the two mile run, Don Vandenberg was only two and four-tenths seconds off the school mark of nine minutes, 48.6 seconds.

Watch Them Fall

Printed elsewhere on this page are the MC track and field records. This article is being written on Wednesday, hence the results of Thursday's meet are not known. However, I predict that the following records will be broken tomorrow or next Saturday: Bob Ramger will equal or better the present mark for the 100 and above-mentioned Charlie Garrison will crack the mark for the 440. As for the half-mile, Joe Williams will henceforth be dueling against his own record, and believe me there is nothing harder than racing against your own time. I also feel that both the two mile and mile relay records will fall this season. The two mile at the hands of co-captain Don Vandenberg and the relay at the hands of Bob Ramger, Bruce Ingles, Charlie Garrison, and Joe Williams.

In addition, I feel certain that with any kind of luck at all Bill Strickland should be able to better the discus and shotput records. He is, at present, just a shade under two feet off the shot put record and four feet, five and a half inches off the best recorded discus throw. In last Saturday's meet Bill made a record throw, but unfortunately it was out of bounds.

Garrison Receives Mention in Journal

Sophomore Charlie Garrison was featured by Dewey Helmick in his column in last Sunday's Knoxville Journal. In addition to a very interesting write-up, Mr. Helmick also included a picture of Charlie. Mr. Helmick pointed out that Charlie is putting forth a lot of effort in sports, dividing his afternoon hours between both tennis and track.

Charlie won both regularly scheduled tennis matches he played this year, one against UT and one against LMU. In track he has captured four first places in the first two meets of the year, winning the 440 twice and the mile relay twice.

Mr. Helwich has given the Scottie Netmen excellent coverage in his Sunday column. He has included stories and pictures of the squad and Coach Johnson in the last three Sunday Journals.

Needs of Athletic Department

Two present needs of the athletic department, which probably have not been granted because of insufficient funds, are all-weather tennis courts and a decent track. Certainly there has been enough interest shown in tennis as both a sport and a leisure time activity to warrant putting in all-weather courts, if it is at all possible under the college's limited budget. As for a better track, it appears that we shall have to wait and see if track is really here to stay at Maryville. Although, considering the interest and enthusiasm shown by this year's team and its supporters, track certainly seems to be here to stay!

AS I SEE IT....

By Joe Williams

Before saying anything else, I want to express the whole team's thanks to all who gave us such good support in our first home meet. We were all suprised and pleased at the number who came out for a sport about which so little is known here at Maryville, and I feel that we ran better because of it.

Not knowing what would be of interest to the student body as a whole, I have decided to write about a couple of things which are of interest to me and hope for the best. I hope they will give you a better understanding of track and add to your enjoyment of the sport.

Outside of the 100 yard dash, one of the biggest handicaps to be reckoned with in track is fatique. As the distance run increases, fatique gets to be more and more of an obstacle. If a man could just run at top speed without fatigue, he could cover ground at an amazing pace. The fatique problem is a chemical one. (Steady—I'm not going to explain here.) It was no coincidence that the first man to run a mile in under four minutes was a doctor. European trackmen and trainers have studied the problem intensively and have recently come up with a system called "internal training," which seems to increase resistance to fatique better and faster than any other method known. I will explain briefly how the system operates, for our team has adopted it as its method of training.

Internal training is simply high speed sprints, at 3 to 5 minute intervals, a fixed number of repetitions per day, increasing as the runner's condition improves. The only time a runner covers his full distance is the day of the meet. The rest of the time he spends at interval training, running a shorter distance than he does in a meet but running it much faster and several times. In this system, which takes less time than any other, fatique becomes a familiar part of each day's workout and resistance to it is gradually built up, enabling one to cover ground faster, without tiring. The system is highly recommended by the world's best distance men, who have used it with phenominal success. Its ability to combat fatique is almost limitless. The experiment with it here should be interesting.

In closing, I would like to give you an idea of how Coach Johnson fits in here. Coaching two sports and "busy as a one-legged socced player", Coach Johnson deserves recognition for his unselfishness. He operates track on the principle that it should be fun. He is always ready to listen to a suggestion as to how to make training more enjoyable. He is a helper instead of a driver and under such a coach training becomes a real pleasure. The team's enthusiasm reflects the results of this type of coaching. Just the other day, another member of the team and I were carefully planning out our schdule of rest, eating, etc. for the day of our next meet. As we re absorbed in the subject, I overheard one girl at our table say to another, "Listen to that—why, they talk like they were going to a FORMAL or something." That should give you a good idea of how much enthusiasm we have for the sport.

Intramurals....

By Jim Conklin

With the second round of league play almost over the standings are:

	Won	Lost	Pct.
Sledgehammers	6	0	1.000
Hammers	6	1	.857
Ball and Chains	2	4	.333
Hurricanes	2	5	.286
Los Acus	1	3	.250
Kappa Phi	1	4	.200

After the completion of the present round of league play the tournament will begin to determine which team will win the Intramural League Softball Championship. The championship trophy is awarded to the winner of the tournament, not the team that finishes in first place at the end of the league schedule. In this way it is possible for the team that finished last in the league standings to come through and win the trophy.

With the tournament about to start we might take a look at the teams and their chances of winning the trophy. The team to beat is definitely going to be the Sledgehammers. They have yet to be beaten and with their all round strength, especially on the mound and at bat, it looks as if they're just about in, but don't count those other teams out. Anything can happen, and it probably will. The Hammers are second in league standings and close on the heels of the Sledgehammers. If they come through in the clutch and play heads-up-ball, there could be an upset in the tournament. Another team that bears watching is the Ball and Chains. They have the potential, but with several of their regular players missing in their games they haven't been able to come out on top in but two of their ball games. The Hurricanes, Los Acus, and Kappa Phi ball clubs seem to be lacking in general power. They can all play a good game, but just haven't had that combined effort when it was needed that is essential for a winning ball club. But, if these clubs bear down and play good tight ballgames in the tournament, one of them may walk off with the trophy.

He could have related of the delightful and stimulating odors that sometimes managed to escape from the confines of the rooms set aside for the use of the experimentalists in the field of chemistry. He could have spoken at length of the numerous changes which he lived through, but now, alas, poor Old Percy himself has become a part of the ever-changing picture of life.

Yet surely Old Percy did not exist in vain. The tree not only was always a symbol of grandeur in the yes of the gentle folk who populate the campus but also a shelter from the rain and the wind and a source of refreshing shade for those who valued comfort more than sun burn. The mighty pine, however, grew gradually old and diseased until it finally became apparent that there was only one humane course of action which could be pursued.

Yes, he's gone and with him is gone a very real part of the campus of this esteemed institution, but Old Percy would have wanted it this way. His place will be taken by younger, stronger ones, and while the students mourn his passing they realize, as Old Percy did, that progress must forge continually forward.

Echo Forum

Edtor,
Highland Echo,
Maryville, Tenn.

Dear Editor:

There is always a superfluity of general grouches and complaints about the college in general, and deans and housemothers in particular. One of the strongest of the more recent gripes seems to be on the topic of privileges. It seems to us that these rare examples of exceptions to the rule are handed out more and more to underclassmen and more and more to the same people. At the same time that some of us are walking down the right side of the street to town, others are riding in a car to Knoxville, even with late permission. Or, while some of us are being bawled out for such things as using the washers too late at night, others are making snacks in the kitchen, with special permission. It seems that some people have been duly chastized for indecent conduct on campus (walking around with arms entwined about each other) while other privileged characters go blissfully on their way doing the same things. This would be more understandable if those privileged ones were upper classmen, but as it stands now this issue is only one more thorn in the flesh of those who are not among the "favored, fairhaired daughters." We realize that often in other colleges the lack of privileges for freshmen is carried to an extreme, but we, here at Maryville really aren't asking for anything radical; just a recognition of the fact that some of us have worked two or three years for the rank of upper classmen and we feel that a few privileges should be reserved for us.

Sincerely,
(All names withheld by request.)

Council Suspends Privilege For Two

By Ted McDaniels

At the last regularly scheduled meeting of student council there was no conclusive business other than the town night violations that were brought up.

Three upperclass girls failed to sign in but were all in and safely tucked away before the 10:20 time limit. This was their first offense and the council voted to suspend the town night privileges for one week. The other town night violation was in the case of a girl who came in three minutes late. There was some discussion, and finally the council voted to suspend the town night privilege for one week.

Some suggestions were made for next year's council and it was announced that there would be a meeting of the old and new councils next Monday, May 14. Installation will take place and there will be a party for the members.

60 New Chairs In Little Chapel

After considerable searching for just the type of seats suited to the Little Chapel, a chair designed by Bertoia and distributed by Knoll Associates of New York has been selected, purchased for approximately $17.50 each, and installed. There are sixty of them and they will comfortably fill the Little Chapel.

This chair, which can be seen in the Little Chapel, was dieovered and specified by Mr. Paul Schweiker, of New Haven,, of the firm of Schweikher and Elting, Architects, who designed the building.

They consist of steel wire seat and back on a rod base of steel, with black oxide finish. Each has a gray seat pad of breathable naugahyde.

These light weight, strong, unusual, artistic chairs, seem to fit the Little Chapel with its marble floor and front, oyster white side walls and ceiling, metal eased and latticed windows, plate glass rear wall, black lectern and bench, and white glass imported French light fixtures.

'Tomorrow' Is Already Here

Those of you who have been marking the days on the calendars know that the end is almost here, and that the beginning of the end is May 16.

With the coming of warmer weather it has been increasingly difficult to stay indoors with a book, but here's hoping that you haven't become procrastinators.

Those of you who have said "tomorrow" since January 16 realize now, perhaps, the truth of the statement that "tomorrow never comes". Even if it does come, it is always too late.

Begin today to put your time to good use, and stop overworking "tomorrow". A task, once begun, is much easier to complete than a task never begun at all. (Obviously, a task never begun doesn't stand much of a chance of being finished.) All of us should remember that the world we live in is one in which "I did the job" counts more than the best excuse for not doing it.

P.K.

Will The Interest Continue Next Year?

A new spirit of activity seemed to take hold of the student body last week during elections. Overnight, almost, a renewed interest in student government rose. Those students campaigning for elective positions urged active participation in campus government next year, regardless of who was elected. However, if student action in government this year is any indication of the trend next year, the majority of students will again sink into lethargy and "let council do the work."

"What can each student do in the government of his campus?" "How can he participate, anyway?" These questions are easy to answer. There has already been groundwork laid for more active participation next year. The practice of having periodical class meetings has been arranged. Since most students do not attend the weekly council meetings (they are always invited), these class meetings may provide a hitherto neglected opportunity for participation.

Sometimes students may have ideas for improving campus situations that should be heard by others and should have action taken on them.

Most of these ideas probably fall by the wayside because they are either not well thought through or else they are not followed up adequately. The reason the ideas that fall into the first category fail is, of course, the fault of the student. Rash opinions and proposals will not be and should not be considered. Although the idea of revising the town night system may be a good one, unless a plan for doing it is well-formulated, it is destined to land in the wastebasket somewhere along the way between Student Council and Executive Council of the Faculty.

The second category of "ideas that failed" is easy to understand. How can an idea for improving after-dinner dancing take form if it goes no farther than a table conversation in the dining hall? Obviously, definite steps have to be taken to get anything done. The Echo Forum stands ready to present any student's views to the student body, but he himself must follow his plan through.

The logical machinery for improving campus matters consists of class meetings, WSGA, Student Council, Student-Faculty Senate, and Executive Council of the Faculty. That such governmental machinery exists seems to be beyond the comprehension of some students, who think grumbling among themselves will accomplish their desires.

Also, the fact that this hierarchy of authority is present does not mean that nohing important to the students will ever go through all the red tape. Many "bills" need go no further than student council, and others, if they are for general improvement o fthe college and are well-formulated and supported by the majority of students should have no trouble in being passed by the necessary faculty committees.

When most of the students are interested in the processes of student government, they will try to make it more effective and beneficial. Will next year's student body rise to the occasion or will they drift along in mediocrity?

Scots & Soda

By Betty Anne Springstead

I am a fire place. Not just any fire place, but a Maryville College Picnic Area Fireplace. It has rained all week. This afternoon, a bright, cheerful, dewy-eyed group of gay picnicers came sloshing out. They were armed with pickles, hot dogs, umbrellas, and papers with which to start a fire (I do hate to complain, but paper ashes make me sneeze).

Committees at Work

These nature lovers (groan) chose a nice spot in the poison ivy and started playing little games under the loving care of the Games Committee.

Meanwhile, the Food Committee dropped the slightly damp cartons of food, and went to work. Of course they all bent over me, and examined me, then let out a collective groan of dismay. Right in my middle there sat a little puddle of water, inhabited by a bachelor frog. He, being modest, jumped out. After they finally got me baited out, they appointed a Wood Gathering Committee, which gathered lots and lots of green, wet, soggy wood. I did my best, but after all!

Luckily, one foresighted member of the Committee had brought along a charcoal grill. It was set up, and I watched, despite my rather injured feelings, and got a real kick out of the efficiency of the Cooking Committee.

On With The Games

I turned my attention back to the Games Committee. The program said that they should be running relay races now, and sure enough, here they were, racing down a muddy, stony course. Oops

Well, then I knew what would happen. They all discovered the pristine clearness of The Stream. After washing the wounded martyr off, the Games Committee amended the program by adding, "Stream". My gosh, how they screamed at a little cold water! I have been sitting out in it all week.

The Table Setting Committee was having a terrible time. The newspaper tablecloth just would not sit still! It seems a wind was blowing up.

A wind?

Just then the Roll Call Committee discovered that a member of The Games Committee and an Invited Guest were missing! Immediately the call for help went out. They organized into a remarkable Search Committee and marched off into the woods with a "Do or Die" look upon their faces. They returned with red "did and dead" looks upon their faces. The recovered Committee member and her Invited Guest were promptly appointed to the Cleanup Committee.

Fire, Fire

Then someone smelled wood burning! The solitary dry piece of wood in the county was lying over next to the grill. A Forest Fire!

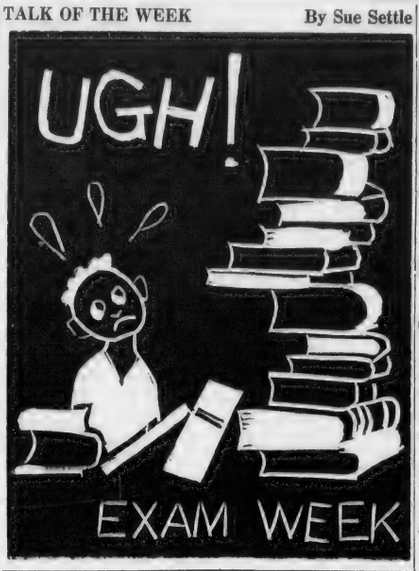
Quickly, The Group As A Whole voted in members of a Crisis Committee. They soon had the fire under control with water brought by handfuls up from The Stream. In fact, they drowned the poor twig.

Ah, that food smelled good, and burned. With beaming counteances, the Serving Committee loaded the table, which looked similar to the habitat of an animal known as the Baldwin Termite.

I must say, everyone was very brave. In fact, you might almost say ravenous. They ate That Food!

Happy Ending

In fact they ate so hard that the Weather Watching Committee forgot to watch, and they did not see what I saw. . . .



A cloud, two, three and then splat Splat SPLAT. . .

I have to say that I am glad that they brought umbrellas. The Evacuation Committee looked so soggy trudging back to Campus.

So now it is peacefully raining, and all is quiet again. . . . .

Scottie Diamondmen Have Winning Streak

Sports Spotlights

Spring Sports Come To A Close

Activity in the sports world is very rapidly drawing to a close as the end of the school year looms ever nearer. The teams in spring sports have certainly been more successful than the squads in any other season this year, having a combined won-loss record of 19-1-0 to the present date. The baseball team at present has a won-loss record of 10-5 with a double-header against Emory and Henry yet to me played this Saturday. (The Scots are engaging in a double-header to "make up" for a game which was rained out on May 1.) Our tennis team finished the regular season on May 2 with an impressive 6-4 record, while the Scottie Thinclads finished with a 3-1-0 record to lead the field.

Waters Raises Pole Vault Mark

Jerry Waters, Scottie vaulter, raised the pole vault record from 10 ft., 3 in. to 10 ft., 4 in in the April 30 dual meet with Tusculum. However, neither Jerry's new mark for the pole vault nor Joe Williams' new mark for the half mile will be official until they receive the "O.K." from the proper officials here at the college.

Cindermen's Hopes Are High For Next Year

The Scottie Cindermen, losing "only" Bob Ramger to graduation, stand a good chance, if they can pick up just a few promising rookies next year, will undoubtedly field a squad as good as, and possibly better than this year's team. As you will note, I had the word only in quotes in the preceding sentence. This is an attempt to point out in a graphic way that Bob is certainly not the most dispensible man on the squad. Quite on the contrary, Bob has indeed been the most important asset to the team, earning 77 points (10 points is all that is required to letter in track) in the five events which he usually entered in most track meets.

Netters Lose Four To Graduation

The Highlander Netmen will lose Sonny Shackelford, Captain Brian, Charles Partee and Bob Jackson. Coach Johnson will have a big job of rebuilding a squad come next spring. Its nucleus will undoubtedly consist of lettermen Ted Engle and Stan Mont, who will be aided by Don Newroth, Charlie Garrison and possibly Jim McCall.

Diamond Squad To Lose Four

The Scottie Baseball Squad will lose four members at graduation this year: Don Moore, first string back stopper; center-fielder Chuck Dunn and pitchers Jack "Henry" Crouch and Ernie Raulerson. The Scots' possibilities for next year look excellent and with a little rookie talent added to the seasoned veterans already on Coach Honaker's roster, the Scots should field a top-notch squad next year.

AS I SEE IT....

By Doug Brian

The game of tennis is to my mind, the outstanding warm weather sport for those who are physically able to participate. It is a game at which anyone can have fun regardless of ability and it furnishes a lot of good exercise and sunshine (providing the sun is shining). As a college sport it offers a lot to the participants and to the spectator alike. I feel that one reason why there are not more spectators at college tennis matches is the lack of knowledge concerning the scoring and rules of the game. It is also very easy to lose track of the score, especially if you are trying to keep track of three matches at the same time. Of course, when you lose the score you also lose much of the drama and suspense which the game offers. For this reason it would help the spectators considerably if a system could be devised whereby they could be kept informed of the score as the match progressed.

Another very interesting aspect of the game is the fact that 25 percent of all college students who get married, meet their partners on the tennis courts. This is one case when meeting your match isn't bad. Yes, tennis is very good for "courting."

So the next time the sun is shining and the temperature rises and you would like a little outdoor exercise. . . . head for the beach you idiot!

A Housemother's Job Includes A Little Bit Of Everything

By Joanne Causey

The dictionary defines a housemother as a woman who heads a group of students living together. After talking with a few, however, one comes to the conclusion that they are a little of everything. When your roving reporter asked one of them what her duties were, she threw up her hands saying, "Duties? Everything! Why I'm plumber, electrician, gardener, maid, and mother to them. I've even held their hands during an operation."

The life of a housemother certainly isn't a peaceful one. "They're nice as a whole, but you never know what's going to happen."

One housemother was missing four girls at bedtime. She alerted Ralph who set out in search of them. They were finally located peacefully reposing in the cemetery. When asked why they did such a thing, the answer was "spring fever." Well, it all goes to show that "in spring a young girl's fancy lightly turns to the cemetery."

Then there was the boy who arrived to see his cousin during lunch. When he asked where Mary could be found, a girl rushing to the dining hall said, "Oh, just go on up to her room on the third floor—she'll be back presently." The boy took a seat in the corner of his cousin's room and was soon engaged in reading a magazine. Presently, from the shower room across the hall stepped a fair maiden. She tripped lightly into the cousin's room, weighed herself, then tripped lightly out again, without ever seeing the boy. When the boy's relative returned from lunch she found her cousin somewhat incoherent. It is thought that the boy suffered a light apoplectic stroke.

Then there was the student who turned on the sprinkling system "just to see what would happen." Man the life boats!

One housemother overheard a boy talking about his evening at Baldwin when the lights went out. He was heard to say, "Wow, we had a ball!" The housemother simply cannot understand what he meant by this. All agree though, that the students are nice to work with and lots of fun. One said, 'I love 'em all."

All the housemothers agree there is a big change between sophomores and juniors. "They come as freshman, shouting and screaming and laughing. When they get to Pearsons they are mature, well-adjusted students, intent on their studying."???

Another murmured as she started up the stairs, "Tell 'me I have a hole in my shoe."

'Boy And Girl Of The Year' Give Impressions, Views Of Maryville

By Don Adams

Mary "Duckie" Coker was working hard in the library when I asked her for an interview. We walked outside. "How does it feel to be Girl of the Year," I asked her. "I was very surprised and very happy," she said. Duckie, who is a Sociology major from Glade Valley, North Carolina, told me that there were lots of others that deserved the honor more than she.

Duckie, who has been a waitress in the dining hall for all four years and who was President of Student Vols this year, mentioned her plans. "I'm going on to do mission work near Hazard, Kentucky, right after school is out," she told me. She has done much parish work; at Chilhowee View and two years at Cloyd's Creek Church.

Her participation in campus activities has included YWCA, Bainonian and Rush Week chairman. Duckie was a leading lady in the Kappa Phi Show last Feburary.

I asked her about Maryville and her four years here. Duckie wouldn't talk about herself a bit. But the college—and everyone here. She told me she liked it here so much because all the people here are so friendly and so outgoing. She said, "Everyone can work together and get along together—it's a spirit Maryville has and that you don't find every where else."

Doug Brian smiled cheerfully but in a puzzled way when we asked him about being chosen Boy of The Year. "Sure surprised me," he said. "I'm very pleased, but I haven't done anything much to deserve it." We told him that the Chilhowean Committee and the students thought so and that carried the vote.

Doug, a philosophy major, told us that he will begin his ministerial training when he enters Princeton Seminary in September.

He was reluctant to say much about his school activities after transferring here from Grove City College at Northport N.Y. His home is in Huntington, N.Y. After transferring as a Junior, Doug's activities have included The Pre Ministerial Association, Y-Cabinet and Senior representative to the Student Council.

He told us, "we have a good Tennis team. We beat Chattanooga last week." Doug played last year; he was team Captain this year.

When we mentioned cheerleading his face lit up. "Cheerleading was lots of fun," he said, "I really enjoyed it". Doug was Co-Chairman of the Pep Committee this year in addition to cheerleading.

"Maryville is a fine school." Doug told us seriously. "The difference between MC and other schools is friendliness of the students—and the diversity of student here. There are people from all over the world here and I really enjoyed getting to know and work with them."

Alpha Sig Wins Intramural Meet

By Bob Evans

Alpha Sig crushed all opposition in the annual Intramural Track Meet, amassing 105 points to Kappa Phi's 34 and the town team's 20.

Dan Wiley was the big gun for Sig copping firsts in the 100, broad jump, high jump and mile relay. Bog Higerd also took first in the mile relay and 440, as well as a second, third and fourth.

Jim Gardner and Butch Christie were the biggest assets for Kappa Phi taking firsts in the shot put and mile, respectively.

Sunbathing Has Become A Major Fad On Beaches Behind Dormitories

By Joanne Causey

Sunbathing has hit the campus. students are abandoning everything for the worthiest ambition of all-that baked look. Many of the students complain, and justly so, you will admit, that their studies and classes interfere with their sun-worship. It certainly is annoying, we agree, to lie the prescribed hour on the back and then just as one is preparing to turn and bake the other side, to have to leave this tropical paradise for some dry lecture. After all, who wants that half-baked look.

There is a great spirit of cooperation and good samaritanism among the sunbathers. One would have to be a rather mangy character for instance, to see his neighbor reaching that salmon pink color without politley tapping her on her greasy shoulder and saying politely, "Madame, in view of the unusual tint of your skin, I would strongly advise you to seek shelter, for to linger, would, I fear greatly jeopardize your chances of retaining your epidermis."

Many opportunities arise for the Girl Scout emeritus. There is always the need for a good stout arm to grease another's back and all a girl has to do to win an election is to offer to fetch a jar of cold water for those who have been cooking for an hour or so.

For those who aren't in the know there are various aids to obtaining that baked look. The current favorite is Johnson's Baby Oil with a dash of iodine. This is a mysterious potion first brewed in Macbeth and people have been extolling its virtues ever since. One has to be careful about the amount of iodine he adds, however, beacause too much makes one look as if he were preparing to swim the English Chanel. This can be if one has to dash suddenly to class. Other aids are salt water, vinegar, just plain water, and Aunt Jessie's Marvellous Mixture. Maryvillians, succumbing to the do-it yourself craze, seem to prefer to make their own lotions.

As for what to wear while sunbathing, this depends on one's location. If one is on Baldwin or Memorial Beach, one must bundle up to guard against low-flying tennis balls. On Pearson's roof, however, there is a railing which serves as protection aganist these tennis balls. There on the roof, one can unburden oneself of mucklucks and other protective covering and can revel in 100 degree heat. However, all girls are cautioned aganist standing up on the roof at any time because only in the prone position does the rail serve its protective purpose.

Yes, it is spring at Maryville.

117 Garments In Fashion Show

By Joan Marston

The annual Home Econmics fashion show last Saturday night was a great success largely due to Lee Fowler and director Mrs. Stepp, not to mention all the girls who participated and the special music which was provided by the music department. First shown were the separates and then the dresses-cotton and wool-followed by dressy and last of all, formals. There were 117 entries and the following girls modeled them:

Kathie Briggs, Iantha Peterson, Cynthia George, Eloise Jordan, Jean Dildy, Alice Hanger, Jill Smither, Alice Rowe, Carol Lee Lacy, Elinor Bass, Mildred Beard, Susan Cook, Lydia Munsen, Nita Anne Baylor, Eleanor Galbreath, Shirley Carr, Shirley Mayfield, Betsy Hoaster, Carol Sleight, Betty Lou Coulter, Judy Patterson, Ann Prewett, Sara DeLozier, Mrs. DeLozier, Nancy Stere, Betty McKenney, Betty Cutler, Judy Patterson, Doris Scott, Sara Min Davis, Peggy Davis, Peggy Packard, Alice Blackburn, Barbara Felts, Cynthia Golding, Joan Marston, Mary Ann Morris, Vesta Travis, Gray Clarke, Mary Ann Phipps, Sue Trotter, Marcia Williams, Grace Cambell, Marion James, Jane Hussey, Nancy Marshall, Mrs. Sperry, and Roberta Stepp.

Alumnae all over the country are thinking wistfully of their alma mater and are yearning to be back to partake of its own special brand of Vitiman C. Yes, it's true - in spring a Maryvillian's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of baking.

College Receives Interesting Book

An interesting and valuable book has been given to the College by Mrs. Frank Jouvenat (Rosalie Edmondson, '27). It came to her from her great-grandfather, Gideon Stebbins White, who was graduated from Maryville in 1829. It is a copy of the First American Edition, printed in New York in 1796, of the "New Testament with Expository Notes and Practical Observations" by William Burkitt. On the flyleaf is written, "Nathaniel Beach's Book, Bought the 20th day of May 1797. Presented to the South Western Theological Seminary 1821."

Mrs. Jouvenat does not know how or when it came into her grandfather's possession. He was a Presbyterian minister in this general area for many years, and was a great admirer of Dr. Anderson's history of the College it son and a loyal alumnus. In Dr. is recorded that Rev. G. W. White addressed the Alumni in 1857.

The book is a large one, sixteen by ten inches, and it is in very good condition.

Maryville sophomores are ranked in the sixty-first percentile of sophomores all over the country who took the test. How do this year's sophomores compare with last year's sophomores? Exactly the same — the percentile rating last year was also sixty-one.

Deposit Needed For Books For Summer

Beginning May 19, students may take books from the library for the summer by leaving a deposit of five dollars. This deposit is good for up to five books. This privilege of borrowing books over the summer is limited to special studies students, but may be taken advantage of by other students for very special reasons.

Commencement Play Given Last Night

Wilde's Comedy To Be Given Again Tuesday

By Carolyn Cones

Last night the first performance of the commencement play, Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest", was given in the theater. The final performance will be on Tuesday night, May 22, at 8:30.

This comedy has the elegant drawing room setting customarily reserved for melo-drama, but here its purpose is thoroughly different and thoroughly delightful for the audience. Although the things which are said and done by the characters are done in perfect seriousness, their statement and actions are so nonsensical and the plot so touched with madness, that the term melo-drama would be a gross misname.

The story is concerned with Jack Worthing, played by Herchel Netherton, who uses an imaginary brother, Ernest, as an excuse whenever he wishes to leave his country home for the city and the way this invented brother leads to complications in his love life.

Known to his city friends as Ernest, Jack proposes under that name to Gwendoline Fairfax, (Helen McDonald) .However, Gwendoline's dominating mother Lady Bracnell (Mary Fay Bundy) strongly objects to their marriage beacause of Jacks lack of knowledge of his parents— he was found in a handbag!

Jacks friend Algernon Moncrieff- Algy (Bill Deerfield) serves to confuse the situation when he visits Jack's country home in the guise of his wicked brother, Ernest, and is attracted to his ward Cecily Cardow,(Marcia Williams.) Further complications arise when Jack arrives in deep mourning for the loss of his brother, Ernest, and Gwendoline later enters seeking Ernest — or whom she believes to be Ernest The way the confusion of names is finally straightened out an order is finally restored furnishes the happy conclusion to this delightful comedy.

The witty dialogue spoken with

New Council Has First Meeting

By Ted McDaniels

At the last meeting of Council for the year the proceedings were of a change-of-hands nature. President Shackelford completed his term by praising the administration and presenting to Dr. Lloyd a gift of a photo album contining the happenings of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Lloyds at Maryville. At this point Dr. Lloyd made some remarks and suggested that in this presentation he found "some compensation for antiquity."

Then Dean McClelland had a few words to say praising the Council of the past year and said that he considered it the most constructive council in the past few years. He stated that the new council seemed like a "good group" and he felt that there would be much consideration and cooperation between this new council and the administration.

At this point in the meeting the traditional ceremony of "passing the pipe" was carried through and president-elect Dick Henderson took the chair under the light. He then proceeded to appoint with the unanimous approval of the council the committee chairmen for the coming year. The appointments follow: Student Programs committee — Mert Hall, Student Organizations — Ted McDaniels, Pep — Charlie Garrison, Athletics — Dan Wiley, Town Night — Elinor Coster, Publicity — Barbara Wilkie, Social Committee — Joan Neckerman, and Elections — Shirley McNiell. After this president Henderson put forth some of his suggestions for making the student government more adaptable to the student body and to further cooperation between the students and the administration. Dr. Lloyd commented on several of these points and stated that if the office could in any way be of assistance to the council, that they would be glad to offer and advise as they could.

At the outset of the Henderson administration there was the nomination and unanimous election of Barbara Wilkie as secretary-treasurer of the council for the coming year.

Parting Sentiments

It seems to be customary for persons retiring from positions of any kind to express their parting sentiments to those who succeed them. Not to be outdone, retiring Echo editors sometimes like to leave their evaluations and suggestions to whoever feels inclined to read them. The present editor would like to continue this practice and express her views on the year's work.

First, a word of appreciation is due to the faithful members of the Echo staff who have continued to write even when the remuneration of by-lines and the like appears to be a small reward for the time spent and work accomplished. The business managing and printing of the Echo are jobs which have been fulfilled well by Jim Cummings, Don Nabors, the staff at the Maryville Enterprise, and Dr. F. A. Griffitts, who has been faculty advisor of the Echo for eighteen years.

Those who are not officially on the staff but who have contributed articles or performed other services should also be mentioned. Sue Settle and Liz Frei have been responsible for the very good woodcuts. Other students have shown interest in the Echo in various ways, such as writing letters to the editor and contributing information for articles. The editor is grateful for the work done by all these persons.

Needless to say, there are many areas in publishing the Echo which could be improved. Next year's editor will be aware of the need for changes. However, the editor and staff alone cannot hope to put out a better Echo next year unless there is enough interest shown by the student body in journalistic ventures. Like many other activities which do not offer opportunities for students to gain immediate glory, the Echo usually, has suffered from lack of interest. This has been especially true in recent years. There were the "good old days" when everyone seemed interested in journalism. It was a great honor for a student to be chosen from the other competitors to be on the Echo staff. Unfortunately, times have changed and the Echo seems to be losing out in the race to gain student interest.

But, to return to the tone of the first part of this editorial, there are always a few who manage to remain interested; it is these few who keep up the standards; and it is these few who deserve to be congratulated for their good work in the face of many disadvantages.

—B.W.

Another Year Goes By

Again a semester has ended. For some of us this has been a very special spring semester—it has been our last. For all of us, however, it marks the completion of another phase of work and the opportunity for a fresh start in new fields.

A student body composed of many individuals from widely varying parts of the country and of the world has learned to live in close contact with one another, and has succeeded in forming a unified campus. We have shared ideas and grown with each other. Lasting friendships have been formed.

Looking back over the years spent here we can all recognize the many merits and the defects of the school, but in seeing these defects we have studied and planned to rectify the undesirable situations.

It is a good thing to be somewhat dissatisfied for then the desire for improvement is a motivating force, and the changes brought about are a sign of progress and interest. We recognize, also, that to have a better school active interest and participation in student government is an absolute necessity. The leaders for next year will need all our support. Nothing can be accomplished by private gripe sessions—student council welcomes suggestions and this is the place to air ideas and effect changes.

As has been said in previous editorials this year, college should not be composed entirely of scholastic growth. This school year has served to develop personalities; brought forth some retiring persons and developed leadership ability in others. Much has been learned by working and playing together. We all realize, however, that here on the Hill, we have a unique situation. Here we have a community in which a large emphasis on Christian living is manifested. It permeates almost every phase of activity here and the results are evident.

Of course, we all know that intellectual growth is the primary business of a college. At Maryville the professors are well-trained in their fields. The variety of majors offered speaks well for an institution of this size. The end of a semester is a good time to stop and evaluate the courses taken. It is a time to see the subject with an overall outlook—to organize the facts.

The summer months and in the years to come will provide the proof of how well we have grown—spiritually, intellectually, and socially.

Senior Class "History"

By Mary Brasfield, Nancy Jones, Dee Woods

Big class coming in '52,
Hoping in '56 be through
Time seeming to go so vely slow—
You think so too? ah so, ah, so!
Gray haired man saying glad we here
He hoping we find much cheer.
Then he flinging many tests,
Us not so smart—us not do best!

Bringing formal like they said,
Not knowing rules—me bring red!
Rush to gym with unknown coolie,
Me thinking maybe dance—get fooly!
Being glad to sit, with too short beau
Ah so, ah so.

We all learning Tuesday night
Could go to town and be all right
But second year finding something new
Can go to town all week through!
Being careful—just one night in six
Cause getting caught if trying tricks.

Going to see much of same
Sitting peaceful—watching ball
All of a sudden hearing call
Adee adee adee oh
Adee adee adee ay
Adee oh
Adee ay Fight!

Getting uniforms for marching band
All think they velly grand.
Must give lessons to boys who wear
How should be sitting on the chair
Kilts velly fine for nice calm days
But when wind blowing—going many ways
Coolie boy having too fat leg
Sock falling right down his peg
He so busy pulling up
He no playing song and losing step—
You liking band show? Ahso, Ahso, Ahso.

One night was hearing firecracker boom
Many boys leaving velly soon
Gray-haired man no liking us late
He making us go out like in Communist State
But we not really mind so much—you see
One minute we saving—come in velly handy.

Alpha Sigs—getting new house
Kappa Phi's—quiet as mouse
Before long, getting same too
Polishing much—making look new.

Art department expecting baby
Everyone say—girl or boy, maybe
But stork having come
One plus one is total sum
To Bearded parents quite a blow
Ahso, Ahso, Ahso.

Having men from far-off land
Who coming to sing with tiny director man
Going round in back and saying "hum-hum-hum"
They start singing—funny music come
The singing men folding arms
And putting on velly fierce charms
Learning Don Cossacks is their nam
We liking same.

Rafters ringing—seeing 1,503, 278. 5927
bricks vibrating
Coolies knowing what time of year is Fat little man at big piano—choir jumping when hear thunder
Barry's back—ear drums under.

Having velly rainy spell
Coming every year as well
Finding on campus no shore
Now swimming from door to door.

After all these years of learning
Coming to school—fulfilling yearning
Knowing how we come—because, because, because Having seen it in written clause
Learning be contented—moo, moo, moo
Ah-soo, ahsoo, ah-soo.
This is the best we can do!

DOCTOR'S DIAGNOSIS

By Mary Ann Morris

Feeling strange? Do you have that wierd, lazy, I-just-can't-pick-up-that-pencil feeling? Then you have it, and what you have is spring fever. A strange dseiase; spring fever. Never bothers you in the autumn or winter, but there always seems to be an epidemic about this time. It has no discriminations and hits everyone, young and old alike, especially college students. (However, there does seem to be some miraculous immunity in teachers.)

The symptoms can be easily detected. There is a painful sinking feeling in the stomach when homework is assigned; walls begin closing in, and there is an overwhleming desire to escape from it all and take a long, leisurely walk; and usually there is an itching sensation in the fingers when a teacher opens his mouth to give a lecture.

There is a cure for spring fever. However, this cure works best when there are no classes, no homework, and no teachers. It is suggested that you suffer until summer, then relax in a long porch chair with a tall glass of milk (?), and get up in time for the fall semester. A cure is guaranteed.

WARNING (If you are one of the many who complain of spring fever in one of its off-seasons): this disease is not to be mistaken for plain, ordinary laziness!

TALK OF THE WEEK By Sue Settle

Voices, Masks, and Shadows

By Mary Ann Morris

The semester is almost over; only a few exams remain before summer vacation. Perhaps, and more than likely, there is no longer any time to read any of the new books in the library. But all of the books that can be found there can also be found in your hometown library.

A new book of particular intrest is A Treasury of Southern Folklore, edited by B. A. Botkin. Here is the South, from the rebel yells to the Negro blues. This is a book rich with the drama and color and tradition of the South; one you will enjoy whether you are a Rebel or yankee.

For those of you who are movie fans, the past will come to vivid life in A Pictorial History of the Silent Screen, by Daniel Blum. Movies are an American interest not only to scholars and ners and fashions are paraded in the early days of the films. Mr. Blum has assembled over 3000 photographs of the great personalities of yesteryear, many of them rare and unique. This is a book well worth reading.

The facanating lore of the calendar is discovered in Of Time and the Calendar by Elisabeth Achelis. Calendars of ancient times, Jewish and Mohammedan calendars, and even the World Calendar now under consideration by many goverments can be found in this intresting book.

The Renaissance by Sellery is the Renissance at a glance, from the twelfth century to the fifteenth. All the great names of the Renaissance and the late Middle Ages are included in this essay by a historian. It is one of those rare books which can be enjoyed thoroughly without a background in the literature; a book no scholar of the subject will be able to ignore.

The Speaker's Handbook of Epigrams and Witticisms by Herbert V. Prochnow, though a practical reference work for public speakers and writers, is also a source of entertainment for readers who enjoy wit and insight tersely expressed. It is the only comprehensive anthology of its kind devoted particularly to epigram and wit.

In the non-fiction classification, Robert Browning, by Betty Miller, gives a refreshingly different study of this man. Miss Miller has approached her subject in a spirit of quiet sophistication rather than sentimental romanticism. Her sensitive and reveling style make this book of great heritage, and our beliefs and man students of Browning, but to the general public as well.

For humor there is nothing better than A Century of Punch Cartoons edited by R. E. William Over 1000 humorous and nostalgic drawings from the famous weekly can be found in this entertaining book.

This summer there will be time to take advantage of the library in your town. For knowledge, and entertainment, or just plain fun, visit the world of books. The library is there for you!!

Dr. Horace E. Orr Is Featured In Spring Alumni Bulletin

In the latest Maryville College Alumni Bulletin, Dr. Orr's story of his years at Maryville appears on page eight. Due to the length of his article, much has been cut out, but there are several excerpts form the article entitled "In Retrospect":

"I was pastor of a small church in Normandy, Tennessee, and came to Knoxville in early Oct., 1919, to attend a meeting of Synod. I came over to Maryville College to have a look at the campus where I had graduated in June, 1912. In Anderson Hall I ran into Dr. Wilson, who invited me into his office for a chat I soon found myself being invited to come to Maryville to teach, but I promptly refused beacause I was in no sense prepared to teach, had no qualifications as a teacher that anyone so far as I knew had ever recognized, and besides, I didin't want to teach anyway.

"But Dr. Wilson refused to accept my decision as final and suggested that I go back home and if think it over. I could let him know anytime before Christmas if I was interested. So I came..... I imagined that everybody connected with the college in any way who knew me must be thinking about what a pity it was that M. C. affairs had come to such a pass as to require me as part of the teaching staff. . .

".... A feeling grew in me that I was probably a heretic by the standards the college had a right to expect me to maintain. So I wrote out my resignation, with reasons, and took it to Dr. Wilson's home to hand it in. When Igave it to him, he refused to look at it and simply dropped it in the fire in the open grate. He hoped, he said, that I would stay at Maryville until my hair became as white as his then was, and added that if, at any time, I myself decided that I was "going to the devil" I might quietly obtain a job somewhere else and announce that I was withdrawing to accept another position. That ended any queasy feeling about the relation of my heresy, if any, to adminstration policy and I stayed on. When Dr. Lloyd came, he continued to give full support to my seeking the truth and teaching it as I saw it .....

"During World War II I become Stated Clerk of Union Presbytery; and later on for a time, Stated Clerk of the Synod of the Mid-South. Then I got ulcers!

"Along the way interest in Philosophy grew. There had been none here except Ethics and Theism, when I came, and for many years after. But people were discovering that some wrong answers must have been given to questions which philosophy deals with and became interested to see if they could find out what they were. Then Dean Barnes died and I was asked to take the Ethics class. Why I should have been asked I shall never know, to say nothing of why I undertook it; but I did.

"Along with that it was natural I suppose that I should have launched most of the other courses in philosophy which now make up the offering. So I find myself listed in this catalog as "Professor of Religion and Philosophy, and Chairman of the Divison of the Bible, Philosophy and Education". I recognize, of course that catalogs have to make things sound as important as possible but always feel about that title very much the same way I felt about coming to Maryville in the first place - FLABBERGASTED.

"And that is the way it has always been. It seems that I have always been pushed into things that I was interested in but could not do well. But one thing is certain: I have loved to teach, and I NEVER claimed to be a philosopher. I knew very well that I am not a philosopher, except in one humble respect: I would love to have wisdom and understanding and I would love to impart it if I had it."

great seriousness, the topsy turvy plot, and the inspired touches all contribute to the charm of this play, but much of it is also derived from the nature of its characters.

Jack and Algy are sophisticated sauve young men of some social position. They are more formal and dignified than the two girls, Gwendoline and Cecily, both of whom are vivacous and forward- a refreshing contrast to the two men and the domineering Lady Blacknell.

Miss Prism (Ann Wiley) is an elderly spinster living at Jack's country home. She is pained by everything she comes in contact with and her watch words are duty and responsibility. Rev. Canon Chausble (Tony Clark) is characterized by his proper and very, very solemn manner.

Others are Merriman, Jack's butler (John Borter) and Lane, Algy's man - servant (Ralph Wood).

Several of the twelve surviving members of the class of 1906 will be present. The 25-year class which is having a reunion, will be presented by Mr. McArthur, alumni assocation president. Manrigal singers directed by Mr. John Hutton will sing.

A 70-Year Man

. Of unusal interest to the alumni will be the return to the campus of a graduate of the class of 1886. Dr. William W. Hastings of Zephyrhills, Florida, is planning to be present for the Alumni Dinner.

Dr. Hastings graduated from Maryville College seventy years ago and is one of the two oldest known living alumni. After attending Maryville College, he later graduated from Union Theological Seminary in New York City and received a Master's degree and the degree of Doctor of Philosophy from Haverford College. He also graduated from the International YMCA training school, better known today as Springfield College.

Dr. Hastings was for many year the head of the Dept. of Physical Education at the University of Nebraska, was president of the Physical Education section of the National Education Association for two years, and served later as Dean of the Normal School of Physical Education at Battle Creek, Michigan. He is the author of "A Manuel for Physical Measurements", "Physical Director as a Hygienist" and various other pampelets. He is co-author of "A Manuel of Wrestling." He served as pastor of Federated Churches in New York and New Hampshire for a number of years before his retirement in 1936.

Officers of the Alumni Association will be selected at a business meeting after the Dinner. Mrs. Earl Blazer is chairman of the nominating committee which will present a new slate of officers.

THIS YEAR IN SPORTS

VARSITY SPORTS . . . By Bob Evans

Football

The Highlander Gridders under the able leadership of Captain Ted Godfrey and Alternate Jack "Crow" Renfro scored victories over the U-T Frosh 20-12, the Bulldogs of Howard College 21-12 and the Mountain Lions of Concord 13-6 for an overall season record of three wins and five losses.

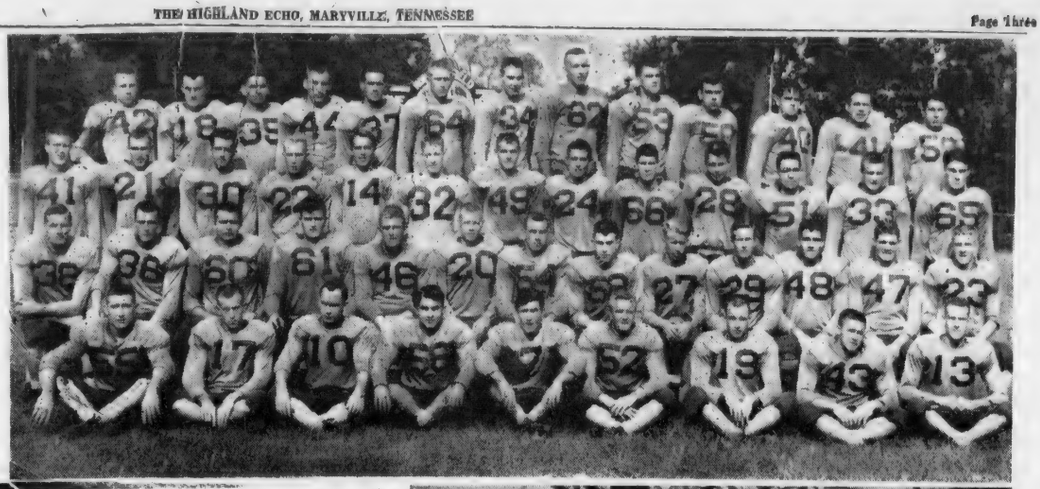
Basketball

The Highlander Hoopsters finished the year with a 7-13 record, defeating the University of Chattanooga, Hiwassee, the McGhee Tyson Sabres, Emory and Henry, Carson-Newman and Tenessee Wesleyan on two occassios. The Scottie cagers were led by high-tallying Bill Wallace, who, though a sophomore, captained the squad like a seasoned veteran.

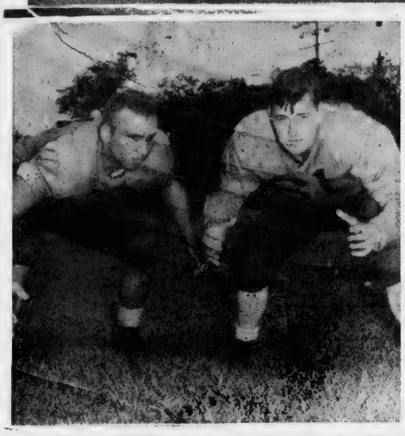
Wrestling

Finishing the season with a 1-1-6 record, the Scottie Matmen went to the SIW Tournament at the University of the South (Sewanee) where the team as a whole grappled their way to fourth place with Captain Jerry Waters and Buford "Booty" Miller taking first places in their respective weight division.

Baseball



The Scottie Diamond Squad clouted their way to an impressive eleven win, six loss record for the season. The Scots scored three victories over Hiwassee, two over Milligan and Tusculum, and one each over Tennessee Wesleyan, Carson-Newman, East Tennessee State and Emory and Henry. LMU was the only school to upset the Scots in both encounters.



Tennis

Captain Doug Brian sparked the 1956 Highlander Net Squad to a season of six wins and four defeats. Doug played the second slot on the squad, while Sonny Shackelford filled the top ladder position and Charles Partee and Stan Mont filled the third and fourth slots respectively. Ted Engle and Bob Jackson were constantly switched in the fifth and sixth spots with Bruce Ingles and Charlie Garrison occasionally filled these positions.

Track

This year for the first time in many years (overlooking the lone track meet two years ago) this school fielded a track squad. However, the Highlander Harriers turned in an unbelievable record of three wins and a second in a triangle track meet. In all three of their wins the Scots rang up almost twice as many points as their opponents. Also, Joe Williams lopped one and two tenths seconds off the school record for the 880 and Jerry Waters raised the school mark an inch for the pole vault, setting it at 11 ft., 4 in.

Offering a keen insight into Asia, the units give opportunities to visit and live with people of Asia and to meet government and cultural leaders.

The Lisle Fellowship, a non-profit making group arranges tours at low rates, but scholarships are not available.

The Asian groups will include: Japan: June 28 to August 31 ($1585).

Phillippine Islands: June 28 to August 31 ($1585).

Other units will include: Germany, Denmark, Jamaica, Lookcut Mountain, Colo., and San Francisco, Calif. In addition, there will be a tour to the Soviet Union.

Plans Started For Men's Government

By Adlai Boyd

Hopes are high among the the men of Carnegie Hall that the proposal of Student Council President-elect Dick Henderson of some sort of Men's Studen: Government will be accepted and acted favorably upon. A meeting held in Carnegie Tuesday night brought good discussion from and among the men concerning the nature and purpose of any such government. Feeling seemed to be in favor of forming an actual organic body for several expressed purposes. The assembly of men gave verbal permisson to President-elect Henderson to appoint a committee of 12 to act as a nucleus for planning, constructing and submitting a constitution and various projects to the men for their approbation. This committee has been formed and has already met to get started on the idea.

The committee of twelve, along with Henderson, has come up with several of the more basic reasons for this proposed government and has tried to outline the purposes for this publication. These reasons are derived from discussion with the men and it is believed they are all very valid. First, the purpose of the proposed men's student government is, thus far, to present a functional organic body to operate with the sanction of the majority of the men in Carnegie for the mutual benefit of all concerned. The key note of the proposal seems to be in the words "mutual benefit." The men feel that, in a unit such as proposed, various projects and ideas could be acted upon officially to bring about a definite betterment of dormitory life. Some of the expressed ideas concern such things as the acquisition of the clothes dryer and a milk machine for the dormitory. It has been noted that through this organization more prolific results could be found in actions on freshman orientation, planning for Christmas and Homecoming, etc. In the realm of future possibilities lie the other projects of a campus-wide nature. There are certain activities that coud very well be sponsored by such a body.

The idea of government for the men has been accepted. It is only the structure and the execution of plans that have to be approved. The men feel that they are quite capable of this responsibility and are anxious to assert it in their progress. Praise is in order for the men of Carnegie for their open-minded and freely expressed attitudes concerning the organization of any government.

It is president Henderson's hope, after a constitution has been ratified, to open a place in the structure of the Student Council for representatives from both the women's and men's governments. This, of course, would give Carnegie, and possibly later on Bartlett and the town men a greater voice in student government.

The committee of 12 hope to return in the fall with plans and suggestions. A constitution will be drawn up at the time and voted on by the men. A better dormitory life for men is in the offing.

The Editor
Maryville, Tennessee

Dear Editor,

I have given much thought and consideration to a serious problem which seems to be existing on our campus. Do We, as individuals, live up to the standards and traditions of Maryville College? One of the things that Maryville stands for is positive Christian emphisis. Yet it seems that there are those who seem to be making a farce of religion. These people knew very well when they came to Maryville what its standards were. Haw they can sign pledges and honor reports dishonestly and not feel the slightest sense of guilt is beyond me.

Several people have recognized this problem, yet no one seems to do anything about it. If more of us would stand up for the things we beleive in, and see that action is taken, we could keep up the high Christian standards of Maryville This is not a problem affecting a small group. It affects all of us as individuals and as individuals we should act.

Sincerely,
(Name withheld by request.)

Maryville Students Will Have Many Interesting Summer Jobs

By Joan Marston

In the summer, a young Maryville Colleger's thoughts turn to jobs. Where can I work?

Herchel Netherton has secured an interesting job for the summer. He will be an actor-technician in the new historical drama opening in Gatlinburg, "Chucky Jack." This is Kermit Hunter's drama of pioneer John Sevier. Herchel has a speaking part in the show and he will also serve as stage technician. The show opens June 22, but rehearsals begin June 2. Another student, Liz Frei, is going to work with "Chucky Jack" backstage on the sets. For those interested, Herman Middleton who is doing set design and technical work for the play was formerly head of the drama department here at Maryville. The theater where the show is being held is new Hunter Hill's Theater and is about 2 miles on the other side of Gatlinburg. It is an outdoor show similar to "Unto These Hills" and will play every night except Sunday all summer until September 1.

Charles Williams is going to be a cook this summer at Acadia National Park at Seal Harbor, Maine. He is going to be a broiler cook. Charles says he has never been a cook before . . .

Barbara Davis is going to be an office assistant at Mensul School (Board of National Missions USA) in Albuquerque, New Mexico this summer. Barbara says that she will be doing a little bit of everything including work camping.

Bob Evans is going to work in the galley of the S. S. Milwaukee Clipper, a ferry which travels 85 miles from Milwaukee, Wisconsin to Muskegan, Michigan. Bob will help the cooks and be a link between them and the busboys. (Peeling potatoes). Since the line dividing central and eastern time runs thru the middle of Lake Michigan, the trip takes 5 hours one way and 7 the other.

Ted Frauman plans to serve as a counselor at Bude Ranch Camp on Lake Wales, Florida. His duties will include being the head of a cabin of eight boys, teaching riding, canoeing, swimming, tennis, archery, and leading vespers in the evenings.

Pat Fahl is going to earn money this summer by typing for the Army Map Service in Washington, D.C.

Ione Bahmer is going to be an assistant playground manager this summer, taking one week out to be a counselor of junior highs at Presbyterian church camp, Camp Presmont.

Norma Taubert has a job with the Public Service Math Department in New Jersey. It will be working with accounting.

Jill Smither will earn her money this summer by playing the organ at a wedding and at a funeral

This is just the beginning of all the many interesting things that parlor in St. Louis.

Maryville students are planning for the summer. Many are working as counselors at camps, typing and filing in all kinds of offices, and doing manual labor. Here's hoping whatever you do is rewarding!

US Civil Service Has Job Openings

The U. S. Civil Service Commission has announced that engineers are needed for employment in the Army Ballistic Missile Agency and Redstone Arsenal in Huntsville, Alabama. The optional fields of work include aeronautical, chemical, electrical, electronics, general, industrial, mechanical, and ordnance engineering.

To qualify, applicants must have had appropriate college study or pertinent engineering experience. Applications will be accepted until further notice and must be filed with the Executive Secretary, Board of U. S. Civil Service Examiners, Redstone Arsenal, Huntsville, Alabama.

Further information and application forms may be obtained from many post offices throughout the country or from the U. S. Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

SIDELIGHT . . .

Considering the wild claims that are made by some fellas that there are two and three times as many girls on campus as there are fellas, it is interesting to note that at the start of the present school year there were 364 women and 349 men enrolled in this school. In other words, there were just 15 more women than there were men!

"You can't beat the system," moaned a student, looking over his grades. "I decided to take basket weaving for a snap course, but two Navahoes enrolled, raised the curve, and I flunked."

Andrea Doria Survivor Tells His Adventure

Swims Half Hour Until Rescued

By Sarkees Kaprielian

I am sure that everybody heard or watched television about the sinking of the Andrea Doria. I am an Armenian student from the U. S. to study engineering. I was a passenger on the ill-fated Andria Doria, embarking at Naples, and expecting to get off at New York.

The Andrea Doria, of the Italian line, left Naples, July 18, heading for New York. In the Atlantic Ocean about 150 miles from New York, our ship collided with the Stockholm, a Swedish ship. The Stockholm ran into the right side of the bow of the Andrea Doria in a dense fog.

At the time of the crash, 2 p.m., I was in my cabin on the lowest deck getting ready to go to bed. I had nothing on but my undershirt. I felt the boat shake and the lights went off. I ran out into the passageway which I had used as an exit before, but found it blocked by a large piece of iron which I could not move. I tried to knock on it but no sound came. For about five minutes I ran to and fro, opening one door after another trying to go upstairs. I went up four floors, hardly breathing through the smoke. Each of these floors was crowded with people milling and screaming. When I got onto the deck of the boat, there was some light and I saw it was tilted toward the water at a 35 degree angle; the tilt was steadily becoming steeper. The foghorn was blowing two blasts at a time and we could see nothing through the fog. A lot of people were on the upper side of the deck. I grabbed a piece of iron to hold onto the deck. We stayed there, shivering in the cold, for almost an hour. I could not even get my lifebelt. In my hurry to leave my cabin I had left it there, and it was forbidden to go back. While we waited there, a priest went around giving services to the passengers, climbing in ropes from one to another on the tilted deck. One man lost his grip on the rail while trying to bring his child nearer, he slid across to the lower part of the deck. We saw dim lights in the distance through the fog. The deck was tilted so far that we thought at first they were the lights' of an airplane. Then we

Pastors To Offer Counseling Service

The ministers of three of the Presbyterian Churches in the Maryville Community are to render a personal counseling service on the Maryville College campus beginning Monday, September 17, President Ralph W. Lloyd has announced.

A cooperative committee, representing the New Providence, Highland, and Houston Memorial Presbyterian Churches, has developed a plan, approved by the College, whereby one of the ministers will be on the campus Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday from 3:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. each week.

According to the present schedule, Rev. Dr. Francis W. Pritchard, Pastor of New Providence Church, will be in the Chapel Conference Room during that period on Mondays; Rev. Dr. Douglas J. Elwood, Pastor of Highland Church, will be there on Tuesdays; Rev. Jerry Elliott, Assistant Pastor at New Providence, on Wednesdays; and Rev. James R. Kren, Pastor of Houston Memorial, on Thursdays.

All students, regardless of denominational affiliation, who wish to talk with any one of these ministers on any matter may go to the Conference Room at the designated hours. Also, appointments may be made with one of the minister sfor a specific time within the three thirty to five thirty period.

This is a new service worked out cooperatively by the Churches and the College. It is planned that if it is found helpful it will continue throughout the year.

LLOYDS ATTEND MEETINGS BEHIND THE IRON CURTAIN

President and Mrs. Lloyd spent five weeks in Europe this summer. They left Maryville on July 12 and returned on August 18.

The primary purpose of the trip was Dr. Lloyd's attendance at meetings of the World Council of Churches Central Committee in Hungary and the World Presbyterian Alliance Executive Committee in Czechoslovakia, both behind the "iron curtain." They spent a week in each of these countries.

They crossed the Atlantic both ways by airplane, going from New York to Lisbon in July and returning from Amsterdam to New York in August. They spent ten days in Portugal and Spain, studying particularly the problems of the Protestant churches in those countries.

From Spain they went to Geneva, Switzerland, for two days at the headquarters of the World Presbyterian Alliance and the World Council of Churches, followed by two days in Vienna before going to Hungary. From Hungary they went by air to Prague, Czechoslovakia, and after the meeting there to Frankfurt, Germany, for the final days of the German Kirchentag.

The Kirchentag is a great church movement which has developed since the War. At the last meeting there were more than half a million people present.

From Frankfurt they went to Hanover, where Mrs. Lloyd had been before their marriage a student of German, being then a college instructor in German and French. They spent two days on the north coast of Germany in Emden, attending metings of the European Area Council of the World Presbyterian Alliance.

While in Holland they attended a notable exhibition of Rembrandt paintings in Rotterdam, and in Amsterdam visited again the places where the first meeting of the World Council of Churches was held in 1948.

Miss E. H. Jackson Receives Doctorate

By Paula Kronenberg

"I'm glad it's over," said Dr. Elizabeth Hope Jackson, referring to the work she did on her Doctor of Philosphy degree which she received on June 8, from the University of Colorado. Dr. Jackson received her A. B. from Smith College in 1930, and her M. A. from the University of Michigan in 1940. She has been teaching at Maryville College since the fall of 1935.

Dr. Jackson's dissertation was entitled An Analysis of Certain Colorado Atlas Field Records with Regard to Settlement History and Other Factors and includes over three hundred typewritten pages. The purposes of the dissertation were to answer certain questions about dialect vocabulary and differences in word usage, and to lay ground-work for further editing of the Colorado Atlas which is a division of the Linguistic Atlas of the United States and Canada.

"It is awfully interesting work," said Dr. Jackson of her study, "and someday I would like to do more of it. But right now I want a rest." And who wouldn't?

Eldridge Ranks First On Spring Dean's List

New Fashions For College Men

The hat is due for a revival as standard college wear, says PLAYBOY magazine in its September issue, which also predicts a return (believe it or not) of the double-breasted suit for the smartly dressed Man-About-Campus. Both items which had become virtually extinct, are now considered quite "shoe" by the avant garde on Ivy League campuses. "Shoe" is a new expression which describes the well dressed college man. The very "shoe" senior pictured above is wearing a narrow brim hport fedora and a sporty tweed single-breasted suit.

Ruth Morris First To Win Award

Ruth Carol Morris, a junior from Wilmington, Delaware, has been announced as the winner of the Alpha Gamma Sigma scholarship award. She is the first person to receive the award which was set up last year by the twenty-two year old scholarship society.

The award, which consists of the income from a $1000. fund, will be given to the person who has the highest grade rank at the end of the sophomore year. The award was applied to Ruth's first semester bills.

The YMCA will also hold a political convention for their party, Sunday afternoon at 1:30 in Bartlett Convention Hall. Jim Colqhoun will preside as chairman of the convention.

BAINONIAN AND KAPPA PHI GIVE NEPTUNE A REAL TREAT

By Nancy McGeorge

As he watched from the depts of his "Royal Pool," Neptune was treated to a sight which warmed his ancient heart. The days of his flaming youth when he had helped to control the world, had been reconstructed at Maryville College.

The Forum, Senate, Pantheon, Temple of Knowledge, Colosseum, Circus Maximus, all the famous places he had known, were once more a familiar sight. Then he remembered the old saying "When in Rome . . .," so he did.

He soon came to realize that the appearance of this Roman culture had not just happened, but had been planned and carried out by the Bainonian and Kappa Phi societies of said campus.

Thursday and Friday, September 13th and 14th had been set aside as their Rush Week for the new students.

Neptune, not wanting to miss any of the festivities, set about to pretend that he too was a new student. He had to be very careful, though, that Eloise Jordan, Ann Fulton, Cap Johnson and Dave Gilliland, General Chairmen of Rush Week, did not catch on to his activities.

On Thursday afternoon, the first affair to be held was a tea for all new women students. As he could not attend this part, he sent one of his sisters to spy for him.

She was taken to the tea by her Bainonian big sister. While enjoying herself thoroughly she learned that the hardworking chairmen of the tea were Judy Trnavsky and Laura Teague. Not only was there plenty of refreshments but also outstanding entertainment.

The Master of Ceremonies was Harold O'Bannon. The performers were Mary McEver, Bob Muir, Louise Ogden, Fred Wyman, the Bonnie Lassies, and Zona Gogel.

She learned all about the surprises there had been for the girls that morning. The favors had been planned by Jane Bradfield and the dorm decorations by Opal Miller.

That evening on Thaw lawn at 7:30, the informal, the first affair to which he could go, was held. It was a new fangled dance called a square dance. But as it was Roman style and with Roman calls, made by George Hardy, he really enjoyed himself. The hard planning and work for this dance had been done by Ann Castrodale and Dick Preston. Refreshments had been in the charge of Lydia Munson and Bob Muir.

On Friday afternoon as he

THETA EPSILON AND ALPHA SIGMA RUSH WEEK

Theta And Sigs Plan Gala Rush

By Nancy Peters

The culmination of many, many hours of man-and woman-labor will take place next Friday and Saturday, when Theta Epsilon and Alpha Sigma present their Rush Week.

On Friday afternoon, a fashion show for the new girls will be given in the chapel court at 3:30 p.m. On Friday evening the new students will be entertained at a Splash Party to be held in the college pool at 8:00 p.m. Refreshments will be served after the performance.

Formal attire will be in order for Saturday night when the new students will be entertained in the Alumni Gymnasium at 8:00 p.m. Here they will see the final production of Theta and Alpha Sig Rush Week. Refreshments will be served after the performance, and many surprises and thrills are in store for those attending.

Those who have contributed their talent, time and patience are: The Rush Week Chairmen; Hershal Netherton, Gail Shiffer and Ginny Marshall--Campus Decorations; Natalie Richards, Jane Robison, Nancy Potter--Dorm Decorations; Judy Ross and Sue Short.

Splash Party; Katie Marston, and Ed Drum--Fashion Show; Margie Jones--Set; Gary Davis--Refreshments; Judy Cummings--Dates; Bob Hassall, Bill Hierd, Joan Antes, Gray Clarke, Libby Turner--Lighting; Tony Clark and Carol Schade--Programs and Invitations; Nancy Peters and Virginia Marshall--Secretary of Rush Week; Nancy Peters--Choreography; Gail Shiffer and Mary Ellen Lee--Music and orchestrations; Fred Wyman.

Although Rush Week involves a lot of running around madly, it is well worth the effort when you see the look of expectation on the faces of the new students. They as well as the rest of us, enjoy seeing the campus dotted with posters and signs showing that Rush Week hhas arrived in all its glory.

A good deal of work has gone into the Rush Week productions but making all the time, effort, sprains, stains and blisters incurred within, are not in vain.

Start Now. . .

You are a freshman. . . You have chosen Maryville College, and right now you are in that blurred, confusing, nebulous maze known as "those first few weeks." You are wondering whether or not you will ever settle down to a routine. Some of you will and some of you won't, but all of you will be exposed in varying degrees to college. Whether or not this exposure will amount to anything will depend upon how well you yourself manage your time in these next four years.

Or perhaps you are a sophomore. One year of college has already sped by with all its accomplishments, successes and failures. You may have decided to turn over a new leaf to try harder this year. You should be pretty well used to college by now—you are still taking four-hour courses, you know how hard you need to study, you have lived through two sets of final examinations. But you, too, will be setting up new routines. You will work harder in some organizations you joined last year and drop out of others. You will find adjustments to make which you did not encounter last year. You, too, will be concerned with managing your time.

Maybe you are a junior. . . the half way mark ispast. You are beginning to think more seriously than ever about your vocation. You are starting to concentrate more and more in your major field—you find that there are seniors as well as juniors in your classes now. Thoughts of special studies flicker through your mind occasionally. You think, "This year I must settle down; I must study harder." For many of you this will be the hardest year of college. Juniors have more positions of leadership in extra curricular activities and will often find it difficult to budget their time between classes.

Perhaps you are at last a senior. You may find it harded to realize that you will be wearing the black gown and mortar board next May. Perhaps you view with pride your Maryville College career, and you are looking forward confidently to graduate school or your new job next year. Or, on the other hand, perhaps you feel that you could have accomplished more during these four years—studied harder, gone out for more activities, made more friends. . . but remember, your chances for doing these things are not over. This is only the beginning of the year. Although you do not have left the time you had to look forward to when your were a freshman, you have still another year to manage. You too, will be establishing routines, meting deadlines, and budgeting your time.

All students, then, whether freshmen or senlors, are faced with the same problem or challenge or whatever you want to call it—that of learning to manage their time to the best advantage. And the beginning of the year is really the best time to start. Good habits formed in the beginning are hard to break.

—B.W.

"Don't Let It Fade". . .

There is something very special about a beginning. Whether it is the start of a new year or the renewal of the cycle of the seasons—or the start of a new school year—the predominant mood is one of optimism. All too soon, however, the tendency is to lapse into a state of lethargy and discontent, and it is this problem which now confronts us.

The first few weeks of the fall semester are indeed busy ones for new and old studetns alike, but a "leveling-off" period is desired and expected. However, this feeling of being continually pressed for time is certainly not the only obvious characteristic of a new school year. There is also present a particular undefinable mood which penetrates into every facet of college life. It causes animosity to evaporate like the pools of water after a Maryville down-pour and allows enemies to speak and those on not-so-friendly terms to forget grievances and become friends. It produces a spirit of optimism toward sutdies and self-improvement along with an appropriate ambitious list of resolutions. It develops a sense of satisfaction and a sense of hope. It is, then, this mood—which is a composite of many moods—which we ought to preserve throughout the entire school year.

A great deal has been said about college spirit, but the true college spirit is that found when students first assemble in the fall. It is a spirit of youthfulness and of forgiveness. Don't let it fade.

—C. C.

The President Speaks

The fall semester for our current school year is now well under way, and soon almost everyone can begin to settle down for that "long winter's nap"—that imaginary vacation of hibernation for run-down scholars and exhausted professors.

I give my word of welcome to all new students and to those who have the perseverance to fight again their lonely but glorious way up the turbulent educational stream. Also, on behalf of the student body, I extend a cordial welcome to the new members of our faculty and to those who have returned from a leave of absence. May every one in our college society find this year to be a challanging year—a year of inspiration for both the mind and the spirit.

This year the spirit of cooperation, unity, and loyalty is easily discernible in all corners of our college household. It is very pleasing and gratifying to work and be a part of such a coperative and enthusiastic group. I sincerely hope that this new surge of life, so to speak, will remain with us and will be evident in all our endeavors.

I want to thank the members of the student body who already have given willingly of their time and effort in service for the planning of the various opening programs. The Y.M. and the Y.W. along with the four campus societies deserve much credit for the commendable work that has been done thus far.

Very soon the machinery of your Student Council will start to operate, and I hope that our products this year will prove to be improvements over some of the past merchandise. Your Student Council representatives urge you to take an interest in the work of your student government. With your continued devoted and intelligent support, I feel confident that the rewards, individually and collectively, will be many.

Student Body President

Scots & Soda

By Ann Wiley

How do you do. Hello. Howyd. Hi, and also Hey, y'all! ! Can't you tell we're bubbling, (Hip, Hooray!), simply bubbling, to crawl back into ye ole gristmill. . . commonly known as grind. . .!?!?

• • • •

Has anyone ever seen so many cute freshmen . . .also freshwomen. . .? ? Down, boys, down. I think it is in due order that we give these gals a break and tell them really how to get a man and hold him. Ready. . .Set. . .Go.

Number one. NEVER BE OBVIOUS. In order to get your man, come to meals early, lie in wait at the front door, and as an eligible young man comes near, grab him with a helf-nelson and scream "LOVER". Perhaps he'll notice you and ask you for a date.

Number Two. ALWAYS BE AGREEABLE. When your date prefers the Capitol and tries to overrule your preference to the Park, let him go to the Capitol and you go to the Park.

Number three. DON'T ACT LIKE A STARVING DOG. Never, but never, insist that your date treat you to food after the show. Just remember to pack a lunch before leaving the dorm.

• • • •

Really, though, it's GREAT to be back. Friends, profs, everyone desperately trying to remember everyone else's name and mother nature right in step with her usual crazy mixed-up weather. Never fear, frosh. . . the monsoon season is yet to come.

• • • •

The student mixer was a huge success and our congrats to the Bonnie Lassies who were "just formed" last spring. Boys, we haven't forgotten the Merry Villians and Scotsmen. Really, the general consensus of opinion is that all three "fours" are tremendi!

• • • •

And so we say. . .after one whole week. . . plus some, at Maryville (Fanfare), a really and truly, honest-to-goodness WELCOME TO MC to the newcomers who by now are looking less like sore thumbs and more like the rest of us. . .not necessarily an improvement, you understand. Now you know about lines, the food, classes, teachers, nightwatchmen, so what's the verdict? Take it from us. . . you'll live and you'll love it, but take it easy, huh??

A LETTER FROM TESSIE

Reprinted from The Highland Echo, Sept. 16, 1939

Dear Mom and Dad:

I arrived here safely and am I confused. I know now how daddy must have felt when he had to stand in line to get his relief check. All I have seen since I arrived have been long monotonous lines and most of the boys I have met seem to have lines which would compare to the ones which I have had to stand in. They told me that when I came to college I would have to stand on my own feet and I can understand what they meant, but this week there have been two or three people standing on mine, which I hadn't counted on. The old shoes which Aunt Laura gave me are simply a wreck. It is so different here from home. None of the girls take their shoes off till they get to the building where we stay. They laugh at me when I take mine off on the campus, but if their feet felt like mine I know they would do the same. Please send me some of that snake oil that Uncle Zeke uses on his corns.

After I reached the end of those horrible lines, they gave us big cards which we wrote on. I had to sign my name more times than daddy did when we mortgaged the farm. Later they tore them all up into bits just like it didn't matter anyway. I guess they just wanted to see if we could write. But when I think of the money I paid for signing those cards I'm beginning to think that I'm going to need more money. Perhaps we had better sell that other pig. They say that we are going to have to pay for a seat in chapel, but am planning on getting around that by having you send that little stool that Jim uses when he milks.

They must be going to start planting here soon for the other day I heard a boy say that he had come to college to sow some wild oats. The corn on my foot feels like it might be up any day now. They also must have sowed some benefits here, too, for I hear them talking about reaping them all the time.

The other night they had what they call a student mixer. It was lots of fun. They said they had a blind date for me and I spent most of the evening leading him around. Later I found out he could see as well as I could. He acted funny anyway. I asked him why they told me he was a blind date and he would just look at me and say that he wished he were.

Our classes meet in nice rooms and I have enjoyed them a lot. Everyone I've been to yet there has been someone up front who talks all the time and I can't seem to get much done. It seems to me that they would have a little more respect for the rest of us, but it is probably one of those dumb freshmen that I've heard so much about.

Our room is so nice too. The first night I stayed there I had such a time getting the light out. It didn't take me long to see that you couldn't blow it out and finally I noticed it was tied down with a little string. I took my scissors to cut it loose and I'm telling you I never saw so much fire come from a little string in all my life. We have a bed for each person which certainly seems like a lot of bunk, doesn't it? You will not have to send that bench for there are two chairs. They don't seem to have forgotten a thing for they even have the water piped in from the spring.

They have a golf course here around the campus and I played the other day. It certainly is a funny game. The idea seems to be to knock a little white thing around with some funny looking sticks. They told me I was pretty good but that I stood too close to the ball after I hit it. We played for about ten minutes and then hunted for the ball the rest of the afternoon. It seems to me it would be just as much fun to throw aspirin tables out on the lawn and hunt for them.

I must close now for I must get orientated. I hope it doesn't hurt much.

Always your'n Tessie.

P.S.—Please send me my teeth, I've learned to chew gum.

Times don't change much, do they?

Voices, Masks, and Shadows

Welcome to the fall 1956 version of Maryville College's "culture column." We shall attempt to give you the very best in entertainment, books, the latest scientific data, and maybe the latest fudge recipes for you ladies. Perhaps if we find some good jokes which are too highbrow for Scots and Soda, we might include them here in our miscellaneous department—and, if we run out of books to review, we might try our hand at your favorite textbooks. . . physical science, French 101, et cetera, et cetera, et cetera (for you fans of "The King and I").

The latest fad in the cultural world (besides Elvis Presley, of course) seems to be a preoccupation with outer space. Mars, the red planet, can be sen shining brilliantly in the southeast every evening. We hope you had a chance to see it closeup through the college telescope the other night. However, if you didn't, don't fel too badly, because the library has several books on the subject of astronomy which you may be interested in looking at. If you have gone ape over "stellar evolution and the subatomic theory," you should read "The Birth and Death of the Sun" by George Gamow.

This probably has nothing to do with astrology or horoscopes, but you also might be interested in reading "Of Time and the Calendar" by Elisabeth Achelis. As a matter of fact, the book deals with the attempts at computing a standard world calendar.

In the reading room collection the library has Guy Murchie's "Song of the Sky". If you think you saw moving objects on Mars when you looked at it through the telescope, you would probably like to read "The Flying Saucer Conspiracy" by Major Donald E. Keyhoe. Then, if you are really interested, you can always delve into all the encyclopedias and learned journals for additional information.

For entertainment next week you might like to forget your troubles and relax in one of the movies playing downtown. We urge everyone to come out for the football game this evening, but if you simply have an aversion or allergy to pigskin, then perhaps you would like to see something nice and quiet. The "Return of Wild Bill" with wild Bill Elliott, is playing down at Park. Across the street at the Capitol is "The Vanishing American" with Scot Ray and Audrey Totter. Also at the Park tonight as a double feature will be Mickey Spillane's thriller "Kiss Me Deadly" with Ralph Meeker.

Monday through Wedensday the Parkk kwill feature "The Slave Girl" in technicolor with Yvonne DeCarlo, Broderick Crawford, and George Brent. Also at the Capitol these same days will be "Alexander the Great," rated as excellent by many critics. Fredric March will play King Philip of Macedonia, who forced his rule over the Greek states. His son Alexander, played by Richard Burton, set out to conquer the world. This is in cinemascope.

Thursday and Friday at the Park will play "Sins of the Borgias," with Martin Carlos. Thursday through Saturday Mickey Rooney will help Francis the talking mule unravel the mystery of McLeod Castle at the Capitol. The name of the picture is "Francis in the Haunted House." Francis fans must not miss it.

Coming attractions will be "Moby Dick" and "Bus Stop." The dates have not been announced yet.

Be on hand for subsequent issues of the Echo, where we will have more of this for culture-hungry Maryvillians.

Student Council Elects Members Of Senate

By Ted McDaniels

At the first meeting of Student Council for the year 1956-57, President Henderson stated that the dues had been sent to the National Student Association for this year and our membership will become effective as of October 15, 1956.

It was also stated that the classes will hold meetings at regular intervals during the course of the semester with a minimum of four meetings per semester.

There was a motion made that Council send letters of thanks to the Y.M. and Y.W.C.A., Miss Ware and Social Board for their work.

President Henderson appointed the members of various committees named last year. Naturally the freshman members of these committees will be appointed at the first possible date.

The Council then elected the members of the Student-Faculty Senate that are to represent council this year. These new members are: Mert Hall, Sam Buffatt, Barbara Wilkie, Bell Dent, Ted McDaniels, Dave Krotchko, and Charlie Garrison.

During the meeting President Henderson stated that he had the most optomistic spirit for the year in that student morale is running high and the cooperation seems to be ever increasing in proportion to the increase in the student body.

Be careful when you see a girl who is shiny eyed. Make sure its not just the sun peeking through the hole in her head.

SPORTS SPOTLIGHT

September 1956—A new school year—a new freshman class—and a new football team. All three are young and inexperienced. School years and freshman classes however have a way of learning fast and maturing swiftly. Football teams sometimes do—sometimes don't. Only time will tell.

The Scotties at this time are a relaitvely unknown quantity leaving many questions to be answered. Some of the answers will be learned tonight, others may not. It is for us to wait and cheer and hope.

The backfield led by Little-All-American honors winner Bud White and tailback Jim McCall sems to be in good shape. The return of Earl Lawson and Jim Harris from service, plus the addition of Johnny Phipps give the Scotties four capable directors for its single wing attack—probably the team's strongest position. The fullback post is manned by Bud White, a fine runner and defensive standout. Jack Wilson, who has displayed some fine power running, and Jim Curtis are the reserve fullbacks. Returning at the wing back slot, with a year of experience behind him, is Earl Smith. A proven performer as a freshman in '55, he will be a big asset to the starting backfield. Roy Meyers, another '55 returnee, Glenn Bishop and Mac Johnson will be backing Smith up at this position. Mark Leonard a newcomer to Maryville and the position is currently ahead in the race for the number one quarterback post. A transfer from Emory and Henry, Leonard, a former guard, blocks well, learns fast and is a hustler. A little experience and he could easily turn into a top-flight blocking-back. Jim Pearson, Leroy Clark, and David Stanley are also candidates for the quarterback spot. Inexperience is again the word to describe the center prospects. The four candidates, Jim Yoakum, Tom Bass, Bruce Bevins, and Sonny Long have played very little college ball, but all have definite possibilities. Bass and Long have looked especially good at the defensive line backer position. It is possible that one of the four may be switched to tackle to help strengthen that spot. The top guards are John Anderson and Buddy Beam, both lettermen from last year's squad; Red Montgomery and Clifford Irwin will see a lot of action and lend much support to this position. At this writing, the two leading tackles are Bill Strickland and Sonny Axley. Strickland is a letterman and a capable uerformer. Axley is big but needs experience. Gene Brown, Dick Bickford, and Jerry Campbell are being counted on fora lot of help here. The ends are small and, other than alternate captain Wilson, have very little experience. Wilson, a good blocker and receiver, is a defensive standout. The other starter will probably be Ed Smith, a freshman. Backing them up will be Jack French, Mike Talley, and Bob Carleton.

As you may have suspected the key word in the above discussion is inexperience. As this experienced is gained the Scots will no doubt improve. By retaining the high-spirit and determination that is prevalent in their workouts now, the Scotties could suprise us all. The cloud has no silver lining but it is there and with a little work the Scots might add that silver trimming which would mean an interesting and successful season. Let's get behind them and help them all we can. Go get 'em Scotties.

The Captains

Out of all the questions surrounding the 1956 Highlander squad there emerges this one certainty—No team will be better led. The Scottie captain is Bud White, a senior business major, from Maryville. Alternate captain Ted Wilson, a senior physical education major also hails from Maryville. Before coming to Scottie-land, Bud and Ted were teammates under Coach Jim Renfro at Maryville High School, where they made outstanding records. White, who last year received honorable mention on the Little-All-American team, is best known for his running ability and is a consistent ground gainer. However, at times his defensive ability overshadows his running poweress and his play in the defensive backfield is a fine thing to watch. Tiny Ted is small for a college end but he makes up for his size with determination and hustle. He is outsanding as a defensive end and despite his size is a good blocker and receiver. Both are fine men and football players and the Scots could not have selected two better leaders. So good luck to both of them and may Maryville under their leadership have a successful 1956 football season.

Scottie Schedule

Tonight the Maryville College football Scotties will open their 1956 campaign against the Morehead Kentucky State Teachers College. It promises to be a hard night for the inexperienced Highlanders. After an open date on the 22nd Maryville journeys to Danville, Kentucky to meet the Centre College Praying Colonels. Centre, with an undefeated record in 1955 to defend, will be as tough as ever. October 6th finds the Scotties in Johnson City to engage the East Tennessee State Buccaneers. This is always a big game for both schools and usually a good one. October 13, Homecoming, and sweet revenge we hope. Still suffering from the sting which the Emory and Henry Wasps gave them last year, the Highlanders will be out to avenge that defeat and please all the old grads. The following Saturday the men of Coaches Honaker and Davis meet Tennessee Wesleyan down at Athens. On October 27 Howard College invades the hill from Birmingham, Alabama. Showing improvement every year since they again took up the gridiron warfare three years ago, the boys from Birmingham could give the Scotties trouble. November 3rd the Highlanders return the Alabama visit with a trip to Jacksonville to play the always tough Jacksonville State Teachers. November 10th finds the coal miners from Concord State College, West Virginia, down from the hills to tangle with our Scots. Always big and rugged, the Concord Staters never give anyone an easy time of it. On November 17th the call to arms is sounded as Maryville travels to Jefferson City to do battle with the arch-rival Carson Newman Eagles. Statistics and previous performances count for naught when these two get together on the football field and anything can happen. There is the Scotties' nine game schedule. Some are rough—some not so rough, but one thing is certain, they will be a lot rougher if the team doesn't receive the whole-hearted support of the student body. So win, lose, or draw, let them know that you are behind them. Good luck Scotties.

Intramurals . . .

By Joe Quinn

The first intramurals managers meeting was held last Monday in preparation for the oncoming Touch-football season.

This year we expect to have a six team loop, including teams from the YMCA, Kappa Phi, Two Alpha Sig teams, Pre-Min., and the Rebels, a town team.

Referees are needed badly for these games, so if you are interested contact Coach Johnson and sign up now. No experience is necessary.

Teams have already started practice, and this season promises to be a good one. New students are urged to come out and play. This is not an upperclassmen league. All are welcome.

On Tuesday the league officially opened with the YMCA-Kappa Phi game. Tom Morriss, scoring two touchdowns led the Y to a 14 to 0 win. Don Jones added both extra points.

NEWS ABOUT THE NEW ARRIVAL

By Webb Gentry

Our latest member of the faculty to acquire an addition to his family is Mr. Kinsinger, who is an instructor in music and plays a very able role as director of the gle clubs. Mr. and Mrs. Kinsinger have named their daughter Lara Ann.

Lara was born at 12:03 a.m. September 4, 1956. Her weight was 7 pounds and 2 ounces. Lara has beautiful curly black hair and is growing every passing day. Both mother and daughter are doing splendidly reports, Mr. Kinsinger. The only complaint Mr. Kinsinger has with his new daughter is the midnight feedings, which come too often to suit any hard working teacher.

wandered around the campus he was delighted to see such old familiar sights as the "Appian Way," a Roman wine shop, some old Roman ruins, chariots, spears, torches, and even a Roman fountain. These he heard had been planned and directed by Iris Abbott and Jim Barber.

About 6:00 that evening, he really began to get excited, for "The Big Formal" was to take place that evening at 8:00 in the amphitheater of the "Forum."

As the date chairmen Hillis McKamey and Joe Quinn had found a lovely girl for him to take that evening, he put on his best suit of seaweed and got out his best trident.

They were ushered to their seats and the show began. The play was entitled "Roamin' with the Romans". He settled back to enjoy himself.

There were those mischievous muses from Mount Parnassus They were forever getting in trouble. The five main ones were portrayed by Sylvia Smith, Ann Wiley, Lynn Mitchell, Shirley Mayfield, and Carol Lee Tracy. As usual Ralphus Mercurus, Chuck Frizell, was trying to aid them (and himself). It seemed that this time the confusion was due to Erato's scheming plan. But it all turned out happily, as the Muses become contented to stay with Giles Overbury, Bill Deerfield, and his four superior young men, played by Lyle Talbot, Cap Johnson, Joe Williams, and Jack Shafer. Even the Italian waiters-Joe Quinn, John Ribble, Dick Preston, and Dave Gilliland-got into the act. As the play drew to a close the muses were united with their sisters, Mary McEver, Joan McNaughton, Margie Wilkinson, and Nancy McGeorge, and everyone lived happily ever after.

That was good, as Neptune just loved comedies and happy endings. During the intermission he had really enjoyed thoose refreshments planned by Eleanor Galbreath and Kathy Briggs.

Now Rush Week had come to an end, and it was time for Neptune to return to the deep. But first, since he had enjoyed himself so much, he just had to go thank the president of Bainonian, Pat Hoover, and the president of Kappa Phi, Sam Buffat.

As he passed Anderson on his way to the "Royal Pool," he happened to see Nero standing there very serenely. He guessed that in the rush before, he had just missed him. He could not understand how he had missed noisy Nero. That would really be a story to report to the other gods.

Though it is true that Nero may have fiddled while Rome burned, Thursday and Friday, he had just stood silently by and watched as Bainonian and Kappa Phi fired the freshmen with enthusiasm for their societies.

Andrea Doria . . .

realized there were lots of ships circling around. The fog kept coming in and out, and in the intervals of four or five minutes when the fog cleared, we could see the ships around us. We could see blinking lights on the deck above, and we knew our ship was communicating with the others. We heard the captains voice from the upper deck, ordering everyone to go to the lower side of the deck and get into the lifeboats. First the women and children got into the boats, I helped many of them across the deck. There was a rope across the deck. I held on more to the rope with one hand and helped them with the other hand. I remembered my training in the Scouts at this time. Soon very few people remained. I tried to get into a lifeboat but I could see nothing, just fog. There I jumped into the ocean, where I kept up by swimming for half an hour. The sea was calm but I could see absolutely nothing through the fog. Then I saw a beam of light from a lifeboat. I called for help and they came over and took me in. It was a lifeboat of the Ile de France. We rowed over to the Andrea Doria. I helped row and picked up ten or twelve old people who were still on the boat. I was freezing from my half hour in the water. I still had on only my undershirt which now was coated with oil. Passengers were taken aboard the Ile de France, the Stockholm, and Cape Anne. The Ile de France, which had been heading for Le Havre, turned back to New York.

Abroad the Andrea Doria were about ten Armenians, some immigrating, and one student. The Andrea Doria sank at 10 a.m. New York time, July 26. While it was going down airplanes and a helicopter circled overhead. We learned with great sadness that most of our belongings and many valuable papers had been lost. There were many injured, about 25 dead, and 72 missing.

Old Grades Explained Under New System

Last spring the faculty approved a plan for modifying the college grading system and provided that the modified system should be placed in effect during the Fall semester of 1956. The new system provides for grades and grade points as follows:

A—3 grade points for each hour
B—2 grade points for each hour
C—1 grade point for each hour
D—0 grade points for each hour
F— -1 grade point for each hour

A student's academic standing is determined by the number of grade points earned divided by the number of credit hours undertaken, exclusive of required physical education.

Students now at Maryville who have earned grade points and hours under the old system are in a transition group and their standings will be evaluated in terms of the new system as follows:

The total number of grade points earned by a student under the old system will be divided by three to determine the grade point total under the new system. This division is possible because the grade points carried by A, B, and C in the old system are three times the number of points carried by those grades under the new system.

It has been found that the division by three effectively and fairly makes the transition from the old system to the new system; therefore, it will be used in all cases to determine standing. In some cases it works to the slight disadvantage of the student because only a third of the low grade points (for D and F) are carried over into the standing under the new system.

Graduation honors will be given on the basis of the new system, but in any case where it seems that the student is on a borderline between earning or not earning honors, his standing will be examined under both the old and new systems and will be gien the benefit of the doubt.

Students should consult the catalog for complete details of the new system. The changes in requirements for promotion are particularly important since a definite quality as well as quanity of work is now required; that is, promotion is now based on standing rather than the quantity of grade points earned.

Professor Tolar To Conduct Math Tests

Professor Mack Tolar, who usually can be found in 205 Fayer-weather, will this spring be in charge of giving a state-wide math test to outstanding senior high math students in the eastern part of Tennessee.

The idea of his test first originated in the fall of last year. At that time, in the Tennessee Education Association, a committee was organized to develop and propagate interest in math. An executive committee was set up in eastern Tennessee to give tests and award prizes to students outstanding in math.

Professor Tolar was on this original executive committee and last year was in charge of giving the tests to students in Blount County.

The tests were given in nine college centers n eastern Tennessee and students came from many counties to take them. The number taking the test totaled 560 with fifty out of that number coming from Maryville.

The intgrest created by the tests was such that the Mathematics Associaion otf Tennessee decided to make the tests statewide.

Three people now constitue the committee that will be responsible for giving the tests. One representative is from Southwestern University in Memphis, a second from Vanderbilt University, and the third, Professor Tolar, from Maryville.

Professor Tolar's job, as chairman of this committee, is the developing and dissecting of the program and the awarding of prizes to the winning students.

The tests, to be given in the spring, will be in four categories: 1st year algebra for high school freshmen; plane geometry for sophomores; 2nd year algebra for juniors; and a general comprehensive math test for seniors.

The college testing places are to be Maryville College, Tennessee Wesleyan University, University of Tennessee, University of the South, Carson-Newman College, and the University of Chattanooga.

Rev. T. E. Romig Will Lead Chapel Tuesday Morning

The Rev. Theodore F. Romig, Secretary of the Division of Ecumenical Personnel of the Board of Foreign Misions of the Presbyterian Church U.S.A., will be the speaker in chapel Tuesday morning, October 2. Mr. Romig has just returned from a trip to Africa and the Orient and will arrive on campus Monday night. He will be available for interviews with any who may wish to talk of service in the foreign fields through Tuesday.

Others taking part in the chapel service Tuesday are Richard Henderson, Student Body president; Eugene Spiekerman, Student Volunteer president; Bruce Ingles, YMCA president; and Ann Kelton, YWCA president. Explanation for the procedure of making Fred Hope Fund pledges and an opportunity to pledge will be given.

Mr. Romig was elected to his strategic post on the executive staff of the Presbyterian Board in February, and assumed his new duties June 1, 1955. He comes to New York from McCormick Theological Seminary, Chicago, where he has been Professor of Missions since 1951.

Mr. Romig was born in Tsining, China, the son of Presbyterian misionaries, and spent the early years of his life in that country. He came to the United States for his college education and was graduated from Wooster College in 1931, and from Presbyterian Theological Seminary, Chicago, in 1934. In June of that year he was married to Miss Harriet Stalter of Upper Sandusky, Ohio. The honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred on him by Dubuque University.

After graduating from the seminary he became associate pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Ft. Dodge, Iowa, under the Board of National Missions. In 1936 he went to Grimes, Iowa, to be pastor of the Grimes Presbyterian Church, a position he held until

Debate Society Lists New Topic

The Maryville College Debate Society is preparing for a very active year under the direction of Miss Arda S. Walker, Professor of History, to be assisted by Mr. Arthur Ainsworth. Despite the loss of three members of the 1955-56 squad, there are nearly twenty people out for the key spots this year. The try-outs are planned for the second week in October.

The National Pi Kappa Delta topic for this year is: "Resolved: that the United States should discontinue direct economic aid to foreign countries." As can be seen, this is quite a controversial subject both for debate and for the world.

The best teams, as chosen by; Miss Walker, will represent the school in several tournaments as well as in numerous practice debates.

The goal for the year is a trip to the National Pi Kappa Delta Tournament, South Dakota.

Problems Of India To Be Theme Of YM, YW, And Vols

WMCA, YWCA, and Student Volunteers will sponsor a joint program tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 in the College Theatre.

Films on India—the land, its people, its problems—will be shown in connection with the Fred Hope Fund Drive which begins Tuesday, October 2. Preceding the movie will be a brief worship service.

Everyone is invited to attend this joint program in order to receive more insight into the problems which confront the doctor in India, and more especially, the missionary doctor.

Writers Workshop Elects Two New Members

New Film Society Is Formed To Bring Best Movies Here

Miss Kathleen Craven, director of the Maryville College Playhouse, has announced the formation of the Maryville College Film Society, whose aim is to bring to students and townspople alike some of the best films of the United States, Great Britain, and other foregn countries. These films will be brought to the campus at a low rate so that a large majority may attend. The Society plans a program of six films a year.

The Society has several films under consideration at this time. To name a few : "Henry V", with Lawrence Olivier; "Kind Hearts and Coronets"; Bernard Shaw's "Major Barbara"; "Rembrandt", with Charles Laughton; two French films: "The Well Digger's Daughter", and "Valpone", which is the story by Ben Jonson played by French actors, the Italian "Rigoletto"; "Bicycle Thief"; "It Happened One Night"; "The Boys from Syracuse"; and "Miracle on 34th Street".

A committee to handle the tickets, publicity and showing of the films is now being appointed. Tickets are expected to go on sale next week at these prices:

For students and faculty: $1.00 for a season ticket which will admit you to five films. (If you see the first five on your ticket and want to see the sixth, it will cost 20c). Single admissions will cost 30c.

For townspeople: $1.50 for a season ticket, and 50c for single admissions.

ALPHA SIGMA REVEALS FIRST SEMESTER ACTIVITIES

Alpha Sigma started the '56-'57 year off with a bang with its traditional rush week parties and gala affairs. The theme of this year's rush week was "Come to the Fair". The theme was emphasized in a fashion show on the lawn of the Willard House on Friday, September 21, a splash party Friday night, and a formal society production Saturday night. The purpose of the rush week is to familiarize freshmen students with the societies, so that they may decide which society they want to join.

The next event that Alpha Sigma undertook in this semester will be the initiation of pledged members into the societies. This took place on Friday, September 28.

A weekend hike in the mountains is one of the most popular of the activities scheduled on the calendar of events for Alpha Sigma in the first semester. This usually proves to be an exciting time.

The best liked of al activities of Alpha Sigma is, perhaps, the Spaghetti Dinner held each year. This proves to be a real treat because Sigs and their dates are served dinner by Theta members. Dancing is held after the dinner.

The last big event of Alhpha Sigma this semester will be the fall formal to be held on December 1 this year. This will be the first formal dance to be held this year.

This concludes the calendar of events of Alpha Sigma for the first semester. We will be looking forward to each of them.

Casts Announced For Fall Productions

By Ruth Wilson

If you have heard a worn phrase, 'after Rush Week everything will calm down', turn a deaf ear to such idle gossip. The Theater's coming attractions alone would disprove that theory in a second.

The major productions for this year are the vibrant, human, Death of a Salesman, and a delightful comedy, Beggar on Horseback. For Commencement, one of the greatest challenges of all to a theater group, Medea, will be presented.

After tryouts were held by Miss Kathleen Craven, director of Mar-ville College Playhouse, and Mr. Robert Cauble, technical director, the tentative cast was announced as follows:

Playhouse

Willie Loman-John Ribble; Linda-Ann Wiley; Biff-John Bridges; Happy-Dave Morris; The Woman-Mary Fay Bundy; Uncle Ben-Ronald Lind; Charlie-Ralph Ayers; Bernard-Ronald Randon; Howard Wagner-Jim Colquehoun; Stanley-Francisco Garcia; Miss Forsythe-Mary Schmidt; Jenny-Bonnie Lehr; Letta-Janet Rath. Death of a Salesman will be presented on November 23 and 24.

Committees for this production have not yet been appointed.

Another aspect of the theater productions are the Experimentals. These Experimentals are attempts at the new, different, out-of-the-ordinary shows. The first to be given this year in an Oriental fantasy. It comes complete with a stage manager who is on stage at all times, and a visible properties man clothed in

Money Will Be Used To Support Dr. Dorothy Ferris In India

Frances Newton Hospital in Ferozepore, India, will be the recipient of the 1956-57 Fred Hope Fund. For the past four years it has gone to this hospital, whose director is Dr. Dorothy Lee Ferris, a Maryville graduate.

Ferozepur, capital of a populous district which includes hundreds of villages, is in a pocket where the rainy season is brief and the dust storms common. The famous Grand Trunk Road winds its way through this district. A large training center for Indian troops is established here, which offers a challenge for Christian workers. Despite this large center, Ferozepur has not become a modern city but still retains its Oriental beauty and backwardness.

Dr. Ferris writes, "At Ferozepur Station is what has been home to me for the past few years—the Francis Newton Hospital. They have been the happiest, busiest, most strenuous and worthwhile years that you could imagine! The Indian hospital is only one story high. It is low and spread out, built in a hollow square with a sunny courtyard, grass and trees and flowers." It is constructed of brick with a good cement floor and has numerous verandas to cool the rooms. Opened in 1893 by Mrs. Newton, it has achieved high standing in the district. There are surgical, medical and obstetrical wards, a ward for children and four large private rooms.

The hospital is the center around which the work of the compound is woven, and cooperates in every way possible with the mission work as a whole, for the work of the hospital is for the advancement of His Kingdom. More than a thousand adults and children come every year to the clinic. Some of them are very poor and very frightened. Some are Christian, but most are Hindu and Moslem and Sikh. All may read on the marble plate set into the building, "For the Glory of God and the Healing of the Sick."

Dr. Ferris emphasized the great advances and help to the hospital Maryville students of many college generations have provided with the benefits of the annual Fred Hope Fund. Badly needed, surgical and operating room equipment were made possible by contributions to the Fred Hope Fund. A new student-supported nurses' dorm is rising near the hospital.

For fifty-two years, Maryville College students have had the opportunity to participate in some missionary enterprise. In 1900 a student, Fred Hope, instigated the collection of $50 for the salary of a Chinese pastor for one year. The YMCA continued this project for ten years, at which time Horace E. Orr, then a student here, presented a plan of campus-wide participation. By this time Fred Hope himself was in Africa serving as a lay missionary, and because of student and faculty interest in him, the funds went to his work until 1945, and the Fund and Drive still bear his name. Since his death the money has gone to various projects in China, Africa and India. The total investment made by students and faculty of the College in this particular work of Christ throughout the world, amounts to about $30,000.

At the end of a tree-shaded road in Ferozepur, lies a vacant plot of land upon which many dreams are being built—dreams of the new hospital which will be adequate for the care of the many mne, women and children who are now clamoring at the doors—and being turned away.

Dr. Lloyd Will Travel To Church Of His Son

The next two weeks will find President Lloyd away from our campus attending meetings and preaching in two different churches. This past Wednesday and Thursday Dr. Lloyd attended a meeting in Washington, D. C., of the General Board of the National Council of Churches. Tomorrow Dr. Lloyd will be the guest preacher at the Covenant Presbyterian church in Springfield, Ohio. On Sunday, October 7, Dr. Lloyd will preach at the Westminster Presbyterian Church of Rockford, Illinois, where his son, Rev. Hal B. Lloyd, '43, is the pastor. Dr. Lloyd will also baptize his new grandson, Peter, who is the third child of Rev. and Mrs. Hal B. Lloyd.

On Thursday, October 4, the Regional Committee of the Sumner School of the South will meet in the Fine Arts Center to discuss plans for next summer's conference. The discussion is scheduled to start at 10:00 a.m. The committee will have lunch in the dining room and then finish their plans for next summer. The meeting is scheduled to adjourn at 4:00 p.m.

Vesper Speaker To Be Dr. Francis W. Pritchard

The Vesper speaker for Sunday night, September 30, will be Dr. Francis W. Pritchard, pastor of New Providence Presbyterian Church, Maryville, Tennessee.

How YOU Can Contribute. . .

With the hope that an even greater percentage of the college, community will feel able to afford a share in this adventure, the payment of pledges will be spread over five dates:

October 10,
November 10,
December 10,
February 10, and March 10.

Last year's drive was a success—a success because more was given than ever before.

SCOTS TRAVEL TO DANVILLE

By Pete Nix

Tonight the Maryville College Highlanders will be in Danville, Kentucky, to engage the Centre College Praying Colonels. Last year the Colonels, in their march to an undefeated season, trounced the Scotties 13-0. Maryville will meet Centre without the services of Bruce Bevins, who broke his arm in the Morehead game, but the addition of Jim Cates at guard and the switching of John Anderson at tackle will help supplant this loss. Centre, as of now, is an unknown quantity, but they can always be counted upon to field a big, aggressive squad, and the Highlanders will no doubt have their hands full. The Scots need this game for if they are to start some winning ways it must be soon. So good luck Scots and may you return from Danville with the first victory of 1956 under your belts.

M-Club To Hold Retreat At Miss Heron's Cabin

This Saturday and Sunday will be the occasion of the Women's M-Club annual retreat in the mountains. One of the members, Miss Jessie Heron, has consented to let her cabin be the site for the Retreat. From here the girls may hike, swim, or play ball.

Distinguished Hospital Director Is A Maryville College Graduate

Maryville College graduate, director of the Frances Newton Hospital, and recipient of the highest public service award in India—this the story of Dr. Dorothy Lee Ferris.

Dorothy Ferris graduated at Maryville College in 1928 with cum laude honors, and after a year of teaching entered the College of Medicine at the University of Cincinnati in a class containing eighty-six men and four women. In 1933 she received the degree of Bachelor of Medicine and in 1934 that of Doctor of Medicine. After a postgraduate term at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York she sailed to India in 1935. Since that time, except for a furlough somewhat extended by the war, she has been in India as a missionary doctor. She is in charge of the Frances Newton Hospital at Ferozepore in the Punjab in North India and is the only doctor at the hospital most of the time.

In 1947 Dr. Ferris was awarded the Kaiser-i-hind Medal, the highest award of the government of India for public service. This was an outcome of the work that the hospital and staff did during the tragic conflict that divided the country into India and Pakistan. After the devastating floods that swept the country that same year, Dr. Ferris was given extraordinary mention in military dispatches for her outstanding service in that disaster.

Maryville College recognized the notable work that Dr. Ferris has done in India by presenting her with a degree of Doctor of Humane Letters at the Commencement exercises in 1950.

Dr. Ferris visited Maryville campus last February and reported first-hand on the work of the hospital and of the part that students here have had in helping with its outreach, which is both physical and spiritual.

Keep Informed. . .

The school year has really begun now in earnest, and such phrases as "crack down" are heard more frequently. And once again a definite lack will be felt by all who take the trouble to notice.

During the summer months, many students became commuters in all senses of the word. Noses deep in newspapers, students rode daily to their summer jobs. For those who did not commute, the day certainly included a brief time each day for the reading of a good newspaper.

Back again at school, the spotlight is on the past. Unless in a history course which makes use of current events, most students don't realize what is happening in the world outside of Maryville. The tendency is to make Maryville a completely isolated world. But is this necessary? There are newspapers available within easy reach of all students. The library offers many newspapers from different parts of the country. Each parlor is supplied with the daily paper, and many students, for a small fee, receive a newspaper daily.

It is not difficult then, to find a newspaper. The difficulty lies within each student, who does not make time each day to read the news. Today's world is more important than the world of years ago. Each student will have to face the problems of today. Will Maryville students know what the problems are, and how to cope with them?

—B.S.

Now You Can Help

Elsewhere in this paper you have read about the Fred Hope Fund and the wonderful, dedicated woman who has again been selected to be its recepient. This fund-raising campaign is an annual one and constitutes a very special Maryville tradition with a distinctive flavor all its own. The culmination of a rush week's activities is the extravaganza termed the "formal show"; the anticlimax when the football team emerges victorious is the ringing of the bell at Anderson tower; and the hours of planning and work that go into the artistic creation called a Homecoming float finally manifest themselves when the occasion appears for display to an admiring public. The rewards reaped from the Fred Hope Fund are a different type. Its reward is the inner feeling of satisfaction of having helped a fellow-being and having done it unselfishly.

You will read and hear more of the remarkable Dr. Ferris. Her story is an inspiring one but one not without difficulties. The extent to which the Fred Hope Fund is able to help her rests solely in the hands of the student body—in your hands. Now is your opportunity to help her with her work at the Frances Newton Hospital.

Pity The Plight of The Poor Sophomores!

By Jeannie McElroy

About all that we sophomores, especially girls, have seen or heard about for the past three weeks has been freshman girls—commonly called freshwomen (with a proper grind of the teeth); so this is dedicated to all sophomore girls who have been complaining of their plight. To the freshmen, juniors and seniors we may just be a group of grumbling "wise-fools", but when you get to the point where you are too old to be cute, as are the freshmen, and too young to be really important, as are the juniors and seniors, then you have a problem. This is the awkward age (too old for Castoria and too young for Serutan).

From where did all of these cute freshmen come (grammatically correct)? There is not one who is not at least attractive in the whole lot of them. That's our number one complait; which, of course, leads to number two. Who gets all of the town nights? Well, except for those lucky few who are going steady (a blissful state of monotony according to Seventeen), and a still fewer who are really lucky and do get an occasional date, it isn't us.

But our life isn't unbearable. We have many activities other than our studies in which to participate; that is fortunate or unfortunate according to how you look at it. What with all the clubs, committees, student-help jobs, etc., etc., etc. one doesn't have to worry about spare (?) time. For example, one of Memorial's sophomores has something like nine hours of "spare" time in five and a half days. Yes, there's plenty to do, and you'll find as many or more sophomores pitching in to help in everything as you will any other classman. This year we know pretty well just about how much outside activity we can carry on and not fall down, too far at least, in our studies.

To the freshmen we say "No, we don't hate you; after all we too were freshmen once—last year to be exact." "Juniors, we can now sympathize with what you went through last year." Sophomores, we may be the bourgeoise now, but we only have eight more months to go and I have heard reports that things are already beginning to look up for us.

Scots & Soda

By Sue Tourtellotte

Frankie and Johnny were washers,
Oh lordy how they could wash!

* * * * * *

From the very moment they came into being, Frankie and Johnny were destined to lead brilliant lives. No wishy-washy existence for them. No Siree!

When they were still very young, you scarcely could tell them apart. Both were very proud of their shiny, white exterior. However, each had a blank expression on his face, and a hole in his head. It was quite a problem for their creators to decide where to send them. Since they were identical twins it was decided not to separate them. Finally, after much thought and consideration, it was decided to send Frankie and Johnny to college. They scarcely could contain themselves they were so shook. For this reason the man who delivered them anchored them to the floor; but he was a kind man too, so he raised them up so they could see everything that went on.

Frankie and Johnny were strong and so they were both put on a straight mineral diet. As is often the case, one of them performed his task with a bit more speed and proficiency than the other.

The girls who took care of them were as a rule very kind. Most of their inconsiderate actions were unintentional.

Last year one of the girls brought her radio downstairs with her while she did her washing. Poor Johnny! She was listening to the song "Sixteen Tons" and consequgently she put two many clothes in the machine. Johnny had indigestion for a week. Then there was the little girl who put too much Tide in Frankie the other day. The poor fellow! He almost drefted away.

It is very seldom that either Frankie or Johnny will lose his temper, but when they do—watch out! They raise an awful ruckus, foam at the mouth and sometimes when they are paritcularly irate they will even spit dimes. This soon passes though and their tempers usually all come out in the wash.

The other day Johnny heard a bit of gossip that was floating around campus. It seems that one of the more intelligent male students had tried to put starch in a friend of his at Carnegie. Ever since then everyone has thought he was stuck-up when this actually was not the case. Rub?

"All" in "All", it might be said, that both Frankie and Johnny lead a rather "Cheerful" existence as washing machines on a college campus.

TALK OF THE WEEK

By Sue Settle

If a girl earns 400 points in a year, she is eligible for membership in Women's "M" Club. This year Helen Franklin is president of Women's "M" Club.

Meetings are at 3:30 and 5:00 each Tuesday and Thursday afternoons.

WAA Has Begun Active Program

Once again the Women's Athletic Association is starting its vigorious year. All girls are invited to come out to the meetings and to take part in the various games and sports.

The purpose of W.A.A. is to interest 90 per cent of the women attending Maryville College in active sports. At present, there are approximately fifty members.

In the spring semester, if a girl has followed the health rules, she receives an award. For 300 points—an M.C. monogram, for 400 points—a small "M" letter, for 500 points, a sweater with a letter.

Morehead Takes Opener

By Pete Nix

Capitalizing on two blocked kicks and on intercepted pass, Morehead State Teachers College won their first ball game in 33 tries at the expense of the Maryville College Highlanders. The Big Blue, displaying host of fine running backs, took advantage of every break to a defeat the Scotties 18-13.

Maryville received, tallied one first down on an 18 yard scamper by Captain White, but then were forced to kick. Another exchange of punts followed and then the first big break. Maryville in a kicking situation on her own 35, had the punt blocked and Morehead recovered on the Scottie 8. The center of the forward wall put up a stout defense, but on 4th down, Hart, the Morehead fullback, bulled over from the 2. The try for the etxra point was no good and the first quarter ended with Morehead leading 6-0.

Early in the 2nd canto the Scots recovered a Morehead fumble on the visitors' 34. Two plays gained nothing, then on third down Johnny Phipps hit Wilson

Intramurals....

by Joe Quinn

Last week the Intramural league went at it hot and heavy.

The Y.M.C.A. ripped past the AF Warriors 26-0. Joe Williams scoring twice along with Murt Hall and Tom Morris getting one TD apiece.

The Rebels split even on the week, first defeating the Warriors 13-0, and then losing to the Alpha Sig Hammers 19-0. Jack Crouch and Dan Wiley scoring for the victors.

The thriller of the week was between the Pre-Min team and the Hammers. The latter squeaked out a victory in the dying seconds of the game on a safety. Up until that time the game was a scoreless tie. However, in their next outing the Pre-Mins whipped Kappa Phi 13-0 with Jack Woodhall doing the scoring for the victors.

SPORTS SPOTLIGHT

By Pete Nix

It's a Saturday afternoon in late September and you sit before the radio switching the dial from Maryland-Syracuse to Brooklyn-Pittsburgh and back again. You wonder about the overlapping seasons and decide they are here to stay, so the dial switching goes on as you try to keep up with the progress of the Dodgers and Terps simultaneuosly. You are glad, when Long homers, that you were turned to the baseball game, but later you learn that at the same time Long was parking one, Jim Brown was whipping off a 78 yard run for the Syracuse Orangemen. The problem has no solution, unless of course you want to desert baseball for football or vice-versa. But no self-respecting sports fan would admit to this, so you continue your attempts to keep up with both and wind up not knowing what happened in either. Oh well, that's the way the ball bounces. However, to avoid confusion, we will consider the two seasons seperately.

Baseball

The end of the baseball season finds an old familiar sight on the scene. The Yankees are sitting back, smiling confidently to themselves in the mad dash for the National League penant. By the time this paper reaches its readers the National League pennant winner may have been decided, but, as of this writing, the Dodgers maintain a slim two percentage point lead. With the Stengelmen using their reserves and saving their pitchers, the winner of the National League race, whoever, it may be, is in for a rough time. The Yankee's lead was shaky at only one point during the season, but, like true champions, they bounced back and were never again in trouble. The story in the National League was entirely different. Pittsburg rose, then fell. Cincinnati rose, struggled valiantly, but finally succumbed, although the ystill have a mathematical chance for the top spot. Milwaukee fell, and then, under a new manager, suddenly exploded and took command of the league. And steady Brooklyn, never too far back, now has gained a slim lead over the Braves. With the Series fast approaching and the Braves and Dodgers still in the thick of a pennant fight, the choice for the World's championship has to be the New York Yankees.

Football

The 1956 football season was ushered in with a flurry of surprise and upsets. The aforementioned Jim Brown led the Orangemen of Syracuse to a rousing 26-12 victory over the Terrapins of Maryland., Duke, picked by many as one of the nations top teams, succumbed 7-0 to a great South Carolina defense. The Irish of Notre Dame, another highly touted squad, bowed to the S.M.U. Mustangs 19-13. North Carolina State ruined Jim Tatum's head coaching debut at North Carolina University, by administering a 26-6 drubbing to the Tarheels.

As can be seen from above, early season football ratings are unreliable to say the least, btu the general concensus of opinion is that the poyer on the national football scene will be cenered around these ten teams—Oklahoma, Michigan State, Army, Georgia Tech, Miami, Michigan, Notre Dame, Ohio State, Texas A.&M., and of peope Yale. Two oddities are immediately apparent in this list. For the time in many seasons, the Eli seem to be headed for national acclaim, and for the first itme in just as many years the Pacific Coast Conference, thanks to its governing fathers, finds itself without a representaitve in the top ten. The writer would like to sneak in a personal prediction and nominate the University of Tennessee for the eleventh spot.

Now let's take a quick glance at the football picture section by section. Ivy League-Yale, with Cornell and Princeton close. Eastern Independents-Army, followed by Pitt, Syracuse, and Navy. Big Ten—Ohio State, Michigan, or Michigan State, with darkhorse possibilities from Illinois and Minnesota. Big Seven—Oklahoma, Nebraska next but not close. Atlantic Coast—Duke, with Maryland close and South Carolina as the sleeper. S.E.C.—schedule favors Mississippi, but Georgia Tech and Tennessee will have to be heard from. Southwest—Texas A.&M., followed closely by T.C.U., but watch out for the S.M.U. Mustangs. Pacific Coast—Stanford, unscathed in recent P.C.C. uproar, followed by U.C.L.A. and Southern Cal.

From the looks of things at the start, the upcoming football season promises to be an interesting one. So happy footballing everyone and here's hoping your favorite wins 'em all.

About the Scotties

The Morehead game certainly gave us nothing to shout about, but it gave no reason for despair either. The Scots looked better at times than they were expected to look, but they made mistakes which any inexperienced ball team is going to make. Thre bad breaks and they found themselves in a predicament from which they could not recover. Improvement is inevitable, but whether this improvement is only slight or of the substantial variety remains to be seen. They proved to us all that they are capable of playing good football and with a lot of support from the student body the Scotties will make a succesful season out of it yet. Good luck Scots!

You Can Win a Cash Award—and Scholarship Money for Your College in Reader's Digest

$41,000 CONTEST

Open to All College Students (Faculty, too!)

Nothing to buy...nothing to write

...and you may find you know more about people than you think!

How well do you know human nature? Can you tell what subjects interest people most? Here is a chance to test your judgment—show how good an editor you are—and you may win $5,000 for yourself, plus $5,000 in scholarship funds for your college.

It's fun to try. Maybe you can top other students in colleges across the country . . . and you can match wits with the editors of Reader's Digest.

Why do far more college graduates read Reader's Digest than any other magazine? What is it that makes the Digest the most widely read magazine in the world—with 11 million copies bought each month in the United States, plus 9 million abroad? Why is it read each month by at least 60 million people, in 12 languages—Arabic, Danish, English, Finnish, French, German, Italian, Japanese, Norwegian, Portuguese, Spanish and Swedish?

Can you spot in a typical issue of Reader's Digest the universal human values that link scholars, statesmen, scientists, writers, businessmen, housewives? Can you pick out the articles that will be most popular with the average Digest reader?

You may find . . . you know more about people than you think!

Here's all you do. Study the descriptions (at right) of the articles in the October Reader's Digest—or, better still, read the complete articles in the issue itself. (But you are not required to buy The Reader's Digest to enter the contest.) Then simply list the six articles—in order of preference—that you think readers of the magazine will like best. This will be compared with a nationwide survey conducted among a cross section of Digest subscribers.

Follow the directions given below. Fill in the entry blank, paste it on a post card, and get it into the mail before the deadline. Additional blanks are obtainable at your college bookstore.

All entries must be postmarked not later than midnight, October 25, 1956. Don't delay. In case of ties, the entry with the earliest postmark will win.

Just pick in order the six articles you think most readers of October Reader's Digest will like the best.

Voices, Masks, and Shadows

by Barbara Wilkie

The emphasis on campus this coming week will be the Francis Newton Hospital in Ferozepore, India, which again this year is to be the recipient of the Fred Hope Fund. Perhaps you would like to become better acquainted with India and Southwestern Asia. The subject has fascinated many other people, who have written books about it.

"Is I See India," by Robert Trumbul is one of the latest books the library has on that country. According to the book jacket: "This exciting report by a distinguished New York Times correspondent ranges from politics to princes . . . from child marriages to prohibition . . . from the caste system to the constitution." Some interesting chapter titles are "Blood, Sweat and Tear Gas," "Crazy Mixed-Up Communists," and "India's Foreign Policy and the U.S."

Chester Bowles' "Ambassador's Report" of 1954 and Santha Rama Rau's "This Is India" of 1953 are other recent books in the Reading Room collection. A country north of India is described in Josef Korbel's "Danger in Kashmir," also a recent book.

Nearby Siam

For those of you who enjoyed the excellent movie "The King and I" with Deborah Kerr and Yul Brynner, there is still "Anna and the King of Siam," the book by Margaret Mortenson Landon about the same story. Of course, the details are different in the book and a more barbarous picture of Siamese customs is presented.

And your acquaintance with far Eastern culture is not complete unless you read some Rudyard Kipling stories. As you know, Kikling was born in Bombay in 1865 of British parents and had a good opportunity during his childhood to become acquainted with Indian culture. Among his books are "Plain Tales From the Hills," "Soldiers Three," "Under the Deodars," "The Light that Failed," "Barrack Room Ballads," "Captains Courageous," "Kim," and "Just So Stories."

"Just So Stories" are quite entertaining in their attempts to explain the why of such problems as "How the Camel Got his Hump" and "How the Rhinocerous got his Skin."

How He Did It

You may not know that while the Parsee was taking a sunbath (after he had taken off his scintillating hat which reflected the sun's rays) and was waiting for his raisin cakes to cool, the rhinocerous came along and ate up the cakes. This made the Parsee mad, so he recited a poem:

"Them that takes cakes
Which the Parsee man bakes
Makes dreadful mistakes."

And sure enough, the rhinocerous suffered, for which he was bathing in the river the Parsee spread tickelly cake crumbs all into his skin. (The rhinoceros always unbuttoned his skin and left it on the bank before his bath.) When the rhinoceros put it on again, it tickled him so much that he scratched and rubbed until the buttons fell off. His skin wrinkled up and wouldn't fit tight anymore, and it gave the rhinoceros a terrible temper, which he has kept to this day. (And the Parsee just moved to another province, where he probably still lives.)

Then there is the one about the camel . . .

Mademoiselle Opens Contest For College Board, 1957 Guest Editors

Mademoiselle is now accepting applications from under-graduate women for membership in its 1956-57 College Board.

The magazine's College Board Contest offers a chance (for the freshman as wel las the senior) at winning one of the twenty Guest Editorships — a month on the staff of Mademoiselle. Those who are accepted on the College Board do two assignments during the college year. Assignments give College Board Members a chance to write features about life on their campus; to submit art work and fashion as well as feature, fiction or promotion ideas for possible use in Mademoiselle; to develop their critical and creative talents; to discover their own abilities and job interests; to win cash prizes and possibly publication for outstanding work submitted during the Contest.

The top twenty Guest Editors will be brought to New York next June to help write, edit and illustrate the August College issue. They will be paid a regular salary for their month's work, plus round-trip transportation to New York City.

While in New York each Guest Editor takes part in a full calendar of activities. She interviews a celebrity in her chosen field, visits newspaper offices, fashion workrooms, stores and advertising agencies, besides working daily with the Mademoiselle Editor to whom she is assigned. The twenty Guest Editors get help in finding positions in their special fields, and each year several join Mademoiselle's own staff.

November 30 is the deadline for applying for College Board Membership. This is the way you do it: Write a 1500-word critique of the editorial section in Mademoiselle's August 1956 College issue (or a later issue if you can't get August). A good critique will tell something about your attitudes, interests ,how you express yourself. Give first your over-all likes and dislikes, suggested changes and additions; then concentrate on what interests you most—fashion, illustration or fiction, for example. In case you feel the critique isn't enough to indicate your particular ability, send in addition something you think will.

Successful candidates will be notified of acceptance on the College Board before Christmas; the first College Board assignment will appear in Mademoiselle's January issue.

For further information see your Dean of Women or the August, September, October or November issue of Mademoiselle.

on the Morehead 24. On successive plays it was White, Phipps, Phipps, White, for the first down at the 9. Bud White drove over, added the extra point, and the Scotties led 7-6.

Maryville kicked and Morehead set out on a sustained ground march which was finally halted on the Maryville 26-yard line. Leonard and White shoook Phipps loose for two gains. A Phipps pass was intercepted and the ball wound up on the Scottie 7 in possession of the Teachers from Kentucky. On 4th down the quarter back sneaked over. The point after gain was off and the half ended with the Highlanders on the short end of a 12-7 score.

Early in the 2nd half, after an exchange of punts Mark Leonard pounced on a Morehead fumble on the Teacher's 30. Jim McCall and Captain White drove for two first downs. Earl Lawson replaced McCall at tailback and sailed around his own right end from 6 yards out for the touchdown. The point after was no good and once again the Scotties found themselves with a one-point lead.

Maryville kicked off a Morehead drive which carried on into the fourth quarter was cut short when Ted Wilson grabbed a fumble on the Maryville 33. Maryville could not go and on fourth down Lawson went back to kick. For the second time the kick was blocked and a big blue-jerseyed tackle carried the ball into the end zone to put the Scotties behind for keeps 18-13. The Highlander offense could not get going again and the Morehead Kentucky State Teachers emerged with their first victory in 33 starts.

1938 when he sailed for China as a missionary under the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions.

In China, Mr. Romig was first stationed at Hengyang in Central China, where he worked with rural churches scattered over an area of 10,000 square miles with a population of four million. As he traveled many thousands of miles by donkey, river boat, or on foot during the first years of the war with Japan, he was deply impressed with the capacity of the Chinese to endure suffering.

Mr. Romig was visiting Professor of Mission at McCormick Seminary in 1946-47, but he and his family returned to China late in 1947. He was engaged in evangelistic and church work in Nanking, in Central China, until the advance of the Communist forces made it necessary for him to leave in 1949. He spent the next two years on a special assignment for the International Missionary Council, and in 1951 became Professor of Missions at McCormick Seminary. He was a delegate to the World Missionary Conference at Willingen in the summer of 1952, and helped in the preparation of material for the conference.

Rachel McCastlain Tells Of Her Year Of Study In Scotland

By Carolyn Cones

"I hope to go back someday," she said somewhat nostalgicly. The speaker was Rachel McCastlain, a pert junior English major from Ridgeby, Tennessee. Rachel was one of those fortunate enough to see her dream of study abroad become an actuality.

It all started when Rachel's brother-in-law, Reverend Jack Downey, decided to study for his Ph.D. at New College, in Edinburgh, Scotland. It was thought that study abroad would prove a rich experience for Rachel, also and her sister and brother-in-law readily agreed to let her stay with them while she attended the University of Edinburgh. She left to join her relatives a year ago last September.

Edinburgh became to Rachel what she called her "city of dreams." She described it as being gray, cold, and windy but added that this grayish atmosphere seemed to blend with the grayness of the buildings and the castle which loomed above the city.

Rachel found college at Edinburgh to differ in some respects from college here. The classes were larger—sometimes ranging from 150 to 300. Several times a week class was conducted by a well-known lecturer. Once a week a tutor, one who was not yet a full professor, would meet with the student. His job was to assign the outside reading, grade papers, hold discussions and answer questions. The lecturer, on the other hand, had no such close contact with his students.

Rachel studied British history, English literature, and moral philosophy, all of which were three-term courses. She noted that although outside reading might not be specifically assigned for her courses, a great deal of reading was necessary since questions on the finals were not always taken from the text book.

Another difference was the fact that students were not classified as freshmen, sophomores, etc. but as first year students, second year students, etc. After three years' study it was posible to qualify for an "ordinary degree" and an "honor degree" with an M.A. or M.S. after four year's work. She noted, however, that the students were just about the same as students anywhere.

Rachel found the food to be very starchy. She also learned the "tea" didn't mean just tea but also little cakes, sandwiches, bread and butter. "They eat lots of bread and sweets," she added. The people ate very little vegetables—usually cabbage and the big English peas. Fruit was small and expensive. Chicken became a rarity to Rachel in Scotland—she only had it twice while she was there because of the expense.

She remarked, "They eat lots of haggis—that's sheep thorax that has been boiled and mashed up. It's eaten with boiled potatoes." She added, however, "I didn't like it!"

Rachel also made a number of other observations. She was particularly impressed by the great pride which the Scottish people have in their traditions and their land—a pride so strong that they hardly ever complain. They talk at length about the weather but even more here their purpose is not to complain—it is merely a standard way of saying hello. The students were all interested in America and in American customs and never ceased to ask Rachel questions.

Not all of Rachel's time was spent in Scotland, though. She visited France, Germany, Denmark, and Sweden. Her experi-

Mrs. A. Jacobson Tells Of Her Work As A Missionary To The Africans

By Paula Kronenberg

From a schoolteacher in Ohio to a schoolteacher in French Equatorial Africa was a big change to make, but Mrs. Alta Jacobson made it with the assurance that it was what she should do.

"I went," said Mrs. Jacobson, "to teach the children of missionaries in a French school. Before I could do so I had to spend a year of my first four year term in France learning to speak French. I spent four four-year terms at Fort Archambault in the Tchad Province."

French Equatorial Africa is a group of four French overseas territories in the heart of Africa. It faces the Atlantic Ocean between the enclaves of Cabinda on the south near the mouth of the Congo River, and Rio Muni on the north, a stretch of five hundred miles on the Gulf of Guinea. From the coast it extends inland two thousand miles to the Sahara, where it ends in a mountain range on the borders of Libia. The territories of Gabon and Middle Congo are in the south, Oubangui-Chari in the center, and the Tohad in the north.

"During my first term," she continued, "I met the man who was to become my husband. We were married during the yearly missionaries' conference. As we continued our work there it became necessary for me to learn the Sango language". That is the trade language of French Equatorial Africa and so is the "universal language" there. It is the language we used in preaching and translation work.

"There are many Moslems in the Tchad province, and often I would ride my bicycle to their villages to preach to them and talk to them. They would always listen to me. Once I promised a Moslem chief a New Testament written in his language. It was so long in coming that he rode over to our school several itmes to inquire about it. Finally it came. He was very happy to receive it but I heard no more from him. I don't know what effect it has had on him.

"The Baptist Mid-Missions is made up of sixteen mission stations and one hundred and forty-four outstations. There are thirty organized churches which are self-supporting, self-governing, and self-propagating. The native pastors and workers are entirely supported by their own native churches. Each missionary who goes to the field is independently supported by one or more churches or individuals who assume that responsibility. The Mission does not pay any salaries or allowances to its missionaries. Ours is a work of faith, and we look to the Lord to supply the need as it arises.

Mrs. Jacobsan, a senior elementary education major in Maryville College, chose that major to strengthen her teaching ability, if she decides to return to the mission field. She has three teenaged children who are all attending the Ben Lippen School in Asheville, North Carolina on work scholarships.

"I plan to return to the mission field if I feel that that is what the Lord wants me to do," said Mrs. Jacobson." "I don't know yet what I will be doing. I like it here at Maryville more and more, and would like to be considered as just a fellow student."

Blind Panic, or A Plan of Action?

Preparedness Can Mean the Difference

Here is a test that could help save your life some day. In each of the following situations, your first reaction could mean life or death. How would you react?

1. You are in a crowded public place when someone screams, "Fire!"

2. Your clothing suddenly catches fire!

3. You wake up in the middle of the night and smell smoke!

If you don't know what you'd do, that's bad. It means you would feel helpless—and, according to the National Board of Fire Underwriters, feeling helpless is the first step toward panic.

Panic is a killer. Ironically, though it springs from a consuming desire to stay alive, it is very apt to destroy you. Time after time it has turned relatively minor emergencies into riots in which scores of people are suffocated or trampled to death.

Panic is contagious. It can spread in an instant from one hysterical person to a roomful, or a houseful of people. The way to control it is to keep it from starting—by being prepared for emergencies.

1. In public places. Whenever you enter a public place, make a mental note of the nearest exit and the quickest way to reach it.

Hening To Leave M C After Serving A Year

Acting Treasurer Returning Home To Virginia

Mr. S. E. Hening has been on the Maryville College campus since October 14, 1955, and is soon to leave his position as acting treasurer and return to his home in Sperryville, Virginia. Mr. Hening was introduced to the student body by Dr. Lloyd at the chapel service on Wednesday and was greeted by applause by the students who have learned to know, respect and appreciate him.

Mr. Hening is retired from a successful career which included various business enterprises. He was for many years a secretary and official of the YMCA in New York. He was in Europe and China for 8 years, and the United States was director of field operations for foreign work. He was business manager and later general secretary of the Pittsburgh Metropolitan area of the YMCA, and administrative secretary of the National Council of the YMCA, with offices in New York. He also served for 7 years as national treasurer of the America Baptist Home Mission Society, and was, before coming to Maryville, for 8 years, a licensed real estate broker in Virginia.

Mr. Hening is an avid golf fan and is at least partly responsible for the grand improvements to the College golf course. Working alongside "Brownie", Mr. Hening has made many improvements in the campus as a whole.

Mr. Hening has been more than an acting treasurer. He has been a valuable part of the Maryville spirit and a friend!

Forty Active Band Members Perform At All Home Games

The Maryville Band, that gave its first colorful performance at the Morehead State game, is starting the season off with forty active members. It is sponsored by lovely Ka Bugenhagen, a senior, who was presented a sheaf of roses at the Morehead game to denote her sponsorship.

The peppy majorettes, captained by June Keeney, include Elaine Bowman, Sue Short, Nancy West, and Dottie Weterling.

The band members are: Karen Anderson, alto; Ione Balmer, clarinet; Curt Berger, drums; Jeanne Berger, baritone; John Bridges, trumpet; Dick Bruner, horn; Carolyn Cones, flute; Liz Cruze, trombone; Thomas Fairman, trumpet; Webb Gentry, clarinet; Robbie Gibbs, clarinet; Dan Gilmore, clarinet; Betsy Gross, clarinet; Sue Guinn, clarinet; Mike Guise, drums; Bill Hansen, drums; Ron Hoefer, tuba; Sonya Hollar, flute; Claire Howell, clarinet; Jane Hussey, bells; Carolyn Ingram, flag bearer; Bob Kellstrom, drums; Doug Koehler, trombone; Elva Leonhardt, cymbals; Sally Lumley, trumpet; Bill Martin, clarinet; Sandy McNeil, bagpipes; Sara Meyer, clarinet; Bill Murphy, trumpet; Mary Murphy, trumpet; Pennie Neff, bells; Bill Pennock, piccolo; Peggy Reid, bagpipes; Jack Shafer, tuba; Ruth Terhune, trumpet; Barbara Thomas, drums; Barbara Walker, bells; Dodie Waters, baritone; Betsy Watson, baritone; and Bill Young trombine.

TONIGHT!

Tonight in the Intramural Gym, cheer will be an informal dance, sponsored by the Social Committee. The dance will begin at 8:30, and end at 10:30. Ben Stabley's band, with Coleen Crawford as soloist, will furnish the music, suplimented by records. This dance is informal and informal dress is correct.

Theatre Workshop Houses People Doing Many Jobs

by Ruth Wilson

"Has anybody seen the saw?"

"There'd a needle wandering lost around here."

"Why paint spots on a set?"

"Don't sit on that chair! It's a prop!"

These are just a few of the phrases I heard when the Theater Workshop door had opened and closed behind me.

Immediately an obstacle course blocked my path. Lying in various stages of finishing were "flats", i.e., lengths of canvas stretched on wooden frames which are painted by hand or sprayed. These "flats", when put together, form the set.

The Set Committee for a play is responsible for building any and all scene changes and settings. Needless to say, this committee is the largest, and except for the actors themselves, probably puts in more time than any other production job in the Theater.

After tripping over a few cans of paint, running into several tables, benches and other pieces of equipment, I found myself close enough to the staircase behind the stage to catch a faint, industrious "whirr" from above. This room is the Theater Sewing Room, where almost all of the costumes and draperies for plays are made. Using contemporary patterns, and by taking a sleeve from one pattern, a jacket from another, and a skirt from yet another, a garment of any period can be produced.

Some of the most interesting problems in preparing a play are met by the Props Committee. By begging, borrowing, and following a few sly tricks this committee must be able to supply the actors with fairly authentic accessories. For example, in the past few years, Prop Committees have been called upon to supply such things as: a hip flask used in the 1920's; an early model of a telephone; a "morning glory" phonograph, to name a few.

These are just three of the committees regularly used here on campus to help produce plays. There are others: tickets, publicity, lighting, and makeup, and each one contributes toward the big job of presenting good entertainment in our Theater.

Class editor, Willa Duvall; copy editor, Ann Wiley; sports editor, Bob Hassall; art editor, Will Roberts; typists, Eleonore Koster and Sandra Wallin.

On Thursday there will be a "stragglers day" for all of those who have not yet had their picture made for the Chilhowean. The charge will be the same.

Faith Cooperative Parish Serves The Community

By Libby Turner

To many students at Maryville The Faith Cooperative Parish is just a chapel announcement or a sign. To many other people it may be another statistic for the Board of National Missions, but to the people of Blount County and to nearly one-hundred faculty members and students on campus it is a working part of Christ's church on earth. The Echo would like to present a series of articles on the inspring work of this organization.

This parish project is under the auspices of the Board of National Missions through the National Missions Committee of the Union Presbytery and through New Providence Church and Maryville College. The effective workings of this project are carried out under the directorship of The Rev. Dr. Albert H. Cropp and the assistant directorship of The Rev. Austin VanPelt.

Dr. Cropp is the pastor of Cloyd's Creek, Hays Memorial, Mount Tabor, Pine Grove and West Maryville Churches and is assisted by a number of students from the college. The work is carried on through Sunday School, church and recreation work, all of which is beneficial to both the churches and to the volunteer workers.

Approximately the same work is carried on in the chapels, Home Avenue, Keeble, East Mountain and Sunnybrook under the care of Rev. Van Pelt.

Besides these two phases there is also a weekday program which takes place through the public schools, Forest Hills and Chilhowee View. On Monday morning students take over the Forest Hill classes, and on Thursday morning the Chilhowee View classes, for one hour of Bible stories for the younger, and Bible study for the older public school children.

Special articles on these three divisions will appear separately in the next three Echoes for the interest of those who do not know of this uhase of the college program.

STUDENT COUNCIL

by Ted McDaniels

The Wednesday night meeting of the Student Council opened with a town night violation. A Senior girl had forgotten to sign in and after the infraction had been viewed a motion was made and approved that the town night privilege be suspended for one week.

President Henderson then stated that the Sportsmanship Agreement has been signed by both Carson-Newman and our Alma Mater and will be presented to the student body for ratification in the near future.

Council was assured that steps had been taken to do something about the need for railings on the chapel steps leading to the court. The architect is being consulted to see what can be used to conform with the design of the building.

Pep Committee chairman Garrison reported that the Homecoming situation was shaping up and it was felt that the situation would soon be well in hand.

The Social Committee reported that there was to be a dance on campus this week with a band and records as the band could take a break. There is to be no expense entailed and the proper dress for the occasion will be slacks and sports shirt for the men and corresponding attire for the women.

The Elections Committee reported that the elections for the Freshman class officers would be held Thursday.

There was some discussion on a proposal that the Sunday dating priviledge we extended to underclassmen women. A proposal to this effect will be forwarded to Senate pending further investigation.

On Fire Prevention

"Undetermined origin," they say.

It's a common phrase in news reports of a fire. In the charred and gutted shell of what used to be someone's home, it is sometimes difficult to figure out immediately where the first wisp of smoke curled up—where the first tiny flame licked out.

But given a little time, trained and experienced men can usually reconstruct the situation. A late party—people smoking—a cigarette that fell unnoticed among the sofa cushions and smoldered there. An open fire left burning—sparks that jumped out on the rug or a piece of furniture. Oversize fuses in the fuse box—overloaded electrical wiring that burst into flame.

Whatever happened, it's past remedying. It matters only as a guide to the future. But to a fire victim, what matters most is the present.

Everything is gone: family heirlooms—cherished mementos—clothing, jewelry, furnishings, valuable papers—all the things that went to make up one family's daily life.

* * * * * *

This is Fire Prevention Week. You will be hearing a great deal about fires and how to prevent them. Act on what you hear. It's easy to think about the future now—but it's hard AFTER a fire!

Concerning Roommates . . .

You know the person who's the least appreciated on this campus? The roommate! Who else puts up with you when you're in a horrible mood? Who lends you socks when you forget to wash? I could spend the entire editorial listing the woes and wails of roommates. . . . but I won't. Really, though, they're wonderful critters when you get to know them!

Suppose you're a freshman and you feel like you're stuck with a dope. Has it dawned on you that maybe you're the one who's been acting dopey? Perhaps there is a real personality conflict. . . . that doesn't mean you can't be civil to each other and keep quiet about "Roommate Troubles" to anyone with two ears.

Or maybe you're a sophomore and you're learning to live with your favorite person of the year before. Maybe it isn't like you expected it to be. . . maybe it isn't all tulips and daffodils, but living with a person never is. . . that is, until you recognize and then look over their faults. "Nobody's perfect" is the cliche. . .I doubt if you are, either!

ou might be a junior or senior and you're living with the one that you lived with last year . . . and you love it. You rejoice, your mourn, you act like an imbecile, you get serious, when your roommate does. You get an honor and there's a big "CONGRATS" sign on your door and you know your roommate is in there rooting for you. Or your roommate gets sick or hurt and you're a lone wolf. Horrors! How quiet can one room be?

But looking at it from any standpoint, your roommate is bound to swell. . . and even if you don't get along, there's no reason why you can't try. And remember. . . and take it the ones who know. Roommates are good ,and friends are better. . . but the roommate that's your friend to the BESTEST! ! !

The Spirit of '56

No, don't skip this editorial for Scots and Sodas. We don't live by bread alone and this applies to humor too. I refuse to start with any old phrase such as: it has been called to my attention . . . because it hasn't been called, it's been shouted in my ears from all directions, and I for one am glad it has. What I'm rambling about with is that old beat up vision of frustrated editors, School Spirit. How many times have we heard about it and yet like liquid mercury it is uncontrolable. It comes from a real sence of loyalty wich can not be forced. No amount of windy editorials and pep rallies can bring it out if it isn't there in the first place and it's a bit silly to try, when half the student body are not behind you. For the past three years I've watched the pep rallies, band shows and listened to the cheering of the student body. It was good but not the best by any means. I've read many of the editorials on school spirit in the "Echo" and I've skipped the rest of them just as you have in all probability. This year it has been different. From my first week on campus I've felt something in the air and yet I couldn't put my finger on it. And then at the first home game it broke. The student body cheering was different, the band played differently, and the ball playing was different. Last week I saw it when the Kappa Phi and the Alpha Sig boys saw the boys off. That night I learned that Kappa Phi had sent a telegram of good wishes to the team and I heard it again when on the same night the Carnegie boys cheered wildly in the third quarter. Oh yes, I've heard cheering and seen pep rallies before. . . but not like this. . . and not at dear old M.C. Now I hear that both men's societies are to have a seperate cheering section. This should have happened years ago. Why didn't it? What do we have now that we haven't had in the past. Well, it's just that little two word feeling, School spirit. I don't know what has caused it but its here, and I hope, to stay. If its the increased number of freshmen, I'm glad. . . if its a tardy cycle of school spirit or the new renaissance of the student body I'm still glad. What I'm trying to say it: don't let it die! This can be the beginning of a new era in school spirit. Get on the band wagon. Homecoming is just around the corner. Let's make this year the one known to the graduates as the year the Spirit of '56 came to life!

Scots & Soda

By Barbara Wilkie

dear aunt Hortense,

I thought i would write you a note and tell you I am getting along here at college. Boy it is sure different from high school but i like it fine. Thank you for the five bucks i can sure use it for paying my dues. Did nuom tell you i made vesper choir? I was scared when i tryed out, but when i saw that all there was to sing was "Drink to me only with thine eyes" I felt better. I guess you remember me singing it at that sunday School Picnic this summer.

And gues what, my roommate is a yankee from Hackensack, New Jersey. we get along pretty good except the other day I accidentally tripped over some extension cords and broke one of his bop records and two Elvis Presley records. But he couldn't do anything to me because i don't think he is supposed to have a record player in his room anyway. It is a high fi set and he has rigged up speakers all over the room. He says it helps him study, but i don't see how he can with all those extension cords running over the desk, and anyway, when all the speakers are plugged in there isn't any place for the lamp. He says he is a philosophy major and does all his thinking in the dark anyway.

Well i had better close, and do some studying.

your nephew,
Otis

Dear aunt HortenSe,

We have ben having initiations this week. They don't have fraternities here, so i joined kappa sigma. I got off pretty easy, i guess. One of the old members thought i should be doing something so i had to carry his and his girl friend's book, They got pretty mad at me though when I tripped over my shoe laces and dropped their filing boxes in the mud. A whole lot of note cards and things fell out and they wouldn't let me put them back in. So i just left the two of them sitting there making a lot of fuss over nothing. Nobody else asked me to do anything after that.

We had choir initiation too, but that was fun. I was the only one carrying a dulcimer around for my instrument. The only thing bad about that initiation was i couldn't see very well. We couldn't comb our hair all day, and it's been sort of a long time since uncle henry cut mine.

My rommote is going to play some new records, so I had better close and listen to them, i can't write very well in the dark.

your nephew,
Otis

p.s. Thank You for the three dollars. I might get a hair cut.

Dear aunt Hortense,

theer is really a lot of tradition around here. My freshman discusions leader has been telling us about it. I found out that you were supposed to wear a dress suit on Sundays and even a tie, because all fellows have to serenade engaged couples, so i am glad i found out this early in the semester so i would know what to do.

I have met a nice girl from Kentucky, so i asked her for a date. We went to town to see a movie and after that had a milk shake. She got to telling me about her dad's horse farm and we forgot all about the time. We were sort of surprised to look up and see the housemother standing there at the counter. It was 11:15 so we had to get back before we really got into serious trouble. I guess i just like to talk, because that has happened before. The last girl i took to a movie got awfully upset when we didn't get back to campus until 10:45. She was sort of silly anyway. I like southern girls better.

(Thanks for the two dollars. It comes in handy for things).

Your nephew,
Otis

Dear aunt hortense.

Classes are beginning to get me down. We had to write some themes in english and i didn't get too good of a grade. I wrote about "How to succeed in College" and i knew it wasn't anything to brag about, but i expected more than a D in mechanics. The teacher said my content was excellent so i made A in that. I told about how freshmen come to college and don't form good study habits and consequently don't make good grades and as life goes on, they fall in everything they do.

My roommate and i have been having bull sesions. He really knows a lot. He has been reading The Iliad and The Odyssey by some ancient greeks to me every night. I am even getting to like his records. The other night i thought I would make some cocoa on his hot plate and listen to "Don't be Cruul," so i found a plug in the extension under the bed. (That is where i am going to put the desk lamp, i think.) But as i was crawling around i accidentally pulled down three of his high fi speakers when my foot got caught in the cord that goes from the dresser to the closet. I think he should just take them all down.

Thanks for the dollar. I have been meaning to buy some soap and now i can with the money you sent. We wash our own clothes here to cut down expenses. I guess once you get on to the system of how to work the washer, it is easy. I didn't know for a long time that it only took a cup of soap and even less bleach and that you didn't put the starch in the rinse water. I thought my clothes looked kind of funny when I took them out.

well, i have to close and help my roomate translate his german. . . . . .

your nephew,
Otis

TALK OF THE WEEK

By Sue Settle

Voices, Masks, and Shadows

Voices, Masks and Shadows ....
by Joe McNeal

As the dizzy whirl of rush week and initiation of society pledges gives way to the more regular routine of college life, students will once again want to spend a large part of their time enjoying Maryville's gay night life. And, though at first glance this doesn't look exactly exciting, perhaps it isn't so bad after all.

Downtown Maryville's activities can be summed up rather completely in four little words — dinner, movies, bowling, and skating. You have your choice of any combination.

At the movies next week, the Park will present "Cannibal Attack" Monday through Wednesday and "Manfish" Thursday and Friday. The Capitol's schedule was not available.

Bowling and skating can be enjoyed any night and if the movie schedule is out of line with your taste try something else. You can't win or lose (depending on your point of view) either way.

On the campus will be a great many interesting and exciting activities. The clubs and societies are in high gear now with plans for the biggest semester ever well under way. The Artists Series is coming up, and the Playhouse is preparing "Death of a Salesman" plus the Experimentals.

Whatever you may be looking for in entertainment, you can always find in the library. Adventure and romance, beauty and inspiration, tragedy and comedy—all these and more await you through the simple magic of the printed word.

Many fine, recent books have been added recently to the library. The best of 100 years of delightful humor has been gathered together in "A Century of Punch" and admirers of England's famous weekly will find many chuckles between the covers of this volume.

Among the novels of 1955 were many which were designed to tell a disturbing story of some great flaw in the relations of men to one another. A few of these novels succeeded in disturbing in a powerful way and Robert Penn Warren's "Band of Angels" is certainly one of them. This story of a girl raised in Kentucky under pleasant circumstances who discovers at her father's funeral that she is partly negroid and, consequently, is sold as a slave to pay off her fathers debts, is intensely compeling reading. You may be disgusted or pleased by this novel, but you will certainly be disturbed by it in some way.

Gene Spiekerman To Show Films At German Club

Gene Spiekerman will show films which he took in Germany at the next meeting of German Club. The meeting will take place on Monday night in Herr Reber's classroom.

CORRECTION

An error in the last issue of the Echo may have caused some confusion concerning the adjustment of standing of old students who are now under the new grading system. An article in that issue stated that the adjustment worked to the disadvantage of students with D or F grades under the old system. This is not correct because the transformation from old to new systems actually works to the student's slight advantage where there are D and F grades. In other cases there is neither advantage nor disadvantage.

SPORTS SPOTLIGHT

Baseball

By now The Dodger fans have all their wits about them after suffering through the final days of one of the hottest races the National League has seen.

But their suffering has just begun because now they must suffer through the World Series against the favored New York Yankees. So whether you like it or not, we again have a subway Series in '56.

This season has been a great one and some of its leaders were: Don Newcombe with 27 Big wins for the Brooks. Duke Snider who took the Home Run title with 43. Hank Acron of the Braves was Batting champion with a .328 mark in The N.L.

In the American League Mickey Mantle walked off with the Triple crown. He Batted .353—hit 52 Home Runs and drove in 130 runs.

All in all Baseball had a noteworthy season. The records books saw 23 changes in this season and other marks are expected to fall in the Series—May the Best Team win.

Football

While the N.L. pennant fight was in the Spotlight, football continued to move in on the scene.

The second big week of football again saw some surprises as did the first week.

S.M.U. picked last in their conference ratings just missed turning in its second straight upset. Georgia Tech capitalized on a Safety to win 9-7 from the amazing Mustangs.

Tennessee opened with the glory of The Vols of old with a rousing triumph over a good Auburn team 35-7. All-American candidate John Majors led the brilliant attack against the Plainsmen.

Oklahoma looked like the National Champions they're acclaimed to be as they routed North Carolina 36-0 at Norman Oklahoma.

Michigan State the cream of the Big Ten whipped the power of the rule-torn Pacific Coast, in Stanford by a 21-7 count.

Pitt edged a strong Syracuse squad which may decide who is the power of the East. The score was 14-7 Panthers.

Army looked sluggish on pass defense but still rocked an outmanned U.M.I. team 32-12.

This reported doesn't dare make a prediction for next week after watching the upsets that have already piled up on the scene.

Keep your pennants waving high for your favorite because this promises to be a rough year on the favorites.

Scotties Bow To Colonels In Second Loss Of Season

By Pete Nix

Halfback H. G. Reed more than lived up to his Little All American rating, as he led the Centre College Praying Colonels to a hard earned 20-13 victory over the Maryville College Scotties. Reed personally accounted for two Centre td's and set up the third with two nice runs.

The Highlander offense in the first half was practically nill. Maryville opened running out of the T formation but soon shifted into the single wing and their attack bogged down never to get going again until the second half. Meanwhile, Colonel quarter back McGuire, sent halfback Reed slamming at theweak spots in the Maryville defense. This combination soon gave the Praying Colonels a 7-point lead and another touchdown and extra point were added before the half ended.

Early in the second half the Maryville offense began to click and Johnny Phipps and Captain Bud White soon had the Highlanders knocking on the door. Phipps carried over, White converted, and the Centre lead was cut to 7 points. Late in the third quarter Phipps and White again set Scotties out on a drive toward pay-dirt. For the second itme in the evening Phipps went into the end zone, but the conversion attempt was low, and the Scots were through for the night. McGuire sneaked over from the 1 for the Colonels' final tally late in the closing quarter.

The Maryville offense, as in the Morehead game, proved itself entirely capable, but the defenders could not stand up against the pounding of Reed and the deft ball handling of McGuire as they led the Praying Colonels of Centre College to a 20-13 victory over the Scots.

Scots To Travel To Johnson City

By Pete Nix

Tonight the Maryville College Highlanders, seeking their first win of the 1956 season will travel to Johnson City, Tennessee for an engagement with the East Tennessee State Buccaneers. These two teams, traditional rivals for many years, always play a slam-bang, hard-hitting game of football. The Bucs were hurt by graduation, but the returning lettermen formed a nucleus for a strong squad and they have managed a 1-1 record thus far this season. The Scots after two close defeats, are due for a helping hand from lady luck and maybe tonight's the night. An added desperate prediction: This time the Highlanders will return with the first win of the 1956 season under their belts.

Intramurals....

By Joe Quinn

This past week in the Intramural ranks, football at its roughtest and toughest was played. There was a thrill a minute in a majority of the games scheduled this week.

M.C.A. figured in the two top games of the week. On Friday they battled the Pre-Mins to a scoreless deadlock. From this reporter's view, it was one of the cleanest games played this year. Both teams deserve credit for a job well done.

On Monday the Rebels scored a tremendous upset by edging out the Y team 6-0Y. Fred Garren did the scoring for the victorious Rebs.

Before the Pre-Mins had their encounter with the Y, they downed the Warriors 12-0. Jack Woodhall scored both TD's for the Pre-Mins.

Kappa Phi went down before the spirited Rebels outfit by the score of 12-0. Jim Gregory, with a couple of circus catches scored all the points for the winners.

On Tuesday, the Alpha Sig Hammers turned back the Kappa Phi's 27-6. Bill Dent, Dick Jones, Jack Crouch and Pete Nix shared the scoring honors while Butch Christie went 60 yards for the lone Kappa Phi score.

SIDE SLANTS. . .

By Mr. X

Dear hearts and gentle people . . . I. R. C. does not stand for the Idle Rich Club. Last Monday night only a handfull of old faithfuls showed up to hear Rachael McCastlain give a smashing talk on her adventures in Scotland. This club has been struggling for some time. It's about time some of you people got on the beam if you're interested in human experiences of any type . . . I wish to thank the Acting Treasurer for the past few months, Mr. Henning for his wonderful job. I'm sure that most of you don't know how hard he has worked at his projects. Music in the dining hall, the paint jobs almost everywhere and the new lights in the library just to mention a few. Best of wishes in your future Mr. Henning and may your days always be happy . . . Alpha Sig, where were your shirts in the rush week play? Amazing what one can get away with if you know how, isn't it . . . By this time all the freshmen will have taken their just deserts and are glad they are finished at last. You were real sports kids, just one more thru now, chapel speeches at homecoming. Luck to ya . . . I hear that play house this year is really on the ball and is going to give some more of the old fashioned plays. Just what the doctor ordered . . . Doctor Hunter, we would love to have you give another performance of "The Man Who Came To Dinner" . . . My doesn't the tower of Anderson look nice now that we can see it. No danger of any low flying planes hitting it now . . . Seems to me that the Light men had better give up replacing the light bulbs in the street lamp on the long trail to town. Rather expensive, eh what . . . Freshmen, only 56 more shopping days for that umbrella before the floods descend . . . The cheer leaders this year are the best ever but they had better get some megaphones for the band. At the last home game the band was way behind on the cheers. Or maybe it was that girl cheer leader herself . . . Well signing off for this week. See you next issue.

Fashions

By Bobbye Carson

It is hoped that during this semester the fashions column will be able to bring you up to date fashions news. From prospective interviews with fashion consultants, and the aid of periodical literature on this subject, we hope to suggest to our readers the latest fashions for college students, while keeping a college budget in mind.

The aim of every student is to appear attractive to fellow students. Before the latest and most practical styles and fashions can be discussed, physical appearance must be considered. None of us have any say so as to what our physical characteristics are going to be. But what we do with our given looks is the all important thing. Such things as cleanliness, neatness, suitable clothes, suitable hair styles, and other factors of good grooming go into this all important personal appearance of ours. However, the one thing that we seem to often overlook is posture.

Bad posture is not only harmful to a person's looks, but also it is harmful to health. Our bodies were not made to slump. In so doing, the vital organs are crowded, and our back bones crook indifferently to our body plan. Neither are clothes made to fit slumped shoulders. Clothes are designed to fit the straight lines of the body. You see this beautiful dress in a store window and after trying it on, you can not understand why it doesn't look the same on you. Were you standing erectly? By letting our posture droop, the natural lines of a garment are destroyed. All the beautiful clothes in the world can not make you attractive unles you have good posture.

The most common causes of poor posture are laziness and carelessness. Other causes are poor health, lack of enough sleep, poor diet, lack of selfconfidence, and others.

Here are some suggestions for improving posture:

1. When walking, hold your body straight, but relaxed. Remember, relaxing doesn't mean slouching.

2. When going down stairs, keep your body erect.

3. When you are going up stairs, keep your body straight, and place your whole foot on the step.

4. When you are sitting, the lower part of your back bone should touch the back of the chair.

5. When writing at a desk, bend from your hips rather than from your waist.

6. When picking something up, kneel rather than bending over.

These are only a few helpful hints for good posture. If you are interested in improving your posture, there are many good books and articles on the suject in the library.

Being attractive can be every girl's charm if she is willing to work on it. Posture is one of many ways to improve your appearance. It is possible for anyone to have good posture, and it doesn't cost a penny!

WAA Launches A Vigorous Program

The Women's Athletic Association is now in the midst of its yearly program. The purpose of the W.A.A. is to teach girls the fundamentals of many and varied sports and to create a harmonious relationship between girls while participating. W.A.A. meets every Tuesday and Thursday from 3:30-4:30, and from 4:30 to 5:30. This group is divided into two opposing teams, The Chillies who meet at 3:30 and the Howies who meet at 4:30.

At the present the two teams are practicing soccer in preparation for a soccer tournament. The "champs" will be determined by the team that wins two out of three games. The tournament starts Tuesday, Oct. 9, and will continue for two weeks.

The first activity of the W.A.A. is a tennis tournament, still going on. After the soccer tournament and tennis tournament, stunts will be taught. Also, there are tentative plans for a W.A.A.-M Club hike.

One of the goals of the members of the W.A.A. is to receive enough points for a monogram, letter, or a letter and sweater. Points are accumulated in many different ways. An important purpose, however, is just having fun.

If you are a new woman studeni or campus you are cordially invited to join this group.

M Club Hike Proves To Be Real Endurance Test

By Lottie Jerkins

With cries of "are you sure he's safe? Gosh he's big," and "how did I ever get into this?", the Woman's M Club started their Fall Hike with an evening of horseback riding. All members managed to survive this daring feat.

The next day some hikers from the group found a beautiful pool in the mountain stream. Some of the more hardy decided that a swim was just the thing. The result was a most delicate shade of blue. Charcoal steakers were used to cheer these shivering souls. With full hearts and happy stomaches, the members returned home to collapse.

IRC Reveals Plans For Meetings

The International Relations club has already had two programs this semester. At the first meeting, which was held on September 24, Dr. Shannon, professor of German, presented a very interesting talk concerning the problem of stimulating interest with international relations. The club had its second meeting on October 1, with Miss Rachael McCastlain relating some of the experiences she has had in Edinburgh, Scotland this past school year.

It is hoped that many students and faculty members will attend and become a part of the I.R.C. All those interested in current events and related topics are urged to come to the meetings. The club meets the first and third Mondays of each month. Most of the meetings are held in the Y-Rooms from 6:45 to 7:30. The club will begin selling magazine subscriptions dealing with current events at special reduced prices soon. The club at present is working on a float for the homecoming parade.

At the next program, which will be in October on the 15th, Dr. Elwood will show some slides and give a talk on the interesting country of Egypt.

CLOSING OF FULBRIGHT COMPETITION ANNOUNCED

November 1, 1956 is the closing date of the competition for United States Government educational exchange grants of graduate study abroad, it was announced today by Kenneth Holland, President of the Institute of International Education, New York City. One month remains in which to apply for awards under the Fulbright and Buenos Aires Convention Programs for the 1957-58 academic year.

Fulbright Scholarship application blanks and a brochure describing the overseas study awards are available in the offices of Fulbright advisers on college and university campuses. Applicants enrolled at academic institutions must abide by the submission deadlines established by their respective Fulbright advisers.

The programs under the Fulbright Act and Buenos Aires Convention for the Promotion of Inter-American Cultural Relations are part of the international educational exchange activities of the Department of State. They will give almost 1,000 American citizens the, chance to study abroad during the 1957-58 Academic year. Since the establishment of the program in 1947, over 5,500 American students have received grants for study.

Countries

Countries where U.S. graduate students may study under the Fulbright Program are Australia, Austria, Belgium and Luxembourg, Burma, Chile, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, India, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, the Philippines and the United Kingdom. In the Asian countries—Burma, India, Japan and the Philippines as well as in Greece, only a limited number of Grants are available, and mature graduate candidates are preferred. Special provision is made in the German program for 25 grants to American graduate students who will serve as English language assistants in secondary schools.

Countries participating in the Buenos Aires Convention Program are Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rico, Cuba, the Dominican Republic, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, and Venezuela.

Eligibility requirements for these foreign study fellowships are: United States citizenship; a college degree or its equivalent at the time of the award is to be taken up; knowledge of the language of the country of application sufficient to carry on the proposed study and good health. Preference is given to applicants not more than 35 years of age.

Final selection of Fulbright grantees is made by the Board of Foreign Scholarships, ten leading educators and educational administrators appointed by the President of the United States. The Institute of International Education has been deisgnated by the Board and the department of State to screen applications for study abroad. Under the Buenos Aires Convention, the Institute makes the preliminary recommendation of candidates, with the governments of the cooperating countries making the final selection of candidates for study within the borders.

Awards under the Fulbright Act are made entirely in the currencies of participating countries abroad. This Act authorizes the use of foreign currencies and credits acquired through the sale of surplus property abroad for educational exchanges. The awards cover transportation, expenses of a language refresher or orientation course abroad, tuition, books and maintenance for one academic year. Awards under the Buenos Aires Convention include transportation provided by the U.S. Government, and tuition and maintenance allowances provided by the host government.

Fashion News From The World Of Cows

by Margaret Longfellow

"I never saw a Theta cow. I never hope to see one.

"But I can tell you this right now, I'd rather see than be one."

Last week the whole campus had a chance to see a Theta cow and quite a few of the girls had a chance to be one. But did you ever stop to think what it feels like to be a cow?

In our particular herd horns are of little importance. They may have sharp or smooth tips and may point in any number of directions, but they must be there.

Oh, but don't be so unfortunate as to have a crepe paper tail. If you must have a tail place your bid for rope. Every time you settle down on all fours and then stand up again, you invariably step on your tail and stretch it two or three inches. And I ask you, what cow wants a tail he could play jump rope with?

Hoof bells are quite in style this season so of course our herd wore them. I think that they are supposed to devastate the bulls, or did the fashion book say that they are supposed to drive them wild?

Circular eye patches are also quite popular. Some cows use shoe polish and eyebrow pencil, but I really prefer burnt cork myself.

It seems that some of the older members of the herd have been subject to a fading memory and so it became necessary for us to wear name signs. I guess they thought that we would be called Bessie and Elsie so you imagine their surprise when they found out that we had regular "people" names.

Our older sisters also made us wear a cow-bell so we wouldn't get lost. We felt so silly because they were treating us like calves.

If you have been contemplating becoming a cow, don't let me give you a bum steer. It's really quite an experience.

Following the showing of slides, refreshments were served.

Echoes From The Slave Block

by Muriel Mattes

The rigors of the lives of the slaves of old Rome cannot be compared to those of the Bainonian slave girls.

In the first place, Roman togas were made to be worn by people, not by beds. Bainonians were wrapped like mummies into bed sheets, tied in the middle like a sack and sent out to hobble around the campus the best way possible.

Roman gals did not wear gay little sprays of straws on the back of their head, thus they avoided having to stop every five minutes to pin said straws back in their hair.

They did not carry tigers, monkeys, and bears around in their arms. Animals were kept properly caged, not perched on a pile of books and carried about.

Not you see why I'll reserve my sympathy for modern slaves. If I'm not in Rome, I'd rather not do as the Romans do.

Getting Oriented The Hard Way

By George Stewart

Yes, it was a day like all days, full of the varying and illuminating events that make life interesting. It was a day in early September. It was the day I arrived at Maryville.

I couldn't help but feel excited as I drove up the campus roadway. My eyes darted suspiciously from one building to another, tentatively identifying them from the catalogue. Then I spied Carnegie. As I pulled up to the curb, I found the scene to be one of mass confusion. With the myriad of trunks and cases adorning the lawn, I wondered if John Ringling North had decided to keep the tented circus and was in the process of pitching the "Greatest Show on Earth."

After getting out of the driver's seat and trotting around the grounds for a few moments, I was hailed by a smiling upperclasman. Within half an hour, after being registered, I was on my way to my room.

How I remember walking down the hall and searching diligently for my room number. This was to be an unforgettable emotional experience. The sound of my key in my door made the suspense almost intollerable. Then the door swung open. What I was was fine, but where was the bedroom? On the other side of the enclosure was a door which I suspected must connect me with the other rooms of my suite. Just before I opened it, however, I morbidly realized that perhaps there was no room, and I could expect nothing more than a private bath. Nevertheless to say, it was a closet. Needless to say, I had my emotional experience.

The following morning, while awaiting maid service, I reread part of my M Book. The warning to expect lines to almost everything was well taken; however, little did I expect to find lines to the various and sundry facilities of the dorm.

Within a few days I was well acquainted with the campus and the ruidments of dormitory life. Rudiments covers a lot of territory. I learned to expect coke bottles to rattle down the hall at all hours, to hear shrill laughs in the wee hours of the morning, to be awakened by someone sending morse code with the inter-com, to hear practicing quartets at 11:30 p.m., and to get my washing machine turned off at 4:30 while I was trying to sneak through an unscheduled wash.

That was four weks ago. Now I find my room too large to keep clean, coke bottles too much trouble to take downstairs, jokes funniest after 11:00 p.m., and noisy quartets lots of fun. But I still get caught sneaking through a wash. I guess I'm getting orientated.

Blind Panic . . .

Get-togethers in assembly halls often present such hazards as flammable decorations, insufficient exits, not enough aisle space, and folding chairs that tip over easily. If you have anything to do with such a gathering, try to eliminate these hazards. And instead of wondering, "How many can we get in?" think of "How many can we get out safely in an emergency?"

2. If your clothes catch fire. Fold your arms across your chest, drop to the floor or ground. If posible, roll up in a rug or heavy coat. Otherwise, roll over and over slowly to smother the flames.

3. In your home. Prepare for a fire emergency now by figuring out alternate ways to reach the ground from every upstairs room. Every member of the family should be familiar with all these exits.

Family fire drills are a good idea. Try one in the middle of the night to see if everyone remembers what to do even when only half awake. Another time, pretend the main stairs are unsafe to use. This is valuable practice, because it is often true in a real emergency.

Here's how you can tell:

Before you open your bedroom door, put the palm of your hand against it. If the door is hot, the outer hall is filled with deadly heated gases. If not, open the door a bit, turning your head away from the opening and bracing the door with your foot. Pass your hand acros the opening. If the air is cool and there is no pressure, the hall should be safe.

A final reminder. If fire should cut off all escape routes from an upstairs room, don't jump out a window at once. You may hurt yourself needlesly. Open the window slightly and wait there for rescue. Breathe the fresh outside air. If it becomes necessary to jump, throw out your mattress to land on.

(National Board of Fire Underwriters.)

ences in Denmark were rather unique—she spent five days with her pen pal, a girl who couldn't speak a word of English. All during her stay, the two conversed in sign language.

When asked what scenes impressed her most, Rachel didn't know what to reply——she had liked everything. After thinking a while, she decided that first honors would have to go to the boat ride which she took up the Rhine from Minz to Cologne. However, she was quick to mention the beautiful streets of Paris, the quaint city of Heidelburg with its great castle, the cleanliness and beauty of Copenhagen, indeed the beauty of all of Denmark——a land where the sky is a clear deep blue and the sea gulls so friendly that they eat from one's hand. She loved the lake country of England—— and the highlands of Scotland.

"Yes," she sighed, "I hope to go back someday."

YWCA and YMCA Plan Annual Autumn Hikes

The annual fall hikes of the YMCA and the YWCA are scheduled for Saturday, October 20 this year.

The YWCA hike is under the direction of Corita Erwin and Judy Ross. It will not be an overnight hike as it has been in previous years. The women plan to leave the campus Saturday afternoon and return at about 10:00 the same evening. Busses will take the hikers to Cades Cove and from there they will hike to Abrams Falls.

Dr. and Mrs. Elwood, Miss Blair, Dr. Jackson and Mrs. Cummings will accompany the women. The approximate cost of the YWCA hike will be $1.25 per person and sign up sheets will be placed in the dormitories.

Co-chairmen of the YMCA hike are Bill Lynch and Joe Williams. The men plan to leave campus after dinner on Saturday and will return before Vespers Sunday evening. The site of their hike will be the Big Creek Camping Grounds. A hike up Mt. Cammarah will also be undertaken.

Mr. Bloy and Mr. Ramger are the faculty members who will accompany the hikers.

The cost for the YM hike will be $1.50 and a sign up sheet will be posted for all who wish to attend.

Dr. C. Brehm Gave The Founder's Day Address In Chapel

The 24th annual Founders Day Convocation, in memory and honor of the founders of this college, has had as its principal speaker this year Dr. C. E. Brehm, President of the University of Tennessee. He has been president of the University since 1946 and has directed the institutinon during its stage of greatest development.

Widely known through his work as administrator of educational programs, Dr. Brehm has served Tennessee since 1917. He was borrowed from his post as dean of the U-T College of Agriculture to direct tthe University, first as "acting" president, and later as president.

Born in Pennsylvania, Dr. Brehm was reared on a farm and graduated in agriculture at Pennsylvania State College in 1911. He was a farmer himself, and at one time taught horticulture at Purdue University. He came to U-T as an agricultural marketing specialist in 1917. In 1919, he was made assistant director of the Agriculture Extension Service, and director in 1936. In 1943 he was named dean of the U-T College of Agriculture and in 1946, director of the Agriculture Experiment Station. He became president of the University upon the retirement of Dr. James D. Hoskins in 1946.

The service Dr. Brehm contributed to agriculture and education in the South was acknowledged by Clemson College in 1937, when he was awarded a Doctor of Science degree by the college. In 1947 he was named "man of the year," by the Progressive Farmer, agriculture magazine.

He was recognized for his service to education in June of 1949 when Gettysburg College conferred on him an LL. D. degree and again in 1953 when Pennsylvania State University honored him with a "Distinguished Alumnus Award." Lastly, in 1954, he was awarded the Doctor of Humane Letters degree by Roanoke College.

Also included in the program were otther distinguished persons affiliated with Maryville College. Three of Maryville's directors—Rev. Dr. Harold Gordon Harold, of Memphis, Mrs. Paul Moser of New York, and Rev. Dr. Clifford E. Barbour, of Pittsburg took

The Parish Work Of Rev. Van Pelt Covers All Areas Of The Community

This week The Echo would like to again pay tribute to the Faith Cooperative Parish through this article on the work of the Rev. Austin VanPelt in the Sunnybrook, Home Avenue, Keeble, East Mountain View and New Castle Missions.

Sunnybrook is located in Maryville and carries on a Recreation and Bible school program. On Sunday morning worship services and a Sunday School are carried on. Students assisting there are Barara Walker, Pianist, and Howard Meyer, substitute teacher. A Friday night youth group is also carried on, led by Shirley Mayfield and Howard Meyer. Recreation and Bible study take place on Thursday afternoon under the direction of Sharon Rise.

Home Avenue is also in Maryville and is a program under the Y.M. and Y.W. as well as parish. On Thursday and Friday afternoons, recreation and worship for the boys is carried on by Bob Krogh, Joe Tropansky, Pate Boyd, Dale Rhoton, Graham Bardsley, David McLain, George Brewer, and Walt Borchard. Under the direction of Helen Hasenstab two girl's programs take place at that time. The primary section is supervised by Marion James, Laura Teague, Jane Bradfield, Charlotte Cathey, Rhoda Null, and Dale Smith, while the junior section is organized under Laine Rowe, Mary Faye Bundy, Joan Johnston, Judy Helton, Gretchen Hill and Charlene Willoughby. The girls have a combined program of games and Bible study.

Several rural area missions are assisted at by college students also. One of these is Keeble. In the Sunday morning service Evelyn Blackburn acts as pianist and also teaches the primary class in Sunday School. Stan Carpenter is the leader of weeknight recreation and Mert Cellar leads the Young People's class.

First Artist Series To Feature Fine Arts Quartet, October 26

The first program of the Artist Series for this year will be the Fine Arts Quartet, which will present a concert on Friday, October 26, at 8:15 P.M., in the Samuel Tyndale Wilson Chapel. The Quartet is composed of two violins, a cello and a viola.

Mr. Leonard Sorkin, first violinist, studied with Mischakoff in Chicago. He is a former member of the Chicago Symphony, and concertmaster of Saiderberg Symphonette and of the ABC Orchestra of Chicago. He is also soloist with the Chicago Symphony and the Illinois Symphony. His violin is a Stradivarius, made in 1729. Its recent history goes back to J. B. Vuillaume and the year 1865. I was purchased in 1920 by Desire DeFauw, when he was a member of The Pro Arte Quartet. He kept the violin in his possession during his distinguished career as conductor. Mr. Sorkin acquired the instrument in 1951 and returned it to an active career in quartet life.

Mr. Abram Loft, second violinist, studied in New York with Herbert Dittler and received his Ph. D. in musicology from Columbia University. He is a former Assistant Professor of music at Columbia, reviews editor for the Journal of the American Musicological Society, and a member of the Executive Council of AMS. He has concertized in the East, including such places as Town Hall and Times Hall. Mr. Loft's instrument is a Balestrieri made in 1772. The violin represents the work of a maker whose violins are constantly growing in popularity. It is rich and deep in tone and is strongly influenced by the work of Stradivarius, but it is the typical Balestrieri style. It was brought from Europe expressly for Mr. Loft. It fits perfectly into its role in the quartet and its sound is midway between the quality of the first violin and the viola.

The viola is played by Mr. Irving Ilmer, who is Concertmaster of the San Antonio Symphony and a member of the All-American Youth Orchestra and the South American Tour. He is a former member of the Chicago Symphony and has concertized extensively in the Midwest as well as having led various quartets in San Antonio, Indianapolis and Chicago. Mr. Ilmer's viola is a Gaspar da Salo, made in 1560-80. This instrument was also a member of the Pro Arte Quartet, where it was played for twenty-five years by Germaine Precost. It was sold to Mr. Ilmer specifically for use in the Fine Arte Quartet. This instrument is historically significant as one of the dozen or so extant authenticated specimens by the old masters.

George Sopkin, who plays cello, studied with Daniel Saidenberg in Chicago. He also studied in New York with Emanuel Fauermann. He is also a former member of the Chicago Symphony, and a former member of the Pro Arte Quartet, and has the rank of Associate Professor at the University of Wisconsin. He helped organize the Fine Arts Quartet after returning from the Air Force. His cello is a Gofriller which was made in 1725. This intrument was for years part of the collection of the Chicago philanthropist, Max Adler. It was then sold to Dr. Adrian Vervruggen, ardent chamber music amateur of Chicago, and sold by him to George Sopkin. It now constitutes a perfectly matched "fourth" to the other instruments of the Fine Arts Quartet.

The Quartet has given many concerts from New York to California, from Canada to Florida. Their repertoire, of both older and contemporary music, is one of the largest in the quartet field. They have an extensive record library, and now they are working on a series of educational films on the quartet, its literature, and its techniques. For the past eight years they have presented consecutive weekly broadcasts, coast to coast, on the ABC network.

Vesper Speaker Will Be Rev. Carl C. Murray

The speaker for Vespers tomorrow night, Oct. 14, 1956, will be the Rev. Carl C. Murray who is at the present the pastor of the Norwood Presbyterian Church in Knoxville. Rev. Murray is a former graduate of Maryville College and the grandson of Samuel Tyndale Wilson for whom our chapel is named.

MC Band To Give A Colorful Show During E-H Game

By Webb Gentry

The band this coming Saturday is planning what it hopes will be a down to earth program. As there is no central theme for the homecoming this year as there was last year we have chosen to salute the returning graduates and former students. We expect to help present this year's home coming Queen, Ann Kelton, in a pre-game formation. We have one surprise in store for all loyal Maryvillians. I don't want to spoil it now but as a hint watch the front of the band.

Our half time formations will be in the shapes of a scottie, clock and a numerical formation of 1956. It's too bad we don't have a real scottie for a mascot as we did two years ago. If any of you have noticed the little iron plate under the score board, this sign marks the grave of our "Scottie" of 1954.

The band for the past two years has asked to be moved nearer to the center of the field so that we can be heard. Nothing being done about this situation, the band now plans to play at intervals during the game and make itself heard, by hook or crook. With forty members we are a force to be reckoned with.

The band wishes to give its best wishes to the new cheering sections made up of both brother and siter societies. Here's to the orange and garnet! For the past week we have been trying out new formations and hope in the future to present a snappier band. See you at the game!

Alumni, Visitors, And Students Will Enjoy Today's Big Activities

This weekend marks the 24th annual observance of Homecoming and Founders Day. Activities are already underway, with alumni arriving from all parts of the country. The annual fall meeting of the board of directors was held in the Fine Arts Center Thursday and Friday.

This morning at the Founders Day service Dr. C. E. Brehm, president of the University of Tennessee, spoke on the topic "Our Educational Heritage." Also taking part in the service were Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd, president of the college, Dr. F. D. McClelland, Dean of Students, and members of the board of directors, including Rev. Harold Gordon Harold of Memphis; Rev. Dr. Clifford E. Barbour, president of Western Theological Seminary in Pittsburgh; Mrs. Paul Moser of Jackson Heights, New York; Hon. Joe Gamble of Maryville, chairman of the board of directors; and Mr. David W. Proffit of Maryville, moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, U.S.A.

Mr. Edwin Shelley of Knoxville, president of the Alumni Association, expressed greetings from the Alumni Association. The Vesper Choir, under the direction of Harry H. Harter, sang two anthems.

The Honorary Degree of LLD. was conferred on Mr. Proffitt.

One of the largest crowds of alumni in many years is expected to be on campus this weekend, according to James W. Hampton, Public Relations Secretary. An intensive telephone campaign to encourage attendance by local alumni began this week. A committee of more than thirty alumni promoted the program by means of personal calls to all alumni in Blount County. Alumni will meet together in the Chapel at noon to have lunch by classes. This afternoon, an alumni open house will be held in Pearsons Hall from 2:30 to 4:30. The annual barbecue will be held on the baseball field at 5:30 this evening. Ernest B. Lowe is chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Big Parade Planned

This aftternoon at 3:00 there will be a parade featuring floatas from many campus organizations. The Highlander marching band will lead the parade, which will be on Washington Ave., Broadway and Court St. A general sports theme is being carried out.

Charles Garrison, pep committee chairman, is in charge of the parade. He has been assisted by the following: Bob Heiggard, Stan Mont, Bob Wyman, Joann Antes, Will Roberts, Al Meister, Tom Dolch, Gary Davis, Bob Finertie, Paul Conklin, Mary Morrell; Cheerleaders: Mr. Hampton, Mrs. Largen, Coach Honaker, Don Hill, Dick Henderson, Joe Quinn, Bill Dent, and Mary Pakosh.

YMCA Plans For A Men's Lounge

The Maryville College YMCA is in full swing again making plans for the coming year. "Y" has advanced a great deal this year in many respects. Membership is higher this year than it has been for a number of years. Over one-hundred and ten men from Carnegie Hall have already become active members and have shown much interest in YMCA. There are still quite a few town students and faculty men to be contacted. Another advancement will be more fellowship in "Y" this year. This year's motto is "Christ is Life" — upon which the whole program of "Y" is based.

One of the major projects of the YMCA this year will be a lounge for the men of "Y". Plans have already been made and are now being put into effect for the establishment of this loungo. It will be furnished with couches, magagines, a trophy case, a hi-fi set, and many other things for the entertainment of "Y" members. This lounge will provide a home-base for the many "Y" activities such as down-town mission projects, a revitalized series of programs to better meet the needs of the men of the college, and such campus-wide projects as Y-Radio and the popular Y-Store.

The main project now at hand for YMCA is the Barnwarming Show, which is held annually by the YMCA and YWCA. It is produced, written, and directed by the students in these organizations.

The "Y" also has an interest in sports. It has been clearly shown this year by their outstanding teams. More "Y" sports will be seen in months to come.

The YMCA is opened to any male student attending Maryville College. It has a lot to offer you and you have a lot that you can offer it. Why not join today if you haven't already?

THE FINE ARTS QUARTET pictured above, will perform at the first of the Artist Series, October 26.

Dr. Lloyd Will Travel To N.Y. Council Meeting

Dr. Lloyd promises to have a busy week ahead of him. Tomorrow morning he will deliver a sermon at the Second Methodist Church in Knoxville to help them celebrate an anniversary.

That afternoon at 3:00 P.M. he will deliver another sermon entitled "I Will Build My Church" at the dedication of the new church building of the Erin Presbyterian Church also in Knoxville.

Sunday evening he will leave for New York where he will stay until Wednesday attending a meeting of the General Council of the Presbyterian Church of the U.S.A.

On October 23rd Dr. Lloyd will go to Atlanta where he will record a sermon to be broadcast over the "Protestant Hour" in December.

Cap Johnston Has Reached Italy, Germany With His "Ham" Radio Set

by Joe McNeal

While strolling through Carnegie's Caverns the other day, I decided to stop by 217 for a chat with Cap Johnston. Cap is a junior physics major from Bluefield, N.C., and he has the distinction of being the only officially licensed "ham" on the Maryville College campus.

"No one knows just exactly how the word 'ham' came to mean an amateur radio operator," Cap said quickly, "but it has an entirely different meaning in radio than in, say, the theatrical world. There are todhy more than 130,000 radio hams in the western world, and this number is made up of men, women, and children from all walks of life who are bound together by their common hobby."

Cap proceeded to show me the equipment that he brought with him to Maryville — a small code transmitter and a receiver. "The equipment I have here is designed to be portable; at home I have more transmitters and receivers, including a set to put a voice broadcasting station on the air," he said.

"Hams use two methods of contacting each other — voice and code broadcasting. The code station is generally easier to put on Homecoming 1956. . .

Homecoming is here again, and old grads as well as new grads are flooding the campus, and finding that things haven't changed too much since. . . Everyone is happy to be back, and remembers all the good things about when he was here.

For Freshmen, this is a bewildering time. Strange faces rush down the hall, and upperclassmen run out to meet them screaming "welcome home". Then, these strange faces invade the privacy of your room, and exclaim about the days when they lived there and had the furniture arranged so differently.

Sophomores, you know what to expect, even if you don't know what to do about it. At least some of the returning faces will be familiar ones.

Juniors have the easiest time of all. They can act with the sophistocation born of two year's experience, and yet with the uninhibited freedom that comes of not being the "oldest".

Seniors are a little melancholy at the thought of their last homecoming as a student and are wondering what it will feel like to come back as an alumnus next year, if they can. . .

But every class is happy for the excitement that prevails during homecoming. The spirit of Maryville that we have all heard so much about is really present during this short week-end.

So, homecomers, thank you for helping us to realize our potential school spirit, and enjoy yourselves. WELCOME HOME.

—B.S.

Practical School Spirit

While we are discussing school spirit (as W. G. was last week) we have a few words that could be said on the subject, providing we can find some open ears upon which to unleash them.

It is true that school spirit, or the lack of school spirit, can be seen at ball games, band shows, pep rallies and the like. But what about the phases of our school life in which we have no bands to help us sing, or cheerleaders to help us shout our enthusiastic appreciation of our school? What about the indirect ways we have of expressing our school spirit? We refer to those things done every day by all of us—attending classes, signing honor reports, taking tests, obeying rules, attending chapel, dating, studying, working, playing, etc.

Isn't it true that a person's school spirit can be determined as much, if not more, by his daily reactions to his school than it can be by his reactions to a ball game or pep rally? School spirit isn't something we have only on Saturday night when the ball game rolls around. It is present all the time in everything we do——or should be!

How is your school spirit? Do you cheer for your school every day of the week or only on ball game nights? (By the way—see you at the game tonight! Let's show our school spirit tonight, and all the time!) —P.K.

Pennsylvania 6-5000

Hello! Listen, I've told you six times already this is Maryville YU-48694738 calling Peffle-wig, Pennsylvania. You got it? Will its not my fault you can't spell! It's P as in pickle; E as in egghead, you know the intellectual type; double F as in french fries; E as in Ethalbert; W as in Wilke Barre; I as in Ipwhcich and G as in germ. Yes, calling Mr. and Mrs. I. M. Anutt. No, I won't put another dime in! I told you I don't have one. Oh, hold on for a minute will ya! I'll see if the housemother is in. For Pete's sake! How am I going to do my wash in the morning?

. . . O.K. its in. . . Hello! Hello! Yeah mom its me. Hey what happened to my allowance last week? Where are my clean shirts? Well, I couldn't help it if my room mate didn't have any stamps. About the money problem, mom. . . I can't even go down to Gilbert's anymore.

Yeah. . . I'll send her some but they didn't come out so good. That darn guy taking the pictures told me a joke just before he took it. Had my eyes closed too.

No, mom he just won't do that, and I can't sleep with him doing that typing all night. Yeah, I tried that. He's bigger than me. I try to sleep in the afternoon but some guy on second floor keeps playing a crazy tune called Sco-kee-ian or something, on his hi-fi set. Says it settles his nerves after fighting with his teachers all day. Oh yeah mom. . . remember that shrimp thing you fixed last year? Bury that recipe will ya? My roomie wants to move his table. I told him that my table of girls was just dying to move under the hi-fi loudspeaker, in the dining hall. They all like that wind blown effect. Oh, I didn't tell you? Well we have. Yeah some idea.

Know what I didn't have to pay for my chapel seat. I can't, I spent it on a ticket for movies we're going to have. First ones about some "gold digger" and his daughter. No, we don't have that 'French Line" type here. Say mom can't you send another box? That last one didn't ever reach third floor.

What! Listen sister, I've got a watch too. Yeah, just charge it. Hello, mom still there? Well. . . I don't know about the others but I'm doing O.K. in Phy. Ed. Mom, could you send some of Aunt Aga-tha's religious tracts down. Every night on second floor we have these prayer meetings and I want to get in good with these guys who give 'em. . . Where's dad? Still out celebrating the Yankees! O.K. I'll call next week. See ya. . . Say ma, can you make this call collect?

* * * * * *

Can You Imagine?

1. Miss Walker's desk without flowers?
2. Dr. Lloyd not smiling?
3. The menu without ice cream or hot dogs on Saturday night?
4. No music in the dining hall?
5. The morning without chapel?
6. Carnegie without "bull" sessions after ten P.M.?
7. Seniors without notecards or special studies note books?
8. Anyone saying "Yes, I'm ready for the test?"
9. Stevenson getting elected by the slogan, "A car on the campus for every student?"
10. The library being painted?

BEAT THE WEATHER

By Peggy Longfellow

There once was a girl at MC, who really was as smart as could be,
She wore boots when it said sun, and a smile when it said squall,
And usually was right, after all!

The weather at Maryville for the past few days has been a beautiful combination of crisp, sunny days and cool nights. But it isn't always as simple as that.

And may all freshmen be warned—when the monsoons hit Maryville, start practicing your sidestroke. It may become necessary to swim to class.

Occurence: Found wherever man exists.
Chemical properties: Possess great affinity for gold, silver, platinum, and precious stones. Violent reaction if left alone. Able to absorb great amount of food matter. Turns green when placed beside a better looking specimen.
Uses: highly ornamental, useful as a tonic in acceleration of low spirits, and an equalizer of the distribution of wealth. Is probably the most effective income reducing agent known.
Caution: highly explosive in inexperienced hands.
Boys, what's your opinion?

The Maryland Diamondback, University of Maryland, analogy between women and tobacco says

"Sophomores want their women to be like cigarettes, slender and trim, all in a row, to be selected at will, set aflame, and when the flame has subsided, discarded to select another.

A Junior wants his woman to be like a cigar. They're more expensive, make a better appearance, and last longer.

A Senior wants his girl to be like his pipe. . . something he becomes attached to, knocks gently but lovingly around, and takes great care of at all times.

A man will give you a cigarette, offer you a cigar, but will never share his pipe.

P.S. Freshmen are too young to smoke."

TALK OF THE WEEK

By Sue Settle

Voices, Masks, and Shadows

By Ann Wiley

We won't have to worry about entertainment this week-end because it starts with a bang this morning. After Dr. Brehm's Founder's Day message, the true Homecoming Spirit will prevail. The campus usually crawls with alumni and this Homecoming is no exception. . . old grads galore, but we're glad to see them! This afternoon and tonight, culture may as well curl up and die, because the Maryville College Scotties will have one continuous chant. . . BEAT EMORY AND HENRY! ! ! See you at the parade, the game, the dance.

Now for the "after Homecoming Blues" when the excitement has long since died. . . the movies are still alive and kicking. The Capitol wasn't ready to release their sparkling (?) entertainment schedule. . . let's hope it's a good sign (but I doubt it!) The Park will feature Crime Against Joe, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Square Dance Jubilee, Thursday and Friday.

Our own MC Film Series presented the racy, saucy, French movie, The Well-Digger's Daughter, last night. If you missed it, you will want to get in on the rest of the series. Buy your tickets at the theatre, week-day afternoons, 3:30-4:30.

Artist Series is coming up very quickly with the Fine Arts Quartet on Friday, October 26. Get your season tickets, now on sale in Anderson Hall every week day afternoon, 3:30-5:30.

Experimental Theatre will present Land of the Dragon, next Saturday night, October 20, in the theatre. This charming little oriental play has the characteristic sweet little heroine and wicked step-mother (except in this one she's an aunt) and all the complications involved.

The New Book Table in the library is a welcome addition and it is crammed with reviews of each book and with some of the books themselves. Furnas' Goodbye, Uncle Tom, Balchin's Fall of a Sparrow, Baksby's Soviet Scene, De Hartog's A Sailor's Life, Fosdick's John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Moos' The Republicans, are about as different in subject matter as is possible but they represent a good cross section of the New Book Table.

Any mystery fans in the crowd? The library doesn't order the hot-off-the-press mystery best-sellers, but the mystery fans on the faculty give their old- cast-off, but none-the-les-thriller-dillers to the none-the-less-thriller-dillers to the "ye old fire wheel". . . Christine, Gardner, Rinehart, Doyle, Queen and other favorites are there for the reading.

The election year is responsible for one of the bulletin boards in the library. . . proving in a pictorial resume the mud slinging isn't a new fad. Campaign cartoons from as early as the middle ages (not quite) are displayed "for all to see". . . LOOK! !

Newlyweds Marion and Beuford Miller are frequent guests of Maryville. "Booly" now works at ALCOA.

Gale Keeney, sister of June, was here to visit June last week. Her home is in Clinton.

Beverly Tillman's parents came all the way from Ohio to visit her, then only stayed a short time.

Sandy Allison (ex '59) and Barbara Felts (ex '59) have been seen on campus lately.

And, of course, there are scads of grads and parents here this weekend. There will be parties and lots of social life, so enjoy yourself!

So you have a big date for Homecoming! And what is a girl's first thought? What to wear, of course! (We wonder if fellows do the same.)

A poll has been taken in all the dorms to give us an idea of the various togs being worn for Homecoming. We give you the results of this poll hoping to give the newscomers on campus an idea of what to wear for the events.

Many of the girls have reported that they are wearing suits. Others, that they have chosen light weight wool dreses, knit dresses, and jumpers. While others favor matching sweater and skirt set. Fabrics range from wool and wool blends to corduroy. Deeper fall colors are prevalent, but as always, the lighter shades are very good.

The box jacket suits are again very stylish this fall. Many of the M.C. girls are planning on wearing just this with their matching blouses or sweaters. Some prefer tweed to the solid colors.

The day of sheath and empire waistline dresses has certainly come on our campus. Varieties of these styles will be seen at the game and dance. Colors are more varied in these styles. Boat necklines, roll collars, and tiny vertical front tucks add interest to these garments. Knit dresses return to the Homecoming scene again this year also. As always the full skirted dresses are very good for dancing. Jumpers add more variety to our M.C. fashion parade.

Topper coats and heels add the final touch. If heels present a dancing problem, dark suede or leather flats are the answer.

We have heard that many of the fellows have chosen to wear for the 1956 Homecoming, dress pants and sport coats accompanied with dress shirts and ties. While others have chosen dress suits. Still others will be present in dress pants and the popular pullover sweaters.

There are many shades and colors of these sweaters, all of which are very good for fall. We expect many of the oxford cloth shirts will be worn with their buttoned down collars. For snappy dressers, keep a sharp lookout for the M. C. ivy leaguers.

Our 1956 Homecoming Queen, Miss Ann Kelton, has chosen for her coronation apparel, a light blue wool knitted dress. The two pieced dress is composed of a slightly flared skirt and matching blouse which is buttoned down the front and has bat winged sleeves. iWth this she will wear black suede pumps.

SIDE SLANTS . . .

by Mr. X

Hello, what still here? Thanks, I knew you would be interested in some old fashioned gossip! You know, Dr. Orr thinks we all think he's an old fogy. If so, then no old fogy ever got a better turn out several Vesper Sundays ago . . . and in the rain yet!

We now have music in the dining hall. What's in store next? I can just see twenty can-can girls parading down the center aisle of the hall with Miss Ware as M.C.

Noticed all the Ike stickers around?" Dr. Queener has one on his desk . . . guess he's seen the light.

I'm waiting for the expected fire drill at a certain girls' dorm. Please girls will you not make too much noise. We guys need our beauty sleep. By the way did you know that Carnegie is due to have a drill too. Going to try to see how soon everyone can get back in his own room after one o'clock. I'm also waiting to see the floats this week-end.

Artist Series is coming up. The best in entertainment from Faust to Bach. Be sure to get your ticket.

We seem to have a hi-fi fad going now. Everyone is either buying one or thinking of buying one. I haven't heard Elvis played on one yet but expect to any day.

Have you ever noticed the picture in the library over by the student center? The Grand Dame seems to be wearing ermine around her shoulders. It couldn't be anyone who went here.

All we've heard for the past week is baseball, even from the dining hall. Dr. Orr even wanted to dismiss a class to listen to a game. Once again the Yanks have come up with the pennant.

See ya next issue.

Scots to Battle Wasps In Homecoming Game

TED WILSON
Co-Captain

BUDDY WHITE
Captain

By Pete Nix

Miss Ann Kelton from Port Tampa, Florida will view the goings on from the Queen's throne tonight as the Maryville College Scotties do battle with the Wasps of Emory and Henry in the climax of the day's homecoming activities.

Burning in the Scotties' memories is the 44-0 bashing administered to them by the Wasps last year. And althought old grads and parades and alumni dinners are of prime importance, the first order of the night is sweet revenge.

Emory and Henry comes to Maryville with two victories over future Scot opponents. So this game should give a good indication as to what the remainder of the season may bring.

The Wasps will field a strong, experienced squad with plenty of speed. The Highlander defense will have to "bow its back" if it is to stop the Wasps' strong ground game. The Scotties have gained badly needed experience and the team is still very good so let's not dampen our own spirit and come out and cheer our Highlanders to victory.

Intramurals....

By Joe Quinn

The high flying Rebels are the talk of the Intramural circuit this week. The Rebs took their third straight last week by downing the Warriors 7-0. Fred Garren scored both the TD and the point after touchdown for the town boys.

A spirited Kappa Phi team watched its first victory of the season last wek by defeating the Alpha Sig Warriors 14-0.

Harold O'Bannon tossed TD passes to Ted McDaniels and Joe Quinn early in the game to sew up the victory. Kappa Phi scored 2 points on the last play of the game on a safety.

This past week, the Pre-Mins thumped the Warriors 19-0. Jack Woodhall, Dave Krotchko and Bob Smith all figured in the scoring.

Jack Woodhall added the one extra point.

In the most important game of the week, the Y team defeated previously unbeaten Alpha Sig Hammers 12-7.

A blocked punt by Don Hill netted a quick score for the Hammers, but they fought back and scored on a pass to Tom Morriss. Chuck Frisel rushed in and blocked a punt and Bob Finertie fell on it for the game winning score.

The Hammers are still on top followed by the Y and Pre-Mins, A half game separates the 3.

The Rebels, Kappa Phi, and the Alpha Sig Warriors follow in that order.

Bucs Hand Scots A 29-4 Defeat

by Pete Nix

The Maryville College Scotties suffered their third straight defeat of the 1956 football campaign at the hands of the East Tennessee State Buccaneers. The Bucs, big and confident, watched the lighter and less experienced Highlanders muff many scoring chances while they took advantage of every break to grind out the victory.

Late in the opening quarter, the Staters grabbed a Maryville fumble at midfield and, led by Jim Krause, marched to four first downs and the first tally of the evening. Don Whistler's conversion attempt was good and State led 7-0.

Early in the second period the Scotties drove from theor own 40 to the State 5 but could not find the punch to get them into the end zone. A 94 yard drive, aided by some fine runs from Whistler and Lobertini, produced the Bucs second touchdown. Whistler conevrted to make the half-time score State 14, Maryville 0.

Second Half

On the opening kickoff of the second half, Scottie tailback Johnny Phipps took the ball on his own 5 and scampered 95 yards through the entire East Tennessee team for Maryville's first tally. White added the extra point. After an exchange of kicks another sustained drive by the Bucs netted 7 points. Tippet sneaked over from the one and Whistler booted his third one of the night.

After a great defensive stand on their own 8 yard line, the Scotties, attempting to kick out, saw the snap from center sail over the punter's head and out of the end zone giving the Buccaneers a safety and two points.

Maryville's final TD came after Ed Smith recovered a fumble on the State 6. Phipps went over and White again converted. In the waning minutes of play State's Lobertini went into the end zone to climax a 61 yard drive and wrap up the scoring for the evening. Whistler's attempt was low and the Highlanders left the field under the burden of a 29-14 defeat.

Howies Stop Chillies, 3-2

The soccer tournament of the Girl's Athletic Association got under way Tuesday, Oct. 9, at 4 o'clock. The Chillies, whose captain is Lottie Jerkens, met the Howies, whose captain is Lila Crane, in the first of a series of four tournament games.

All in all it was a very exciting game with the Howies beating the Chillies by a score of 3-2. In the first stages of the game it seemed as though the Chillies would be victorious, for they made the first two points. However, the Howies came from behind to score the next three points and win the game.

The members of the women's "M" club are teaching the sports to the members of W.A.A. For the soccer tournament Joan Jefferson coached the Chillies and Helen Franklin, President of W.A.A., coached the Howies. These two teams seem to be more evenly matched this year than in previous years, when one team always won.

SPORTS SPOTLIGHT

By Joe Quinn

Baseball

Naturally, the only interest on this scene is the World Series. Brooklyn got off to a brilliant start by winning the first two games at Ebberts field. But the Yankees came right back to take 3 at Yankee stadium.

Sal Maglie was the whole story in the first game as he fanned 10 Yankees. Of course the Dodger powers brought home the runs with credit going to Gil Hodges and Duke Snider.

Mantle provided the lone spark in the Yanks 6-3 set back by clouting a Homerun.

In the second game, everything happened to the Yankees. First of all, they routed Big Don Newcombe with 6 runs in the first 2 innings. However, the Brooks truck for 6 runs in the bottom of the second. All but one of those runs was unearned.

During the course of the game, the Yankees established the following records. They used 7 pitchers, walked 11 men and a combined total of 11 runs in the second inning established another first.

The Dodgers finally won the slam bang affair 13-8 with some fine clutch pitching provided by Don Bessent.

Whitey Ford and Enos Slaughter provided the impact for a 5-3 verdict. Ford's control kept the Bums at Bay throughout the entire game.

On Sunday, Tom Sturdivant six hit the Dodgers and thus evened up the series at 2 games apiece.

Mantle and Bauer clouted home runs as the Yanks registered a 6-2 triumph. Carl Erskine, the first of 3 Dodger pitchers was charged with the defeat.

The 5th game, played at Yankee stadium, Don Larsen pitched the first perfect game ever pitched in the World Series—not one Dodger reached first base.

Sal Maglie pitched a five game too, but a homerun by Mantle sewed up the 2-0 shutout fo rthe Yanks.

Football

Another hectic Saturday afternoon was to be had on campus gridirons around the country.

One of the Big Games of the day was played at Durham, N.C. where those sensational Vols romped over Duke's Blue Devils 33-20. This Tennessee Ball Club will be hard to stop this year. Heads up S.E.C.!

A big one in the mid-west was played before 101,000 fans at Ann Arbor where the Spartans of Michigan State edged the Wolverines of Michigan 9-0. Michigan had the upper hand but an intercepted pass provided the break the Spartans needed to score.

For you Pennsylvanians, there is good news. Penn after losing 19 straight finaly collected a win. Dartmouth was the victim in the first Ivy league game by a 14-7 score. Congrats Quakers!

In other games of interest, Oklahoma smashed Kansas State 66-0. Staying in the southwest, S.M.U. drubbed Misouri 33-26. T.C.U. routed Arkansas 41-6 and West Virginia edged Texas 7-6.

In the East Army took Penn State 14-7 and Navy blanked Cornell 14-0.

California registered an upset by downing Pitt 14-0 and Southern Cal tripped Wisconsin 13-6.

Maryland was dealt its first shut-out defeat in seventy games, last Saturday by Baylor 14-0.

Ohio State won a big game when they ripped the Indians of Stanford 32-20 at Palo Alto.

Notre Dame, led by Paul Hornung got by the Hoosiers of Indiana 20-6.

Kentucky used Florida fumbles to down the Gators 18-7.

To round off the story for the day, Jim Tatum is till looking for that first victory at his Alma Mater North Carolina. His charges lost to the South Carolina Gamecocks by a 14-0 count. He's lost 3 games now at Chapel Hill this year.

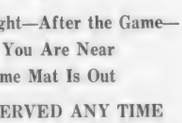
Thus winds up the third big week on the football scene but hang on ,we've got plenty of action coming up in the weeks ahead. Good luck with your favorites.

AS WE SEE IT. . .

By Bud White and Ted Wilson

Although our football team may have been a bit disappointing thus far in the season, we expect to hit the victory road tonight. Our main weaknesses have been inexperience and lack of a powerful punch in the first half. This inability to get going in the earlier stages of the ball game has been the deciding factor in the three games to date. The addition of a few T-formation plays to supplement our single wing attack has aided our offense. Defensive weakness has been another factor in our three defeats. The team spirit has been running high all year and even after three loses the boys feel they can make a winning season of it yet.

Here we would like to thank the student body for the fine support they have given us. The school spirit is better than either of us can remember it ever being at Maryville. The pep rallies meant a lot to the squad and we hope you will keep up the good work.



Having gained needed experience and by playing a full ball game we hope to justify the great support which you have given us starting tonight. Thanks again.

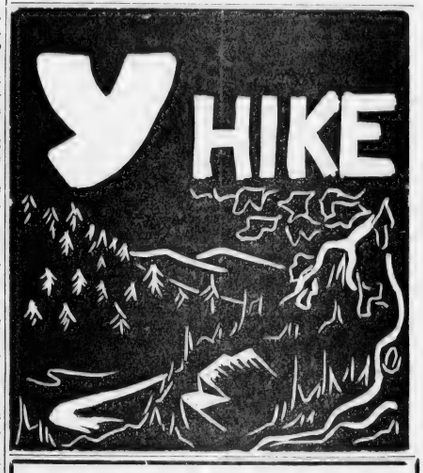
NATO Scholarship Is Announced



For the second year the North Atlantic Treaty Organization will sponsor a scholarship program to further the study of the common traditions, historical experience and present needs of the North Atlantic community.

NATO will sponsor a series of exchanges among the NATO countries in two categories: scholarships and research fellowships.

At the request of the Department of State, the Institute of International Education (1 East 67th Street, New York City) will assist in the screening and recommendation of American students for the scholarship program. The Conference Board of Associated Research Councils (2101 Constitution Avenue, Washington 25, D.C.) will screen applicants for the research fellowships. All American candidates will be chosen by the Board of oFreign Scholarships, ten leading educators and educational administrators appointed by the President of the United States.

Competition in the United States opened August 1 and closes November 1, 1956. Candidates who have applied for United States Government foreign study grants under the Fulbright Act may also enter the NATO competition.

Applicants for the NATO scholarships must be United States citizens in good health. Preference will be given to candidates with some graduate training. Language proficiency will be essential for placement in non-English speaking countries. Scholars will be selected on the basis of their scholastic record, the institutions at which they propose to pursue their studies, and their subject of study. Grants will be 500,000 French francs for one academic year of study plus travel expenses.

Field. Two years ago the two teams fought to a 14-14 tie for Homecoming here. Before the game Miss Ann Kelton, senior sociology major from Port Tampa City, Florida, will be crowned Homecoming queen by Alumni president Edwin Shelley. Her escort Mr. Dave Krotchko, and attendants, Miss Clara Gowans, and Miss Elinor Bass, will also be present for the coronation. The Highlander band will give a salute to the queen.

The band will also perform at halftime, using four formations; a clock to show passing of time, "1956" for the graduating class of that year, and "M" for old students and alumni, and a scottie for all students. The majorettes will dance the Highland Fling to band accompaniment.

Homecoming Dance

The Women's M Club is sponsoring the dance in the Alumni Gymn tonight after the game. The dance is to be informal and will last until 11:45. Decorations from the parade floats will be featured Women's M Club president, Helen Franklin is in charge of arrangements.

the air; but many hams are equipped for both types of broadcasting, and practically all of them want to have some portable equipment to take with them when they travel or for us in a possible emergency."

I quickly became engrossed in the many interesting aspects of Cap's hobby. I learned that all hams are required to secure a license from the Federal Communications Commission before they are permitted to broadcast. There are several grades of license, each requiring an examination in radio and International Morse Code. Cap received his license about four years ago, and he is permitted to broadcast on all frequencies set aside for amateur use.

In America hams are connected through the American Radio Relay League, which sponsors contests for hams interested in competing in such things as long distance transmitting and receiving or in tests to determine who can make the most contacts over a given period of time. Many hams take an enthusiastic part in such contests, and the competition is always keen and lively.

"In the course of my broadcasting I've made contacts with all 48 states and with six foreign countries, including Germany and Italy," Cap replied when I asked him about his own broadcasting experience. "It was a great thrill when I finally made contact with the last of the 48 states after trying for about six months; however, I think I prefer to talk with the guy just over the hill within a range of a few hundred miles. You get to know a great many people quite well that way, and such things as racial or religious prejudice just aren't found on the radio waves."

"Hams are found all over the world," Cap continued, "All kinds of people — rich and poor, young and old. Some have spent large amounts of money on their sets, others only a few dollars, but all have been bitten by the radio bug, and this brings them closer together; and when they talk to each other via radio, they just don't think such trivial things as how much money the other guy has or what color pigment is in his skin or what religious faith he holds."

As Cap and I continued to talk together, I learned more and more about radio as a hobby. We discussed, of course, the part played by hams in such times of emergency as during floods, tornadoes, and the like. There are countless stories of courage which have come out of such instances of national or local distress. Hams have always stood by to assist in communication at these times when other methods of communication may be lost.

Throughout our conversation I noticed that hams are like other people who have become engrossed in a hobby. They develop a great love for it and are eager to tell about it to people who don't know their hobby. Maybe this is the great value of a hobby — it provides something different from the workaday routine, something fresh and exciting to talk about; and the hams certainly have one of the most interesting of hobbies. They are quite proud of it, and it seems that they have sufficient justification for their pride.

Dan Perez Enjoys Friendships Of MC

by Bob Evans

By now, many of you have undoubtedly come to know Dan Perez, a happy-go-lucky sophomore whose ready smile has already won him many friends.

Dan's home is in Mexico City, which is called "the city of perennial spring" by the natives. The city is cool and pleasant year round, with the thermometer rarely reaching the 80 degree mark, even in the middle of the summer.

Dan's father is a Presbyterian minister, and his mother is in the local government. October 12, she held a dinner for the President of Mexico at her home, to celebrate the opening of a new super highway in southwestern Mexico.

When I asked Dan if he had any brothers or sisters, he replied, with a big grin, "I have eight brothers and a sister for each one." Attempting to clarify this statement, I said, "then you have eight brothers and eight sisters?" He laughed to himself and said, "No, I have one sister."

Before coming to Maryville, Dan attended Warren Wilson Junior College in Asheville, North Carolina. He heard of Warren Wilson through Mr. and Mrs. Tremain, who are missionaries in Mexico City. The Tremains are close friends of the Perez family and told Dan of Warren Wilson when they heard of his desire to study in the United States.

When Dan arrived in Asheville, he couldn't speak a word of English. Consequently, he wandered around town for twelve hours until he found the school. He couldn't ask directions because he couldn't speak English. Fortunately for Dan, there was a Cuban at the school who could temporarily act as his interpretor. He learned rapidly, and soon could speak English.

While he was at Warren Wilson, an advisor told him of Maryville, speaking of it as "an island of friendship." This appealed to Dan, because he likes to meet people and win their friendship. Therefore, he enrolled at Maryville, at the start of this year.

I asked Dan what he felt was the most striking difference between his homeland and the States. He immediately replied, "The food . . . " he paused for a moment and then concluded, "and the language." He said that his change of diet was not so abrupt as it might have been, as his mother and Mrs. Tremain exchanged recipes. As a result, he got a small taste of American cooking before entering the country.

If you should happen on someone with a really big smile, who says "you-all" with a Mexican accent, that's Dan!

Testing engineers have learned that the total number of typing operations performed by the average typist each year is 14,745,000.

Trip To Paris Is Prize of Contest To Find Cartoonist Of The Year

For the first time in the history of humor, a search is being undertaken to find a young humorist from among the nation's colleges and universities, and bestow upon this young student the recognition he so rightly deserves as the "Campus Cartoonist of the Year."

Three of the world's foremost humorists, Groucho Marx, Steve Allen and Al Capp have joined forces with Bill Kennedy, prexy of Box Cards, the leading designer of contemporary studio cards to initiate a search which will start on October 15, 1956, and continue through December 1st, 1956, and end with the final selection from the ideas submitted to the judges of the student who is to be accoladed this year with the annual recognition of "Campus Cartoonist of the Year."

The contest will be channeled through the local college bookstore. Each college bookstore will have complete details including general information, rules and entry blanks for the contest. The stores will also have samples of Box Cards to enable the student who wishes to participate to see clearly the style of humor which will be judged in the contest.

There are absolutely no gimmicks involved. The student is under no obligation to purchase anything, including the Box Cards on display at the bookstore. The student need not be a Picasso nor a Rembrandt to enter. The basic idea is smart, contemporary humor which is sketched out simply on paper, just enough to give the judges a visible idea of the humor involved.

The winning student will receive a FREE all-expense paid seven-day holiday in Paris, France, via T.W.A. Trans-World Airlines Super-G Constellation.

In addition, the winner will receive a royalty contract with Box Cards which will enable the winner to immediately benefit from an exciting and lucrative career in the field of studio card design.

The winner will also receive international recognition and publicity in newspapers, television, radio and magazines as a result of his selection by three peers of humor. Mesrs. Marx, Allen and Capp.

The contest definitely closes on midnight of December 1st, 1956. This is being done in order for the winning student to be able to spend his Christmas vacation in Paris, France, should he desire to do so.

Because of the fine cooperation the contest and its sponsor Box Cards has been receiving from the college newspapers and magazines, the winner will be announced first in these publications. The announcement of the winner will be a national exclusive to the college publications which will predate its general release to all the other media.

IRC To Meet On Monday Dr. Elwood Will Speak

The International Relations Club meets again next Monday. Dr. Elwood, minister of the Highland Presbyterian Church, will present a program which is concerned with Egypt as a nationalist country. Slides will be shown along with the lecture.

Whether one belongs as a member to the club or not, does not make any difference as to your own attendance. All students, visitors, faculty members or town students are invited to attend the meetings.

There are varied programs dealing with current events and world news. Guest speakers, members of the club and faculty members provide very often some really interesting talks and programs. In the future some attention is to be given to the recent Suez crisis. See you at 6:45 in the Y-Rooms, Monday night, October 15.

Parish Work . . .

East Mountain View carries on a Sunday morning program at which Jim Marsh teaches the ycung people's class, Clem Birchlebach leads the morning worship and Penny Neff is pianist and substitute teacher.

Mr. VanPelt is also in charge of a program at New Castle Mission, but there are no student assistants there at this time.

This part of The Faith Cooperative Parish program is only approximately one-third of the entire program. As was said in the preceeding Echo this is a Board of National Missions Program and it is open to all who wish to contribute their time and talent to such a worthwhile work.

This article is to be followed by one on the work of Dr. Albert H. Cropp, who also has five churches in his charge.

"Campus Cartoonist of the Year" contest judge Groucho Marx, left, and Box Cards president Bill Kennedy look over company's humorous greeting cards while discussing nation-wide college search for the number 1 campus cartoonist. Winner's first prize is a 7-day all expense holiday in Paris via TWA. Other judges are Steve Allen and Al Capp. Contest starts Oct. 15 and ends Dec. 1.

STUDENT COUNCIL . .

Last Wednesday at the meeting of Council the new freshman officers were finally present and a definite gap was filled in our student government. President Henderson opened the meeting with a few words of welcome to the new members who are: President Mike Mattthews and the representatives Dave Ellis, Ann Newcomer, Sarkees Kaprielian, and Nancy West. The other officers of the class are Veep John Kelly and Secretary-Treasurer Ann Barns.

There were no town night violations and naturally no penalties.

A letter was read from Mr. Henning expressing his thanks for the recognition by Council of his endeavors on behalf of the College.

The question of the extension of the Sunday dating privilege to the underclass girls was reported on by B. Wilkie. She stated that the upperclass girls had voiced approval of this program and that the matter was under consideration of Senate at the present time.

Also the question of what action had been taken on the milk machines was brought up. Pres. Henderson stated that Dean McClelland had said that the program had been approved and that machine would soon be installed in the men's dorm as an experiment.

The Elections Committee reported that the elections of the past week were a success with voting percentages as follows: The overall voting percentage of the whole student body voting was 78%. The voting picture for the classes: freshman 64%, sophomores 72%, juniors 83%, and the seniors 91%.

Social Committee was congratulated for the informal dance last weekend and it was stated that the dance was felt to be a big success.

It was reported that the classes will have meetings Thursday, Oct. 18, and the B schedule will most likely be in order.

Republican Or Democrat?

I'll Go G.O.P.

The following case for a Republican victory in the coming national election is too short to be complete, but it does touch upon some of the more important issues. It seems to this political observer that the real case for Republican victory rests on the record of the present Eisenhower Administration and the promise that record holds for the next four years. Despite some disappointments, the Republican Administration has been characterized by constructive accomplishments both at home and abroad.

The issue that is uppermost in most people's minds is that concerned with world peace. While there is no large-scale shooting war at the present time, no informed person would pretend that all is well in the world at large. However, in spite of Democratic assertions to the contrary, there is evidence that the United States, under Eisenhower's leadership, has seized the initiative in the Cold War and has made positive contributions to peace throughout the world. While the Democratic candidates have been profuse in their criticism of the Administration's handling of foreign affairs, they have been significantly silent or vague as to the specific steps they would have taken or would now take in easing world tensions and solving world problems (with the exception of Stevenson's proposal to end United States H-bomb tests).

The New York Times, in a recent editorial in which it formally announced its support for President Eisenhower's re-election, summarized some of the President's most notable accomplishments in the field of foreign affairs as follows:

"In the field of foreign policy the President has steered a course in close cooperation with our allies overseas and continued and expanded the policy of mutual aid and mutual guarantees wisely initiated by previous Democratic Administrations. His Atoms-for-Peace plan is in process of becoming the first practical step in coping with a dread menace. His Open-Sky inspection plan has given the democracies the initiative over the Soviets in the controversy over arms limitation. His performance at the Geneva conference was the single most effective action taken to convince the neutralists, and even the Communists themselves, of the good faith of this country's peaceful purposes."

One of the most important accomplishments of the Republican Administration on the home front has been that of curbing

Why I Vote Democratic

Before answering the question, may I say that I know all political disputes are not all black or all white. There are various shades of gray in all arguments. But this year, the basic issues seem uncommonly clear.

1. I vote Democratic because I was born into a Democratic home and like most people, I was influenced to follow along.

2. I believe that people are more important than property rights. This is an old dispute. In Jackson's time, it was called personality vs. property. In Lincoln's time it was slave vs. free. In Theodore Roosevelt's time it was people vs. the "malefactors of great wealth." In Franklin D. Roosevelt's time it was the common man vs. vested interests. Today it is common people vs. big business.

3. I believe in welfare before wealth. Wealth usually accumulates in the hands of a few while welfare is the well-being of all the people and should never be lost from sight.

4. I believe in international cooperation to the end that wars may some day cease .We should have cooperated with the League of Nations and now we should be whole-souled behind the United Nations and not relying on a "military posture" called "peace."

5. I believe in international aid for the good that can be done and not for the military alliances that can be bought.

6. I believe in the preservation of national resources. This was begun by Theodore Roosevelt and has not been a party question until the present administration. Resources mean the land, minerals, timber, water power sites and river basins—none of which should be given away.

7. I believe in freer trade and freer economic intercourse between nations.

8. I believe in progress, experimentation, discussion and change when change is timely, instead of a "stand-pattism", "I-have-spoken-my-last-word" attitude.

9. I believe in the freedom and dignity of the individual as opposed to conformity or submission to a fatherly image.

There are others, but why try to convince everyone.

Rev. Douglas J. Elwood

The speaker at the vesper service tomorrow evening in the Chapel will be the Rev. Dr. Douglas J. Elwood, pastor of the Highland Presbyterian Church, Maryville.

The vesper choir will sing two anthems directed by Mr. Harry H. Harter. They will be "Ave Verum" by Mozart and "He Guides Me in His Way" by Harter.

Prothman's Art Reproductions Are In Latest Art Exhibit

By Barbara Wilkie

The latest exhibit in the Fine Arts Center Art Gallery consists of over 300 fine art reproductions of Konrad Prothman of New York and is outstanding for its diversity. All periods are represented from early Etruscan paintings to the latest Dutch abstraction by Karel Appel.

In the opening gallery talk last week Mrs. Richard Beard, instructor in art, explained to a good-sized crowd that a hodge-podge of many famous paintings of the world are arranged in the exhibit with no particular regard to period or subject, except for one religious grouping. She stated that such juxtaposition is common nowadays. It gives the viewer a chance to browse among paintings and compare different styles. Before the advent of modern methods of painting reproduction only wide travel would afford such a display. And only the rich were able to spend the time and money necessary to view a wide collection of paintings. Until the 19th century museums were a rarity. Church and private collections offered only limited opportunities for art appreciation.

Many paintings are still in private collections, but everyone can now see them readily through reproductions .No longer is it necessary to journey from Amsterdam to Madrid to compare paintings by Rembrandt and El Greco, as Mrs. Beard pointed out.

Present-day reproductions capture with amazing fidelity much of the quality of original paintings. For instance Abraham Rattner's "Still Life with Oysters," originally a painting, was reproduced by the silk-screen process to capture the colors of the original.

However, Mrs. Beard stated that reproductions can never take the place of originals, especially in color and texture. Small prints cannot reproduce the exact effect, for example, of large wall paintings. However, when a detail of the painting is chosen as the subject for a print, there is more chance for fidelity because of the closeness in scale to the original.

Originals which were small to begin with are more easily reproduced. Water colors lend themselves especially well to repro-

Is This The Last ECHO?

There has been a great deal spoken this year about increased school spirit. Perhaps in the realm of yelling at football games, yes. But so far as interest, both faculty and student, in the school paper, there has been little or none recognizable.

An important part of college life is the student newspaper. Maryville is in danger of having this taken away. This is not the fault of the editorial staff, which for the most part is adequate, and faithful, but rather the fault of apathy. This apathy is widespread among students as well as faculty, and so the school paper has suffered from lack of interest and lack of recognition. This situation has now finally become critical. We are at the point where the Echo has no business manager, with no one interested even in applying.

The new staff this year is good, and interested in building a better and stronger paper, but this task is impossible without public interest and support. In the recent issue of the Alumni Bulletin, a great many news stories appeared which should have been in the Echo, and reporters were sent to cover the stories, but no information was given to these reporters. With such a lack of cooperation, no newspaper can exist.

Signs have, for several days, appeared in the dorms asking for volunteers for the position of business manager, which is a paying position. At the time of this writing, there were no applications yet in the hands of Dr. Griffitts. This can only mean one thing. The end of a school paper, and the privileges which it represents, such as expression of student ideas. If we had no newspaper, we would want one. Now we have one which no one seems to want.

The Echo is scheduled to come out next week—Will it?

Milk Machine Installed On Trial In Carnegie

By Ted McDaniels

At the last meeting of the Council the subject of the student forums was brought up and discussed. The idea of this forum is to let the council know the views of the students on current campus problems.

This forum would also give the students a better chance to see just who their Council is and how it works, and would give the the Council a chance to explain its processes and progress to the students. President Henderson was commissioned to go ahead and set a date and to hold a trial meeting of the forum to see what the response would be.

A committee was set up to investigate possibilities for a Student Council project. The members of this committee are: Bob Goodlin, Allan Russell, and Mary Murphy.

Milk Machine

It was reported that the milk machine has been set up in Carnegie. It was stated that this machine was a trial and the question of what are they trying to prove was brought up. Actually the com-

YW Hikers Spend Day At Cades Cove

by Corita Erwin

The time is one twenty — the scene is the driveway of Pearsons — the cast is twenty five girls and five chaperones busily preparing to embark on the annual Y hike. Here is a step by step account of the many interesting things that were seen and done the afternoon of October 20th.

After riding to the picnic grounds in four of the chaperones' cars, unloading the food, and riding further to the bottom of the mountain, we started the trek to Abram's falls. It proved to be a rugged hike in some places but, despite the narrow trail and the steep hills, 6 of the girls made the 3 miles in 40 minutes. As the rest of us reached the falls, we beheld the beauty of it. Cascading over many rocks, the falls formed a small pool which provided many the opportunity for rock hopping.

During the hike many of the individualists in the group spent their time finding short cuts and collecting the many different col-

Shirley Peterson and Jane Robinson are the nominees for the position of Senior class sponsor. From the Junior class, the nominees are Joan Neckerman and Lynn Mitchell. Ruth Wagner and Georgene Rohlander are the nominees from the Sophomore class. Charlotte Blanchard and Joyce Trautwein were nominated from the Freshman class.

Elections will be held Tuesday.

Spanish Club Learns The Manbo and Cha-Cha

The mambo and the cha-cha-cha reigned supreme at the Spanish Club meeting last week, when several guest students from Knoxville College came with Senor Hamlett to instruct the club in the dances. The dancing was held October the eighteenth in the Y-rooms and plans were made for a picnic to be held at the next meeting.

The coming Spanish Club meeting will feature a cook-out and mambo practice at the home of Senor Schwam. If you'd like to polish your mambo step or learn how to be socially popular, Spanish style, be sure to attend.

DR. H. B. JONES WILL LECTURE ON PROBLEMS OF RADIATION

The first lecture of this year's Lecture Series will be given Friday, November 2, at the Chapel hour. The speaker is Dr. Hardin Blair Jones of the Division of Medical Physics, Donner Laboratory, the University of California, Berkeley, California. Dr. Jones is a native Californian and had his education there, his doctorate being in the field of Physiology at the University of California.

He served for a time on the faculty at that university, but in more recent years has been engaged in research at the Radiation Laboratory.

He has had a number of publications in the fields of radio-biology, blood perfusion, biological effects of radiation, and physiological change due to age.

He is in the East at this time attending a meeting of scientists at Gatlinburg. We are especially fortunate to have secured one so well qualified to speak on the effects of radio-active fall-out and its effects on living organisms. His subject here will be, Radiation Exposure and other Factors Affecting Human Health and Life Span.

The Maryville College Lecture Series

The Maryville College Lecture Series was instituted last year. It is supported by a proportionate amount of the Activities Fee so that a fund is available to pay expenses and provide honoraria for visiting speakers.

Because of a late start due to the necessary processes of setting up the Committee and organizing its functions, only two lecturers were brought in last year. Dr. Edward Taborsky of the University of Texas, at the time of his appearance here a visiting professor at the University of Tennessee, who spoke of conditions inside the Communist world, and Dr. James Arthur Campbell of Oberlin College, who spoke at Chapel and in two smaller meetings on the life implications of modern scientific developments. These lectures proved most interesting and stimulating.

This year, although again off to a somewhat delayed start, the Committee hopes to bring four or five lecturers to the campus. The effort will be to have the series touch as many as possible of the great fields of thought and discussion of the present time. At the present, it will be the policy of the Committee to deal with fields other than Religion and the performance aspects in the Fine Arts since these two areas are now so richly provided for us by the agencies of the Church and by our Artist Series.

The major part of this year's program is still in the planning stage. A large number of letters of inquiry and invitation are now out to persons of note whose coming would be of great value and interest. Announcements of the developing program will be forthcoming from time to time.

The Committee on the Lecture Series is a joint Student-Faculty group appointed by the Student Council and by the President of the College. In general its personnel is intended to represent the Divisions of Instruction of the curriculum. This year's Committee is students: Anne Castrodale, Robert Goodlin, Bruce Ingles, Andrew Loven, Mary Murphy; faculty: Dr. J. D. Buchanan, Miss Katherine Crews, Dr. E. R. Hunter, Chairman, Miss Gertrude Meiselwitz, Dr. V. M. Queener.

Francisco Garcia Contrasts His Cuba With Maryville

By Ruth Wilson

"My first scientific experiment was at the age of two, so my mother tells me. I tore my drum apart." This was one of the comments from a student here named Francisco Oscar Garcia Treto. (Hereafter referred to as Frank.)

Frank is nineteen years old, and his home is Havana, Cuba. His father is the Superintendent of Presbyterian Work in Cuba, and a representaitve of the Board of National Missions in Cuba. Frank has a younger sister who is eighteen, and who has just completed a secretarial course and is working for their father.

As a transfer, Frank, who attended Central University in Santa Clara, Cuba, is not sure just what class he belongs to, but hopes that he can graduate with the sophomore class.

Some of the contrasts that he saw between the Cuban educational system and that of the U.S. were:

In Cuba, the high schools are for the most part private, and the course is five years long. (Frank went to the Presbyterian high school, and says that it is considered the best.) The first four years there are no electives, but in the fifth year one can take courses in one's major field, either all science courses, or all liberal arts courses.

This plan is continued in the university, too. For a major field such as Frank's, which is engineering, one would attend for five years in the school of engineering. There would be more courses to take, but there would be no liberal arts courses at all.

Here at Maryville, Frank is majoring in chemistry. He believes the courses are about the same as that of Cuba, though they may be a little harder in that one here is expected to do more on his own.

"When I came to the States for the first time, I thought I knew English, but for the first two months I didn't know what was going on. Then I learned American, and now I'm all right." Frank said when asked about languages.

Naturally the subject of food came up, and Frank's favorite Cuban food is 'arroz con pollo', or

Band Show To Be A Western Theme

This week's band show will, as usual, consist of two parts: pregame and half time. The pregame will feature the usual national anthem and several new drills. At the half time we will salute our rival team of the night, Howard College, with an H.C., after which the band will present a show with a western theme. A wagon wheel symbolizing the western march will first be formed and later a steer's head denoting the product for which the west is so famous.

Last Saturday night the band was present at Tennessee Wesleyan along with a number of the M.C. students and the cheerleaders. In spits of the mud and rain the band managed to put on a show that was good but wasn't the full show we had intended to give. Naturally the best part of the trip was the going and coming.

New Flag

Gail Harrison is to be credited with the idea of a school flag in the van-guard of the band. She designed and executed the whole job and for this unselfish work received the privilege of carrying the flag.

Mr. Frank Layman Is New Treasurer

Mr. Frank Layman, General Manager of Park Lumber Company, Inc., Maryville, Tennessee, has been appointed Treasurer of Maryville College and has indicated his acceptance effective on or before November 1, 1956.

Mr. Layman has been a resident of Maryville for the past six years, the first half of that period as Office Manager for Parkview, Inc., and during the last half as General Manager of Park Lumber Company, Inc.

Mr. Layman, who is now forty-six, was born at the campus of Tulane University in New Orleans where for twenty years his father was purchasing agent and his mother was dietitian. His parents had gone to New Orleans from Tennessee where his father attended Maryville College and his mother Carson Newman College. When Frank was seventeen, they returned to Jefferson County, Tennessee, and his mother became dietitian at Carson Newman College, where Frank enrolled, although he had previously made his plans to enter Maryville. He graduated at Carson Newman magna cum laude and entered the service of Blac and West Lumber Company in Jefferson City, with whom he remained until he came to Maryville. During World War II he served three and a half years in the Army.

Mr. and Mrs. Layman are members of New Providence Presbyterian Church where Mr. Layman is a Ruling Elder.

Dr. McClelland Recently Received A Citation Award

Dr. Frank D. McClelland, dean of students, recently received the Citation Award from the National Recreation Association Council in New York for his "outstanding contribution" to public recreation in Blount County. Five such awards were made to men in Tennessee, all of whom are private citizens not employed in recreation work.

Dr. McClelland conceived the idea of organizing and consolidating the Maryville, Alcoa, and Blount County recreation facilities into a single program. The Blount Consolidated Recreation Council is the only one in the United States which combines two cities and a county in this manner.

Chilhowee View, Forest Hill Schools Are Served By The Parish Program

In this third article on the Faith Cooperative Parish Series, special attention is to be given to the weekday program, carried on in two near-by public schools. This part of the parish work is also carried on under the direction of the Rev. Austin VanPelt, Sunday School Missionary and assistant director of the parish, aided by Dr. Ralph Case, Professor of Sociology on campus.

On Monday morning, at eight o'clock, the parish cars take ten students to the Forest Hill School, not far from Maryville to direct a one-hour Bible study class. These Monday morning parish teachers are Louella Garrettson, William Boyd, Alta Jacobson, James Barber, Stan Carpenter, Fred Tanner, Dale Rhoton, Mary Ann Worley, Opal Miller, and Sue Burton.

On Thursday mornings, ten other students carry on the same work at Chilhowee View School. They are Dorothy Hembree, Carlie Marlow, Carol West, Bob Stevens, Sue Settle, Corita Erwin, Ron Lind, George Kaiser, Betty Springstead, and Margaret Paterson.

The main idea of this one-hour is to give Bible instruction, on graded levels to many children who otherwise would have none at all. This instruction usually includes a short worship period, singing, and an organized teaching period. In order to accomplish this in one hour, the program

An Intellectual Labyrinth?

Does a spirit of intellectual anarchy exist on Maryville campus? Are students and faculty alike many times the victims of this? The inability of many students to strive toward a meaningful integration of factors in their college life would indicate that they are wandering in an intellectual labyrinth. Many see no relationship in one course to another except as a means of obtaining a place in the graduation procession. They continue to take notes faithfully in each class, memorize them as much to their ability as possible, and rattle them back to the professor at regular examination intervals. The trouble with this method of learning is that it happens the same way in each class, and there is no tie to correlate the ideas learned (or in this case, memorized) in other courses.

Many times students blame their plodding efforts to learn on the faculty, thinking, perhaps mistakenly, that the professor expects word-for-word transcriptions of his lectures in his examinations and nothing else. In isolated instances this may be true, in which case, the professor is rather to blame, but for the most part, creative, accurate thinking is welcomed.

A. L. Kershaw states in "The New Frontier for the Student YMCA and YWCA" that intellectual anarchy does exist on campuses where truth is imprisoned in isolated categories and is not related to other categories of learning experience—where, as he puts it, there is "still less connection between the whole intellectual life and the rest of experience where students play, have fun, relax, and express themsleves." As Kershaw says a student expressed it: "In college, I have been given many spokes but no hub."

Do Maryville students sometimes feel this way? One finds that in universities there is no danger of segmentation of truth into unrelated boxes than should be true of a small Christian college. In the Christian college there is by definition an opportunity to integrate otherwise isolated experiences in the light of Christian teaching. However, even though Maryville is a Christian college, there are many ways in which it lacks a unified attitude toward creative, integrated thinking on the part of students and faculty.

As Kershaw states, "A person of our time has a thousand road signs but few guides to give him any understanding of various destinations." This being true, there is often a tendency to pick which "road signs" we shall follow and which we shall not as an expression of the freedom we are entitled to in a democracy. This course of action, however, would simply lead to a more intense state of anarchy (if such is possible) if we do not know why or to what end we choose these things.

There is a tendency toward uncritical conformity, a plodding sort of existence in which we do not try to understand the meaning back of the "road signs." We may suspect that they are sometimes inaccurate or misleading, but we have no way of knowing unless we do some critical thinking which may result in a long overdue revaluation of accepted patterns of existence. As Kershaw states, "We cannot understand the dynamics at work in the students' value selection, their dating patterns, problems of vocation preparation, unless we grapple with the powerful thrust toward uncritical conformity that cultural and intellectual anarchy induce."

A More Mature Attitude . . .

We feel that the attitude of the students of Maryville College has experienced a one hundred percent gain over its former self.

This year there has been a more than noticable rise in student interest in its government and a more mature attitude expressed by the student in putting forth their desires and needs. Consequently the administration has been more cooperative with the students, for example, the milk machines and the buses to the Tennessee Wesleyan and the Carson-Newman games.

Perhaps the students are beginning to realize that they are a part in the formation of the policy of the college and understand that to get things done they too must cooperate. At any rate, the prospects for the year look good.

We also feel that another definite step of progress has been taken by the student body in its reform toward greater school spirit—particularly in athletics. It's great to hear the students yell during a game even if we are losing, and we are sure the team appreciates the interest that the student body has taken in them and is very thankful for the support.

We think that with this more mature attitude that you will have a greater share in the college experience.

Y'all deserve some praise.

Scots & Soda

By Paula Kroneberg

My name is Rodney. I'm a mouse. Perhaps some of you remember me from last year although I doubt if you would recognize me now. I have given up my purple and red checked suit, yellow shirt, green tie with black dots, and pink and orange socks in favor of more conservative clothing.

If you see me this year (which I doubt that you will for I try to stay hidden as much as possible) you will probably notice my black suit with white flecks, black shirt and socks and white tie. I'm really not in mourning; I've just become more—if you'll pardon this expression from a mouse—"catty". Goodness, I almost forgot. To replace my high silk hat (which was lost last year during the rush before chapel), I have purchased the very latest thing—an Elvis Presley hat. Please don't misunderstand—I'm not a Pel-opps-Elvis P. fan, I just thought the hat would add a lot to my outfit. It does.

Ususually I just stay around here and there on the campus to see what I can see without, in turn, being seen. Most of my days consist of the same hum-drum things—breakfast, chapel, classes, lunch, classes, study, dinner, study, etc. But some of my days—wow! Take last Saturday for instance. . . .

Yeees?

Last Saturday afternoon as I was racing from Carnegie to the Fine Arts Center I noticed three or four buses and lots of people standing in front of Anderson. Coming to the conclusion that this was some sort of expedition, and not wanting to miss anything of interest, I jumped up and just barely managed to get inside a huge black umbrella before its owner boarded one of the buses. Presently we started moving, and from my hiding place I heard all sorts of strange noises and yells. There was something about "highlanders crashing through a line and nobody liking the kids from Maryville because they were unside down Scotties." I was beginning to regret my hasty decision to tag along when suddenly the bus stopped moving and everyone got out. I was evicted from my hiding place quite without notice (but much to my relief for I had been unable to escape from the umbrella even after gnawing several small holes in one side) when it began to rain. For some reason the owner of the umbrella didn't seem to be too happy. I guess he didn't like rain.

From my vantage point on top of a left shoulder (which wasn't such a superior place after all the umbrellas were put up) I watched all sorts of strange antics. Forty or more people dressed in skirts and feathered caps came out and marched up and down on what looked like a cow pasture with lines on it. Then they went off, and some men in more outlandish clothing than mine came running in. All around me people kept yelling something about doing the first ten again. Apparently they never did do it though, because the people kept asking them to right up until the men justi completely stopped throwing and kicking the little ball around. I surely would like to know why everyone was mad at that poor little ball.

After the men quit running around everyone started getting back on the buses. Presuming that we had come for was over, I curled up in a raincoat pocket and slept soundly. The next thing I knew the tower bell was ringing and it was time to go to Breakfast. It was such a strange night—do you suppose I dreamed it all!

* * * *

This Wednesday morning as I was leaving chapel on the shoestring of one of my senior friends, I noticed that the number of familiar faces has decreased since last May. And the number of new faces is absolutely astounding! I guess I'm going to have to make a special effort to get acquainted with some of these new faces. The best thing to do, probably, would be to go to the Hallowe'en parties, if I can find some sort of costume to wear, that is. Wonder how I would look as super mouse dashing, dumpy, or just plain dopey. Maybe I'd better pick a less muscular character to portray. Our "frames" shall we say are not very similar. At any rate, I do believe I'll go. They should be a lot of fun and I'm positive that my E.P. hat will make a hit.

Music

Goodness—I'll have to hurry. I'm late for a committee meeting. We're trying to devise a way to pipe the music from the dining hall to all of the dorm rooms and classrooms. I'm sort of a honorary member of the committee because I know more about the interiors of the walls on campus than any other mouse—or man for that matter—around here. I should know more about it than anyone else. I've been in them. Did I ever tell you about the time I got caught in a hole in one of the intramural gym walls? I thought I was done for for sure then. I have had some narrow escapes, but that was the "narrowest" by far. Remind me to tell you about it sometime.

As I said, my days are usually hum-drum, and this week has been one hum after another. Maybe something will shake loose next week. (E.P., perhaps?)

TALK OF THE WEEK

By Sue Settle

Voices, Masks, and Shadows

by Carolyn Cones

Attention all whale lovers. "Moby Dick", Melville's great classic of the sea, will be featured at the Capitol today through Wednesday. Gregory Peck plays Captain Ahab; Orson Welles, the priest. This movie is practically a "must" for every Maryville College student — for obvious reasons. A hint to new students; talk to anyone who has survived second semester sophomore English.

The Park could not release their schedule at the time of this writing. However, sometime in the near future, "To Catch a Thief" with Grace Kelly and Cary Grant will be playing. If you missed it last year and still want to see it, now is your chance.

Here's hoping none of you got the "shakes" after watching "Man with the Golden Arm," which was shown earlier this week. It was a powerful movie dealing with a powerful theme — the problem of drug addiction. Frank Sinatra played the title role.

Be sure to read the article on the lecture series elsewhere in this paper. This series, initiated last semester, affords an excellent opportunity to hear topics of interest discussed by authorities in their field. The first lecture of the current series — on radiation exposure — ought to be of particular interest since the college is only miles from the center of atomic research, Oak Ridge.

Books?

If you have the combined habits of enjoying food and books, may we suggest "The Nutritive and Therapeutic Value of the Banana," printed by the United Fruit Company. Although it was published way back in 1936, what it says probably would still hold true, since the banana hasn't changed much in that length of time.

Other books of vital interest may be found in all sections of the library. Why not go exploring? The new book table is always a good place to start. For example, for people who like to look at pictures there is "Byzantine Painting" which is supposed to be "the most comprehensive collection of color reproductions ever collected together." List price is twenty dollars ,so you may not wish a personal copy.

For the mathematically minded there is "Famous Problems of Elementary Geometry" by Klein, also "The Book of Modern Puzzles" by Kaufman. Humorists might appreciate Patrick Campbell's "A Short Trot with a Cultured Mind" or Leacock's "Nonsense Novels."

A title that sounds intriguing is "Poet's Camera" by Holme. Major Keyhoe, the man who created a minor stir with "Flying Saucer from Outer Space," has another book in the library: "The Flying Saucer Conspiracy."

Bagpipes

Remember how at the football game last Saturday night the other side stood up while the bagpipes were being played. They thought it was our alma mater. Seriously though, the bagpipes have added a great deal to our band and consequently to our school. Back with us again on pipes is Sandy MacNeill, a sophomore. Sandy first started on the bagpipes last year. The other player is freshman Peggy Reid. Peggy, taught by her father about four years ago, has played in the Worcester Bagpipe Band. She has her own set of bagpipes.

A reminder: just three more Artist Series concerts left.

Kappa Phi To Hold Brief Meeting Tonight

The society hasn't held any meetings for the past two weeks, due to the football games. However a number of things have been going on.

A few of the fellows have been coaching the Bainonian girls in preparation for their game with Theta Epsilon which will be played on November 10th.

At this point, the members of Kappa Phi wish to express their thanks to all those responsible for our float in the Homecoming Parade. Bob Kaiser and all those that helped him did an outstanding job, and we certainly want them to know it. Thanks again fellows.

This Saturday, there will be a brief meeting at the house. It will not interfere with the ball game.

Before long, there will be an announcement made concerning the Stinkling Shoe game. Practices will be held and the men of Kappa Phi are urged to be out there and help us beat Sig for that trophy.

See you at the meeting on Saturday.

Annual Powder-Puff Game To Be Held On November 10th

by Libby Turner

The annual Powder-Puff football game between Theta and Bainonian is scheduled for Nov. 10th, this year. As most students know, this is a "touch" football game between the women, the teams being coached by several men on campus, either student or faculty.

The contest last year ended in a 0-0 tie, while the 1954 classic was won by Theta, 6-0. This year, the odds are probably in favor of Bainonian, as they have lost very few of their team members from last year. Returning for them will be Jane Byrne, Helen Franklin, Pat Smith, Marge Hunter, and others, to be supplemented by several freshmen.

Theta suffered a drastic depletion of forces by losing 3 of their 4 starting backfieldmen and a number of line players. Marianne Richman, Lila Crane, Libby Turner, Natalie Richards, Barbara Thomas and Joan Shultz are veterans for Theta, and there will be a number of freshmen to complete the lineup.

Coaches this year are Sam Buffat and Ted McDaniels for Bainonian; while Mr. Ramger is in charge of Theta, assisted by Don Hill and various other patriotic Sigs.

The cast will include Anna Allcroft, Mary Ellen Phipps, Elaine Bowman, Margaret Paterson, Sylvia Smith, Robb Gwaltney, Ralph Kummerow, and Bob Finertie. The announcer is to be John Kelly.

The Y-Radio Committee invites all interested students to try out for future programs. Further announcements will be made in chapel.

WAA Doing Stunts Aerial Darts Next

by Jeannie McElroy

If you happen to walk into the Intramural Gym some afternoon around 3:30 or 4:30 and see a human form twisted into an unusual shape or rolling around on the floor, you'll know it is just a W.A.A. girl participating in the association's new sports program. The girls, divided into the two teams ,the Chillies and the Howies, have just finished playing their soccer tournament, which the Howies won, and are now engaged in learning tumbling and stunts.

Sue Burton and Margie Hunter are the two instructors for the tumbling and stunts program. And why are the girls learning such things as head stands, the caterpillar walk and the backward roll? They are developing coordination, balance and poise (and possibly a few sore muscles). So if you desire any of these characteristics, girls, join these girl as they do their double rolls and stick twists.

Stunts and tumbling ends this Thursday and the next sport they will take up is aerial darts. This sport combines the coordination demanded for tennis, the court knowledge demanded for pingpong and the speed and endurance demanded for badminton. Kay Henry and Lottie Jerkins are teaching this sport. There will be an aerial dart tournament in which the winner of the Chillie team will play the winner of the Howie team, and the competition is very keen.

All girls are invited to come out at any time for any of the sports. Let's support W.A.A.!

New Members Elected To The French Club

At the last meeting of the French Club new members were elected. They are: Ottilie Feddern, Don Hill, Jean Ginaven, Mrs. Jacobson, Anna Keitt, Ann Newcomer. A new secretary was also chosen. Nancy McGeorge will fill the office.

SPORTS SPOTLIGHT

By Joe Quinn

Three more of the nation's big undefeated schools bit the dust last Saturday, as Ole Miss, Ohio State and T.C.U. went down to defeat.

Ole Miss, lost to Tulane 10-3 as the Green Wave scored its second upset in two games.

Ohio State went down to a surprisingly strong Penn State squad at Columbus, 7-6.

In the Southwest, the Texas Aggies stunned the Hornfrogs of Texas Christian by a 7-6 count. This only added to the already long list of surprises in this section of the country.

Looking at other big games, we find Syracuse toppling Army in a big Eastern battle 7-0.

Penn won its second game in Ivy League competition by downing Brown 14-7.

In the Mid-West, Michigan State trampled Notre Dame 47-14 at South Bend.

Wisconsin and Purdue fought to a 6-6 tie, and Minnesota edged Illinois 16-13.

In the South, Tennessee whipped Alabama 24-0. The Vols seem to be getting stronger as the campaign goes on.

Florida whipped Vanderbilt in a surprise, 21-7. Pitt took Duke 27-14, and Jim Tatum led his forces to a solid 34-6 victory over his former students at Maryland.

In the Southwest, S.M.U. edged Rice 14-13 and Oklahoma won its game with Kansas 34-12 for No. 34 in a row.

On the coast, Stanford defeated Oregon 21-7. Southern Cal ripped Washington 35-7 and U.C.L.A. thumped California 34-20.

THE TOP TEN TEAMS in the country are:

1. Oklahoma
2. Michigan State
3. Georgia Tech
4. Michigan
5. Tennessee
6. Southern California
7. Texas A. & M.
8. Ohio State
9. Mississippi
10. Baylor

A word about Maryville's victory over Tennessee Wesleyan 21-6. Not only did the team give a student performance, but the spirit was nothing short of tremendous. The rain dampened the field but not the spirit and that is exactly what we've needed around here for sometime.

Let's show the fellas we mean it, and be out there tonight and cheer them on to victory.

LET'S GO GET 'EM SCOTTIES. BEAT HOWARD COLLEGE.

SPORTSMANSHIP AGREEMENT

Carson-Newman and Maryville Colleges

October 1, 1956

We, the representatives from Maryville College and Carson-Newman College in conference agree to the following:

1. The student body of each college will make a sincere effort to maintain a friendly spirit of cooperation and fair play toward the other college.

2. When each college visits the other, cooperative arrangements will be made for welcoming, parade, bank program, seating, etc.

3. We agree to carry out frindly rivalry such as cheering, parades, etc. on either campus. In carrying this out we agree not to participate in any activity that would permanently or temporarily damage or disfigure the campus or commit any act which would be detrimental to the good feeling between the two colleges. We students agree to uphold this agreement, but in the event that an individual or student body violates this agreement, the student body will make full and adequate restitution.

4. This agreement shall be in effect for a period of two years and will be subject to renewal with the ratification of the student body.

School Spirit Was Not Dampened By The Rain At Tennessee Wesleyan

By Sue Tortellotte

Last Saturday seemed to be the culmination of a vital, new scene of "school spirit" which has arisen with this year's football season. The Homecoming Game with Emory and Henry was perhaps the first awakening of the student body to this new spirit. Our fine football team has been exhibiting it in many hours of hard practice every day. True, we didn't win the game score-wise, but our boys certainly played a winning game from beginning to finish. For the first time the crowd seemed to pick up this prevailing spirit; and if they didn't actually play the game in the physical sense, I think it might be said that many of us had our "hearts" in the game. This new spirit didn't just die out as so many new bursts of feeling often do. It kept right on through the ensuing week, and many of our enthusiastic rooters could scarcely wait for the trip to Tennessee Wesleyan. And then —RAIN—but not even this could dampen our spirits. Four buses of student body members, in addition to a bus for the team and one for the band journeyed to Athens last Saturday evening. Perhaps it's a certain pride for your alma mater that you have when you're away from home and you want to show it off to everyone. Whatever it is, the spirit carried over from last week. The team played a wonderful game just as they had before.

Rain

The rain never stopped during the entire game, and neither did the majority of the Maryville rooters from cheering our team on. Our cheerleaders, all new this year, put everything they had into each and every cheer and we hope they know how much we appreciate it. All too often they lose out on the glory. Our band is often in much the same situation. But Saturday night when they marched out on that field, you could just feel the pride well up inside of yourself. The bag pipers were so good that I actually think that the crowd in the opposite stands thought they were playing our alma mater, and therefore stood up.

The game ended and we cheered our boys off the field at Athens, while back in Maryville the tower bell chimed the good news.

Let's not let it all end with last week. Tonight on our own field, our team will play an equally fine game, I am sure. The cheerleaders will cheer and the band will play just as hard as they can. Will you, the spectators, keep up the rousing spirit and then even add some to what you have exhibited these past two weeks? You never can be too sophisticated to root wholeheartedly in something you believe in, and your belief can make all the difference in whether we win or lose. See you at the game.

AS I SEE IT. . .

By Charles Garrison
Chairman of Pep Committee

There is no doubt about it. From my observations so far this semester, Maryville College students have exhibited more genuine enthusiasm and interest in our football squad than in my past two years here. The upper classes seem to feel free to cheer the fellows of our team on to victory and our new freshmen chime in with some of that new vigor needed in order to have a high school spirit.

Even after a slow start this season which usually quells the morale of the students and team, our students and team really came through against Tennessee Wesleyan. Despite a drizzly rainy night, four bus loads of Maryville students plus a bus of band members plus a host of town students set out to give our team their best support. We all knew the members of the team were particularly interested in winning since the previous game was literally stolen from them in the last 5 seconds, and since the sentiments of the players toward our interest in victory was one of greatest concern and appreciation. I dare say they felt that they had let us down and were bound and determined to prove to us that they could win and renew any faith which we might have lost in them. As we well know their performance against the Wesleyan Bulldogs proved we have a team of which we can well be proud.

Fellow students, we have another game this Saturday on Honaker Field. Let's all be there to shout for our team. They are out to play their best for us, so let us be willing to play our best for them.

Scots Are Favored To Beat Howard

By Pete Nix

At 8 p.m. tonight on Honaker Field the Maryville College Highlanders will entertain the Howard College Bulldogs from Birmingham, Alabama. Fresh from a victory over Tennessee Wesleyan the Scotties enter the contest with Howard as a one or two touchdown favorite. The Bulldogs are light and fast and their team speed could prove troublesome to the Highlanders. Their lack of size however should enable the Scotties to move the ball on the ground. Last week Howard was overpowered 25-6 by the Carson Newman Eagles giving them a 1-4 season's record.

The Scots should take this one in stride as they point for powerful Jacksonville State who comes to Maryville one week from tonight.

Springstead, Williams Will Read At Workshop

Writer's Workshop will meet Monday, October 29, at 4:30 in either Dr. Hunter's or Miss Hepon's classroom. Betty Springstead will read, criticised by Bill Deerfield, and John Williams will read, criticised by Nancy Kotz.

Wasps Spoil Scot Homecoming 13-9

by Pete Nix

With only seven seconds remaining in the game halfback Sonny Holms ran to his left, jumped and hit end Earl Lambert in the end zone to give the Wasps of Emory and Henry a hard earned 13-9 victory over the Maryville College Scotties. Maryville, playing its best game of the season, had managed a three point lead via an extra point and safety and were on their way to putting the finishing touches to the Homecoming festivities when the Holms to Lambert pass spoiled their plans.

The scoreless first half was marked only by the stand out defensive play of Scottie end Ted Wilson and guard Mark Leonard. Both teams made deep penetrations but were stopped short of the six-point line.

Second Half

In the second half Emory quarterback Ray Chapman sneaked over from the one to climax a 58 yard drive. Mark Leonard broke through to block the extra point attempt.

Late in the third period Johnny Phipps brought the crowd to its feet with a stirring 80 yard touchdown dash. Phipps on a wide end sweep, almost trapped behind the line, cut back to his right, was hit at the line but spun off the tackle and then outraced two Wasp secondary defenders to the goal line. White's placement attempt split the uprights and the Scotties led 7-6.

The Highlanders added a safety when an Emory defender was tackled behind his own goal after intereepting a Scottie aerial intended for Jack French.

On paper the game was fairly even. Emory had 14 first downs to 13 for the Scots. The Wasps drove for 217 yards on the ground while the Highlanders had a total of 166. Maryville completed 4 passes out of 15 attempts for 52 yards. Emory and Henry hit on 4 of 19 for 42 yards.

Intramurals....

by Joe Quinn

Taking a look at the intramural picture over the past two weeks, we find the Rebels and Kappa Phi battling to a 7-7 deadlock. Dan Hollingshead scored for Kappa Phi.

The Pre-Mins whipped Kappa Phi 25-0 with Jack Woodall hauling in two TD passes. Bob Goodlin and Ed Krebs scored also for the victors.

Scotties Rang The Bell By Winning Their First

The Maryville College Highlanders won their first football game of the 1956 football campaign in Athens Saturday night, as they downed the Tennessee Wesleyan Bulldogs 21-6. A defense, which was rather weak from 20-20 but which tightened up considerably when their goal line was threatened, was the Scotties strong point.

Captain Buddy White, who was the Scots' most potent offensive weapon, scored in the first quarter on an 8-yard dash off tackle. He also added the extra point to give the Highlanders a seven point lead.

Second Half

Early in the second quarter, Bulldog halfback May, who gave the Scots trouble all night, went went over to climax a long Wesleyan drive. The placement attempt was wide and at half-time Maryville lead 7-6.

Captain White scored the Scotties second touchdown in the third period on a beautiful 30-yard jaunt. White scored his 14th point of the night as he added the extra point to push the Highlander lead to 8 points.

Midway of the final quarter, Scottie tackle Dick Bickford fell on a Bulldog fumble on the Wesleyan 20-yard line. Tailback Johnney Phipps carried over from the 12 and Maryville had racked up its first victory of 1956.

Reward

As a reward for their victory the whole squad was treated to an ice cream cone by Miss Jessie Heron and a steak dinner given by Mr. William Leonard, father of Mark Leonard, the Scottie blocking back.

ored leaves. Mary Kirklin says she knows now how Brer Rabbit felt when he was thrown into the briar patch. She was one of the girls who insisted that sliding down a certain hill would lead her to the falls. Instead it ended in a pool of mud and a briar patch. Ann Kelton spent her time psychoanalyzing everyone whom she met, by only using a leaf.

Rain

Although it rained the entire way back to the picnic area we were not dismayed. Mrs. Cummings spied 2 deer — the first ones she had ever seen in that locality. Judy Ross, declaring she had never seen a cow — well, not up close — got out of one car and started to make friends with some that were grazing in the cove. She left when a bull she had mistaken for a nice cow started to chase her.

After a hearty and delicious supper — I can't say what it was because we ate in the dark — we were entertained at an enjoyable campfire. During several games, were were given the chance to sing, refresh our skill at nursery rhymes, and take part in making a calliope. The chaperones were especially talented in the latter stunt. Given the part of singing um-tweedle dee, um-tweedle dee, they sounded almost like a live flock of birds. With the singing of Spirituals a more serious note was reached. Between each spiritual a poem was read, each following the theme of "Following the Right Trail." This part of the day's activities was most effective and highlighted the fellowship which was experienced by the Y hikers during the afternoon and evening of fun and serious meditation amongst the beauty and splendor of the fall colors. We closed with a friendship circle and prayer ,thanked the chaperones: Mrs. Cummings, Mrs. Elwood, Miss Walker, Miss Jackson, and Miss Blair, and piled into the cars to head for home.

must be a well-planned one on the part of the teacher. Several hours of planning go into the work of a one-hour class, practically all of the planning done on an individual level with faculty guidance, though these periods are a required part of field work for some Christian Education courses.

Study is done of Bible stories for the primary grades, with Bible crafts and games added. Older children study some of the basic books of the Bible, Genesis, the Gospels, and The Acts. They also have games and songs, many of which are known to Maryville students as old favorites from church camps and conferences.

Through this work the local children receive a Bible instruction they might otherwise be without, and many non-local college students plan a contact with the people of the area which is otherwise often neglected in favor of the on-campus-rush. This is also a very valuable experience for many students who are planning to go into church work as a vocation.

In connection with this week-day program, mention should be made of the cooperation of the administration of this college and the cooperation of the local school officials who support it.

duction, Mrs. Beard pointed out. Examples of good water color prints are to be found in those of John Marin in the exhibit.

The prints in this exhibit are for sale and are suitable for framing. It would be wise for everyone wishing to see the prints and perhaps wanting to buy one to do it within the next few days since the exhibit will be taken down at the end of October (which is next week).

The 300 prints in the exhibit are only a sampling of Mr. Prothman's "wares", Mrs. Beard remarked. Even then, it was impossible to put all the prints up, and many are on a table at the front of the gallery.

For those desiring prints there are available mounting and framing estimates given by Mr. Prothman. The prices of the prints vary all the way from less than a dollar to thirty dollars for the serigraph by Rattner. Every student should be able to afford at least one good print, which he can mount and frame himself.

Mrs. Beard mentioned the Japanese custom of putting up only one print or painting at a time to study it, changing it every day or so. In contrast to this, she said, the American way seems to be "exhibiting" several on the walls of a room for purposes of comparison.

An interesting sidelight on the gallery talk: The three-year old Beard twins stole the show from their mother when they came in to investigate the crowd and comment in their own way about what was happening. Eddy pulled out the light cord and left the audience momentarily in the dark, as Andy attempted to put the lampshade on his head.

the soaring inflation. The Administration has dealt with the problem squarely by curtailing the extension of bank credit and balancing the Federal budget, thus ending inflationary deficit spending. While the Democratic orators are currently decrying "inflationary trends" under the present Administration, it should be pointed out that the Consumer Price Index (one of the best measures of the cost of living) has risen but 2½% in the three and a half years of the Republican Administration in contrast with a rise of 27½% during the four peacetime years of the Truman Administration, from June 1946 (when wartime price controls were lifted) to June 1950 (when the Korean War began). There is no indication that the Democratic candidates for office this year are any more alert to the problem of inflation than their Democratic predecessors.

Another big accomplishment of the Eisenhower Administration has been its contribution toward a stable, prosperous, and expanding economy.

The New York Times, in the editorial referred to above, summarized the healthy state of the national economy, fostered by the Republican Administration, in the following paragraph:

"Meantime, at home, American business has been set free of bureaucratic controls from Washington. The practice of collective bargaining, without Federal intervention, has been encouraged, and with fewer costly strikes. Widespread assurance on the part of investment capital concerning the purposes of the Administration has contributed to the favorable conditions in which most sections of the American economy have prospered to a remarkable degree. A beginning has been made in ridding American agriculture of the burden of overhanging surpluses. Empolyment is high. Earnings are good. Best of all, and certainly at least in part because he is personally so well liked and so widely trusted, Mr. Eisenhower has helped to create a spirit of goodwill and confidence which has reserved this country well in a itme of international tension."

In addition to the accomplishments already cited, the Republican Administration has made important steps forward in the fields of civil rights and social welfare. The Social Security system has been expanded to cover an additional 10,000,000 persons, and the unemployment insurance program now covers 4,000,000 additional workers. Various types of tax relief have been provided for the "little man" as well as for corporations and business in general. The Republicans sponsored highway and school construction bills which were not passed by the recent Democratic controlled Congress. The Administration has already accepted approximately two-thirds of the second Hoover Commissions' recommendations for streamlining government operations and plans to ask for favorable Congressional action on still more. In summary, the progressive and constructive accomplishments of the Republican Administration, under the inspiring and unifying leadership of President Eisenhower, constitutes the case for returning the Preisdent and his party to power for another four years.

chicken and rice, the national favorite dish. He also likes roast turkey and stuffing. In fact, he likes food, as evidenced by his knowledge of Chinese and Italian dishes.

Social Customs

An expert on the differences between Cuban and American girls and social customs, Frank said that there are no mythical senoritas with veils who are locked up all day with watchdogs. However, chaperones are still in evidence. "I don't know whether it is because of their way of life, or that they're wiser than American girls, but Cuban girls make a fellow think they are really something, because they depend more on us, and they do not date three or four boys at once the way the American girls do." In fact, a Cuban boy and girl would not date individually unless they had some serious thoughts about each other. If one wants to go out just to have a good time, one goes in a group of young people in Cuba.

"See Winnie over there?" (As Winnie Kie crossed campus in front of us.) "That's what I like especially about Maryville—the chance to meet others from foreign countries—like the Iranian boys, and my Mexican sidekick, Dan Perez." Frank also said that the Maryville graduates he had met before coming here were so enthusiastic, "bubbling over", that he thought that it must be a "grand place". He found what he expected in the academic phase: "good, sound, serious work", but much more than he expected where the people are concerned. "There is something catching, and everybody has it" —"Everyone wants to help", were his opinions.

Cuban, Chinese or Italian

This writer found it amusing to see a Cuban playing a Chinese stage manager, which is Frank's part in Land of the Dragon. However, he is to play an Italian waiter in Death of a Salesman in November. As you can tell, one of Frank's main hobbies is the theater.

He also appeared in the Spanish comedy, La Venda en los Ojos (The Blind Fold), in Central University. Frank remarked that the university had a playhouse, too, which is called the Ariel group.

The folk and country dances of Cuba interest Frank, too.

His future plans? After graduation he wants to do graduate work, preferably at the University in Tulsa, Oklahoma.

At the end of our interview Frank said, "I hope you will let me censor your story. You have asked me some rather personal questions." And with his usual grin, our Cuban classmate set off to wait a table.

ed their brother team the Warriors, by an 18-0 count. Bill Dent accounted for two of the TDs and Jack Crouch scored the other.

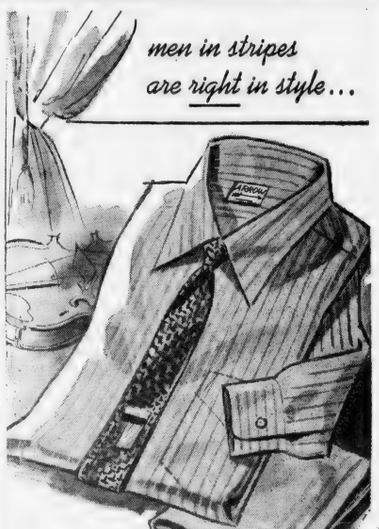
The Y.M.C.A. trampled the Warriors to start off last week's action, by a 35-0 score. Mert Hall scoring three times with Don Jones and Tom Morris adding one apiece told the story. Don Jones also kicked five-extra points.

In a hard fought game, the Hammers edged the Pre-Mins, 6-0. Bob Massal scored the only TD of the entire ball game.

The Hammers smashed Kappa Phi in the last game played last week by a 31-0 score.

Don Hill was the big gun here, as he scored 3 times for the Sigs. Dick Henderson also scored for the victors. To add to their troubles, Kappa Phi was caught on two safeties. Bill Dent kicked 3 extra points, to round out the scoring.

The Rebels-Pre-Min game and the Rebels-Y.M.C.A. games were called off.



Other athletic events are going on in intramural circuit, such as a tennis tournament ,a golf tournament and a horseshoe tournament.

Coach Johnson will award trophies to the winners of these events upon completion of the series.

The football teams will be in action for at least 2 more weeks then the intramural basketball league will be formed.

Wiley, Ribble Star In Death Of A Salesman

Ann Wiley and John Ribble will star in the forthcoming production of Arthur Miller's "Death of a Salesman," to be presented by the Maryville College Playhouse, under the direction of Miss Kathleen Craven, on November 23 and 24 at 8:00 in the theater.

Ribble, a music major from Philarelphia, Pa., will portray Willy Loman and Miss Wiley, an English major from Heiskell, Tenn., will portray his wife, Linda. The supporting cast is as follows: Happy, John Bridges; Biff, David Morris; Bernard, Ronald Lind; The woman, Mary Faye Bundy; Charlie, Ralph Ayres; Uncle Ben, Ronald Lind; Howard, James Colquhoun; Jenny, Bonnie Lehr; Stanley, Francisco Garcia; Miss Forsythe, Mary Schmidt; and Letta, Janet Rath.

"Death of a Salesman," was first presented on Broadway in 1948 and in that same year it won the Pulitizer Prize and also the Drama Circle Award for the best play of the year.

The actual time element of the play takes place during the last twenty-four hours of Willy's life. However, the constant soul-searching that Willy experiences takes the action over a longer period of his life.

The character of Willy Loman epitomizes the tragedy of a person who has lived his life according to a wrong sense of values. Willie had great potentials, since he was basically a fine individual, but he placed to much emphasis on the materialistic tihngs in life and he did not seem satisfied unless he had attained them in the true literal sense. His own downfall is also responsible for that of his two sons'.

The set which is to be used in the Playhouse production is as near a copy of that used in the original version as is possible. There is actually only one set which is referred to as a "simultaneous" set. All the action which takes place flows from one part of the set to another. In the cases where the action does not occur within the actual set, it takes place in front of the set and then only that part of the stage where the action is occurring is lighted.

Another peculiar element in regard to the production of the play is that there is no property on the stage which is not used. There is no attempt made at realism.

Recorods of music which was written especially for the Broadway production, will be used. These will add greatly to the interesting aspect of the production of the play.

The committees for "Death of a Salesman", are as follows: Lights, Sylvia Smith; Make-up, Helen McDonald; Sets, Carol Schade; Props, Judy Trnavsky; Publicity, Gail Harrison; Tickets, Ann Fulton; Costumes, Kathie Briggs and Stage Manager, Ruth Wilson.

New Echo Staff Works To Tune Of My Fair Lady

By Margaret Longfellow

Have you ever watched a group of charwomen and men laboring to the strains of beautiful music? Have you ever wondered how much dirt and dust the Echo office holds? Did you ever listen to music through clouds of choking dust?

These were all firsts for the new Echo staff members Wednesday as they sttepped across the Echo office threshold to their Initiation party. Each jeans-clad initiate, expecting the direst, was greeted by gleeful old staff members and was handed a broom or dust rag. Each was set to work sweeping out dust-filled back offices, washing down cabinets, moving typewriters, cleaning and polishing windows, and sorting old "cuts."

Echo Editor Betty Springstead and old members Nancy McGeorge, Carolyn Cones, Joe McNeal, Ann Wiley, Barbara Wilkie, and Sue Tourtellotte were on hand to direct the "organized slave labor" and to make sure that no initiate was reading old newspapers in the back office.

Joe Quinn and Pete Nix, stepping out of their roles as sports writers, proved to have great window washing abilities. Libby Turner, "falling" from her position as staff reporter for tthe afternoon, became a "slave" initiate washing down dirty chairs. Mimi Mattes and yours truly found that reading and sortting backwards wood cuts can be quite a mixed-up job. Business staff members, Mary Kirklin and Bob Sample were set to work washing windows and scrubbing down filing cases, and above all this turmoil floated the beautiful recorded music of "My Fair Lady."

No sooner had we finished one job then we were given another until the office was swept, scrubbed, polished, and shining as never before.

It was then that the doughnuts were brought out and the soft-drinks uncapped, and the duly initiated and properly grimy new members and the clean, hungary old members sat down in their office to party together.

Lee Suk Chai Tells Of Experiences Of Three Years Under Communism

What is communism really like? Lee Suk Chai knows. He lived under communist rule in North Korea for three years.

Lee is a second semester sophomore. Many of you already know him and are impressed by his mild manner, gentle sense of humor, and his quiet wisdom. To those who have met him, it comes as no surprise to learn that he is majoring in philosophy.

Lee has a sttory to tell—a story that is well worth listening to. The setting is in North Korea near the village of Chin-Nam Po. It began in August 15, 1945, when the communist forces invaded Korea.

The pivital event occurred in 1948, when Lee presented a speech in the communist high school which he attended. The subject, "Freedom under Bondage," was essentially anti-communist in nature and produced an immediate chain of reactions. An investigation was held, and Lee found it necessary to discontinue his education. Because of his age he was not jailed, but he watched constantly by the communist police, so he lost even freedom of movement.

Lee decided to leave North Korea, but because of financial need he waited three months until he had saved sufficiently money. Contacts were made through his sister, and on November 17, 1948, he, with 44 others, escaped from North to South Korea in a sailing boat. He went to Seoul, where his sister and brother-in-law who had escaped a year earlier were living.

He rented a five room house in Seoul and attended the college there for almost two semesters. Then Lee had to face another crisis. On June 27, 1950, Seoul was taken by the communist so quickly there was no time for escape. Because he was from North Korea and therefore subject to suspicion, Lee was driven underground. He remained underground all during the three months of the communist dominance of the city. His sister helped him evade detection. He had just one meal a day-soup and what would be roughly equivalent to our dumplings. Sometimes he had even less to eat.

Lee had two hiding places, one of which was his rented house.

Mr. A. Treacher Was Presented By MC Artists Series

The Maryville College Community Artists Series' second presentation of the year was Arthur Treacher, who achieved fame as "the perfect English Butler", in his program of "A Little of This,

ARTHUR TREACHER

Something of That, Mostly Humor."

This stage, screen, radio, and television personality gave a series of readings from humorous literature ". . . to prove to that vast movie that I can do something besides play the suave gentlemen's gentleman."

Mr. Treacher, just as funny off stage as on, was born in Brighton, Sussex. He worked for a time, in his father's law office, but ran away to join a touring theatrical troupe. However, this enterprise came to an end in 1914 at the start of the first World War. After the war, Mr. Treacher returned to the theater and progressed from chorus boy to feature player. His career in America began in 1928 when the Schuberts brought him here to appear in a series of musical series at the old Winter Garden.

After a period in "The Cat and The Fiddle" he was sought by Hollywood before his return to the theater he created a reputation as the household servant generally the butler for which he became internationally known.

Some of his film triumphs include "Viva Villa", "Bordertown", "Forsaking All Others", "David Copperfield", "National Velvet", and "Forever and a Day".

As a fugitive from Hollywood servant roles, he found himself in "Panama Hattie"—cast as a butler!

In 1950 he played the part of Brittanus in "Caesar and Cleopatra" as his first experience with George Bernard Shaw.

Mr. Treacher is familiar with the summer theater circuit. As he says, "I've toured in the theatres-in-the-round, theatres-in the square and theatres-in-the triangle."

A natural for television, he has appeared with Milton Berle, Bob Hope, Victor Borge, and others.

And now, as a platform reader from humorous literature, Mr. Treacher seems to have found yet another field in which to excel.

MC Film Society To Present Camille

The Maryville College Film Society will present Camille, starring Greta Garbo, at 7:30, Saturday night, November 17, in the chapel theatre. This film was made in 1934, but is still rated as tops by movie critics.

Dr. Lloyd, Dr. McClelland To Travel To Kansas City

On the 18th and 19th of this month, Dr. Lloyd and Dean McClelland will be in Kansas City, Kansas, to attend a Presbyterian College Public Relations Conference.

Council To Present Report In The Echo

By Ted McDaniels

It was reported at the last regular meeting of Council that some students, presumably from M. C., had gone to the Carson-Newman campus and had with an oil base paint decorated the buildings. Just how much damage was done has not yet been ascertained.

There was one town night violation, a freshman girl had signed in from town and forgot to put the slip in the "in box." The penalty reccommended by the Town Night Committee was a repimand, Affirmative action was taken with Council recommendation.

Barbara Wilkie presented a list of Council subjects above which the Council members will write and which will be printed in the Echo of December 14. She asked for suggestions to make the location of the Student Council bulletin board better known.

Student Forum

Ted McDaniel reported that the date had been set for the Student Forum for December 3, various suggestions were made for conducting the meeting.

Charlie Garrison reported that there were a few bills still left outstanding from Homecoming that would be presented to the Athletic Dept. for payment. He also reported that an appeal for the installation of milk machine in the womens' dorms had been made to the Dean and would be presented to the Executive Council soon.

Kappa Phi Gets New Furniture

Kappa Phi sponsored their annual Spraghetti Dinner in the 'Y' Rooms this week. The freshmen project was a success and Tom Fairman along with the rest of his crew is to be congratulated.

Mr. and Mrs. Cauble and Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were our chaperones and the men of Kappa Phi thank them very much for their services.

By now, the news is out. Kappa Phi has acquired some new beautiful furniture for the house. Also Balnonian girls made curtains for the windows plus some lamps have been acquired from the library. All of these projects have greatly added to the beauty of the Kappa Phi house which is there for you convenience.

ECHO FORUM. . .

Editor, The Highland Echo:

I hope that by the time this letter arrives, Maryville College students still have a newspaper. Most of them apparently don't realize it, but they need one badly.

Word in the October 27 issue that The Echo had no business manager and that the paper seemed to fold distressed me to say the least. It seems a good time now to review some problems The Echo has long endured in terms of the whole college community. I have had two years to think all this over, and I will always regret that when I was editor I didn't practice then what I preach now. That might have prevented some of the troubles from which The Echo now suffers.

Apathy on the part of both students and faculty certainly has hurt The Echo for too long. I saw some bad signs of this when I was still in school; students only cared if they were "getting an Echo this week." They paid their money for it when they entered school, and it was to be given out to them at specified times. It did not really seem to be worth working for.

And then theer were those who did ostensibly join the staff and

Beyond The Sea To Be Barnwarming Theme

By Nancy Peters

On Thanksgiving night at 8:30 p.m. in the Alumni Gymnasium the 1956 Barnwarming Show will be given. Thsi year's show, written by Bill Deerfield, promises to be one of the best in many years. "Beyond the Sea" is the title o fthis captivating musical comedy.

The plot of the story centers on the mythical and uncharted South Sea island of Matongo (it rhymes with bongo), where a rather "earthy entertainer" portrayed by Sallie Kinsinger, and an aristocratic family find themselves stranded. The story would not be complete without a love triangle and there is one to be found.

It has been rumored that a number of ornate and fetching costumes have been designed for some members of the cast; they are called Sarongs. Ott Feddern and Patsy Parks are in charge of the costumes and headdresses that are to be worn by some of the cast.

For the benefit of the freshman, Barnwarming is under the auspices of YMCA and YWCA. It has been recommended by the Barnwarming Committee of YM CA and YWCA that the proceeds from the show be sent to the International University in Japan.

This year's Barnwarming show is directed by Mary Ellen Lee, who is also in charge of the choreography and chorus. The cast is Bobbye Carson, Sallie Kinsinger, Colleen Crawford, Gail Shiffer, Myrna Ginaven, Butch Christie, Don Nabors, Harold Mays, Bob Davies and Bob Higerd.

The committees which are work ing on the show are: Publicity, Paula Kronenberg and Sue Settle; Costume, Ott Feddern and Patsy Parks; Make-up, Joan Neckerman; Set designed by Herchal Netherton and Gail Harrison; Lighting, Dave Ross and Bill Wilkie; Business Manager, Bill Heird; Singing Chorus, Carol Lee Lacy; Music, Tommy Evans.

The singing and dancing chorus members are: Bob Finertie, Chris Ward, Alice Hanger, Pat Smith, Rachael McCastlain, Lydia Munson, Cathy Dees, Diane Waddis, Carol Williams, Bill Roberts, Dyrk Couser, Tom Bass, Dick Bickford, and Bob Stevens.

The Barnwarming booths, which are under the supervision of Chuck Frisell and Jo Ann Antes will be open at 7:15 and you will be able to buy Leis, cocoanut meat and meet such fascinating people as witchdoctors, tribal chiefs and the like.

Just before the show the Barnwarming King and Queen and their court will be presented. The nominees for King are Bob Finertie and Jim McCall. Shirley Patterson and Jane Robison are the

The combined singing voices of the Men's Glee Club and the Women's Glee Club gave their "Pop Concert" last Friday evening in the Music Hall. The program was well received by all present and afforded a pleasant evening's entertainment.

Mr. Kinsinger said the groups had been working hard on the presentation as they wished to get more support from the student body. If the response is great enough, it may be possible to hold such secular music programs more often.

The program included the following songs:

ELVIS PRESLEY

By One Who Knows

by Bob Hobbs

Elvis Presley, idol of teenagers today and king of rock 'n' roll, is climbing high on the bandwagon of success. Why does he achieve this success? There are many supposedly correct answers to this question, but there is only one real explanation that one can come to. That is that he is still a young person and fits in well with the teenagers of today and the type of things that they go for. Also, his talent represents the new trend of entertainment that has swept the country lately, which is rock 'n' roll. These two things together make him a star among the teenagers. There are many pro's and con's concerning Elvis, but one must admit that he has gained popularity in the U.S. in the past few months and that he utterly gushes with radiance at every performance.

Most persons' opinion of Elvis is the same as my own. They like his music and records, but they hate to see him perform. I must admit that he does try to look like a "hood" with his flashy clothes and his "cool" haircut, but one must remember that he is still young and only graduated from high school a few years ago.

Elvis As A Person

One must actually know Elvis as a person to understand him. Since I am from the section of the country where he lives, I have heard him express his ideas on certain subjects, and I know what he is like off stage. He has good morals, good ideas, and a good personality, which he uses to his benefit. It is when he is on stage that he makes a complete "mess" of things. He changes his personality completely and is an entirely different person. He has the tendency to overdo everything in his singing. Of course, this only excites the crowd all the more and at the end of the performance, they acclaim him their "cutie of the campus."

In conclusion I would like to say that there is too much buildup given to Elvis. Even though he is good in his own field, he is not as high and mighty as he is

Crusade To Carson-Newman Will Be Made By Maryville Knights Tonight

By Ruth Wilson

History is being repeated. The glory and the grandeur of the Crusades will again be lived this week-end. The honorable kingdom of Maryville goes to do battle and wrest a victory from the grasping hands of the earls of Carson-Newman.

Armored transportation will load troops in front of the Chapel at approximately 6 p.m. The special attacking wing and the fife and drum section will have departed somewhat earlier.

Troops will be divided into groups of about forty with a division commander or commanders in each battalion.

During the march up, many victory songs and sayings will be sung and said.

In accordance with medieval custom the forces will line up on opposite sides of the battlefield, sending their special envoys out onto the battlefield itself.

Both contestants will maintain all knightly codes and courtesies by dint of a previously signed document. Neutral arbiters will be in evidence at all times on the battlefield to ensure that these courtesies are observed.

After the contest, it may be possible to dance in the halls of the opponent's fortress. If not, the victorious march back to Maryville will be one of revelry and merrymaking.

On returning to our camp all soldiers will disarm and return to their barracks. All arms and equipment will then be put into storage until the reserves are activated at this time next year.

Let's Do It — Now

In almost any group of people, no matter how large or small it may be, there sems to be a regrettable tendency for three distinct factions to form almost as soon as the group itself is formed. Whether the group in question is a worldwide institution or a small college student body or even a committee of a few people, this same division into three always seems to occur with uncanny precision. Only the proposition of the three factions changes from group to group.

One of the factions seems to set itself in opposition to the principles under which the group was formed. Here at college there is a small faction which opposes the basic principles of Maryville College—the very principles which they agreed to support when they came here and signed the loyalty oath.

But this faction is a small minority. In any group it can be more or less controlled by the other two divisions, either by enforcing more rigid controls or by eventual expulsion of the troublesome crowd; so the biggest problem does not lie in this first, most radical division.

The other two factions consist of people who give themselves wholeheartedly to the principles of the group and actively support all phases of group life and of people who sit back complacently, enjoying all the benefits, causing no trouble but contributing no creative ideas—the "let George do it" crowd—the neutrals of Dante's ante-Hell.

Each one of us should, from time to time, analze our own situation and determine just which faction we belong to at any given time. If our attitude is hostile, then we have no business here. If we find ourselves indifferent and "letting George do it," then a more difficult situation arises.

In a student body, the danger of widespread apathy concerning the essentials of group life is apalling. Every one has his own private, tight schedule which is in many cases visciously self-centered. Only a few—the Georges—find time to really give a part of themselves to the life of the whole. The rest drift along.

This serious flaw in this neutral faction can be removed by a sincere attempt on the part of every member of our student body to improve his own participation in group life. Such an attempt result in capacity crowds at athletic contests, the Playhouse productions, the Artists Series, and in general increased interest in the many extracurricular activities. The activities of the Student Council would take on new significance, the school newspaper would never again be forced to suspend publication until a qualified person could be found willing to give of his time to serve as business manager.

All these improvements in the group standard of living follow naturally from increased individual interest and concern in the affairs of the group as a whole. The situation presents a challenge to everyone on campus. The problem cannot be solved by group action—it is purely individual. Let's all look into our own situation and decide whether we're doing our part and if we find that we're not, let's do something about it—NOW,

More Than Elbow Grease. . . .

What does it take to make a successful yearbook? Is it the ideas, interest, planning, time spent, patience, cooperation, willingness to work and "elbow grease" applied by the annual staffs that determine the success of the yearbook? Or is it something else? Certainly the afore mentioned things are necessary. Imagine the production of a yearbook without planning, ideas, or "elbow grease". Fortunately most of these things are supplied by the annual staffs.

But there is one thing that the annual staffs cannot supply, and that is the support of the yearbook by the student body and the faculty members. And how does one support the yearbook? You might rate your support of the yearbook by answering a few questions. Did you have your picture taken for the class section of the yearbook? Did you cooperate in the setting up of group pictures? Were you present and on time for group pictures? Have you purchased your 1957 CHILHOWEAN? Your interest in your school and in its yearbook could not be considered very great if your response to these questions is "No".

The yearbook is not for the staffs, who spend the greatest part of the year working on it. Indeed, what a useless undertaking it would be if it were for the staffs alone. Rather, it is for the students and faculty members (mostly for the students) that time and effort is spent producing a yearbook. But of what value are the efforts of eleven people if those efforts are not supported by the rest of the school? It is too late now to be present and on time for group pictures, but it is not too late to purchase your yearbook and to lend moral support. Won't you do so?

Scots & Soda

By Libby Turner

Little Willy went to college—
His mother said so he'd have knowledge.
Now Willy is at home again
Putting square holes around round pins.

Willy climbed the water tower
In the dark after a shower.
After he had fell and squished him
Only his chapel monitor missed him.

Willy took a science course,
He thought that nothing could be worse;
Til he took Math 101.
Then he knew that he was done.

Willy's roommate was a panic.
He drove Willy nearly frantic.
He never studied and never slept—
Yet on tests he was always adept.

Willy wrote his first term paper.
It ended up as quite a caper,
He turned it in at 11:54
And swore he'd never do any more.

Willy had a parlor date.
(You finish this one)

Willy took Philosophy, too
And long before he was through,
He decided it so ironic
To emphasis things Platonic.

Willy always went to meals,
Despite his friends' complaining squeals.
He even raved about grits and bacon,
Hard boiled eggs and corn, crisply flakin'.

Willy joined the Echo staff.
He thought it was a great big laugh,
Til he didn't hand his assignment in
And the Editor told him that was a sin.

Willy took English 205,
And barely came out of it alive.
The more he studied Dante and Pope,
The more he felt like an A-one dope.

Willy thought the band was great,
If he were in that he'd really rate.
Then he heard the bagpipes play
And after that he stayed away.

Willy got lost in the Fine Arts Center.
He always came out where he should enter.
He thought he must be in the catacombs
Cause all he could find was just more rooms.

Music is one of Willy's passions.
He goes after all the fashions.
One thing he likes, quite expressly
Is the yelping moan of Elvis Presley.

Little Willy tried his best,
Still he flunked the mid-term test,
Now he's working day and night
To make his average come out right.

Little Willy cleaned his room
With bucket, mop, rag and broom.
His roommate saw it and passed out cold.
Now the room looks as of old.

Willy's special studies fizzled.
His faculty advisor sizzled.
Willy's now under doctor's care
For nervousness and loss of hair.

Voices, Masks, and Shadows

by Barbara Wilkie

Many of you (e.g., upperclassmen and faculty) may have noticed that seniors are engrossed in a new fad which is preventing their participation in almost everything except ethics tests, special studies, comps, and all manner of similar evils. This column will be devoted to presenting ways which, if followed to the letter, will keep the rest of the college from falling into a similar plight. Fads are dangerous when they are carried to the extreme which the seniors are rapidly approaching. So, as some poor insignificant poet has said "Up! up! my friend, and quit your books; or surely you'll grow double." (Apologies to Dr. Jackson and English 339).

Suggestion Number One

Go downtown this afternoon and see "Trapeze" (Burt Lancaster, Tony Curtis, and Gina Lollobrigida) at the Capitol or "Thunder over the Prairie" and "Sudden Danger" at the Park. But be sure to be back in time to attend the latest film series movie brought to our own campus tonight at 8:00. "Camille," starring Greta Garbo, will be shown in a Maryville College premiere in the theatre.

Downtown

Next week you may want to take an evening or two off from your (yes, I have to say it) studies for an enjoyable town night. Monday and Tuesday the Capitol is offering "Showdown at Abilene," a Western starring Lyle Bettger, Martha Hyer, and Jock Mahoney. Across the street at the Park will be "The Dam Busters" and "The Savage Horde," a double feature. Wednesday through Friday the Park will have "Hell's Island" and "A Man Alone." "Top Gun" with Sterling Hayden will appear there on Saturday.

Back On Campus

The top campus entertainment next week will be the Maryville College Playhouse production, "Death of a Salesman," by Arthur Miller on Friday and Saturday nights. The tragic story of Willie Loman, this play is sometimes termed the greatest American tragedy, although adherents to Aristotelian concepts of drama would think otherwise.

"Fresh Coconut"

The next-ranking campus entertainment is probably the Barnwarming show, "Beyond the Sea," next Thursday night. It promises to be quite a gala affair under the general direction of Bill Deerfield and Mary Ellen Lee. It will be interesting to see college students' portrayal of South Sea Islanders in exotic settings — you know, the noble savage idea, and all that.

Fashions

by Bobbye Carson and Jeannie Ginaven

Girls, it isn't long until the fall dance! I am sure this isn't exactly news to you. In fact, many of you are already planning what you will wear, while others of us are racking our brains for ideas. If you feel the need for a new formal frock, have you planned to buy one, to make one, or to remodel your old one? If you are one of the ones who has a new formal, consider yourself just plain lucky, your worries are over except for choosing your accessories.

After consulting the several stores in town, we are prepared to tell you that if you are planning on buying a new formal, there are various styles, colors, and sizes, all of which are extremely fashionable.

As usual the short formals with the fussy strapless tops are very interesting.

One dress that particularly caught my eye was a bright red one. It was made of taffeta covered with net. The several layers of red net comprising the skirt had a silver metallic thread weaving a pattern in the net. This dress would be very complimentery to the holiday season. There were many other short formals made of taffetas, laces, chiffons, and velveteens.

I can remember when there wasn't such a thing as a short formal. But in the last few years, short formals have come into their own for appearance as well as convenience. However, the floor length gowns are still quite fashionable. In fact, there are some who think that long formals will again reign supreme in years to come. They are very stately looking with their long, full, billowy skirts.

The new look in formals for this season is a style modified from the popular sheath dress. They are quite attractive donned with the back drapes of chiffon or other lighter weight materials. This style is effective in the floor length dresses, but most assured-

Graphic Arts Show

All next week the art exhibit of graphic art prints from the University of Tennessee will be up for your perusal. Done by students in the Art Department at UT, the prints consist of etchings, a woodcut, serigraphs, and cellocuts. At a recent art talk Richard E. Beard, head of the Art Department here, explained that graphics refers to a method of drawing with an instrument upon a surface. The drawing thus made can be reproduced by various methods, such as wood engraving, etching, silk screen printing, lithography, and the newly invented process of cellocut.

The prints in the present exhibit are not all examples of good design, although they represent well the processes they embody. For instance, one etching of a still-life seems merely to be a hodge-podge of textures rather badly tied together. Yet it exhibits several interesting techniques. "Tennessee Still" is another of rather doubtful artistic value. However, the exhibit as a whole is well worth studying.

Experimentals

Events farther into the future which everyone should not miss are the experimental productions. Sophomores, especially, will want to rush en masse, so to speak, to view experimentals' rendition of part of "The Second Shepherd's Play" and other excerpts. Synge's "Riders to the Sea" is to be presented later in the semester.

Movie Series Dates:

And here are the dates for the remaining film series movies: Jan. 19 — "Bicycle Thief," Feb. 23 — "Checkov Festival," March 23 — "The Boys from Syracuse," and April 30 — "Henry V."

A Parting Word

So, underclassmen and faculty, keep in mind that by partaking of Maryville culture you will forestall the unhappy fate which is fast befalling the entire senior class. Stay busy enjoying life and studies won't get you down.

SPORTS SPOTLIGHT

By Pete Nix

A word here, a word there and before you know it you have a column. So no coherence intended, just a few words about various and sundry things that come to mind.

"UPSETS"

What manner of fiend
You "upset" you
When favored by 12
We lose by 2.

But hang around
For a short time more
Next week
We're to lose by 24.

The football "upset" has been cussed and discussed since the inception of the game. It has been a part of the games past (Centre 6—Harvard 0), is in its present (Illinois 20-Mich State 13), and will be in its future (Maryville 14-U.T. 6). No one has ever explained them fully and no one ever will. Some of them may be planned in part, but most of them just happen because that ball takes funny bounces.

Some teams use an upset victory as a springboard to a successful sean (Syracuse 25-Maryland 12, and the Big Orange is still rolling) while others surprise victors never regain the short lived glories (Tulane 14-Ole Miss 0, then Tech 40-Tulane 0 and Alabama 13-Tulane 7). And the upset can affect the victim in two entirely different ways also. Often the sufferer of a surprise defeat bounces to wreak vengeance on his foes (Penn. St. 13-Ohio St. 7, the Buckeyes have clobbered em' since) or that first unexpected loss may send him into a state of shock from which he never recovers (Syracuse 25-Maryland 12 and the supposed mighty Terps have never recovered).

One thing is certain anyhow, as long as there is football there will be upsets and, after all, what would the game be without them.

A TRIBUTE

Stop for a minute and think about the average day of a boy who plays football for Maryville College. Most of them are up for breakfast. In the morning they attend classes and following lunch there is a half hour of skull practice. More classes follow and then from 3:30 or 5:30 or later they knock heads. And for any who think this afternoon practice is play, I suggest they watch the boys return to the dressing room following one of these sessions. And physical labor is not all that is involved. Each new opponent occasions the learning of new blocking assignments, new defensive maneuvers and many other tihngs. Meanwhile classroom studies wait for no man. With no free afternoons and little free time at all they still must prepare for classes just as you and I do.

And what is their reward? For a very few it is praise and glory, but for the vast majority it is the self-satisfying knowledge that they have played the game of football to the best of their ability. So stand up students and take your hats off to hero and bench warmer alike who labor diligently day after day so that they might well represent the Orange and Garnet on the gridiron.

"BOWL" GAZING

New Year's day is a long way off, but about this time every year the prognosticators get out their pencils and paper and start deciding who will meet who and where, when bowl time rolls around. So here goes.

The Rose Bowl will probably have its worst line up in many years. Oregon State, who backed into Pasadena via the Pacific Coast Conference purge, will more than likely meet Iowa, the Big Ten's third best team. The Orange Bowl contenders as it now stands are Colorado and Clemson, two mediocre performers at best. In the Sugar Bowl it looks like Tennessee and Miami, if the NCAA lifts its ban from the latter. Texas A&M, another "if" depending on the NCAA probation committee, will meet Georgia Tech or one of the Eastern powers (Syracuse, Penn State) in the Cotton Bowl. The Gator Bowl is rather uncertain, but a good bet would be Florida vs. Baylor. All these selections depend on many, many ifs, but heck it's fun trying anyway.

NOMINATIONS

In a very few days now the All-American and All-Sectional team selections will start hitting the newspaper and magazines. The selection of particular interest to us here at Maryville is the Little All-American team. As the name suggests this selection is made from the smaller schools across the country and every now and then a Maryville Scottie receives the honor of being selected for this team. Sports Spotlight would like to go on record as having nominated three Scotties for this honor.

Captain Bud White—He made it as a junior and has been a no less outstanding performer this year.

Co-Captain Ted Wilson—The likes of his brilliant defensive end play have never been seen on Honaker Field.

Tailback Johnny Phipps—His breth-taking running and his consistent punting have helped pace the Scotties all year.

Good Luck men, we sincerely hope you make it.

Scots Meet Eagles In Last Game

By Pete Nix

Tonight the Maryville College Highlanders journey to Jefferson City, Tennessee to renew the long standing feud with the Carson-Newman Eagles. One of the oldest rivalries in Tennessee football, this always "the game" for the Scots.

The Eagles enter the game with a 6-3 record as compared with the 3-5 showing of the Highlanders. Against mutual opponents, however, their records are relatively equal. Moorhead defeated C-N 13-0 while dropping Maryville 18-13. The Eagles whipped Tennessee Wesleyan 34-13 and the Highlanders downed the Bulldogs 21-6. Emory and Henry was victorious over both, conquering the Eagles 17-7 and the Scots 13-0. Against Howard Carson-Newman was on the top end of a 25-6 score, while Maryville defeated the Birmingham boys 20-13. A computation of comparative scores, for what they are worth, give the Eagles a six point edge.

The Eagles are small and fast with plenty of experience. If the Highlanders are to be victorious they must extend themselves more than they have at any time this season. With a victory over Carson-Newman the season could be classed as a modestly successful one. So go get 'em Scots.

YW To Celebrate Thanksgiving 18th

On Sunday, November 18th YWCA will take a "Harvest Walk." The time will be 1:30 in front of Pearsons. After a short walk, Thanksgiving stories will be read and refreshments will be served.

On November 25 at 1:30 p.m. there will be a joint meeting in the Music Hall of the Fine Arts Center when the speaker will be Miss Rachael Henderlite, who teaches at Union Theoligical Seminary in Richmond, Va. Miss Henderlite, who has written a book entitled A Call to Faith, which is found in our library, is also going to be the speaker at Vespers on Sunday night. Miss Henderlite will be available for discussions and questions after "Y" on Sunday. Also, on Sunday morning Miss Henderlite will be in Miss Walker's class at Highland Presbyterian Church.

Scots Make It Three By Dumping Concord

By Pete Nix

Maryville College, led by the running of Captain Buddy White, took the measure of the Concord State Teachers by a 20-7 margin. Playing one of their best games of the season the Scotties came back, after seeing the Staters tio it up, to score two more TDs and wrap up the victory.

Early in the second quarter Captain White went over his own right tackle and with aid of two good blocks and some beautiful stiff-arming on his own part, scampered 45 yards for the evening's first tally. He added the extra point and Maryville lead 7-0.

In the third canta guard Landon Moorehead fell on a Maryville fumble on the Scottie 5. Quarterback Bill Turner scored and Mc-Kelvie converted to even it up.

After taking the kick-off, the Scots set out on a sustained 75 yard charge to pay dirt. A beautiful 22 yard jaunt by tailback Johnny Phipps was big play in this drive. White drove over foom the one.

The final Scot tally came on a 1-yard plunge by tailback Jimmy Harris midway of the fourth period. White converted for his 72nd point of the year and for the Scotties' third victory.

Scots Beat Howard, Whip Jacksonville

By Joe Quinn

Maryville College defeated the Howard Bulldogs here last week by a 20-13 score. Bud White led the attack by scoring 2 TDs and adding 2 extra points. The Highlanders also scored on a pass from Jimmy Phipps to Rufus Bowers.

Howard connected for 2 TDs both through the air from Wayne Fleming to Abe Gustin.

The two teams played a scoreless first quarter, and then Maryville hit pay dirt. A steady sustained drive, aided by penalties, brought the score as Capt. Bud White hit over from the two. White converted and we led 7-0.

Howard struck back, but failed to get the extra-point and Maryville went off at the half leading by 7-6.

Second Half

About midway through the third quarter, Maryville scored again as Bud White again carried the ball. Bud missed the point however, and we led 13-6 going into the last 15 minutes.

In the final period, Rufus Brown made a tremendous catch of Johnny Phipps' pass to notch our 3rd TD. Bud White added the point and Maryville sewed up the victory.

On the final play of the game, Howard tried a desperation pass which connected for a TD. The extra-point split the up-rights and the final score was 20-13.

In one of the bright spots of the game, Roy Myers dashed 30 yards to set the stage for our second tally.

This was not one of Maryville's better games. The game was marred by numerous personal foul penalties and a couple of boys being thrown out of the game.

Jacksonville State

Maryville played Jacksonville State to a standstill in the first half of their ball game, but a fired up State outfit threatened to make a rout of it before the night was over.

In the first period, Johnny Phipps got the Scots off on the right foot with a 44 yard TD jaunt. Bud White added the extra point and we lead 7-0 at the end of the quarter.

In the second period, QB Carl Harrison threw a 37 yard TD pass to Wayne Keahy and George White added the extra point. The score at half-time was tied 7-7.

Second Half

In the third period, a 40-yard punt return and a 15-yard penalty for roughness set the stage for the Gamecocks' second score. Harrison bowled over and the score was 13-7 at the third quarter mark.

In the 4th period, Carl Harrison again found the mark for a TD pass. This time he hit Hershell O'Dell from 7 yards out. The extra point was missed and the score was 19-7.

The final tally was made on a 22 yard jaunt by Jerry Duke. The extra-point was made and the final score 26-7.

The scoring was as follows:

Jacksonville State	0	7	6	13	—26
Maryville	7	0	0	0	—7

Intramurals....

By Joe Quinn

The Intramural league wound up its schedule last Saturday with the playing of the Stinkin' Shoe classic.

Alpha Sig downed Kappa Phi 15-0 in a small fought game on Wilson field.

Don Hill gathered in a Dan Wiley pass for the first Sig score. Wiley himself later on notched the second score by circling end. Bill Dent added one extra point. Kappa Phi was caught on a safety to round out the scoring.

The Hammers won the regular season title followed by the Pre-Mins, YMCA, Rebels, Kappa Phi, and the Sig Warriors in that order.

Last Monday, a slate of officers was drawn up to help in the running of the intramural program. The new officers voted on by the fellows are as follows:

President, Dan Wiley; vice president, Lou Shearer; secretary, Dave Ross.

On November 16 at Honaker Field the champion Alpha Sig Hammers took on the Intramural All-Stars under the lights.

Last year the Sigs registered a victory over the Stars.

Theta Triumphs In Powderpuff Game

The intramural field was the scene of the annual battle between the Theta and Bainonian football teams last Saturday. Theta racked up a touch-down and a touchback both in the first quarter to lead the entire game. B. J. Schultz, tailback made the points for Theta, while Helen Franklin, quarterback, ran for the lone score for Bainonian in the closing minutes of the game. The final score was Theta 9-Bainonian 6.

Theta ran from a single wing formation gaining much ground on reverses to the left, while Bainonian ran from a T-formation, with an occassional switch to single-wing. Passing seemed to be more effective for both teams than in the last few years, though there were several interceptions on both sides. Both teams will probably be even better next year as very few of the team members will graduate this year.

Theta, captained by Lila Crane and Marianne Bichman, was coached by Mr. Ramger and Charles Garrison. Bainonian's captains were Jane Byrne and Helen Franklin and they were coached by Ted McDaniels and Sam Buffat.

Lombe S. Honaker Is Awarded Plaque

On Monday, November 5, at the regular meeting of the Quarterback Club in Knoxville, Lombe S. Honaker, Maryville College's veteran coach, was presented with a plaque which was awarded by the Football Writers of America for his 37 years of athletic service. The actual award was conferred in August.

Now there's an ear pad that blocks out high frequency noises but permits the human voice to pass through.

Coach Davis Writes For "Coach And Athlete"

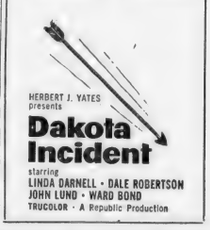
Coach John A. Davis, '30, wrestling coach for the past ten years at Maryville College, had an article featured in the May issue of "Coach and Athlete", a magazine published nationally for use by coaches, trainers, and officials. Under the title of "Sequence Wrestling", the article discusses in some detail the methods which Coach Davis uses, designed for the college, which, like Maryville, gets few new students with wrestling experience and therefore has the added responsibility of keeping techniques simple and effective.

The article is liberally illustrated with photographs of the Maryville "rasslers" in action. Buford Miller, Maryville's star grappler who won the 130 lb. title for three years in succession, and Jerry Waters, 123 lb. winner who has a chance to repeat Buford's performance this season, are shown in action photos, together with Jim Cummings, 137 lb. runner-up, and Don Nabors, 147 lb. runner-up.

YM Is Planning A Hike For Nov. 24

The two big events on the Y calendar in the near future are the Y hike and Barnwarming.

The hikers leave the 24th of November for Bear Creek, north of Gatlinburg, for week-end of tramping in the Great Smoky Mountains. Bob Ramger and Joe Williams have charge of this outing.



Thursday the 22nd is the date for the Y's annual barnwarming. Bill Deerfield, the show director, said that the cast had been selected, rehearsals started, and everything was proceeding according to schedule. It should be an interesting show and it is certainly worthy of everyone's support.

Presbyterian Life Publishes Articles By Dr. Lloyd

In the September 29 issue of "Presbyterian Life" there is an article by Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd entitled "Presbyterians in Prague." This article deals with a meeting in August of the Executive Committee of the World Presbyterian Alliance held behind the Iron Curtain in Prague, Czechoslovakia. Dr. Lloyd reports on the situation in Czechoslovakia, the discussions in the meetings, and his impressions of the place of the Christian church under Communist rule. Accompanying the article is a picture of Dr. Lloyd in conversation at Prague with Dr. A. C. Watson of Australia, one of the Vice Presidents of the World Presbyterian Alliance.

An article by Dr. Lloyd appeared also in "Presbyterian Life" for September 15 entitled "Twenty Questions on Presbyterian Union." Dr. Lloyd gives answers to twenty of the questions most frequently asked now about the Plan of Union on which Presbyteries are now voting in both the Presbyterian Church, U.S.A., and the United Presbyterian Church.

Lee Suk Chai . . .

While he was at his other hiding place he heard that his house had been investigated and left by the communist. Believing it safe, he returned to the house and was in bed when he heard the police enter. They began a systematic search, starting at the front and working to the last room–Lee's bedroom. Lee had to think quickly. He made his bed and climbed on top of the chest, the only other piece of furniture in the room. The police shined a flashlight on the bed and then on the chest; the beam missed Lee by about a foot.

Two days later, on September 28, the U.N. regained Seoul, and Lee saw sun light for the first time since August 1.

Lee was without a job for some time after he refound his freedom, but finally secured a position with an American Army hospital, where he worked for six months. While there he met an American medical doctor, Dr. Baldwin, of Chattanooga. Dr. Baldwin asked Lee if he wished to go to America and offered to sponsor him. Further encouragement came when Lee won a scholarship to Temple School at Chattanooga.

Lee has been in this country for two and one-half years. He studied until recently at Temple, then transferred to Maryville in order to obtain the philosophy major which he wants. He is interested in sports and plays on the soccer team; he also likes music especially the classics, the organ.

He plans to enter either seminary or graduate school and will probable return to Korea, either as a teacher or a minister.

About Communism

And what does Lee feel about communism? He describes it in this manner: "Behind the smiling face, there is a devil's mind." During his three years in communist controlled North Korea, he became an unwilling subject to the methods of indoctrination. In high school, the doctrines of Marx, Engles, and Lenin were stressed in the social science – a course which was required part of the curriculum. The study of the Russian language was encouraged.

He found the living conditions to be hard and cited the plight of the farmer as an example. Approximately seventy-five per cent of the farmer's produce had to be given to the government. Labor was also demanded. During the winter months, when the farmer rested from the active work of growing crops, he was required to work at a factory or some communist sponsored activity, and at times, he was even called during the summer, when he was busy with harvest.

Lee describes the lack of individual freedom in a graphic manner. He compares it to an equilateral triangle, with the angles being a, b, and c. The people like the sides of the triangle are equal but they have no classification or being apart from the whole. The angle, a, "watches" angles b and c; "watches" a and c; c "watches" a and b. Lee finds communism to work in a similar way. The freedom of movement is hampered by watchers but ever the watcher have their watchrs creating a never-ending pattern.

Party membership, which was encouraged, was divided into two groups–the leaders and the members. The leaders had some freedom, but this was only partial, since there were leaders above them to whom they were subject. Lee noted that these leaders served the party "as a dog."

Christianity is believed by the communists to be an instrument of captialism, because it emphasizes the individual. They were, therefore, against it and limited freedom of worship and assembly. Speeches were police controlled. Frequently communist assemblies, to which all were required to attend, were held on Sunday, so worship services could not be attene.

Lee notes, "Peope dbehind the ion curtain are ike a bird living in a cage–they can see outside but cannot escape. They seek the freedom to release themselves, and we who live in the free world must not be ignorant of the fact. We must help them to be free, for if we do not, we, ourselves, might lose our freedom.

"Americans tend to exercise their freedom blindly. A train is free, when it goes on rails, but if it falls from the rails therefore it is not free, we must limit ourselves to freedom of exercise and keep order of society in our life. We do not apply our freedom. As there is rust on the unused pen point, there will be rust on freedom, and it will become worthless.

Echo Forum . . .

quickly faded away, with the excuse that it "takes too much time from my studies." Of course I think I can safely say that nobody studies that much. They seemed too blind to see that work on their newspaper would teach them something; but knowledge to them was a substance to be poured into them like a blood transfusion by their teachers, if the teachers could succeed in finding a place to administer the needl.

And so, despite all the college's boasts about carefully selected students, the fact remains that too many of those same students don't want to do anything for themselves. Club and society officers will do doubt agree.

These people don't seem to understand that The Echo offers perhaps the best chance for an activity carried on thoroughly by students. No faculty member (I hope not now) peers over your shoulder while you write, edit, and print. The faculty adviser's main job is to see that finances are kept straight so the paper will be solvent. He doens't sell the advertising for you.

Of course this all means work, and frequently most of it falls on the editor and his or her loyal band. Incidentally, the past four years seem to show that Maryville College men fear work on The Echo more than the women. Check the staff box and the bylines of the last issue and you'll see what I mean.

In the end this hesitancy to work, the feeling that a newspaper isn't worth it, will result—if it hasn't already— in no student voice whatever. And that leads to more control of the news by student government and the administration. The one issue of The Echo I have read this fall carried a story about the possibility of a mimeographed student council bulletin. I fear that will hide more news about council workings than is done already. Whenever the people are ready to let a newspapper go down the drain, government invariably is there to take over the function itself. And that means nothing but propaganda.

I cannot make so good a case for faculty apathy, for many of these men and women seem to feel That Echo is properly the job of the students, and thus seldom comment. But others have acted as if the newspaper were nothing more than a plaything for a few students, and dthereupon use it as a good source for their gripes. Often these complaints are deserved; others, however, are nothing but unreasonable. Good and bad, though, it all adds up to more interest by the faculty than by the students. That's pretty bad.

But one segment of the faculty plays more of a part in the second factor which has harmed The Echo for many years. That is censorship.

While The Echo constitution gives the paper's faculty adviser power to read copy before it is printed, it is to his credit that he has not done so as long as I have known anything about The Echo. I feel sure this is still the case. Usually then, there is no prior censorship.

But pressure still exists. Some members of the college hierarchy think the student newspaper should be little more than a promotion sheet for Maryville College. The ywant na stories of student discontent, no letters objecting to college tradtion "behind every tree," no factual information that the studenf council spies on tow nighters to see if they are signed out.

I submit, however, that this borders dangerously on the peace of mind attitude which can give people complacent, false-to-fact ideas about the rest o fthe world, which knows no M-Book.

The same people object further to publication of such unpleasant items because "The Echo goes to other places besides our own campus, and people might not understand." Don't these off-campus readers have a right to know about the climate of student opinion at their alma mater or the school their children attend?

It is doubtful that an Echo story in itself has caused such a reaction as some fear it would. As it is, the alumni magazine and the Buck of the Monih Scottygramg reach more non-student readers than The Echo. And those two gems of public relations seldom reflect anything bad besides the worrisome college budget.

There's something else about the public relations office—it does not co-operate with The Echo. Editorials last year spoke about that situation, which seems not to have changed. It was a good idea for the college to get a press agent, but that doesn't give MC exclusive ownership over campus news, to be released as it pleases no matter what. What's newsworthy about a current item if you must wait until the alumni magazine is printed? Things are too often common knowledge before they are "released."

Hhis manipulation of news is practiced by others as well, as when choir tour itineraries have been known by students long before The Echo got official blessing for a story. Or when the administration wanted a story on February Meetings speakers held until just before Christmas "so the students will go home talking about it."

Student Council has been just as guilty. Maybe council fears someone on the faculty wouldn't like publication of the news that student government is trying to get more freedom for women students or is working to have the Y-Store open for a short time on Sunday nights. In my time one misguided council member suggested that a committee read Echo copy and delete "what shouldn't go in the paper."

Fortunately the president vetoed that idea. But requests still came not to print such things as I have cited. Foolishly, I complied too many times. The basic principle still remains that if council doesn't want its actions publicized, it shouldn't meet in public. Attempts to stifle open reporting and agreement to such threats will help destroy any newspaper quicker than anything. Freedom of the press is just as important at Maryville College as it is in a South American dictatorship.

These then are some aspects of censorship and apathy I feel need correction. The Echo staff must still exercise responsibility for courage accuracy, and fairness. but this is quite impossible if the whole college will not let The Echo be a newspaper.

Student readers who don't care and self-appointed censors from both faculty and student body can blame themselves if The Highland Echo stops or even suspends publication. I only hope several hundred persons can be made to realize what they will be losing if they let that happen.

ly in the short formals. Many of these sheath type formals may be used also for semi-formal wear. A good example of a short length dress in this style is a sheath with empire waistline. It is made of taffeta and lace which is ornamented with sequins and seed pearls. A drape of matching chiffon circles and accentuates the high waistline and falls down the back in a long drape. The neckline is low and the sleeves are tiny and simple. Can't you imagine this dress in black or perhaps an egg shell white? These new fashions have made their debut in Marysville. Go see for yourself!

Do-It-Yourself

After being in the stores and seeing all these beautiful dresses, it is always a disappointment for us to face reality and the fact that our college budgets will not stretch to allow us to purchase one of them. Had you thought of making one yourself? It is possible to have just as lovely a gown as there is in the store window. If your sewing isn't up to par, perhaps your roommate will help you.

If your thoughts turn toward velveteen, you will be able to find in the local stores beautiful shades of radiant pink, soft blue, bright red, black, white and others. Some of the velveteen can be purchased for $1.98 per yard, while other pieces are around $2.98 a yard for 36 inch material. If you plan on combining with taffeta, this is priced as low as 59c per yard for solid colors. Chromspun taffeta with interwoven figures sells for $1.69 for 45 inch wide material. Chiffon is the latest in soft filmy materials. The local stores will gladly sell you any of their beautiful colors of this for $1.19 per yard. Also there are many shades of crystalette for $1.49 per yard of 45 inch wide material. There is taffeta in colors to mach the crystalette. If you are interested in making something of satin, skinner satin is $1.98 a yard.

The secret of a beautiful formal is due to the many crinolines that are used to hold out the skirt. If you plan to buy some crinoline, it is 39c a yard and up. The net and lace are different prices.

In any of the pattern books, there are many different styles for fashionable evening wear. If you are really interested in making or remodeling a formal, I think you will be able to find a pattern to please you.

Whether you wear a last year's dress, or a new or remodeled one, we are certain that everyone will be sure to make their date's heart skip a beat when he sees you come floating down the stairs.

P.S. The prices quoted are moderately accurate!

DON'T MISS THE PLAY!

VOL. 42 MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE, NOVEMBER 24, 1956 No. 8

Death Of A Salesman Gives Last Preformance

The second performance of Arthur Miller's Death of a Salesman will be given tonight in the Theatre.

The Salesman and his family are played by John Ribble, Willy Loman; Ann Wiley, Linda Loman; their two sons, David Morrs, Biff; and John Bridges, Happy. Uncle Ben, a spirit who lives in Willy's mind, is played by Ronald Lind. Other interesting characters are: the neighbors, Uncle Charley, Ralph Ayres; Bernard, Ronald Randon. Mary Fay Bundy plays the Woman, with Janet Rath and Mary Schmidt in the roles of women of questionable character. Francisco Garcia is the waiter.

One of the most intriguing factors in this play is the music, which was written especially for the original Broadway production. The set, too, has been constructed as close to the original one as possible.

Tickets are still on sale for those who have not been able to get them yet. The curtain goes up at 8:00 p.m.

YM Hike To Be November 24

by Bob Hobbs

On November 24, 1956, the rugged, out-door men of Maryville College will embark on a hike in to the Great Smoky Mountains, where they will be faced with the many dangers of tthe mountains. They will be located somewhere north of Gatlinburg. They will exhibit their manly powers on Saturday afternoon when they climb Mount LeConte. That night they will dine in style by cooking their meal at their camp site. Nothing is better than a good meal cooked out in the open-outdoors . . . that is, most of the time it is unless someone makes a complete mess of everything.

On Sunday morning, after a day of thrills and excitement, the men will conduct an inspiring church service in the mountains. Bill Strickland will have charge of the service. After the service, the men will get into their cars and return to Maryville College exhausted, but full of wild tales of their never-to-be-forgotten weekend in the Smoky Mountains.

Bob Ramger and Joe Williams have charge of the hike and planned it. About twenty men are expected to participate in the hike.

Good luck, men . . .

Echo Subscription Rates Have Been Raised

Cap Johnston, new business manager of the Echo, has announced that the non-student subscription rates for the Echo have been raised to $1.50 for the year, $.75 for each semester. These rates are consistent with the rates charged of students in the activities fee. It was explained that under the present rates, students were paying $1.50 per year, and outside subscription holders were paying only $1.00.

Music Competition Offers $14,000

With two first prizes of $2,000, and seventeen additional duplicate awards, totalling $14,000 in all, the Fifth Annual Student Composers Radio wards (SCRA) was announced by Broadcast Music, Inc. and BMI Canada Limited, sponsors of the composition competition. Mailings now being made to music schools, conservatories and secondary schools in the United States and Canada invite students to enter the 1956 contest.

Established in 1951 by BMI, in cooperation with music educators and composers, SCRA is open to students in accredited conservatories of music, universities, colleges and secondary schools, or of private teachers, in the United States, its possessions and Canada. All entries must be submitted before February 15, 1957, and the $14,000 in prizes, which are to be applied for tuition and subsistance during further study, will be awarded prior to June 1, 1957, when national winners will be announced.

The permanent judging panel for Student Composers Radio Awards is composed of :William Schuman, composer and President, Juilliard School of Music; Earl V. Moore, Dean, School of Music, University of Michigan; Henry Cowell, composer; and Claude Champagne, Assistant Director, Quebec Provincial Conservatory. For the final judging, this group will be augmented by leading composers, publishers and interpreters of music.

Dr. A. Cropp Serves Five Churches As Director Of The Parish Program

This fourth and last of the Faith Cooperative Parish Program articles deals with the five chapels under the direction of Dr. Albert Cropp. These five fields, Cloyd's Creek, Hays Memorial, Mount Tabor, Pine Grove, and West Maryville, are well known to the several students who assist in them.

West Maryville is a church of approximately sixty members. Dr. Cropp is the preacher there alternate Sundays, the other dates being filled by Gene Spiekerman, while Carol Lee Lacy is the choir director and Jr. High Sunday School teacher. Mr. Witherspoon, Professor of Economics, is the adult Sunday School teacher. In addition to the regular Sunday services there are church parties held once a month, sometimes for West Maryville alone but at other times for all five chapels. Miss Lacy also directs the all parish choir which sings for special occasions.

Cloyd's Creek's student preacher is Harold Kelly. Lib Guerin teaches in the Sunday School and also plays the piano for services. Programs are planned for the Young People's regular meetings and special services are held on holidays. This is the home church of the late John Alexander, famous evangelist singer.

Pine Grove is the third church on this charge. Jay Bollman assists with the preaching there and Marian James is pianist. Sunday night programs are held there.

The fourth chapel is Mt. Tabor, at which Bob McCloud and Lois Fleck are student assistants. Youth fellowship meetings are held on Sunday night in addition to the regular morning services. Prayer meetings are often held and a recreational program is planned for the near future.

Once a month a service is held by Dr. Cropp at Hayes Memorial chapel, while Sunday School is held every week. Though no students regularly assist there, some helped with the revival services held there in October.

Summer Service

In addition to these five fields of Faith Cooperative Parish, and to the work of Mr. VanPelt, plans are being made for a summer vesper service program to be held at Tuckaleechee Village in Townsend.

At present there are two full-time staff members, Dr. Cropp and Mr. VanPelt, plus over seventy-four student workers who are helped and guided by several college faculty members. It can be seen that this is an extensive work as well as a worthwhile and rewarding one.

The Vesper Choir Will Be Singing More Of "In The 'Beginning' "

If you attended Vespers two weeks ago, you undoubtedly heard and remember a portion of the oddly beautiful Aaron Copland composition "In The Beginning". This Sunday night the Vesper Choir will sing the story of the creation of the sixth and seventh days, and at some future date will present the whole cantata.

"In The Beginning," taken from a text in Genesis, was written by Aaron Copland in Boston in 1947. It was designed to be sung a capella by a mixed chorus with a mezzo-soprano solo. The first performance of the cantata was given by Robert Shaw and the Collegiate Chorale in Cambridge, Mass., at the Harvard Memorial Church on May 2, 1947.

In her book "Aaron Copland," Julia Smith writes: "In one extended movement, with the mezzo-soprano as leader, singing in recitative style and announcing the creation of heaven and earth (in a gentle narrative manner, like reading a familiar and oft-told story), followed by the mixed a capella chorus which is first heard in two parts, "In The Beginning" at once invokes the spirit of God moving upon the face of the waters. Chronicling the division of the firmament into day and night, the chorus expands to three parts, completing the introductory section."

In this piece of music the obvious tricks of writing religious music have been avoided, but the power of the Biblical story is still conveyed. Throughout the work, the solo voice serves as a narrator who sets the scene and creates the mood and atmosphere for the following events of each day. An aura of "blues" and Negro spirituals permeate the work, although the composer doesn't use these sources literally.

The Composer

Aron Copland was born in Brooklyn, New York, November 14, 1900, of Harris Morris and Sarah Copland. He graduated from the Boys High School in Brooklyn in 1918, and studied music privately. He studied piano under Wittgenstein and Adler, and composition under Goldmark and Nadia Boulanger.

He was the first composer to receive the John Simon Guggenheim Fellowship, which was awarded to him in 1925. He also received the RCA Victor award in 1930, the Pulitzer Prize award for music in 1944, and the Music Critics award in 1945.

Besides his creative work, he has been active in the League of Composers, the Yaddo Festival, and the American Composer's Alliance, which he organized in 1937.

Jrs., Srs., Will Attend Special Studies Party

On December 4, at 7:30 p.m., all fortunate seniors who have finished their special studies, and all equally unfortunate juniors who are starting the inevitable task, are invited to a party in the Intramural Gym.

Seldom, if ever, have such odd tickets of admission been requested: for seniors, their special studies cards; for juniors, a pair of scissors.

Faculty members and guests will be interested in the plan to erect a monument at the party which will later be dedicated to the library.

M.C. Bob Finertie will preside while other entertainment is presented. The highlight of the evening is the presentation of Oracles Carol Lee Lacy, Shirley Mayfield, and San Roberts at the altar of the special studies.

A good time is promised for all.

Echo Forum-

Maryville Students . . .

Okay kids, let's face it! What we need is a good swift kick in the gray matter! Never saw a bunch of kids so deep in the doldrums. Shake that head of yours! Let's see a little mental revamping going on around here!

First of all, buddies, dust off that perspective! Don't tell me you've never had one! Sure, may be its been pretty well camouflaged, but you know that it's there, and it's about time you gave it half a chance to work! That's the thing, buddy, that keeps you going! That's the light you can make out way ahead at the other end of your tunnels! How'd we ever expect to get along without it?

Now, list, your grades are bad? You are ready to quit? So where's that perspective? Sure, good grades are fine, they are something to be proud of, but they are relative! If you are learning anything you're not wasting your time, even if you are just learning how not to study!

Study?

And another thing, these attitudes toward study, Oh! what a bunch of kids we are! What do we think we are studying for anyway? Tests? Have we forgotten that we have to live with all we are learning now? This is our last chance to stock up, time for study will be scarce when we get out!

Then there is this business of rebelling against authority. "Look what they are making us do," we cry. "Don't they realize we're grown up?" Don't we realize that this shows just how grown up we aren't? If we think we will ever live outside of regulations, we've just got a couple of more thinks coming! And if we don't have the maturity to realize that this is good, it's a doggone good thing that we'll be here long enough to learn that it is.

What do we think that regulations are for anyway? To undermine our much cherished individuality? To deprive us of everything possible without inciting some revolt? Sound exaggerated? Afraid you'll find it's true.

We have no business being told this, but here it is: these regulations are so we can live together. What else? Surely we realize that we are not at home. And a for individuality, by Air (to quote a friend), what in this world do we plan to use to build on? Say your standards are different? Good for you, only have the strength of character to hold your own.. What good's a character with nothing to exercise it?

Have I gotten your blood up? Good, show me I'm wrong! You're thinking, Scotty, you're thinking!

Homesick?

One more thing before I sign off, a couple of words to the homesick.

Home has never seemed to good to you as it now does. You've never enjoyed being there as much as you do now, and that's how come being away is such a wonderful thing! The bittersweet is best. You'll get more out of a weekend at home now than you got from your entire childhood. Now isn't that right? Think about it, and enjoy being here to learn.

B.B.

To the Editor:

Last week's editorial, "Let's Do It — Now," presented us with three categories of Maryville College students. First, those who actively support the "basic principles of Maryville College"; second, those who passively support them; and third, the dissenting minority. I believe that the author's goal was to do something about the apathy among our students . . . a most worthy aim! In order to accomplish this, so I understand, the minority must be surpressed and the "neutrals" encouraged to participate actively in the college activities.

Unfortunately, I am afraid the problem cannot be solved so easily. By trying to surpress any faction you will only succeed in demoralizing the whole group, and that certainly is not our aim. It seems to me that dissenting opinions should always be welcome. We must always be willing and ready to reexamine our "basic principals," and if necessary, change them; especially in a college devoted to the ideas of academic freedom such as Maryville College. We must never stoop to the tactics of supression and censorship of minority thought. Let us not fear dissent, for it is the liteblood of any democracy. A century ago John Stuart Mill stated very wisely:

Two Plays Will Be Given On Nov. 30

by Nancy Peters

On November 30, 1956 the Theatre will be the scene of two experimental plays. One, Green Pastures, by Marc Connelly, is being directed by Tony Clark. The other, Riders to the Sea, by John M. Synge, is being directed by Sylvia Smith.

Green Pastures is an adaptation from the book Old Man Adam and his Children by Roark Bradford. The cast features Sam Buffat as God, Dave Gilliland as Noah, Bonnie Lehr as Noah's wife, Ted McDaniels and Fred Kay as the Gamblers.

Ruby Roberts, Susie Parkinson and Ann Murray play first, second and third woman respectively. Rosemary Lee is the first cleaning woman and Anna Keitt is the second cleaning woman. Bob Evans, Ron Randon and Howard Meyer are also in the cast.

Riders to the Sea is familiar to most Maryville students. The plot concerns an old woman who has lost a father ,husband and six sons to the sea. Only one son remains. In the end he, too, is taken away. The cast features Virginia Hine as the mother Maurya. Bobby Grooters plays Cathleen, the eldest daughter. Mary Ann Braidwood is Nora, the younger daughter. Hugh Clark plays Bartley, the son who finally succumbs to the sea.

The experimental plays done here at Maryville are deserving of praise. Many hours of hard work have gone into making them the success that they have been. With more interest on the part of the student body by means of support and a desire to help, these plays will come into a realm of recognition long strived for and well deserved.

MC Lecture Series Committee Tells Of Future Plans

The Lecture Series Committee has almost completed the program of Lectures for this college year.

The first lecture of the 1956-1957 series was presented at the chapel hour on November 2 by Dr. Hardin Blair Jones of the University of California's Donner Radiation Laboratory.

The Committee still hopes to secure a speaker on some phase of the subject of mental health, if possible for an early December date, but that may not be possible.

Three major lecture engagements have been made for the months of the second semester.

On February 19 the speaker will be Professor Curtis MacDougall of the Northwestern University School of Journalism. Professor MacDougalll is a widely recognized authority on newspapers and on the other factors in the development of public opinion. His subject will be "Where do You Get your Ideas?".

On March 25, Dr. Frederick L. Schuman, Professor of Political Science at Williams College, will be here to speak on "Russia, America, and the Future" or some subject having to do with Soviet-American relations. Dr. Schuman is a world traveler and has written and spoken with distinction on subjects arising out of the Soviet factor in the modern world.

On April 9 (tthe date is not yet firmly set) Dr. Herman Finer, Professor of Political Science at the University of Chicago will speak on "An American Invention: the President of the United States." Dr. Finer has rendered eminent service as consultant to a number of foreign governments and has written a number of influential books in the field of government.

It is the present plan of the Committee that these lectures will be evening affairs, probably in the Theater. Fuller details regarding the lectures ,and their subjects will be forthcoming as the respective dates approach.

The Committee is already thinking in terms of the 1957-1958 program and is in touch with a few outstanding persons. Suggestions from faculty and students will be welcomed. The Committee is Anne Castrodale, Bob Goodlin, Bruce Ongles, Andy Loven, Mary Murphy, Dr. Buchanan, Miss Crews, Dr. Hunter, Miss Meiselwitz, and Dr. Queener.

Dance Band Plays, Theme Is Secret

On December 1, at eight o'clock in the Alumni Gymnasium, the 1956 fall dance will be presented by Theta Epsilon and Alpha Sigma societies. Permission to extend the dance to 11:30 has been obtained from the faculty senate.

A special features of the dance will be "The Encores," a dance band known in and around Knoxville. This band will be remembered from Theta and Sig's spring formal last year. Three pieces have been added to the band this year, bringing the total number of musicians to eight.

Surprise Theme

The theme and decerations of the dance are being kept secret, and a surprise announcement of the theme is being planned by Gray Clark, Barbara Thomas, and Will Roberts, the dance committee chairmen. Other committee chairmen for the dance are: Ves Travis, refreshments; Nancy Yaney, publicity; and Paul Conklin, tickets and programs.

Invitations to the dance are being extended to the administration and faculty members. Tickets for students will be on sale next week for $1.25 per couple.

The officers of the two societies, the dance committee chairmen, and their dates will make up the reception line.

Doctor Lloyd To Travel To Baptise Grandchild

President Lloyd will be absent from the Maryville campus Dec. 1-6. Dec. 1, Dr. Lloyd will fly to Little Rock, Arkansas, where, on Sunday, he will baptize his granddaughter, Alice Diane, born Dec. 17, 1955. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kramer ('47) (Ruth Lloyd, '47). On Dec. 3, Dr. Lloyd will be in Dallas, Texas, where he will attend the meeting of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. Bringing his trip to an end, President Lloyd will travel to Los Angeles Dec. 4-5, where he will attend a meeting of the General Board of the National Council of Churches. While in the San Francisco area Dr. Lloyd will have a chance to visit his son, Vernon, ('41), and his family. Also, while here, Dr. Lloyd will meet with Maryville College Alumni Clubs.

The Tumbling Class Will Present A Demonstration

The tumbling class will present a demonstration of pyramids Monday, November 26, during "D" hour in the Intramural Gymnasium. All interested students and faculty members are cordially invited to attend.

The Chilly Gusts Of Air Did Not Freeze Enthusiasm At C-N Game

by Carolyn Cones

The figure on the bleachers was valiently attempting to utter the words which were so important to him, but he was encountering great difficulty . . . he couldn't stop his teeth chattering long enough to articulate. With one tremendous surge of effort he gained mastery over his vocal cords and let the words spill forth from his eager tongue . . . "Get the ball, you all!"

This all happened a week ago on the field at Carson-Newman College. It was the time and place of the long-awaited clash between two great exponets of the sport commonly referred to as football. It was an exciting contest . . . full of chills (in more ways than one), thrills, and surprises . . . but, alas, as is usual with such types of games, only one team may emerge victorious, and the bell of Anderson tower did not ring that night.

Yet although these halls of ivy did not acquire another victory to add to the annals of history, the battle of brains and brawn which was staged before the frozen fans was not in vain. The encounter afforded an opportunity for the inmates of this institution to journey forth and see with their clear and sparkling eyes what was being proclaimed via radio to their warm and comfortable friends "back in the dorm."

The excitement of assembling on a foreign campus and presenting a united front before the throngs of the opponents was heightened by the sight, smell, and the actual partaking of food. Many varied forms of refreshment were paraded before the stands for approval and purchase . . . hot dogs, peanuts, pop corn, and hot coffee (the hot cup was especially good for thawing out frost-bitten fingers). The stimulating and psychological impact of the presence of such nourishment at contests such as this cannot be denied, and it may not be a bad

Let's Work For A Good Echo

It seems that almost everyone had something to say about the renewed life of the "Echo" after its presentation last Saturday. Most of the people I talked with had favorable comments on having a school paper but most were still dissatisfied with the content of the paper and the general apathy of its reporters. Did you ever stop to think that the apathy within the "Echo" is only an indication of the without, in the student body? Students are willing to find fault with the "Echo" and yet are not willing to give it any aid or help.

The most usual excuse given is lack of time. And that is just what it is, an excuse. There is always time. It is just a matter of picking the most worthwhile activities to channel it into. Most of us waste valuable time in giving too much time to unworthy activities. Perhaps the fault lies in spreading ourselves over too great an area. Some people join every club on the campus and accomplish nothing worthwhile in any of them.

Wouldn't it be better to join one organization and really be active in this one. Maryville College is a college devoted to social activity and perhaps for this reason most of the worthwhile organizations go unattended. To mention two, the International Relations Club and the best example, the "Echo." Every year we have a number of freshmen joining the staff, but by the time they are seniors most will have dropped out, giving the same old excuse, lack of time. Was time made for man, or man made for time? It takes time and energy to make any progress worthwhile.

A few individuals can not do the work of the many who should be in an organization.

The near discontinuence of the "Echo" has caused one good action and that is that it has brought about a re-evaluation of the "Echo" both from within and without. It was high time that this should happen. Now that it has let us hope that it will bring about a better paper in the future, one thing which we all agree we want.

Come Ye Thankful Jingle Bells

There was once a man named Ebenezer who got the Christmas spirit very late in life. Once he got it, though, there was no loosing it. But that is another story.

Once upon a time there was a man named Archibald who was a college professor, and so very easily confused. One year, on the 24th, he had purchased all his Christmas presents, his tree was trimmed, and he was waiting for his rather large family to come home for Christmas, as they always did. Poor Archie! They didn't come home. He walked up and down the gaily, greenly decorated streets, filled with Christmas spirit, and waited, but they never did come.

Not until a month later, on Dec. 25th did they show up. Poor Archie had been confused by the Christmas decorations up a month early. He knew that it was some holiday, because the students had the day off, and so, spying the decorations, he assumed it was Christmas, and celebrated it so.

You and I, average students of Maryville, think that is pretty stupid. We can tell Christmas from Thanksgiving any day. Yet have not we already started to celebrate Christmas? We find ourselves instead of studying, daydreaming about going home to a gay round of Christmas festivities.

We hear the Christmas carols (courtesy of Alpha Sigma), and thoughts of past Christmases push out thoughts of study. The Messiah practice, Christmas shopping, and the radio jingles remind us that Christmas is fast approaching.

So we let down, just a little. We'll soon be going home, and its almost over now. What difference do a few weeks make when Christmas is coming?

A LOT!

We aren't silly enough to celebrate Christmas on Thanksgiving, but yet, we are silly enough to celebrate Christmas every day from now until Christmas. These next few weeks may be the most important of the semester. Let's put Christmas back on the 25th of December!

"The Show Must Go On!"

That sounds like a very dramatic statement, both to those of us who are active in the theater and those who are the audience.

Many of us know the theater as a whole new world full of exciting feelings—the nausea invariably accompanying first try-outs for a new play; the close companionships, friendships which emerge from long hours of working together; the faithful, tedious work demanded of all the crews, from props through costumes, etc., lights, makeup; the little dramas backstage about which few outside the curtains know, such as a leading character getting sick with only three rehearsals left, or the pressing need for a certain type of black dress which no one in town confesses to prossess; the blinding, exhilarating glare of the lights when the big night comes. . . .

But even if all the lines are at last perfectly learned, creating real persons of their own individual character, and each crew's work is completed, and the leading lady is well, properly clad in a nice black matronly dress, and all the last minute rush of detail is polished off, and the whole cast is a tingle with tensions that help in creating a live drama—even if everything were ready to present, it would be a fine howdy-do if the curtains wre flung open to display a grand production representaitve of many huge hours of hard toil only to reveal on the other side of the attentive lights a measly number in the audience.

It appears to us that we, as the other group able to comprise an audience, should be immensely appreciative of our friends' dramatic abilities and their exerting time and energy for many, many weeks to bring us an evening of entertainment. One might say that (although the current hit is a terrific tearjerker!) So come along with us!

If you don't you will really miss a drama-and-a-half, for Playhouse is noted for the excellent productions it present. Perhaps now that you know just a fad of what happens before it's your cue to make an entrance, you will be right there ready to say your big line enthusiastically in one of the biggest shows of the year!

Come along with us, for the show must go on!

—L. M. for A.W.

Scots & Soda

By Barbara Wilkie

Nadir Vlaminsky, a transfer student from the University of Lower Slobovia, is here at Maryville College through the junior year abroad plan. We of the Echo staff thought the interviewing Nadir to find out her reactions to Western capitalist culture as displayed on Maryville Campus. The results of our interview were a little startling, but we think it was a worthwhile experience.

I was given the assignment of visiting Nadir in her room on fourth-floor Pearsons. Printed in bold red letters on a door (423) was the name NADIR VLAMINSKY, COMRADE, so I immediately knew she lived there. I knocked and waited. Soon the door opened slightly and a voice said, "What is the password?" Being unprepared for this, I could only think of "Black bread and beans", since that was what I had just had for lunch, this seemed to suffice, for the door opened wider and I was admitted. I was slightly irritated to hear the click of a padlock behind me, but I soon forgot about it and looked around the room, which was, by the way, so cold I had to keep my coat on.

Comrade Teacher

I noticed several pictures of Maryville faculty members on the wall. There were medals saying "hero," "our leader," etc. hanging from some of them. (I found out later that these designated Nadir's favorite teachers.) The room was furnished very austerely—no curtains, bedspreads, rugs or lamps—just a table, chair, bed, dresser, filing cabinet, and ceiling light. I was surprised to see no radiator, but I later learned that Nadir had gotten Brownie to remove it, since it clanked in the mornings when she didn't turn it on. The windows were open and snow was drifting in. I shivered and felt very Slobovianish.

Interview Begins

"You wanted to see me, comrade?" said the voice, which belonged to Nadir but which sounded more like a polar bear's.

"Why yes," I said and told her what I wanted, meanwhile observing that she looked no different from any other typical Maryville student—in loafers, argyle knee socks, bermuda shorts and horn-rimmed glasses. She was holding a volume of verse by T. E. Eliot, establishing the fact that she was an English major. When I finished making my request, she went over to her file, looked under "L" and handed me, without saying a word, the following statement:

"THE LIFE OF NADIR VLAMINSKY AT LOWER SLOBOVIA UNIVERSITY" (suitable for publication)

"I, Nadir Vlaminsky, was a student of higher mathematics at our state University, Lower Slobovia U.° I was extremely dissatisfied there. I chafed under the laborious schedule and rules inflicted upon me by my superiors. I arose at a 6:30 bell every morning to gulp down my brown porridge and water and dash to 8:00 classes a mile and a half from my residence quarters. There I ground away at knowledge until the noon whistle. Then I ate my lunch of beans, bread, bacon and water before going to my assigned work at the student-help factory. There I sorted no. 10 bolts from no. 9 bolts and put them in boxes for 5c an hour. With this money I bought my supper, after which I walked back in the snow to my cold room to study higher mathematics and quadrennial equations until after mightnight. I could not stay up this late very night, however, for the housemonger would come around to check if my lights were on after 11:00 and if they were and if I had taken my quota of electricity for the week, I had to pay 20c an hour for each overuse and appear before the house committee.

Sometimes I had a chance at social life when Zeno Nyetsky, a physics major, would take me to town (Slobbyville, three miles away) for an evening of Western movies. However, I never got to see the end to any of the pictures, since I was compelled to be back in the dorm at the U. before 11:30, and so it took me a long time to build up an idea of what Western Culture as depicted in the cinema was like.

"Zeno and I would walk back to school through the snow and discuss transferring to some small liberal arts college, say, in Eastern Tennessee, U.S.A., to observe for ourselves what frontier America is really like. And so I started going without supper and saving my nickels which I earned in the student-help factory to buy a plane ticket to America. Soon this was accomplished and so ends a chapter in my life—the one when I lived at L.S.U."

Interview Proceeds

When Nadir saw that I had finished redaing this background material and handed me the following:

"QUESTIONS TO ASK ME ABOUT HOW MARYVILLE COMPARES WITH L.S.U."

And so I asked her the questions she had written down:

ME: How does Maryville compare with Lower Slobovia U.?

NADIR: There are some striking similarities, but, in general, I like Maryville better.

ME: Why do you like Maryville better?

NADIR: Because the rules, though similar, are really much less strict.

ME: But I thought you said you could stay out until 11:30 at L. S. U. while at Maryville you must be in at 10:30. Isn't it stricter here?

NADIR: Oh, no, you forget—it was three miles to the movies in Slobbyville and here it is much less—so that I have more time to enjoy town nights at Maryville.

ME: Do you have a student help job here?

NADIR: Yes, I wash dishes for 10c an hour.

ME: Did your boy friend Zeno transfer here, too?

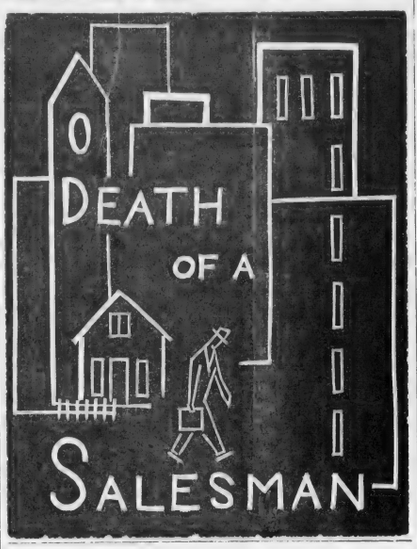
NADIR: No, he took my job of sorting bolts at L.S.U. I am currently dating Elvis Smith, a music major, here at M. C.

ME: Are you still a math major?

NADIR: No, I switched to English, since it seems to be the prevailing language in America.

ME: And so you are glad you came?

NADIR: Yes.



This being the end of the questions, I concluded that there were no more to ask, so I thanked Nadir and told her to read the next Echo, in which she might find her name mentioned. She smiled an

TALK OF THE WEEK

By Sue Settle

Voices, Masks, and Shadows

by Mimi Mattes

Calling all those lucky people who have time on their hands and money in their jeans. Many, many activities occurring in the dramatic field this week. Beginning Monday the Capitol Theatre is offering "The Opposite Sex."

The Park schedule was not available at the time of this writing.

Friday and Saturday night the Maryville Playhouse is presenting "Death of a Salesman." Don't miss it, it's a great play.

Wasn't Arthur Treacher wonderful? It's really a privilege for us to be able to see and hear such a variety of entertainers through the Artist Series. Don't forget the next (and last) two.

Books

For the literary minded — new books for every mood. For the ardent politician — "A Republican Looks at His Party" by Arthur Larson, Undersecretary of Labor. It should provide some new issues for partisans to shout about.

For the poetry lover — "The Manuscript Poems of A. E. Hausman." This is a volume including many works by Hausman that have never before been published. Sounds fascinating to anyone who has loved "A Shropshire Lad" and other works by Hausman.

And for those interested in biological science — "The Machinery of the Body" by Anton J. Carlson and Victor Johnson. This fourth edition of the book contains description of many new developments in the science of the human machine.

Harpsichord To Be Used In 24th Annual Messiah

Rehearsals are well under way for the 24th annual presentation of Georg Fredrich Handel's Messiah which will be given Sunday afternoon, December 9th, in the Samual Wilson Tyndale Chapel at three o'clock. According to Prof. Harry A. Harter, who is directing the annual production, a new harpsichord will be used this year to give the oratorio more of the original effects.

SPORTS SPOTLIGHT

By Joe Quinn

The Bowl picture cleared up slightly last week, but there are still some "if"s crowding the picture.

The Rose Bowl is just about cinched with Oregon State facing Iowa, recent conqueror of Ohio State.

The Orange Bowl named Colorado as one-half of its game with Clemson, Duke and South Carolina still in the running for the other position.

Both the Cotton Bowl and Sugar Bowl are waiting to see which one Tennessee will favor. The Vols are in a position to take either one. There is a possibility that they could be rematched against Georgia Tech in The Sugar Bowl.

Texes A.&M., champions of the Southwest is barred from the Bowl picture by the N.C.A.A. which leaves T.C.U., Baylor and S.M.U. still outside chances to be host team in The Cotton Bowl.

The Segregation Rule limits the Northern powers to the Gator Bowl which is eyeing such teams as Pitt, Syracuse, Navy and Penn. State.

Such is the Bowl picture for the 8th football week of 1956.

Scores of major games around the country last week were:

South		Midwest
Tennessee 27	Ole Miss 7	Iowa 6	Ohio State 0
Georgia Tech 27	Alabama 0	Minnesota 14	Mich. State 13
South Carolina 13	Maryland 0	Oklahoma 67	Missouri 14
Auburn 20	Georgia 0	Notre Dame 21	N. Carolina 14
Navy 34	Virginia 7	Michigan 49	Indiana 26

Scots Drop Finale For A 3-6 Season

A 14 point fourth quarter gave the Eagles of Carson Newman their seventh victory and the Maryville Highlanders their sixth defeat last Saturday night in Jefferson City. The Scots bounced back after a quick Eagle touchdown to drive across two of their own only to see their 8 point lead erased by a three touchdown deluge in the final 18 minutes.

Early in the opening period a Scottie aerial was intercepted on their own 30 yard line. The Eagles ran for a first down, then Albert Graves hit halfback Ronnie Peaks with a 14 yard scoring pass. The extra point attempt was blocked.

Maryville's First

Maryville bounced back when on third down following the kickoff Johnny Phipps tight roped down the sidelines for 50 yards to the Eagle 5. Two plays later Phipps drove over from the one. White's placement attempt was perfect and the Highlanders led 7-6.

Maryville's Second

Maryville's second TD came early in the 2nd quarter. Tailback Phipps on a beautifully executed fake reverse went 48 yards untouched. White again converted to give the Scots an 8 point lead. Maryville muffed a third scoring chance late in the half, but their stout defense kept the Eagles from getting anything that looked like a drive started.

In the 3rd period Eagle fullback Hampton climaxed a 71 yard drive as he scored from 3 yards out. The conversion attempt was good.

With time running out the Eagles had the ball with fourth and nine on the Scot 30. A fourth down pass interference call gave Carson Newman a first down on the Maryville 13. From there fullback Hampton again scored and the point was added to put the Scots behind 20-14.

Maryville, desperately trying to get back into the ball game, had another aerial picked off and three plays later tailback Paul White added an insurance TD.

Statistic wise the Scots trailed Carson Newman 4 first downs to 19 and 205 yards to 269. The defeat gave Maryville a 3-6 season's record.

Byrne And McNeil Teach Volleyball

If you see a girl walking around with a bruised thumb and forefinger or a sore, limp wrist, you can safely bet that she has been playing W.A.A. volleyball. The girls are learning to play this sport under the careful tutoring of Jane Byrne and Shirley McNeill. There are nine players to a team, and the playing of it involves coordination, skill, and a good strong wrist. The volleyball tournaments start on November 29. This is the last sport that will be played this semester. The new semester will be started off with basketball .

This week we will take the horse by the tail or however the old saying goes and start off with some advice for the ladies. Yours will come later gents so just stand in line. Well here goes:

A Maxim Revised

Ladies, to this advice give heed
In controlling men:
If at first you don't succeed
Why cry, cry again

Unknown

Where there's a will there's a way, so —
If a task is once begun
Never leave it till it's done.
Be the labor great or small,
Do it well or not at all.

Unknown

Then Laugh

Build for yourself a strong box,
Fashion each part with care;
When it's strong as your hand can make it,
Put all your troubles there;
Hide there all thought of your failures,
And each bitter cup that you quaff;
Lock all your heartaches within it,
Then sit on the lid and laugh.
Tell no one else its contents,
Never its secrets share;
When you've dropped in your care and worry
Keey them forever there;
Hide them from sight so completely
That the world will never dream half;
Fasten the strong box securely,
Then sit on the lid and laugh.

Bertha Adams Backus

A Smile

Let others cheer the winning man,
There's one I hold worthwhile;
'Tis he who does the best he can,
Then loses with a smile.
Beaten he is, but not to say
Down with the rank and file;
That man will win some other day
Who loses with a smile.

Moving into a lighter vein, from The University Echo comes the following:

"The papers say there are a million people overweight in this country. Of course, that's round figures."

The Optimist

The optimist fell ten stories
At each window bar
He shouted to his friends:
"All right so far."

VOL. 42 MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE, DECEMBER 8, 1956 No. 8

24th Annual Messiah To Be Given Tomorrow

by Joe McNeal

A chorus of 250 voices joined by a piano, harpsichord, organ, and symphony orchestra will unite in the 24th annual presentation of Handel's oratorio "Messiah" on Sunday, December 9, at 3:00 P.M. in the chapel auditorium. Mr. Harry H. Harter will direct the massive performance for the tenth time at Maryville.

"Messiah," perhaps the most celebrated of all choral works, tells the story of the prophecy, birth, life, death, and resurrection of Jesus Christ in a continuous series of solo recitatives and airs and chorales which range in theme from gentle ethereal beauty to powerful pronouncements of triumph and joy. An attempt is being made to present "Messiah" as near as possible to the concept which Handel wrote from by using the original orchestrations and choral arrangements.

Mr. Harter, director of the Vesper Choir, will be at the podium fo the tenth time. Miss Katherine Davies will play the harpichord, used this year for the first time in the performance. Gloria Mares will be at the piano and Maryel Vogel will be at the organ. Mr. Ralph Moore has prepared the College Symphony Orchestra and conducted it during rehearsal. Miss Katherine Crews will be concert-mistress.

MC Student Body Is Affiliated With National Student Association

by Sarkees Kaprielian

The United States National Student Association (USNSA) is a confederation of college student bodies represented through their student governments. With some 300 members representing 600,000 students, the association is the largest representative national student organization in the world.

Begun In 1946

The need for a national intercollegiate organization to promote students' interests and welfare has long been recognized, but the direct impetus for USNSA's formation came in 1946 when twenty-five American students attending the World Student Congress at Prague became aware that the United States stood almost alone without a representative national student group.

Their interest led to the calling of the Chicago Student Conference in December, 1946, to consider the formation of such an organization. Representatives from 300 colleges and 25 student organizations prepared recommendations on its character and structure and elected a continuations committee to prepare a draft constitution and organize the Constitutional Convention. This was held in September, 1947, at the University of Wisconsin and was attended by representatives of 300 colleges. Establishing the principle of membership by student government rather than national organization, they formulated a constitution for ratification by individual colleges, elected officers and mapped out a program for the new Association.

As each college student government adopted the constitution, it endorsed the aims and purposes of USUSA as outlined in the preamble, which dedicated the Association to "Maintain academic freedom, stimulate and improve democratic student governments, develop better educational standards, improve student welfare, promote international understanding, guarantee to all people equal rights and possibilities for education and foster the recognition of the rights and the responsibilities of students to the school, the community and God, and to preserve the interests and integrity of the government and the constitution of the United States of America."

McClelland Talks To Council On Sunday Dating

by Ted McDaniels

At a recent meeting of Student Council Dean McClelland came to answer the question, why was the Sunday dating privilege for underclass women not approved? It was evident that the students were sincere in their purpose by the large turn out that came to hear the Dean. There were about seventy members of the student body present above the number of the Council members.

At the Dean began his discussion, he stated that the reasons that he would put forward were not designed to convince or convert anyone to the side of the faculty. He said that he felt it was the students right to question the reasons for the actions and that he was glad to try to give them the answers they asked for. He also pointed out that the answers that he would present were of a general nature and not entirely his opinion on the matter, but he felt that they, in some measure, reflected the main reasons why the Executive Council had not approved the proposal.

First the Dean cited the College tradition of reasonably strict Sunday observance, pointing out that it was felt the extention of the Sunday dating would change the atmosphere or tone of Sunday on campus. Secondly he pointed out that it had seemingly been the desire of the Executive Council not to extend the dating pattern on Sunday for it was the least supervised time of the week and there was no planned activity during this time. A thought considered here was that the dating could possibly get out of hand and might possibly embarass visitors to the campus. To substantiate this claim he said that they discussed the situation in the parlors which has at various times caused the College some embarrassement due to parents and other visitors in the women's dorms observing scenes that they felt unbecoming to the College and in which they found personal embarrassment. Thirdly the Dean stated that the proposal that came to the Executive Council pointed out the inconsistency in the present program allowing the students to date on Easter and Baccalaureate Sundays. He said that there is really no inconsistency in the program, merely no better answer has ever been worked out to fit the situation on those two particular days. On those days the campus is filled with cut of town visitors, many of them relatives and friends of the students and there would be no point in depriving them the right to take people off campus or see them on campus. So in order to avoid as much confusion as possible the students were allowed to date freely on those two days.

After these explanations there was a period of general questioning on various parts of the Dean's topics. These questions were answered promptly and as fairly as possible ,taking into account that the Dean was not speaking as an individual but as a representative of the Executive Council.

Did You Enjoy The Dinner Music?

by Allen Russell

Well, the dining hall has been pretty qquiet, that is in the way of music, recently. I wonder what has happened. For a while there, it seemed quite nice. Several people have asked me since it stopped, why we are not having it any longer. Public opinion seemed to like it. I understand though, that the volume was quite loud beneath and around the speakers, but as a whole it filtered itself quite well across the room. If you enjoyed the music, see one of your council representatives, and maybe if enough of the student body likes it, we may be able to have the music once more.

Food Problem On Sunday Nights Starts Action

by Mary Murphy

The problem has been recognized by Student Council that girls with an oncoming appetite don't get enough to eat on Sunday nights. Since they cannot go out to get something to eat, and the food that is ordered is often cold and soggy, they do have a stomach problem. A committee was set up to look into the matter. After general discussion of the problem at this committee meeting, three recommendations were made which would be sent to Student-Faculty Senate:

1. To investigate the possibilities of getting more to eat on Sunday evening in the dining hall, with something hot served;

2. To promote the idea of milk machines in the dorms;

3. To suggest that the Y-store keep in stock such things as peanut butter and other sandwich making materials.

When brought before Student-Faculty Senate, it was approved that we have milk machines and that the Y-store carry materials for sandwiches. Senate also felt that the suggestions about the dining hall should be looked into.

Fruit Machine

P.S. Have you noticed the fruit machine in the Student Center? If not, notice it and also the fact that peanut butter and a wide variety of crackers to put it on is available now, so stock up girls, stock up!

SPANISH CLUB

The Spanish Club held its last meeting of the semester on Thursday, December 6, in the language lab. The program consisted of a Christmas fiesta complete with a pinata and the election of officers for the next semester.

Stan Mont will read criticized by Betty Springstead and Betty Knott will read, criticized by Miss Jackson. The meeting will include a short Christmas party and refreshments will be served.

The Student Forum Is Council Sponsored

By Ted Frauman

What is the stuaent forum and why has the student council sponsored it?

The student forum is a meeting in which the students from all four classes will get together to voice their opinions on problems of Maryville College and also to bring to the attention of student council new problems.

The student council is sponsoring the student forum so that it can discover the sentiments of the majority of the students on campus, in order that it may meet the students needs in the future.

Kappa Phi Has Election

This Saturday night the Kappa Phi Society will hold its installation ceremony for its newly elected officers. Elections were held this week but at the time of the printing, the results had not been tabulated.

The men sent flowers and expressions of sympathy to Bob Kalstrom and his family as his father passed away last week.

The main order of business at the last meeting was the approval of the slate of officers for next semester.

The Y's To Sponsor Christmas Reading Tomorrow Night

Miss Kathleen Craven and Mr. James Bloy will be reading Christmas poems and stories tomorrow night at the annual Y sponsored Christmas Readings. This year's readings are to be held in the Dining Hall at 7:15.

There will be Christmas music before the readings begin.

There will be no regular meal in the Dining Hall tomorrow evening because of the lateness of "The Messiah," and "sack suppers" will be given out at noon. All students and faculty are invited to come and sit around the fire. Everyone should bring blankets to sit on.

Christmas Readings are a project of Y. The following have helped plan this year's readings: Ann Kelton, Bruce Ingles, Sam Buffat, Joe Tropansky, Ann Murray, Barbara Wilkie, Jim Colquhound, Shirley Peterson, and Bill Bolger.

Echo Forum

Dear Editor,

It is now almost ten thirty, and I am getting a bit sleepy. I have just returned from the Student Forum. and dear Editor I just have to tell you that I am mature. If you don't believe me just ask me, and I will tell you that fact again. For three years, I have been going to college because I felt I wasn't mature enough to face the "real outside world." Then, tonight I had all my problems solved, by quietly walking into the lecture room in Thaw to the meeting of Student Forum. Within minutes many of my fellow students were telling each other that we students are mature. (It does seem a pity that that nasty old administration does not understand we are mature.) A generally accepted idea is that actions do speak louder than words. Of course, all student actions at Maryville prove we are mature. The parlor situation, violations of town night, and the general attitude that we can always "get around" the rules are shining examples of our maturity.

Also, theer is an exhibition of maturity in selecting a college with Christian principles which makes it (forgive me) different", and then immediately beginning to want to change the principles so it will be exactly like every other college in the United States.

In a more formal vein, I do feel we owe a vote of thanks to Ted McDaniels for his fine chairmanship. Also, there was a fine feeling of cooperative listening among the students present. Still, I plead with you fellow students let us give the administration credit for having some wisdom, and let us show The administration, the faculty, and each other that we are mature.

Sincerely,
Margaret Patterson

Clubs Co-ordinated In Committee

By Ted McDaniels

The Student Organizations Committee's main duty is to act as a liason between the various special interest groups on campus and the Student Council. It reads and approves the initiation plans of the various groups and makes any suggestions that may be necessary to keep these programs in line with the general overall campus program.

It was the action of this committee that had the termination time for the initiation for the men's social organizations extended from 6:00 p.m. until 10:00 p.m.

The only official actions other than the above mentioned during this semester were the approval of the initiation procedures of the men's and women's social organization initiations and the various music group initiations and the B.G. Club.

The Student Council office is now located in the publications annex.

MC Freshman Orientation Program Is Now Being Re-Evaluated

by David Krotchko

The orientation of freshmen is a never-ending problem under survey throughout all the schools in the country. The transition of the novice from his high school and home-type environment to the college and away-from-home-type environment imposes many problems of adjustment, almost as many and as varied as the individual student himself. In addition to that, the general nature of college itself is one that is in continual change, annually incorporating additions and subtractions to its procedures of operation.

Consequently, any and all programs demand a constant and constant revision in accordance with the changing times in order to be progressing. In view of this, it was proposed at the Student-Faculty Senate that a committee be appointed to evaluate the present Freshman Orientation Program.

The committee consisted of Ann Castrodale, Chairman-elect, Miss Walker, Dr. McClelland, Mr. Witherspoon, Don Hill, and David Krotchko. After studying information from other colleges, The United States National Student Association, the freshman class, and the student and faculty leaders of the orientation classes, the committee will submit its recommendations to the Senate. It is hoped that the new type of orientation program proposed will contribute much to the improvement of the present system and will provide an adequate foundation of adjustment aids for the incoming freshmen.

Council Is Related To Other Groups

Several Campus Organizations Handle Proposals

by Ann Newcomer

Each student on the Maryville campus is involved in one way or another in a student government organization. Although the system seems complex, each organization has its separate function and is likewise integrated with the total plan. Student Council is related either directly or indirectly to the student-Faculty Senate, the Women's Student Government Association, the Executive Council of the Faculty, and the Men's Student Organization.

Many proposals or legislation that Student Council wishes to put into effect must first be approved by the Student-Faculty Senate, a governing body composed of eight faculty members and eight Student Council members. In turn, the Student-Faculty Senate may send proposals to the Student Council. A proposal that has passed both the Student Council and the Senate must then go to the Executive Council of the faculty, a legislative body made up of the heads of departments and officers of the college. If the proposal is passed there, it goes into effect. Recommendations may be given to Student Council and to the Student-Faculty Senate by the Executive Council.

Student Council and the Women's Student Government Association are related in that they are both governing bodies for the students, the W.S.G.A. being for the women dormitory students. They are closely coordinated, especially in connection with the operation of the Town Night Plan. Disciplinary action for the infraction of Town Night rules must be passed on by both organizations. When the Men's Student Cooperative goes into operation it will be connected with Student Council in a manner similar to that of W.S.G.A.

Milk Machines Being Obtained

by Charles Garrison

During the spring semester of this year several students expressed the idea of having a milk machine for the dormitories. They asked if I would look into it through Student Council. Realizing that information was first necessary before the idea could make any headway, I set about getting all the facts. Through contacts at U.T. I found out where they obtained their milk machines and contacted the company. They were very interested in providing the machines.

The next step was getting the approval of Student Faculty Senate. Spring semester drew to a close before this action took place. However, at the beginning of this semester Senate approved the idea which then sent it to Executive Council. Without much delay they passed it and we ordered the machines from the Tennessee Service Company in Knoxville. The milk was provided by the Pet Dairy which works in cooperation with them.

We are now only waiting for the Tennessee Service Co. to get enough machines in repair so that each dormitory can have one.

Committee Is Formed To Study Curriculum

By Andrew Loven

This committee is composed of a student and faculty member from each of the six curricular divisions of the college with the Dean of Curriculum as chairman. The faculty members are appointed by the president of the college, and each student is chosen by the major students in the division which he represents.

The purpose of the committee is to study matters of curriculum and instruction in which it is thought improvement could be made. The reports of these studies are made to the Student Faculty Senate. By comparing Maryville with other liberal arts colleges, the committee has been investigating such topics as the number and kind of requirements for the degrees and the possible institution of more three-hour courses.

Student Programs Com. Has Censoring Job

by Mert Hall

The student programs committee set up to censor some of the school functions throughout the year. The programs censored by this committee are Rush Week, Homecoming, Skit Night, Freshman Talent Show, Senior Sendoff, and Senior Day.

The committee is composed of both faculty and students. Members this year include, from the faculty, Dr. Case (chairman), Miss Craven; student representatives include Mert Hall (co-chairman), Ann Kelton, and Dave Krotchko.

A Word From Council President—

Now that Special Studies is nearly history—infamous or otherwise—a few original thoughts have crept into my gray matter. Since this frame of mind is apt to welcome much criticism, I shall try to be as diplomatic as is possible, yet I shall endeavor to express my thoughts and the thoughts of many other students. What an endeavor!

The end of the Fall Semester of 1956 is not far off and now is a good time to review briefly the state of student affairs here at Maryville College. Progress has been made this semester in regard to student affairs. Council is hoping for more of the same next semester. Mutual advice and consultation among faculty, administration, and students contributed a great deal to the welfare of our College community. Increased student interest in student government has elevated the position of Student Council. The strength of our Council rests in the hands of each member of the student body. I hope that it will be only a matter of time before Student Council realizes its full significance. Our duty now is to move in that direction.

For a number of years the Band received little attention and help. The situation has reversed itself. Credit is due the Band Director and each member of the Band for the fine demonstration of individual and group initiative. The Administration, too, deserves commendation for providing the Band an opportunity to develop. School spirit has been exceptionally good this year. The four Societies are responsible in part for much of this appreciated enthusiasm and interest. Notes of encouragement have been flowing from the depths (no evil implications) of Carnegie Hall—the men are in the process of establishing a Men's Student Cooperative. The women are now concerned with the job of revising their Constitution. I am confident that next semester the Preisdent of W. S. G.A. and the Chairman of the Men's Student Cooperative will be given representation on Student

Review Of Action On Sunday Dating

by Sam Buffat

This semester your Student Council presented a proposal for extension of Sunday dating. It was requested that Sunday dating privileges be extended to include the Freshman and Sophomore women. A suggestion was also included which asked for dating to start at one o'clock rather than two-thirty as it does now. The main body of the proposal consisted of several statements in which your Council gave reasons for extension of Sunday dating.

The proposal was taken to the Student-Faculty Senate. After considerable discussion it was sent on to the Executive Council by a vote of recommendation. At the Executive Council the proposal was discussed to a great extent, voted upon, and defeated by a majority. Later Dean McClelland came to Student Council. Through his explanation and his answering students' questions the faculty point of view was presented to Council and some seventy visitors.

The latest development took place when the Freshman and Sophomore women presented a petition to Dr. Lloyd requesting a review of the proposal. The issues and questions are still on the minds of many, and I hope the Student Forum has proven to give each student a greater understanding of the problem and what can be done to help. Any further progress, any further cooperation lies with each student.

Lecturers Chosen By Student-Faculty Committee

By Ann Castrodale

Evidence of the efforts of the Lecture Series Committee has been witnessed once this year in the coming of Dr. H. B. Jones, who spoke to the student body on the subject of radiation November 2, and will again be seen second semester when three more lecturers will be here. The arrangements for these are now complete, and the first of the three will be February 19, when Professor Curtis MacDougall of the Northwestern University will lecture on the subject "Where Do You Get Your Ideas." On March 25, Dr. Fredrick L. Schuman who is Professor of Political Science at Williams College will speak on a subject concerning Soviet-American relations. Dr. Philip N. Hauser, Head of the Department of Sociology of the University of Chicago, will be speaking April 11, to the students about population trends.

As well as planning for this year's lectures, the Committee will be scheduling speakers for the year 1957-1958.

The Lecture Series Committee this year is composed of faculty representatives: Dr. J. D. Buchanan, Miss Katherine Crews, Dr. E. R. Hunter, Chairman, Miss Gertrude Meiselwitz; student representatives: Anne Castrodale, Robert Goodlin, Bruce Ingles, Andrew Loven, Mary Murphy.

Social Commitee Is Working Hard

By Joan Neckerman

The Social Committee is a student-faculty committee with the purpose of providing an adequate and varied social program for the student body. This year it started functioning the first week of school with tthe presentation of the Sing and the Student Mixer. Since the beginning of the semester there have been varied activities sponsored by the committee including the movie "Lorna Doone" and an informal dance.

Dance Time Extended

A proposal was forwarded to the Executive Council for extending the time termination for the formal dances to 11:45. Permission was granted to extend the time to 11:30, which went into effect for the Fall Dance.

We feel we have had a very successful semester, and we hope that the cooperation and enthusiasm will continue to enable us to present a well-rounded social

Men Students Form Own Government

Constitution Is Ratified

by Adlai Boyd

Recognizing the need of some organization of the resident men, the president of Student Council, with the voiced approval of these men, appointed a small body of interested persons to draw up and create an acceptable constitution for a men's government. This task has been successfully carried out, the result being a constitution that has been approved by a majority of the resident men, the faculty, and the administration. It only remains to be put into active effect by the elections of specified officers whose duties it will be to coordinate and improve dormitory life on this campus.

This government, the Men's Student Cooperative, will consist of a representative council to take the actual steps involved in coordinating dormitory life. It is the aim of the Cooperative to harmonize more fully the elements that make up our dormitory situations. A unification of spirit and actions, being desirable, should be attained through the efforts of this group. Perhaps a direct quotation from the ratified constitution can best illustrate the objects of this government.

Section 2. Object:

a. To furnish a responsible group which shall represent accurately the best interests of all men living on campus.

b. To serve as a body by which proposals arising from the men shall be considered, developed, and, if deemed necessary, presented to the Student Council or to the proper authorities of the College.

c. To cooperate with the College in the general oversight of dormitory life and to encourage the type of dormitory life desired by a large majority of the men.

An optimistic attitude is apparent among the men on campus concerning the ability of this newly formed idea and constitution to achieve these goals.

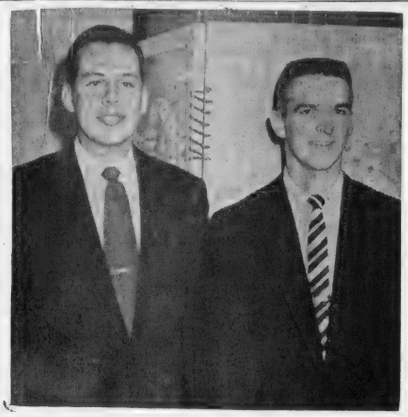
Improvements Made In In Student Center

Bob Goodlin

The student council project committee was formed this fall as a special committee. Its first project has been the improvement of the student center. One object is to make the center more collegiate by means of pennants, if possible, another step towards this goal will be to have individual, card boards, cut-out pictures of the athletics durinp their respective seasons to familiarize the student body with the faces of the players-as opposed to just numbers and names.



An angular bottle rack will soon be installed to alleviate the problem of having to crash the line to replace empties. New window shades have already been put up to replace those that had been in use for six years. If funds can be obtained, the ping-pong tables will be repainted over the holidays. At this same time, an additional magazine rack will be made.

More Projects

Other projects as beautifying the campus, are in the embryonic stage. However, it is the hope of the committee to make this an all-inclusive, spirited campaign to improve the school. Any suggestions will be greatly appreciated - this is your opportunity to make your ideas known.

Thousands of Hungarian women defied Russian armored cars and machine gun fire in Budapest on Tuesday, to demonstrate in honor of those Hungarians recently killed in the attempt for freedom from Moscow.

Plans for a December 16 to 18 visit of Hammarskjold to Hungary was turned down Wednesday by the Hungarians.

Football

The last big week of football came and went last wek and at last the Bowl picture is in form. Here's the way they line-up;

Rose Bowl—Iowa vs. Oregon State
Cotton Bowl—Texas Christian vs. Syracuse
Sugar Bowl—Tennessee vs. Baylor
Gator Bowl—Georgia Tech vs. Pittsburg
Orange Bowl—Colorado vs. Clemson

In the Big ones last week, Army and Navy fought to a 7-7 deadlock. Southern Cal. tripped Notre Dame 28-20.

Tennessee led by All-American John Majors whipped Vanderbilt 27-7. Georgia Tech routed Georgia 35-0 and Miami downed Florida 20-7 in the South's Big Battles for December 1.

Baylor blasted Rice 46-13 and T.C.U. beat S.M.U. 216 to round out the Big ones in the nation.

Next week the one to watch is the Miami-Pitt game to be played in the Orange Bowl. It should be a terrific game.

Olympics

Under the backdrop of international turmoil, the 1956 Olympic games got underway in Melbourne, Australia before 103,000 fans.

The U.S. got off to a flying start especially in the track and field events. Twelve of our first nineteen Gold Medals came in these events. Such stars as Charlie Dumas, Bob Morrow, Glenn Davis, Harold Connolly, Tom Courtney were not only snatching gold medols, but were making new records at every turn.

The U.S. also did well in the weight lifting competition and we're holding our own in the boxing circle.

The magnificent basketball team ripped through competition at a record breaking clip. They enjoyed a rousing victory, over the Russians by an 85-55 score.

At the last unofficial count, Russia had surged ahead of the U.S. in points, but the U.S. still lead in gold medals.

Scotties Elect

At their annual banquet held Tuesday, Noyember 27, in the college dining hall, the Maryville Highlander football squad elected Buddy Beam to captain the 1957 Scotties. Johnny Phipps was elected alternate captain. Beam, a former Rule High of Knoxville star, is a two year letterman while Phipps has just finished his first season at Maryville. Both were important cogs in the Scottie machine this fall.

Fashions

By Bobbye Carson

Fashions for the Holiday Season are up for discussion this week. Have any suggestions?

Of course being home with our families for the holidays is utmost in our minds. After these thoughts have warmed our hearts, we think about having a good time with our friends. Maybe you are planning to have a big party for everyone who is home from college. Or perhaps, you can think of a party or two for which you have already accepted invitations. Needless to remind you, now's the time to start thinking about what to wear to such parties.

Color

There is no doubt about the preferred colors. Yep!—red or green! I think red is used the most, but both or even combinations are very appropriate.

Party dresses of velveteen are very highly recommended. All styles from simply made sheaths to full and fancy dresses are good in this material. Many of the sheaths are donned with drapes or boat necklines, three-quarter length sleves, and sometimes cumberbunds. Many of the new styles are using the chiffon ties, or back drapes to add interest.

Many of the clothing stores are favoring dresses of taffeta with extremely full skirts. The tops are often of the simple jumper style, or low necklines with three quarter length or long sleeves. Often the dropped waistline or empire waistline is employed in this particular style. Their swishy shirts are quite noisy and attract attention in more than one way.

The previous ideas are ones that could be used for semi-formal party going. It is of course more important that you suit your dress to the occasion and type of party.

For the fellows, the semi-formal parties require a dress suit or if preferred, tuxedoes, or dinner jackets. In Florida, I hear for many holiday parties, the fellows wear dinner jackets and bermuda tux pants. That would certainly be different for M.C., wouldn't it?

Strickland

William Strickland, a senior biology major from St. Petersburg, Florida, has been one of our outstanding athletes. He has played football since his freshman year and has also been active in basketball. He has been a member of the track team since his sophomore year, and was captain of the team in his junior and senior years. Mr. Strickland has been in Men's "M" Club and has participated in intra-murals. He has been a member of Alpha Sigma for the past three years, and was president of the society in his junior and senior years. Strickland was a May Day escort and a member of Student Council in his junior year, and was on the Student-Faculty Senate, the Student Council, and the Quarterback Club as a senior.

Wilkie

Miss Barbara Wilkie, an English major from Skyland, North Carolina, is the secretary-treasurer of the Student Council. She has been a member of the Echo staff since her freshman year, and was editor of the paper in her junior year. As a sophomore, she was Bainonian's program chairman and a member of French Club and the Inter-Racial Committee. Miss Wilkie has worked with the YWCA program and was the Community Service co-chairman in her junior year and program chairman this year. She has been a member of Writer's Wokshop since her junior year and was also a part of the Daisy Chain.

Council. A re-evaluation study of the Freshman Orientation Program has been completed. A report of this study will be forthcoming.

I would like very much to be able to report favorably on certain other matters which concern directly a number of students. With this in mind I care to discuss with you the real significance of Student Council here at Maryville College. Student Council so far has fallen short of its obligations. This is the fault of no one person or group. Apathy on the part of some students and faculty has detained progress and therefore limited the authority of Student Council. Student government exercises only as much real authority as is delegated to it by the administration. The authority and prestige of any Council is proportional to the maturity of the group which it represents. I am not suggesting that the Administration delegate outright spheres of authority, but I am suggesting that students be extended the right to contribute more freely to the educational community. Teaching methods, building programs, admission policies, standards of conduct, policy-making, etc., should be discussed openly. Increased student-faculty and student-alumni contacts would contribute much toward the mutual understanding of roles in our educational community.

Maybe college students are not responsible enough to assume such a task. This I doubt and hope is not true. I found this quote in a manual sent to me by the National Student Association of which Maryville College is a member school: "American students today have a vital concern with the problems of higher education. There is a significant trend toward more student participation in faculty and administrative policy-making groups. Intelligent, informed student participation in the decision making of the college community is becoming an integral and invaluable element in American higher education. . . We feel that a comprehensive program of specific study and action designed to further inform American students of the nature of educational crisis and to further motivate them to act toward its solution will prove an effective meaningful contribution to higher education."

Students of today hold to themselves the Key to the future. The fate of humanity is in our hands. May we adequately prepare ourselves for the job which is soon to be ours by building and strengthening daily desirable qualities of character. Leadership, initiative, originality, brotherhood, and faith are essential for the assurance of freedom, happiness, and life.

—Dick Henderson
Student Body President

AS WE SEE IT. . . .

By Dick Jones, Jack Emery, Don Hill

The main problem confronting the Scottie wrestling team at present is weight. Almost all the men are overweight and a few will have trouble getting down to their usual weight class. On the whole the team lacks experience, the only veterans being Jerry Waters, John Hawkins, and Max Williamson. The two matches with Knoxville Y should help a lot in this department and the upset victory Friday night certainly aided team moral.

By tournament time the team should have developed into a definite contender for S.E.C. honors. At present the contenders for championship honors are Jerry Waters, for his third straight year, at 123 lbs., Max Williamson at 137, and heavyweight John Hawkins.

Vol. 42 MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE, DECEMBER 15, 1956 No. 9

Congratulations Alumni!

Brubaker To Speak At February Meetings

The February Meetings for the current college year are scheduled for February 6-14, 1957.

The speaker this year will be the Rev. Edward Brubaker, D. D., Pastor of the Tabernacle Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and Director of the Westminster Foundation for the Philadelphia area.

The other members of the team will be again Rev. John Magill, D. D., Pastor of the Abington Presbyterian Church in Philadelphia, and Dr. Henry Barraclough of Philadelphia, Assistant Stated Clerk of the Presbyterian General Assembly. Thus it will be a Philadelphia team this year. This is the first time all tthree leaders have come from the same city.

Dr. Brubaker, like Dr. Magill, is an alumnus of Maryville College, having graduated in the Class of 1938. He was born in Birmingham, Alabama, received his Bachelor of Theology degree at Princeton Theological Seminary and has taken two years of graduate study at Union Theological Seminary.

Following his seminary course he was for two years Assistant Pastor at the North Avenue Presbyterian Church, New Rochelle, New York; then for three years, from 1943 to 1946, he was a Chaplain with the U. S. Marine Corps, serving with the 2nd Marine Division in the battles of Saipan, Tinian, and Okinawa, and took part in the occupation of Nagasaki, Japan, immediately after its destruction by the atom bomb. For heoric service he was awarded the Bronze Star.

After the war and two years of further study, Dr. Brubaker became Pastor of Central Presbyterian Church of Fayetteville, Arkansas, and Director of the Westminster Foundation at the University of Arkansas where he served five years. He has been in Philadelphia for the past three years.

His church is near the campus of the University of Pennsylvania, and he has general oversight of the Presbyterian student work in forty-one colleges and schools of the Philadelphia area. Thus he has a close and dynamic relationship to American college students.

Dr. Magill, who was a leading singer when a fellow student of Dr. Brubaker in Maryville College, is Pastor of a large church of 2,000 members and leads the singing at his Alma Mater as a sort of advocation. This will be the fifth year he has rendered this service.

Dr. Barraclough will return as accompanist for the sixth time. He is a native of England and came to America first as an accompanist for the well known evangelists, J. Wilbur Chapman and Charles M. Alexander. He is a composer and author of many works of which the best known probably is "Ivory Palaces."

Library Notice

All library books should be returned by December 17. Failure to pay fines or return books will mean grades withheld at the Personnel Office. In addition to the regular fines for books returned late, a negligence fee of 50c will be charged if books are not in the library by December 21.

A list of students with unpaid fines will be posted in Thaw and Anderson. Before leaving, consult this list or check at the circulation desk.

Student Council Committee Has Campus Elections

By Mike Matthews

The election committee, which is composed of the Vice President of the student body and the President of each class, is responsible for supervising the nomination and election of all class and student body officers.

Included in their work is the Barnwarming election, the Homecoming election, the May Court election and the choosing of an editor and a business manager of the Chilhowean.

During election, the committee counts and records votes, takes charge of the polls in Pearsons and announces the results in Chapel.

In April, when the class and student body officers are elected, this committee is required to see that seventy-five signatures of confidence are acquired by each candidate. This is the committee's biggest month.

So far the percentage of students that voted in the Barnwarming and Homecoming elections is: Freshmen 57.5%, Sophomores 66%, Juniors 81.4%, and Seniors 86.1%.

Next semester the May Court will be elected and the Chilhowean editor and business manager will be chosen. Of course, the finale of all the voting is the student body election which comes in April.

The committee would appreciate any suggestions as to how the percentage of voting students could be increase.

The Purpose Behind Scheduled Class Meetings

By Don Hill

It has been the wish of the class presidents of this school, for many years, to have a special time alloted to class meetings. This year the idea is being tried out. The main complaint in the past was that there was not enough time given to conduct all of the class business. The set-up as it is now not only gives the president time to take care of the business at hand, but also allows time for other matters. Student council members have a chance to report on council's functions, there is more of a chance for the class to discuss and bring up new ideas. These class meetings, it is hoped, will create more interest in student government on the campus, but it is up to the students to use them to their benefit.

French Club Elects Boyd New President

On Thursday, December 6, the last French Club meeting of the semester was held. A special dinner party was held in the Y rooms. At the conclusion of dinner, election was held for next semester's officers. The following people were elected: President, Joyce Boyd; vice-president, Esther Balph; secretary, Ruth Dean; treasurer, Alice McComb; and program chairmen, Betty Boone and Scotty Marshall.

Meditation: For Christmas

The long, long, shadows of the enduring night abound
Across a morn-loving, light-seeking, now-sleeping earth,
Black, utter, and irrevocably profound,
They, dark-grasping, cold-clutching, hold back the jewelled day's birth.
Lights
Flicker,
Helpless lights,
Throwing bravely
Unextinquished hope
Into the face of night.

But what of those whose candles are extinguished?
Who, blind-stumbling, dark-seeing, light-seeking, grope
Through dark valleys, shadowed death. . .
And find no hope?

But hear the voice of one who crieth from the night:

"The people that walked in darkness
Have seen a great light,
And they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death,
Upon them hath the light shined,"

And now see. Beyond the night-dominion limit of the mountains,
Where silver-golden, green-shadowed, precious-jewelled, comes the dawn
Dispelling night, despersing gloom; are springing fountains
(life-light, silver-hope, day-star)
Spreading, pooling through the night's encampment, from the upturned silver basin of the sun.

All is light, no darkness can remain,
The tiny candle lights are dimmed by the radiant day,
The need of them, their usefulness has passed away.

"And they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death,
Upon them. . .
The day has come
The night has fled
Life is living
Death is dead.
". . . . hath the light shined."

—Virginia Hine

Conversation on Gifts

A little child looked out one night
Surveying the earth—the sky—the sea.
"Dear Father, Thou hast so many stars, Would'st Thou give one to me?"

God—
"Not one, but two, I give to Thee
To show, to put to the use
Which I appoint. Thou must Promise these never to abuse."

Child—
"Father, if Thou would'st that these
I have, I take it as my duty
To use them sincerely—honestly—
And never to cheapen their beauty."
"But how to do this tihng, O

Shall I set them in a ring,
Or necklace, or plush box or secret place,
And only to the elite them bring?"

God—
"Oh foolish little one! Think'st Thou
I would give of my best
To such as are already so
Healthy, happy, and blest?"
"No! Thou'llt wear these in thine eyes,
To shine on such as need
Their sparkle most: the defiant,
Weak, hopeless—these Thou'llt lead."
"Then Thou will't be fulfilling
My sacred Purpose and Plan.
Thy task is to melt the icebergs—
Fighting fire with fire in the soul of Man."

—Ruth Wilson

Christmas Poem

A splendid star rent the velvet sky,
In the chill clear night on a holy hill,
The fitful talk of a shepard band,
And the sleepy sounds of the sheep near by.

They talk of wife and home and child,
Of wars and sin and ceaseless strife,
Of tyrants and tax and turbulence,
Of the Promise they held through the ages wild.

Anon God's night with His glory shone,
As His angel spoke of a Saviour born,
In a humble town on a manger low.
The messengers made life's vict'ry known.

"To God on high all glory be,
To men on earth good will and peace."
The hills gave voice to the angel's words,
And still sing the sound of echoing plea.

With the birth of the Son was a promise kept,
And free God's gift of highest love,
With the death of the Son on a cross of hope
The power of Sin from the earth is swept.

Modern Christmas

'Tis once again the joyous Christ-season,
Snowbells jingle in the evening calm,
Carols ring from choirs. Yet—
The reason
Man's mind cannot be silenced by the psalm
Of Joy is that twelve month labor hath Interposed a final sense of cold
Calamity. December, like the wrath
Of one omnipotent, hath grasped hold
Of hearts attempting to be gay and bright
And wrenched them around the royal standard—Gold!
Tis gold that robbeth man's eternal right
To power, joy, and wisdom manifold.
A heart that's conquered by the wintry cold
In vain will demonstrate its love with gold.

December 21

Things had been pretty rushed the last few days, but now he was getting his thoughts gathered together. The trip was a long one, and he felt a bit stiff as he changed his position and strecthed his long legs. He had read the Digest from cover to cover, smoked his last cigarette, and the gum in his mouth was stale—perhaps that last jelly sandwich would still have some flavor.

He dozed off, and awaking sometime later saw that it had grown dark. The car was nearly empty, and the porter was announcing the name of a familiar town not far from his home.

An old woman and a little girl got up to leave. He looked at his watch; two more hours and his trip would be over.

Flashing street lights, telephone poles, and an occasional blob of red and green outlined in the form of a pine tree, raced by the window. All these merged into one long scene intermingled with nostalgic thoughts which were grouped hazily in his mind; then they were calling the name of his town. He stood up, straightened his tie, and walked down the aisle.

As he stepped from the train the metallic strains of "White Christmas" blarred at him from an overhead loudspeaker. A cold blast of wind hit his face, and it was just beginning to snow.

No, he hadn't made the team, he and his girl weren't getting along very well, and perhaps his marks were not what they should have been, but all this didn't seem to matter now, for it was Christmas and he was home.

Christmas Readings Sponsored By The Y's

The YMCA and YWCA co-sponsored Christmas Readings held last Sunday evening by the open fire in the back dining hall. Miss Craven and Mr. Bloy read selections appropriate to the season to a big crowd. Our thanks to our readers, to Miss Ware for the use of the dining hall, and to those others who helped make these Christmas readings a success.

School Facilites The Subject Of Long-Range Plans

The Housing and Home Finance Agency (of the Federal Government)has reserved a fund of $400,000 for Maryville College in connection with the building of a new women's dormitory and the renovating of the existing facilities. Architect's plans for the new dormitory, which will house 96 women, are now in process, with the general design already approved. It is planned that tthe appearance of the new dormitory will be similar to that of the Fine Arts Center. The location of this Dormitory will be at the head of the golf course.

Existing funds now total nearly $200,000. The total cost of the building is estimated to be about $400,000, leaving a deficit of $200,000.

The plan for the rehabilitation of the other dormitories calls for an expenditure of about $200,000. The work will, of necessity, be done during the summer months, and it is probable that two summers (1957 and 1958) will be required to complete the work.

Maryville Christmas

I first found Christmas at this place,
Far more than I had ever known.
I found it here in a friendly face,
In carols from the tower blown.

I found Christmas out in the hall
In the mission box and better yet
In a red yo-yo and a rubber ball
That somewhere a lonely child will get.

And Christmas early every day
In strong young voices singing songs
Of the coming Christ, and in the way
I know that each of us belongs.

I found it up on second floor
Of Anderson where I was taught
The favorite song I'd known before
And again the heilige spirit caught.

And most wonderfully found
Christmas in Messiah shown,
Christmas in the mighty sound
Far more than I had ever known.

CHECKING OUT

In preparation for escape from the campus for the Christmas holidays, dorms must be cleaned and left in good order.

The procedure includes the following: wet mop your room at least once in December, return all coke bottles to the cases in the hall, and dispose of all trash.

Clothes may be left in drawers and closets at the occupant's risk. It is advantageous to have things packed securely away, as the buildings will be open for maintenance during part of the holidays.

Christmas

Holly sprigs and mistletoe,
Christmas balls and Christmas snow.
Sweet old carols, Christmas trees,
Tinseled haloes, shopping sprees.
Bathrobe shepherds, family prayers,
Midnight parties, fancy fares.
Soprano solos, evergreens,
Christmas wreaths, and manger scenes.
A guiding star and holiness,
Christmas gifts and friendliness.
Serenades and angel hair,
Santa Claus, the wish to share.
A candle's glow, a baby's smile,
And holy Jesus all the while.

Scots & Soda

By Carolyn Cones

Dear Santa Claus,

My calendar, now one of the most prominant objects in my little room, has been a constant reminder that it is once again the time for me to be writing to you. I'm sorry I don't get to write more often, but as usual, I've really been very busy. Right now I'm exercising my very strongest will power by tearing myself away from my text books to write this letter to you. I've certainly been a very good girl this year, Santa, so I hope youl'l bear that in mind when you make out your shopping list. I've studied so hard with absolutely no let-up. . . . oh, maybe with an occasional break now and then. . . well, perhaps a little slackening off. . . anyhow, you know what I mean.

It's really been a long time since I last took pen and ink in hand and poured out my heart to you——by the way, a typewriter would be much more convenient. My handwriting isn't so legible anyhow——what a strain on your poor eyes!

My Hero

I have a new hero now. I decided Rock Hudson wasn't intellectual enough for me anyhow. My heart now belongs to Elvis Presley. Oh, Santa, what talent, what a magnificent, haunting voice, what a profile! I would be thrilled forever if I could get a ticket to his powerful new movie, "Love Me Tender" (sigh), but it seems like I'm always broke around this time. Now, of course, if some one were to give me one———. Maybe even a genuine autographed head scarf with his (swoon) picture on it ever there to inspire me——or a copy of my favorite record, "You A'int Nothin' But A Hound Dog." Of course, that would mear that I would have to get a phonograph, but don't you think that it would be worth it?

While I am thinking of culture, I am afraid that I need a new copy of "Introduction to Geometical and Physical Optics". My copy got water-soaked during the last flood, and it makes such a funny noise every time I turn the pages. Since I've been playing around——again!——with the thought of dieting, another helpful book might be "The Nutritive and Therapeutic Value of the Banana." I'm really quite a book lover, as you undoubtedly know by this time, so———. By the way, I think "Mad Comics" is simply fabulous.

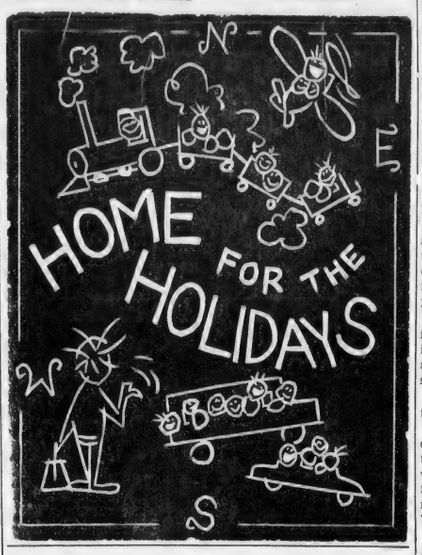
I guess it's kind of late for this now, but a book on improving the memory ought to be very useful. I always feel the need of a better memory at times such as this—my poor head only seems to hold so much when studying for final exams. Of course, if I didn't try to shovel so much in at the last minute——oops! that was quite a slip, wasn't it? Actually, though, I've been very good this year. Oh, I said that before, didn't I? Anyhow——

Maybe if I had an automatic computer I wouldn't have to spend so much time on advanced mathematics. Time is very important to an industrious college student. That reminds me. I need an alarm clock——maybe one that would wake me to the gentle tones of an Elvis record.

I would like a maid to wash and iron my clothes so I could devote my mind to higher things, but I guess this is just wishful thinking——the only room in which she could sleep would be the broom closet. Perhaps the answer would be more clothes that didn't require ironing. Not that I'm lazy, or anything like that, Santa——I just want to have more time to study in my optics book.

Animals?

I just love animals, and a hamster would be awfully nice. Maybe I could even train one——perhaps to wash out socks or maybe to serve as a door stop. I might even be able to train one to frighten people when I'm sleping or studying for a calculus test. Gold fish are kind of nice, too, since there is not much danger of being bitten by one. By the way, Rastus, my pet dog back home is positively mad over watermelon rinds. Of course, it might be better if I fed them to him, since he has a nasty habit (perhaps you remember!) of trying to eat people that he doesn't know extremely well.



There sems to be something wrong with my flute. I sputter every time I try to hit high C. One of the key pads seems to have dropped out too, because there is an awful rattling sound whenever I do a D trill. Maybe I should go back to French horn.

Golly, Santa, I could write so much more, but I really must get to studying for my optics final. Wish me luck! Have a truly wonderful Christmas.

As ever,
Carolyn

TALK OF THE WEEK

By Sue Settle

Peace On Earth

At Christmas time, more than at any other time, we think of peace. We think of the song of the angels, "Peace on earth", and we honor Him who is the Prince of Peace. A story is told of World War II. It was Christmas eve, and American and German soldiers faced each other across a blood-stained battlefield. The fighting was intense, and the men were trying to forget that it was Christmas, so that they could do the job that awaited them. Then, very softly, a small group of American soldiers began to sing "Silent Night". A group of German soldiers, hearing it, took up the refrain. Soon, a flag of truce was raised, and men who had been hating and killing each other joined in singing and laughing about Christmas.

This kind of peace we find in a much smaller way, apparent here on campus at Christmas time. People who were bitterest enemies all through the semester join together in thinking about and planning for the joys of Christmas. Happiness and friendliness are brought again in our lives through the peace which is called "Christmas Spirit". Everyone is excited, anxious.

A friend of mine wrote a song once which seems to say just about what I want to say. She wrote, "Once again our hearts are young and gay. Christmas time has come in all its glory. It's a wonderful Christmas season. It's a wonderful Christmas time. With the snow dazzling white, on a cold winter's night, and the Churches all ringing their chimes. They are telling the Christmas story, when a Child from heaven came to light the way with love and joy, tending special care to every girl and boy. And the angels greet with their anthems sweet, this holy Christmas time."

At this time, more than any other, we are near to the ideal of peace on earth.

About Town Night - -

"Hey, let's go to the movies tonight. Theer's a swell show on. . . Oh, gee, we can't. It's not Tuesday night." This was the sad lament heard in all the dorms until the optional town night was introduced two years ago. We certainly wouldn't want to go back to that system, would we?

Having ratified the Town Night Agreement, every student knows what the Town Night rules are and should abide by them; enforcement is not up to the Student Council or the Town Night Committee, but to the Student Body as a whole.

This year, the cooperation of the Student Body has been good, with only minor infractions and relatively few deliberate violations of the agreement. The only chance for expanded Town Night privileges lies in this cooperation, through which we can show the Administration that we are mature enough to warrant such expansion. So let's kep up the good work and show them that we are young adults and should be treated as such.

Workshop Selects Works To Appear In 'Chips'

Writers' Workshop met Monday, December 10, at 4:30 in the Fine Arts Centre lounge, for a Christmas party and the last meeting of the semester. After Stan Mont and Betty Knott read, criticized by Betty Springsted and Dr. Jackson, refreshments prepared by Barbara Wilkie and San Roberts were served and contributors to Chips were voted on. Those whose works were accepted for publication were Joan McNaughton, Nancy Kotz, San Roberts, Barbara Wilkie, and Ruth Morris.

Decorations Cause Many Fatal Fires

"Fires across the nation have killed 23 persons, most of them children, on the eve of the Christmas holiday celebration.

"All but 10 of the fire victims were children eagerly awaiting the excitement and gifts of Christmas."*

That was last year. Will it happen again this year?

And the saddest thing is that such tragedies often occur around the Christmas holiday—sometimes even around the Christmas tree itself—at the happiest time of the year.

The reason the tree burns so fiercely and so rapidly is because it's filled with pitch and resin—among the most combustible substances known.

What can you do about the tree?

First of all, the National Board of Fire Underwriters suggests that you select a small one. There will be 30,000,000 on the market. Some 4,000,000 Christmas trees reach retail outlets in New York State alone.

It's best to keep the tree outdoors until a few days before setting it up. During that time occasionally throw water over it. This will kep it moist, fresh.

When you bring the tree inside, cut the butt slantwise to open the pores, then stand it in a tub of water. Be wary of chemicals or other substances sold for "fire-proofing" trees. In some cases this process is ineffective.

In placing the tree, the National Board advises that you avoid "hot spots" such as those near the fireplace, stove, television set, radiator, or electric bulbs.

Never, warns the National Board, use untreated paper ornametns or untreated cotton batting or gauze for decoration. Cotton and gauze can be made flame-resistive by dipping in a gallon of water mixed with nine ounces of borax and four ounces of boric acid.

Also, use only electric lights, never candles. Be sure, too, that wires are in good condition and bear the UL tag denoting Underwriters' Laboratories, Inc., which shows they have been tested for safey. Frayed electric cords, the National Board points out, are a fire hazard.

The switch for turning on the tree lights should be placed some distance from the tree. Never use an outlet or plug under the tree or run electric trains around the base.

Spanish Club Elects,

The elections for the coming semester's officers of Spanish Club were held on Thursday, December 6 in the language lab. The results were:

President, Mary Walker; vice-president, Nancy Peters; secretary, Peggy Longfellow; treasurer, Ron Hoefer.

A Christmas fiesta followed the elections during which the annual Christmas pinata was broken by Carolyn Graham. The whole club joined in gathering up the sweets with which the pianta was filled.

Don't Be Cruel—

The remaining days of this semester are going to be difficult for just about everyone. The pressure of last-minute tests, the extra tests, the extra amount of material assigned, and of the final examinations themselves, is bound to be felt. Because of this tension, people are likely to be irritable and hyper-critical, perhaps at times, almost impossible. They are likely to say and do things they would not do under ordinary circumstances. These last few days are ones of academic importance, but the personal qualities should not be missing: understanding, patience, consideration——and forgiveness—would make exam week a bit easier to take and certainly easier to live through.

This is especially true in regard to the relationship of roommates. A little bit of self-restrain can go a long way towards keeping a pleasant atmosphere—an atmosphere not only better to live in but also, at this time in particular, more conducive to study. Petty gripes should have no place here; they only serve to irritate already ragged nerves. Even more consideration than usual must be practiced if the relationship is to be mutually beneficial during this time of tension.

Consideration and QUIET in the dormitory is absolutely necessary. Everyone is under the same strain, so the Golden Rule is especially applicable here. The proper attitude at meals should also play its part. A sharp answer does little toward maintaining peace; likewise, indigestion does little towards preparing the mind for the job ahead.

The plea for consideration is peraps trite, but the situation is very real. How will you face it?

I Come From Mars

It is some special season here,
But to me it's not quite clear.

The streets are full of people flying
Two small boys sit there crying.

Some sweet noises reach my ear
But they're only a scrap of what I hear.

Loudest, are people bickering, fighting
Outdoing each other in their spiteing.

All have enemies, few have friends,
It's a social war with no amends.

I asked a man along the way
What they were celebrating today.

"Why man," he slurred, "It's our our Saviour's birth."
These ignorant people of Earth.

I'm glad I am from Mars.

Finertie Elected New President Of Sigs

The election of Alpha Sigma officers for the second semester of '56'57 was held last Tuesday. Bob Finertie was elected to lead the society and the election for vice-president ended in a tie between Pete Nix and Dan Wiley. Harold Crane will be the secretary and Jim McCall remains as treasurer.

JANICE

Janice sat by the window watching it snow. She remembered how it used to snow in Michigan. She still had to decide about this Pennsylvania snow. Was it different or was she?

She wondered how things would be at the high school after the holidays. She wished she had met some of the others before vacation so she wouldn't be so lonely now. "Two days ago I lived out there." she thought. "No one even knows I'm here. I wish someone would be nice to me. We used to play cards or pop corn or just listen to records. I wish I knew someone here to call and ask over."

The phone rang and Janice reached to answer it.

"Hello," she said.

Another girl's voice bubbled at her, "Is this Janice Clerk?"

"Yes, it is," Janice said.

"Well," said the voice, "I'm Sara Wilson and I go to Central High and I hear that you will be coming there after Christmas and I want you to meet all the gang before classes start. The principal mentioned you and I thought that maybe you would like to go caroling with our music class tomorrow night."

"I don't believe so," said Janice.

"Oh," said the voice. "It doesn't take much time! We just walk up Chestnut Street and then from 4th to 12th Avenue and then past the hospital and then home. Just everyone goes. It's so much fun and especially this year since there is snow. We'll probably make a snow woman in the hospital courtyard and maybe go sledding afterwards. I know you'd like it."

"No, I can't come," said Janice.

The voice dropped a little and said, "Well, I really wish you could. It's a wonderful way to get to know the kids and Christmas is such a nice time."

"I'm really terrible sorry," said Janice, "but—"

"Well, maybe you have something else planned," suggested the voice.

"No, nothing," said Janice.

The chilled voice said, "I'll see you at school soon then. Maybe you will find something there that you like, such as dancing club or basketball or something. See you there. Bye."

"Goodbye," said Janice. She picked up her crutches and went to tell her mother.

SPORTS SPOTLIGHT

By Joe Quinn

Olympics

The domination of the U.S. in the Olympic games has ended. The Russians in the unofficial point standing scored an overwhelming victory. However our team looked very good in the bigger sports. Track and field, and basketball increased our point total considerably. We fell down on such sports as gymnastics, fencing and hockey. These sports aren't as common on the American scene as they are in some other countries.

Football

Football closed out its regular season last week as the Miami Hurricanes were knocked from the unbeaten ranks by a strong Pitt Panther squad 14-7 at the Orange Bowl stadium.

The professional league total was just about rapped up by the N.Y. Giants in the East. However, the Western title hinges on the outcome of the Chicago Bears—Detroit Lions game coming up this week.

Basketball

Basketball is coming along but right now it's a little too soon to tell who's going to be the power houses this year.

However, a few pre-season favorites are such teams as Kansas, Kentucky, Cincinnati, San Francisco, Northwestern, Temple, Manhatten and St. Louis.

The main reason for Kansas optimism is Wilt "The Stilt" Chamberlain, a 7-foot negro star from Philadelphia. In two games, he has scored 52 points and 39 points respectively. He is only a sophomore which gives Kansas a bright future in basketball for years to come.

After the holiday tournaments are over, a clearer picture will be available to judge just what teams will be in the headlines this season.

Only An Inch

A few months ago I wrote a short editorial upon the school spirit which had increased this year. I must confess now that at the time I had a little bit of doubt as to whether this spirit would last out the semester. I think it has up to this point. One of the main places that I personally can see and feel it is in the school band. We very definitely have had a renewal of interest in the band. To have a real revolution in band spirit as well as in any other organization it must come from above as well as below. You may have a very active student organization or student body which will get no where unless the leaders of the student council and the administration are willing to go along.

There has been a new spirit in the administration's dealings the band. Up to this semester the band has been a sort of step-child of the school, too traditional to be disbanded and too poor to be seen by any other student body than our own. This year we have had active help from the student council. Speaking for the band, I would like to thank two special friends of the band. One is the president, Dick Henderson. The other is Ted McDaniels. Both have been on our side constantly, aiding us with our problems, and it has been good to find them giving active, not passive, support. For the first time in two or three years the band, as well as the student body, have been allowed to go to the away games at two rival schools. The band has also received an addition to its uniform in the form of white spats. This has given us concrete evidence of student support. For the first time that I can remember six or seven people wanted to join the band at the semester half instead of five or six wanting to leave.

At the beginning of the semester the administration made it very clear that the band would have to prove itself before it could xpect any support. Without a doubt it has now proved that it can stand on it own two legs. This has proved that progress can be made even if it is slow. Now I feel that the next step is up to the administration to help us keep this spirit going. All the band asks is an inch of support and they will go a mile in progress.

Holiday Tragedies

One of the most frightening tihngs in our world today is the ever-increasing number of deaths caused by accidents on the highways, in our homes and places of business.

Before you finish reading these few paragraphs another person will have died violently, needlessly, somewhere in the United States. It may be in a transportation accident, a fall, a fire. . . It may be at home, at work, at play. . . mangled, crushed, poisoned, burned.

Frightening as this is, it is much less frightening than ignorance. We know how to prevent those auto accidents, those falls, those fires. We recognize our social responsibility. Our government our voluntary agencies, our private business enterprises spend millions of dollars every year in safety education, fire and accident prevention.

And where fire prevention is concerned, we find that encouraging progress is being made. The capital stock fire insurance business for instance, like the transportation industry, has developed highly important safety education programs.

Of these, one of the most outstanding deals with Christmas fire hazards and the ways and means of correcting them. Such a program deserves the support of every individual. Only then can the appalling Christmas holiday toll in lives lost and property destroyed by fire be curtailed.

Scots Down King; 79-76 Are Edged By Centre

By Joe Quinn

The Scots defeated King College here Friday night in a thriller, 79-76.

On Saturday night Maryville really showed themselves. Centre broke away to a commanding lead and had a 19 point bulge at one point in the game. But the Scots would not be denied. They fought back and before Centre knew it, Maryville had a 1 point advantage.

Bill Wallace who led the scoring march with 30 points and Tom Morris who wound up with 14 points sparked the drive.

Centre had five men in the double figures with Jobe and Gum setting the pace with 16 points apiece.

The game was decided on a last second foul. A foul had been called just before the game ended. With the dropping of the two charity tosses Centre was victorious.

Voices, Masks, and Shadows

I thought I might abondon culture just for one week and talk about all the exciting things that are happening, and will be happening before we leave for home.

By now the Messiah is musical history once again. But I can still hear people humming to themselves some of the more popular parts of this masterpiece of music. Can you imagine what a genius Handel must have been to have written it? I hope to hear it again when I get home. It's worth hearing, and rehearing. The harpsichord really added a lot to our presentation of it this year. I did wonder, though, what happened to the drums on "Wonderful, Counsellor"?

Don't you love Christmas carols? That Percy Faith album that was used at the Christmas readings Sunday night, and again at the dining hall party, is one of the most beautiful treatments of Christmas carols that I have heard. Of course, it can't even begin to compete with the music of our own waiters and waitresses as they clear the tables. Stick around some time, and hear Jeanne Ginavin play and the waiters sing Christmas carols. It's really lovely.

Readings

Speaking of Christmas readings, and I did about a paragraph ago, Y really did a tremendous job on arranging everything so well. The fire and candles made a perfect setting for the Christmas stories which were so well done by Mr. Bloy, and Miss Craven. Weren't they swell?

I hope you got a chance to see the art axhibit. It is amazing the amount of talent which we have here on campus. I was especially impressed by the preciseness of Doug Stubblefield's work.

Don't miss Christmas vespers tohorrow night, whatever you do. It, too, is a part of the Maryville Christmas tradition, as Messiah and carols are.

Going home

Just a word about the long trip home, take along a very boring book which must be read for next semester. If it doesn't put you to sleep, which would be good, at least you will have some reading done for next semester, which is good. So you can't loose.

Merry Christmas everybody. . .

Have a Cool Yule
and a frantic first.

Echo Forum

The Editor
HIGHLAND ECHO
Maryville College
Dear Editor:

When I read my ECHO of last week, one word stood out from every page: MATURITY. It seems that this was the theme of the student forum meeting the week before. I am sorry that I was not able to attend the discussion, but through those who did attend and the letter in last week's ECHO Forum, I have an idea what happened.

The meeting continually returned to a discussion of the maturity or immaturity of the students of Maryville College. Maturity is one of the many words in the English language which we cannot adequately define.

We see certain characteristics, which we call maturity, in almost everyone, but then we also see characteristics of immaturity in the same people. So to label any one person as wholly mature or immature is impossible. Harry Overstreet, in a book with which I think every college student should be acquainted, called The Mature Mind, says, "A mature person is not one who has come to a certain level of achievement and stopped there. He is rather a maturing person — one whose linkages with life are constantly becoming stronger and richer because his attitudes are such as to encourage the growth rather than theoir stoppage." Maturing is a growing process which involves a growing awareness of one's place in his environment. To do this there must be a willingness to further establish a linkage to one's environment and a maturing environment to link to.

This places the responsibility of the maturing of the students at Maryville not only on the students, but on the faculty and the administration also. "Man . . . does not grow automatically from dependence to independence, helplessness to competence, irresponsibility to responsibility." The students must show a maturing attitude by accepting more responsibility, and the college must create a maturing environment by placing more responsibility on the students.

Women Students:

The first question in a debate is whether there is a need for a change in the present system. The feeling has been expressed that there is a need for a change in our present system of Women's Athletic Association so as to have a program in which there is participation by all of the women students at Maryville. Although the present system has fulfilled a need, the number of women participants is far too low. When the affirmative establishes the need for a change, they must present a plan to remedy the ills. One such plan would consist of an intramural program as a possible solution to the problem. This is the system which the men now use. A program of this type to be successful must have the support of the women's organizations on campus. Women, you are the deciding factor in this debate. This is your program. Will you support it?

Sincerely,

An Athlete

With creation finished
The angels sat back
But one of them wondered
"What does it lack?"

So he made up a heart
Out of nobler stuff
A spirit not polished,
But still not rough.

A body he gave it
Better than most
And when about finished
And ready to boast

He added a few things
That made it complete
A desire for action
A will to compete.

A zest for living
A dread of defeat
Then he called his creation
An Athlete.

Vol. 42 MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE, FEBRUARY 2, 1957 No. 10

The February Meetings To Begin Wednesday

Brubaker To Lead

This year's February Meetings will open next Wednesday morning and continue through Thursday of the following week.

The Leader will be Rev. Edward Brubaker, D.D., Pastor of Tabernacle Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, and Director of the Westminster Foundation at the University of Pennsylvania, and supervisor of Presbyterian college student work in the whole Philadelphia area where there are forty colleges and universities.

For the fifth time the song leader will be Rev. John Magill, D.D., Pastor of the large Abington Presbyterian Presbytery; a graduate of Maryville College in the Class of 1939 and of McCormick Theological Seminary in 1942.

For the fifth year the guest accompanist will be Dr. Henry Barraclough, Assistant State Clerk of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. Dr. Barraclough (Barrie) is the composer and author of many gospel songs and anthems, the best known of which is "The Ivory Palaces." He first came to America from England as accompanist for the evangelistic team of Chapman and Alexander, at that time the most famous in the world.

Dr. Brubaker

Throughout the meetings Chapel will be at 9:45 a.m., with first hour classes at 8:00 a.m. The evening services will be at 7:00 p.m. each evening except Saturday. Dr. Brubaker, who will speak each morning and evening, is a graduate of Maryville College in the Class of 1938 and of Princeton Theological Seminary in 1941, and holds also a Master's degree from Union Seminary.

Prior to accepting a call to his present important work two years ago, Dr. Brubaker was Assistant Pastor, North Avenue Presbyterian Church, New Rochelle, New York, for two years; a Navy Chaplain for three years during World War II; pastor of Central Presbyterian Church and Director of the Westminster Foundation in Fayetteville, Arkansas, for five years.

Student and faculty committees are planning prayer meetings and interviews, and will see that all necessary arrangements are made for the public services and other activities during the Meetings. As in former years, most of the public prayers will be offered by students.

They will be guests at Morningside, the home of President and Mrs. Lloyd, but will be on most days in the college dining hall for lunch and dinner. Mrs. Barraclough plans to come again and Mrs. Magill may do so, but Mrs. Brubaker will remain at home with a new baby age two months.

As in former years, there will be a February Meetings preparation service at New Providence Presbyterian Church this Sunday at 10:30 a.m.

The College Choir will be there to sing; President Lloyd will preach on "Be Transformed — Not Conformed"; and other representatives of the College will participate.

At Sunday Vespers in the Chapel the Choir will sing and Dr Francis W. Pritchard, Pastor of New Providence Church, will be the speaker.

McNaughton And Gowans To Read In Workshop

Writers' Workshop met Monday afternoon at 4:30 in Dr. Hunter's classroom. The previous Monday afternoon, members drew for times to read and criticize. John Williams resigned his position in Workshop, and Joanne Causey will resume the place she left last year. The readers this week were Miss Jackson, criticized by Libby Turner, and Betty Knott, criticized by Ruth Morris. Next week the readers will be Joan McNaughton and Clara Gowans criticized by Betty Springstead and Dick Henderson.

Glee Clubs To Give The Wizard Of Oz

Mr. Dan Kinsinger disclosed Tuesday the casting procedure for "The Wizard of Oz" will begin during the first week of February. A Men's and Women's Glee Club presentation, the musical play is an adaptation of the popular movie in which Judy Garland was cast in the lead of "Dorothy", and features the music and book by Harold Arland, author of the music of "Fanny", and E. Y. Harburg, whose book for "Finian's Rainbow" provided so much pleasure in last year's Glee Club musical. The play will use a large cast, including some non-singing roles. Said Dick Dows, Glee Club president, "I expect this show to be even more fun than 'Rainbow'."

Also on the Glee Club agenda is the campus wide "Jeans Drag", the date of which is not yet decided. This is a "girls ask boys' affair.

Civil Service Test Information Given

The United States Civil Service Commission has announced an examination for trainee positions in the following fields: Accounting, Agricultural Economics, Biological and Plant Sciences, Entomology, Home Economics, Plant Pest Control, and Statistics (Agricultural and General). Most of the positions are in the Departments of Agriculture and Interior throughout the United States. Trainee positions in Statistics (General) will be filled in the Bureau of the Census in Washington, D. C. The starting pay is $3,175 and $3,415 a year.

Students must pass a written test and must have completed, or expect to complete within 9 months, either 1 or 2½ academic years of appropriate college study. The amount of their academic training will determine the grade level to which they will be assigned.

Further information and application forms may be obtained at many post offices throughout the country, or from the U.S. Civil Service Commission, Washington 25, D. C. Applications will be accepted by the Board of U.S. Civil Service Examiners, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington 25, D. C., until further notice. Additional information can also be found in the Highland Echo office.

Night Glow, Approaching Fog Are Among Serigraphs In Art Gallery

by Barbara Wilkie

The latest exhibit in the Gallery of the Fine Arts Center includes over forty serigraphs from the Western Serigraph Institute, an organization which helps acquaint the public with the development of serigraphy as a fine art medium. Since its first exhibit in 1939, the Institute has been supplying schools, museums, and the like with exhibits of the best serigraphs by its members.

The word "serigraph" means literally "to draw on silk." As the poster explaining the exhibit states, "No one is privileged to use this word unless he has originated the design and completed the process himself." The difference between a serigraph and a silk screen print lies in the fact that the latter is a reproduction by commercial process, while the production of an original serigraph requires much skill in the handling of manual processes as well as great creativity on the part of the artist.

The artist may work directly on the silk screen, using tusche and glue processes and going through a series of color applications, building up his design. Or he may compose and work out his design on paper before beginning the printing process, regulating the printing to conform to his original conception.

"Night Glow" is one of the first serigraphs in the exhibit to strike the viewer's attention as he enters the gallery. Predominantly in pinks, oranges, and reds, it is composed of overlapping vertical and horizontal planes. "Morning Flight" is done in soft, greyed yellows, browns and blues. Bird and feather shapes can be discerned in its design. "Approaching Fog" is similar in its execution. A semi-transparent bird and lighthouse are superimposed over soft greys, browns, and blues.

This exhibit will continue through next week. The next one will be on February 12 and will consist of originals from the IBM collection.

Council To Study Athletics, Dating

At its first meeting of the semester on January 23, Student Council voted to change the wording of its constitution so that twenty-six representatives may be on council instead of twenty-four. The two additional members would be the president of WSGA and the chairman of the Men's Student Cooperative. The motion as passed by council will be taken to Executive Council of the Faculty, and if approved there, will come up before the student body for vote soon after.

Athletic Committee

Another item of business included the reading of a letter from a student to the Athletic Committee expressing dissatisfaction for some of the policies of that committee. Dan Wiley, chairman of the committee, stated that he represented only the student membership of the committee, which is on a student-faculty basis and which includes the Director of Athletics of the college.

Other student members of the committee include Allen Russell, Don Hill, Ted Wilson, and Shirley McNiell. Wiley stated that, to his knowledge, the committee had not met since he had been on it and that the awarding of letters to athletes had proceeded without consulting the student half of the committee. By-Law 2 of the Student Body Constitution states the work of the Athletic Committee.

President Henderson suggested that there be an investigation of the reasons for the committee's not functioning as stated in the constitution.

Student Council asks that all who wish to lend records suitable for playing in the dining hall give them to Bill Bolger.

In the line of announcements at the meeting, it was stated that the student members were appointed last semester to the committee to study dating patterns and situations on campus. However, the faculty members have not been appointed yet and no work has been started. Students on this committee are Ruth Morris, Clara Gowans, and Bill Lynch.

Student Center

Bob Goodlin, chairman of the project committee, reported that improvements to the student center were completed over the holidays. These included repainting ping-pong tables and installing another magazine rack.

It was also announced that the next student forum will be held

Of interest to Vesper Choir members and perhaps to faculty and student body was a letter recently received from Ronald "Doc" Jennings '55, an ex-choir member. He is in service and is stationed in Verona, Italy. He relates that while returning from a ski trip, he, by chance, heard the Maryville College Choir over the Voice of America in Germany.

Vesper Speaker To Be Dr. Francis W. Pritchard

The speaker at the Vesper Service tomorrow evening, Feb. 3, will be Dr. Francis Pritchard.

Dr. Pritchard is well known to Maryville students as the pastor of New Providence Presbyterian Church.

Seven Lead Dean's List With 3.0 Averages

19 New Students Come To Maryville

This second semester finds nineteen new and returning students at Maryville College taking their places in the classes and in the various activities of the campus, and filling up the empty chapel seats. Of these students there are 14 boys and 5 girls. Some of them have attended Maryville before, some have transferred here from other schools, and some are first semester freshmen.

The next most sizable number of new students hail from Pennsylvania. Among them are Carolyn Dees from Philadelphia, a freshman interested in sociology; Larry Gibbs, a sophomore from Oxford; and Don Shillady, a sophomore pre-min from Bridgeport.

North Carolina sends us Joanne Causey, a senior Spanish major from Davidson, and Janie Wall, a junior Christian Education major from Burlington. From the sunny South comes also Wilma Goodwin, a freshman business administration major from Milton, Florida.

Coming the farthest to go to school here is Mrs. Prapit Kuvananda from Thailand, a freshman.

From close by the Nation's Capitol in Chevy Chase, Maryland, is Margaret England, a sophomore elementary education major.

The Hoosier state of Indiana sends Robert Crosby, a freshman from Columbia City, interested in the social sciences.

Coming from other states are Ivan Miller, a freshman from Troy, New York, and John Mollard, a sophomore from Maidsville, West Virginia.

Russell, Waters Added To Staff

Two new persons have been appointed to the Maryville College Staff. They are Miss Frances Waters and Mrs. Ruth G. Russell.

Miss Waters is a native of Lebanon, Tennessee, and holds the B.S. degree, the M.A. degree in Geography, and the M.A. degree in Library Science from George Peabody College. She has been a teacher in high school and college, has served in the Peabody College Library, and for the past five years has been librarian at Greensboro College, Greensboro, North Carolina. Miss Waters is serving here as Periodicals and Documents Librarian.

Mrs. Russell has begun her service at Maryville as campus housekeeper. She is a native of Kansas where she attended Kansas State Teachers College. She took work also in Hannah Harrison School at Washington, D. C., and has served on the staff of Sweet Briar College in Virginia and the staff of the Y.W.C.A. in Baltimore, Maryland, where for the past two years she has been Building and Residence Director.

At Maryville Mrs. Russell is filling a newly created position and will have general supervision of the work which might be classified as "housekeeping." She will direct the work of student janitors and certain members of the maintenance staff. She has a desk in the Maintenance Office in Anderson Hall and may be reached there.

M.C. Choir To Visit 5 States On Tour

Outstanding among the musical events of the Spring season will be concerts by the Maryville College Choir on its 11 day tour through 5 states. The Choir will present its first concert of the 1957 season at the First Presbyterian Church, Charleston, West Virginia, at 8:00 p.m., Friday, March 22. Saturday, March 23, the Choir will give an 8:00 p.m. appearance at the First Presbyterian Church, Uniontown, Pennsylvania. Sunday, March 24, the Choir will sing for the 11:00 a.m. morning worship service at the Central Presbyterian Church, McKeesport, Pennsylvania. That afternoon at 4:45 p.m., they will give a vesper concert at the Pleasant Hills Community Church in Pittsburgh, and that night at 8:00 p.m. evening concert at the First Presbyterian Church, Pittsburgh. Monday, March 25, the choir will sing at Concord Presbyterian Church, Pittsburgh. Other concerts that week are: March 26, 8:00 p.m., First Presbyterian Church, Corry Pennsylvania; March 27, Slippery Rock Presbyterian Church, Slippery Rock, Pennsylvania; March 28, First Presbyterian Church, Youngstown, Ohio; March 29, The Presbyterian Church, Coshocton, Ohio, and March 30, Mifflin Presbyterian Church, Gahanna, Ohio. Sunday, March 31, the Choir will sing at both the 9:00 a.m. and 11:00 a.m. worship services at Boulevard Presbyterian Church, Columbus, Ohio. That afternoon, they will sing a vesper concert at 4:00 p.m. at the First Presbyterian Church, Washington Court House, Ohio. After that concert, they will journey to Lebanon, Kentucky, where they will sing their final concert on Monday, April 1. Immediately after this concert they will load the bus and return to Maryville College.

The program will be in three groups, centered around two large choral works, Bach Cantata 192, Himmelskoenig, sei willkommen, and Aaron Copland's, In the Beginning. The first group will consist of O Magnify the Lord With Me, arr. by George Lynn, De Profundis by Virgil Thomson, He Guides Me in His Way by Harry Harter, Ascendit Deus by Jacobus Gallus and Mesericordias Domini (for double choir) by Francesco Durante. The Second group will be the Bach Cantata 182, Himmelskoenig, sei willkommen, which emulates the Lenten theme. For this number, the choir will use the authentic instrumentation of strings, flue and harpsichord. The third group will be In the Beginning, an unaccompanied work telling the creation story by the contemporary American composer, Aaron Copland. This will conclude the program with the addition of the Choir's traditional benediction, Lutkin's The Lord Bless You and Keep You.

The 14 newly elected Council members voting for Carnegie Hall in the elections were: fourth floor — Guy Selander, Mert Hall and Don Jones, third floor — Chuck Garrison, Ron Morley and Clem Birkelbach, second floor — Roger Pierce, Bruce Greenawalt and Bruce Lundberg, first floor — Fred Tepper and Ron Lind, basement — Harold O'bannion, Chuck Frissell, and Newton Pike. At their last meeting, the Student faculty Senate decided to recommend to the Executive Council of the Faculty that the president of W.S.G.A. and the chairman of the Men's Co-operative Council be made members of the Student Council through an amendment to its constitution.

Projects

Among projects to be discharged by the Cooperative Council will be an improved plan of room distribution, study hours made effective through mutual consent, and enactment of a list of by-laws vital to the Cooperative's efficiency. Farther in the future, the Cooperative hopes to do its part in a proposed "campus beautiful" program in which student organizations, Mr. E. Brown and the campus crew, and the faculty would participate.

On Better Preparation . . .

Much is lacking on the Maryville College campus. Practically the only activity which even approaches a healthy existence is that of a religious nature. This is fine—as an outline for life, but what about the life which it is to outline? That life consists of two or three sports events a week, as many Playhouse productions a semester and various and sundry "social" events such as after-dinner dances and spaghetti dinners. These, also, are fine for informal. These times to relax are good but are they preparing the students for anything? Aren't they really just a continuation of high school?

Within three and a half years, nearly every student now at Maryville will be thrown into an adult social world; and no matter what the popular idea of that may be, it does not consist of "sock-hop" dances and ball games.

The world consists of many formal social events, from weddings to parties to business situations. These occasions call for poise—an acquired poise. This is your last chance to acquire it at a time and place where you will not be painfully conspicuous.

People with a college degree are called upon to be leaders. As funny as it may sound, tea parties really exist. Active members of any organization must know what to do and when.

The point is that the social life, as far as training for the future, is practically negative. This school has not sanctioned fraternities and sororities, but it does allow four societies. These societies could do well, with the support of the student body, to encourage formal activities other than one for each rush week. (Those two being limited to freshmen.) As social organizations' they should encourage proper social conduct by sponsoring several events each semester—not expensive ones, but useful ones for the benefit of the students.

—L.T.

Facing Up. . .

At the end of last semester Dick Henderson, student body president, outlined to Student Council some objectives for this semester. It might be well to recall these in order to gain a better understanding of the work of council, which has the purpose of representing the student body in the spiritual, academic, and social phases of campus life. These suggestions, with further comments are as follows:

1. There should be more activity this semester in the newly-formed N. S. A. and project committee. N. S. A. can acquaint students here with the work of students all over the world. A bulletin is now up on the bulletin board in Anderson concerning the segregation problem in the Universities in South Africa.

2. There should be more cooperation with other schools, perhaps through exchange programs. A spirit of academic isolation should not be allowed to persist.

3. There will need to be more publicity to acquaint students with council doings. Likewise, students should try to find out what is going on by attending meetings or talking to council members.

4. Council will be sponsoring more student forums. One is scheuled on February 27 and one in April.

6. There should be a better relationship between students and faculty in all phases of campus life. Council can aid in sponsoring meetings between students and faculty.

7. WSGA and MSC should have a voice in council. Steps are now being taken to arrange this.

8. An overall evaluation of council's place on campus needs to take place. Each commbittee should question its very existence and see if it is accomplishing its purpose.

To accomplish such ambitious aims will take more than a minimum of effort. A policy of sliding through situations each year instead of facing up to them constructively as they occur has not contributed much to council prestige. The beginning of the semester is a good time to reevaluate past activities and look ahead.

Social Program Questioned . . .

"One of the functions of higher education is to train people to become future leaedrs in society. Intellect is important in leadership, but social adjustment is an equally important characteristic. Therefore, the complete education of the student should transcend the classroom. Development of leadership, wholesome respect for the leadership of others, the opportunity to informally explore and develop social, recreational, and cultural pursuits: these are examples of matters not easily suited to classroom techniques. Nevertheless, these things are necessary for a healthy understanding of human values, and the university has a responsibility in this area as well as in its formal classroom program."

This quote was lifted from an article "A New University Concept" which appeared in the January, 1957 issue of the Student Government Bulletin. Although the title seems restrictive to the plan of a university, its general application to all schools is subsequently revealed.

It is common knowledge here at Maryville College that our social life needs a "new look" which, if done CONSTRUCTIVELY and CO-OPERATIVELY, wouldn't disfigure our society. Various attempts have been made, this year and those past, to improve certain aspects of campus life. Some progress has followed such efforts. However, a number of proposals and innovations have been refused simply because what was offered infringed on certain interpretations of college policy.

Christian emphasis, high scholarship, and low expenses—a familiar trinity to all Maryville College folk. Each one of us believes, I think, in the soundness of such a policy. The bulk of the argument then pivots about the interpretations attached to the basic policies of the College. It seems reasonable and only fair that these secondary yet important interpretations be a student-faculty product since both groups are directly concerned.

A bull-session, a conversation, a meeting, or just a casual observation will disclose, only too quickly, that definite weaknesses do exist in our social program. At the end of each semester a large number of students—good students—leave because they are not happy. I know for I have talked with many of them. Couples complain, and rightly so, because they have little or no privacy. Students feel resentful and, without hestitation, violate many of the principles of the College. Re-evaluations and various other studies can help to ameliorate such conditions.

A change is necessary. Student Council has yearly called the weakness of the social program to the attention of those persons who are responsible for the College and its successful operation. The Administration, faculty, and students are obligated to investigate and to find a sensible answer to the problem.

At the last Student-Faculty Senate meeting of last semester, Student Council requested that a committee (student-faculty) be organized to re-evaluate that daitng program. The committee was approved and will meet this semester. Like the chain and its weakest link, the effectiveness of a college community is relative to its weakest elements. It is hoped that this committee will provide us with some much needed information and suggestions.

Voices, Masks, and Shadows

by Carolyn Cones

One of the most controversial motion pictures to be released in a long time is, without a doubt, Tennessee Williams' "Baby Doll." Some critics have acclaimed it as a great work of art; others have vehemently condemned it. "Time Magazine" calls it "possibly the dirtiest American-made motion picture that has ever been legally exhibited." Opinions of churchmen are sharply split. Cardinal Spellman, who had never seen the picture, banned it, while James Pike, an Episcopal minister, quickly rushed to the film's defense.

Why all this fuss over a motion picture? Your reporter viewed the film herself and discussed it with others who had seen it. No two people had the same reaction. One dismissed it with a single word — "disgusting"; yet another thought it was a skillfully done piece of realism. The main controversy, then, is the definition of art as interpreted by different people and whether art over-steps the bounds of good taste in this picture.

The question over the morality or immorality of the theme has been blown up out of all proportion by the war of words which has been waged. Advertising has to take its share of the blame, too. Just as the picture on the outside of a pocket-edition book generally gives no true indication of the nature of the book, advertising for "Baby Doll" has played up the wrong angle of the picture for the sake of box-office appeal. Actually the picture, itself, is not as "bad" as we are led to believe.

The film gives a realistic treatmen of a tiny segment of life. Is it too tiny, too realistic? Director Eli Kazan thinks not. Others would support or challenge his opinion. It is true, however, that the film is rather crude in spots, but this should not drown the fact that the chief purpose of the picture is to present a definite social problem. It is the problem bred by ignorance. It is the problem of the foreigner who is met with prejudice, of small-town narrow-mindedness, of a low standard of living. The psychological effects of this social problem on the characters are well handled. this is one point on which critics are of almost universal accord.

Carroll Baker as the thumb sucking Baby Doll had a difficult part to play, and her performance was notable. Excellent acting jobs were also done by Karl Malden as Archie Lee and Eli Wallach as Silva Vacarro.

ECHO FORUM

To Editor, Highland Echo:

A sampling of students on the campus favored having music return to meal-time, so again, though it is still in an unpolished stage, we hear music at lunch and supper. Matters of choice of music, volume, frequency of playing and the like still have to be discussed and improved. However, much has been accomplished already. More loud speakers are to be installed soon to improve listening fidelity, and four persons have loaned records which have by and large been pleasing to everyone. What is needed for the most enjoyment possible in dining-room listening is two further contributions from us, the students, who are directly concerned with success for our own pleasure: (1) frank suggestions to the student council for improvements; (2) generous loaning of records to the record cabinet. If contributions continue, we can have a good variety of music with fast turnover so that no one will be inconvenienced by having their album gone for more than a few days. Both these suggestions for action can be done informally, and good care is guaranteed for records. Let's share our albums and suggestions to continue pleasurable meals.

Sincerely,
Bill Bolger

Segregation Threatens South African Schools

Before the end of February a bill will be considered by the legislature of the Union of South Africa which would outlaw admittance of non-European (colored) students to that country's universities of Witwaterstrand and of Capetown, just as those politically unsatisfactory were denied higher education in Hungary.

Protest concerning this violation of the integrity of the academic world will be made by the United States National Student Association in a resolution of the Union of South Africa, and to its embassy in Washington, D. C. Voicing the wholehearted support of Maryville College for this action is our N.S.A. co-ordinator, sophomore Ted Frauman.

Basketball

The big news in the college circuit was Iowa State's tremendous upset of Kansas and Wilt the Stilt on a 'dreamed up' defense. This Saturday night Iowa State has another opportunity to repeat that win against the Jay Lawkerson the latter's home court.

Other teams to keep an eye on are North Carolina, Louisville, Ohio State, Kentucky, S.M.U. just to mention a few of the top ten.

Pro Basketball

The talk of the N.B.A. of course is the Boston Celtics. This ball club has the best record in either the East or West Division. Their closest rival is the Philadelphia Warriors who at the present time are about five games off the pace.

Bill Russell has been a tremendous asset to the Celts and of course the presence of Bob Cousy and Bill Sharan would help spark any ball club.

Track

The indoor Track season has been a big success thus far thanks to the appearance of the Hungarian Athletes who sought asylum in the U. S.

The U. S. Stars have shown brilliantly in the mile as is exemplified in the persons of Glenn King and Fred Dwyer who took the mile event on two successive meets at Boston and Philadelphia.

Dwyer's time incidentally was a thrilling 4:00:8 for a record in the Boston meet.

Baseball

Baseball is a bee hive of activity now as the ball clubs are signing their players and getting ready for their trip south to get ready for another big season.

Of course everyone is still talking about Jackie Robinson's departure.

Scot Grapplers Drop Two Matches

Three days after returning from the Christmas holidays the Maryville College wrestling team dropped a 20-10 decision to the Lniversity of Chattanooga Moccasins. Weight problems caused the Scots to forfeit the 123 lb. class. Maryville's only points came on pins by Jerry Waters and John Hawkins. The Mocs took all other matches by decision.

The Scotties 2nd defeat of the new year came at the hands of the perennial S.E.C. wrestling champs, the Auburn Tigers. The powerful Auburn squad defeated the Scots 31-2 with Maryville's only tally coming on a draw garnered by Capt. Jerry Waters Three Maryville boys suffered pins and the 130 lb. class was forfeited to the Tigers.

Intramurals....

by Joe Quinn

The Intramural program this semester has the sports interest of every man in mind. Not only is the basketball league still in full swing, but plans are now being formed for the swimming, ping-pong, badminton, and wrestling tournaments to be started.

Coach Johnson has some fine looking trophies lined up for the winners of these tourneys so if you are interested, sign up now either at the intramural office or on the sign up sheets posted in Carnegie.

Basketball

Getting back to basketball, the two leagues are currently battling through their second round of hoop play. At the present time the Warriors head up the B league followed by the Hot Shots, Blue Barons, Y.M.C.A. B's, Pro-Mins, Kappa Phi B's and the Knights in that order.

In A league action, the Sledge hammers have a slight edge over the Kappa Phi team followed up by the Outcasts and the Y.M.C.A.

Official team schedules will be printed in the next issue.

A side note is the annual Stinkin-Shoe classic will be held tonight in the Alumni Gym at 6:30 Alpha Sig (winner last year) vs Kappa Phi.

Stinkin' Shoe Played Tonight

Alpha Sigma and Kappa Phi meet tonight in the annual "Stinkin' Shoe" basketball game. The place is the alumni gym, time is 6:30.

Under the direction of Bob Finertie, this semester's president, Alpha Sigma is carrying forward a drive for 100% attendance at meetings. All members are encouraged to come out and enjoy the fellowship and varied programs on Saturdays at 6:15. The calendar of this semester's activities includes a swimming meet with Kappa Phi on February 9, the Sweetheart Show on February 23, and participation in skit night in March. Also, the "Mr. Mac Day" banquet, a weekend hike to the Smokies, and the annual picnic at the Manning's farm are scheduled for spring.

The next regular meeting of the society will be next Saturday, February 9.

Fulbright Gives College Aid Bill

Mr. President, I introduce, for appropriate reference, two bills which I consider vital to the development of our educational institutions, and to the general educational stndards of our country.

The first bill would allow an additional income tax exemption for a taxpayer or a spouse, or a dependent child under twenty-three years of age, who is a full-time student at an educational institution above the secondary level. The exemption may be claimed by the taxpayer himself, or on account of a spouse or a dependent child under the age of 23, who is in attendance on a full time basis at an educational institution above the secondary level.

The second bill would allow a taxpayer, who is a student in an institution of higher learning to deduct expenses for books, tuition, fees, and other supplies necessary to the courses of instruction in which he is enrolled. This bill is primarily deisgned to assist those students who work their own way through college, and it would apply to both full-time and part-time students, whether self supporting or supported by outside sources.

Last April, I introduced these bills but was unable to obtain action on them before the adjournment. Since I have been a Member of the Congress, I have supported virtually every measure designed to aid and assist our students and to improve the educational facilities and institutions of this country. These bills are merely another method of providing an avenue for our students toward the goals they seek through adequate educational opportunities. Because I am convinced that the problem of improving our educational system is one of the most impressing of our time, I am once again introducing the bills in the hope the Congress will act on them during this session.

The continually rising cost of a college education, of course, varies, but I believe it reasonable to estimate the average cost at $1,500 per year, or roughly $6,000 for a 4-year college education. The cost of the more specialized courses in science and medicine quite often is much more than this, and yet the parent, or the individual himself, receives only a $600 a year personal tax exemption. Consequently, there is no incentive provided in our tax laws for one to pursue an educational goal.

There has been for decades a continual and serious deterioration in the general quality of our education. More recently, we have read and heard much about the amounting shortage of trained engineers and scientists in the United States. It is interesting to note that Universities and technical institutions in Soviet Russia are graduating engineers in numbers some two and a half times greater than are similar institutions in the United States where we are now training only one-half the required number of engineers and scientists. In the decade 1950-1960, the Soviet Union is expected to produce 1,200,000 trained engineers and scientists as compared to our 900,000. In the category of engineers alone, the Soviets have multiplied the number trained tenfold since 1930, when records show thy had 41,000 ngineers. This situation is all the more critical because of the demands, not only of industry, but of national security.

The United States, if it is to succeed in its role of world leadership, must produce citizens who have vision, foresight, wisdom, and the knowledge to compete successfully with world problems.

Assuming that the objective of these bills is a proper one, it seems to me much more efficient, in the long run, to encourage and enable a parent to pay for his children's education than it is for the Government to directly assume the burden of educating its citizens.

In addition to these reasons, enactment of these proposals will, I believe, add to the income of the Government, as well as the gross income of its individual citizens. Dr. Paul Glick, of the Census Bureau, estimated about a year ago that male college graduates will receive an average of $100,000 more in lifetime income than the average high school graduate, and we must remember this increased income will be fully taxed.

Under present tax laws, if one pays $1,000 for an acre of land and sells it for $2,000, he pays only on the increment of $1,000, at reduced capital gains rates. If he pays $1,000 for a truck to be used in his business and takes in $2,000 in drayage fees, the cost of the truck amortized over its useful life is deductible from the $2,000 income as earned. But if he speneds $1,000 for an education and as a result his income is increased $1,000 per year, the tax laws do not allow application of these theories. He receives no deduction for the thousand dollars which he has invested in his education, and the yearly increase in his income of $1,000 is taxed in full as ordinary income.

I sincerely hope the Congress will favorably consider these bills.

Team To Debate Carson-Newman

The Debate Teams will have their first tournament at Carson-Newman on February 8-9 for a state tournament. The teams will be composed of Keith Ham, Dan Ellis, Bob Goodlin, Bob Vogel, Marvelyn Rice, and Graehame Seiber on the three men's teams, and Eleanor Koster, Corita Erwin, Margaret Patterson, and Lotty Jerkins on the two women's teams.

The Smoky Mountains' Tournament will be held on campus February 22-23.

Fashions

by Bobbye Carson

Have you ever marveled as to why some styles look so well on one person and not so well on another? It is very disheartening to see a beautiful dress and upon trying it on, discover that it doesn't look as you had anticipated. If you have found yourself in this situation you undoubtedly have remarked, "It is a charming outfit, but it simply isn't my type." That four letter word, TYPE can be the clue to the secret of your personal success in 57 fashions.

In order to select styles that look best on you, you must discover just what your type is. I believe you will find that your own personality is the secret to finding your TYPE.

It is better to discover your fashion-wise type and stick to it rather than try to be like someone else whom you admire. If you have discovered that you look best in sophisticated styles, don't try to wear ruffly dollish outfits. The classifications of types that will be mentioned are very flexible and can be varied to suit many individuals. See if you can fit yourself in one of them!

BABY DOLL: Here is a catagorie that small girls seem to fit into best. She is very much at home in light airy fashions that are the envy of many larger women. She is very fortunate in having the new sissy shirt designed especially for her. During the waning winter months, she will look well in a light weight wool or jersey dress of a pastel color. This style can be made respectively hers with a tiny peter pan jeweled collar and short puff sleeves. To vary her wardrobe she can wear tailored suits with a slightly fluffy blouse.

COOL BEAUTY: Here is a classification that many of us, no doubt, wish that we could fit ourselves into. Fashions of simplicity bring out her charm of natural attractiveness. She can wear a variety of styles and colors, but she looks her best in styles that have very simple lines. To keep from looking too plain, she dresses up her outfits of pale shades with touches of rich colors in accessories and dazzling jewelry. She would look very fashionable in princess styles and sheaths.

OUTDOOR GIRL: The outdoor girl is often of a more outgoing personality. She is openly interested in sports, campus functions, and people in general. Fashion-wise, box suits were made with her in mind. She can wear heavy tweeds and checks exceptionally well. She likes a variety of colors; bringht ones, too. Black remains one of her best. However, she can add colorful accessories to brighten it up. She likes tailored blouses and shirt waist dresses, which incidentally are very good for spring. For sport wear, she is a natural in tapered pants or bermudas with matching shirts or sweaters.

SOPHISTICATE: This type is often found among the slimer girls on a college campus. She seeks new fashions, but doesn't seek to be the first to wear them. She looks nice in tailored styles with straight lines. The sheath dress, with all modifications, is definitely her prize winning frock. She can wear large jewelry, usually; but not too brilliant or dazzling. Her hair adds to her sophistication, when brought straight back in a bun. Her erect posture is one of her clues to attractiveness. Her danger zone of appearing too cool and sophisticated must be closely watched in personality as well as in her wardrobe. She looks nice as a general rule in the new styles of hats, with the larger hats with little trim seeming to be her smartest.

GAY ADVENTURER: This personality is forever seeking the very latest in styles. She buys scads of fashion magazines to keep herself up to date on the world news of the fashion commentators. She will be one of the first to wear the new sheath type formals. Since long beads are the fad, she will be sure to have several strands. She likes the slim toed shoes, but most of all, she loves unusual hats and wears them well. She has creative imagination in combinations of styles and colors. If her adventuresome ideas do not become overdone, she will more than likely be termed "a snappy dresser."

I hope you have found yourself suitable to one of these catagories. There are many others that I have not considered. If you find yourself a combination of separate types, you should strive for the happy medium.

Could you lift a cork float three feetin diameter? It would weigh over 20 lbs! The same amount of water would weigh 875 lbs., while the element mercury will tip the scales at 1,000 lbs.

If enough nuclear matter, the center of the atom, could be gathered together into a lumb the size of a golf ball, its weight would be approximately 79,000,000,000 lbs.

Marco Polo Visits Maryville

By Joanne Causey

The other day I was talking with a chap who had been AWAY for a semester. Exhausted from his travels he had come back to Maryville, sure of finding that little-red-school-house simplicity that had always been so fresh and appealing in this world of VICE and SOPHISTICATION. Here, the Co-eds still wore long linsey-woolsey dresses and the boys wore beards for modesty; "thee" and "thou" were still the ticket. Our traveler, weary of the worldliness of city folk, (you see, he went a purty fur piece OUTSIDE Tennessee), knew that here he would find balm for his fevered brow. He thought, as he rode along, with pleasure of seeing the old place once again. He remembered the rollicking good itmes he had had here in the good old days the quilting bees, church-raisings, the hog tying contests. "Perhaps," he thought, "They'd be having a corn husking this very night!" With high anticipation he pulled into Maryville, climbed the hill, and came upon a group of students on the edge of the campus. They were SMOKING! Appalled by such VICE, he staggered on to the dorm. Upon entering, a multitude of signs assailed his vision: EXIT, ELEVATOR, ESCALATOR, LOUNGE, SMOKER, BAR. A receptionist assigned him to a room and asked if he'd like anything sent up. Uncomprehendingly, he groped his way to his room.

There he met his room-mate reclining on a chaise lounge in a silk smoking jacket meditatively shakin g some dice—and BEARDLESS! He was courteous, though he immediately asked our wanderer if he preferred his dry, with two olives or just how. Gone were the samplers from the walls. Indirect lighting and murals has replaced them. And no more gas lamps!

Finally dinner time arrived. The dining hall at least couldn't have changed. Our friend hastened to Pearsons, anticipating the pewter forks, the good old wooden trestles, the sawdust on the floor of olden days.

The boys waited below in tuxedos as their dates one by one descended the stairs in bouffant evening dresses. Marco Polo, in a state of shock, slunk in and sat down at the nearest table. While creamed peanuts on toast, prune whip, and rice pudding and other such delicacies were served in candlelight, dinner music played softly in the background. The couple at his side got up to dance. And it wasn't any hoe-down either. Marco slumped unconscious to the floor.

When I last talked with him, he kept mumbling incoherently, while he shuffled his feet, "There's been some changes made. Civilization has snuck in." When I asked him what his plans were, with a kind of wild light in his eyes, he replied, "I'm heading for Paris where it's not so sophisticated."

Student Vols Will See Movie Tomorrow Night

Sunday, February 3, at 8:00 P.M., the Student Volunteers will see a movie presented by Dr. Pritchard. On an undisclosed date in March, the organization will be honored with a talk by the Executive Secretary of Student Vols, Mr. George Thurber.

Recently appointed committee chairmen of the organization include: Molly Sieler, publicity; Bob Stevens, maintenance; Frank Caspo and Mert Cellar, mission projects; Laine Rowe, music and worship; Mimi Mattes, display, and Louise Pratt who now assists, and will succeed, Bobbie Larsen as program chairman.

COUNCIL TO . . .

on February 27.

Committee reports comprised the main business of Student Council last Wednesday evening, but some action was taken on several minor matters. Two town night violations were reported and after some discussion, it was voted to extend a reprimand to the offenders, who had merely forgotten to sign in.

It was brought to the attention of council that various organizations on campus should have their own means for publicizing their activities in the Echo, and that someone in each club should be responsible for turning in news. Ths came as a suggestion from the editor of the Echo. The Student Organizations Committee is to see that this is done.

The Student Athletic Committee chairmanfi Dan Wiley, announced that his committee had met and voted to have the work of the committee discussed in Student Faculty Senate.

Investigation into the scheduling of more than one even on Saturday nights was brought up in connection with the Social Committee report. No definite action was taken on this, however, pending further inquiry.

Council approved the suggestion of Shirley McNiell, elections chairman, that locks be put on ballot boxes. It was mentioned that the sophomore class had lost about thirty members between semesters. This was said in connection with the sophomore elections taking place last week. Gray Clark was elected Student Council representative to fill the vacancy left by Ann Castrodale. Ted Frauman, sophomore class president, stated that approximately 70% of the class voted in the election.

An anonymous letter addressed to the president of the student body and Dean McClelland was read by Dick Henderson. The letter alluded to grievances which the writer claimed had been hitherto ignored and stated that the recent disappearance of hymnals fro mthe chapel was a protest action. However, since the grievances were not stated and since there was no other apparent purpose to the letter, Council took no action.

Henderson stated that the constitutions of the men's and women's governments were being coordinated with that of Student Council. He said also that two new amplifiers are being ordered for the dining hall.

Debate Tournament To Be Held Here!

Vol. 42 MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE, FEBRUARY 16, 1957 No. 11

Roger Wagner Chorale Is Coming To M C

HAILED AS ONE of the finest singing groups in America today, the Roger Wagner Chorale will make its appearance here in concert next Monday at Maryville College.

The Roger Wagner Chorale — hailed by critics as one of the finest singing groups in America today — will make its bow before audiences in Maryville next Monday, February 18, 1957, in the third concert presented in the 1956-57 Artists Series. Headed by its dynamic French-born director, Roger Wagner, the 24-voice chorus is visiting here as part of its second cross-country tour which began in January.

The Roger Wagner Chorale is hailed as one of the most versatile musical organizations in the world. Ranging in number from the 14 voice group which sings the theme for the "I Married Joan" TV series to a 255 voice aggregation thundering the 'Messiah" in the Hollywood Bowl the Chorale is adaptable to any music form.

The Chorale was founded in 1946 as a group devoted to the singing of the early masters. The quality of the ensemble soon prompted leading conductors to engage it for major programs with the Los Angeles Philharmonic orchestra, the Hollywood Bowl, and the Los Angeles Music Festival. Since its professional debut the Chorale has earned its unique reputation for versatility in major concerts in all parts of America singing an amazingly diverse repertoire.

Roger Wagner, director of the Chorale, has earned for himself many distinctions in the field of chorale music, yet his activities embrace every other field of music as well. In addition to guiding the destinies of the group which bears his name in concert, radio, television, and motion pictures, as well as recordings, Wagner is choir director at St. Joseph's Church and the Church of St. Paul the Apostle. He is choral director at the University of California Los Angeles campus and head of the choral department at Marymount College in Los Angeles.

Though its size varies with the score to be performed, the professional nucleus consists of 16 full-time paid professional singers. In addition to the basic group Wagner utilizes a non-contract group of some 40 to 60 singers upon whom he calls from time to time, and another 150 non-professional singers who supplement the regulars for special concert performances. Large or small, the group goes under the trade name of the Roger Wagner Chorale.

"Andrew Jackson And Texas Affairs" Title Of Article By Mrs. McNiell

by Walt Thompson

Appearing in the recent 1956 edition of The East Tennessee Historical Society's Publication is an article by Sarah Brown McNiell, editor of special studies and an instructor in history at Maryville College. It is entitled "Andrew Jackson and Texas Affairs, 1819-1836". Incorporating portions of several Jackson letters and the findings of many noted authorities on Texas and American history, the article reveals the circumstances during Jackson's administration which have discredited U.S. efforts to purchase Texas prior to he Texas Revolution, and Jackson's policies toward Mexico during this critical period, in the eyes of some historians.

Evidence of Jackson's avowed intent to preserve strict American neutrality in Mexican affairs, an intent not fully realized because of lack of law adequate to insure fidelity of U.S. citizens to their nation's best interests, is presented, as well as the methods of negotiation used by Jackson appointees which deprived Mexico of her good faith in our government. Declaring that a majority of

YW Rated Active Important To MC

Recently the program committee of the YWCA devised a questionnaire to be passed out to all girls on campus listed as active 250 questionnaires distributed, 83 members on the rolls. Of about were returned. Forty-one girls stated that they considered themselves active, while 29 said they were inactive; several felt that they would like to be active but that they did not have the time.

One of the purposes of the questionnaire was to determine what the members felt about the overall program of YWCA and more specifically to obtan suggestions for Sunday programs. One of the questions involved listing all the activities the member thought were sponsored by YWCA and YMCA and indicating which ones she felt to be most important. Nu Gamma and the community missions (Sunnybrook and Home Avenue) were listed more times than any other activity as being important. Such activities as Y-Radio, M-Book, Pi Gamma, and even Barnwarming were among the least-frequently mentioned.

These answers bore out what the Y-cabinet had already suspected — that many times students do not realize just what the YWCA includes on this campus. Underclassmen moe ote eltonffil Underclassmen more often fell in to this category. Many upperclassmen, however, realizing quite well the scope of Y, felt that it was going a little too far, even to the point of monopoly — sponsoring activities which could be handled just as well by other organizations. They felt that the purpose of YWCA as a national movement was being lost sight of at Maryville and suggested reevaluation along those lines.

The question to which the answer was most often "no" was "Do you read the National Student Y. W. and Y. M. magazine, Intercollegian?" Several underclassmen did not know there was such a magazine.

Along the line of last semester's programs, Christmas Readings was the best attended and perhaps the most enjoyed, as indicated by answers on the questionnaire. Four prospective Sunday programs were listed and members were asked to comment on their interest in having them. Knoxville College Octet received the most votes, with the program "On Being A Woman — finding our place in society" coming in a close second.

Those answering the questionnaire felt that Sunday Meetings should sometimes be joint with YMCA, include some short business (perhaps so that people could know what was going on in Y during the week), and be more student and campus centered in subject. They rated YWCA as active, reaching areas off campus which otherwise would not be reached, and important to campus life. However, some felt that Y was not active enough.

There were many suggestions for programs, such as more emphasis on audience participation and group discussions, getting acquainted with the faculty, campus sings, and stimulating panel and discussions on world affairs, dating and marriage, relationship of shampus to "outside world", the problem of dissatisfaction of students on campus, and the place of woman in society. (And these are to mention only a few of the good suggestions along this line.)

Other questions having to do with Y in general were raised, such as Why automatic membership? Can't meeting time be changed to another day besides Sunday? How do you subscribe to Intercollegian? Why does each activity in Y seem so remote from the others? Why can't Y sponsor things that are fun to do — such as more socials, dances, teas? etc

The answers and comments on these questionnaires reveal a lot about YWCA and its membership and should prove helpful to the cabinet in its re-evaluation of the total program.

MC NSA Sponsors Brotherhood Week

The National Student Association on the Maryville Campus is sponsoring Brotherhood Week, February 17th to 24th. There will be a special chapel service on brotherhood given by the NSA on February 16th.

Though the term brotherhood means getting along with others, it is a phrase more easily spoken than practiced. There are three purposes of Brotherhood Week which are formulated to promote true practice of Brotherhood. They are 1) To give people an opportunity to rededicate themselves as individuals to the basic ideals of respect for people and human rights which are essential to our way of lef. 2) To dramatize the practical things which people can do to promote an understanding and realization of these ideals. 3) To enlist the support of a larger number of people in year-round activities to build brotherhood.

To have true brotherhood we must believe it, live it, and support it.

Why Don't You Fight Back?

We believe almost everyone received something thought provoking from the messages which Dr. Brubaker brought to the college last week, and this.

The discussion in the dormitory was perhaps the most beneficial part of the entire February Meeitngs program. Persons could ask questions which were truly perplexing without fear of embarrassment, and the unsupervised questions usually gave students as well as Dr. Brubaker an opportunity to evaluate the weak points in the total program of the school. This is ne of the excellent aspects of a religious emphasis week.

In one of these dormitory discussions, Dr. Brubaker made a challenging observation. He said that no one one fights back here at Maryville. Why is this?

In the realm of religion, Dr. Brubaker said that we have no healthy Agnostics on the campus. True Agnosticism, built on intellectual thought, may be a necessary step in the growth of an individual's unfolding philosophy of life and religion. It may challenge the faith of an immature Christian and cause his religious growth. We cannot learn from one another if we all believe in the same things.

And in the realm of campus life, we need constantly to challenge what we have, to assure all of the best possible college experience. If we don't approve of what we discover, we should follow Dr. Brubaker's suggestion by carefully considered fighting back.

The college newspaper is the voice of the students. What better way to challenge a college program than through the paper? Why don't you fight back?

—B.S.

Speak Up For Brotherhood

Brotherhood is like the weather. Nearly everybody talks about it.

There isn't much any of us can do about rain or snow. But there's a lot all of us can do about Brotherhood.

Of course, we pay it lip service. We know that our Constitution gives everybody civil rights, including freedom of worship and belief, freedom to think and read and speak. We all speak up for these constitutional liberties. And talk about Brotherhood, just talk itself, is a good thing. It keeps us thinking about our neighbors and it keeps advertising the need for understanding.

We need to remind ourselves that democracy is a system of free men banded together to keep fredom in a free country. Freedom can flourish only where theer is understanding. Prejudices and discrimination, intolerance and persecution exist only where there is ignorance. That's why talk about Brotherhood is good for democracy.

Beyond talk, there is more we can do. All over America there are organizations helping to spread Brotherhood. There is the National Conference of Christians and Jews, and there are Councils for Human Relations in many cities. There is the great work of the Boy Scouts and the Girl Scouts which helps promote Brotherhood. Giving blood to the Red Cross is Brotherhood at work. For that matter, a simple "hello" to a neighbor is Brotherhood.

This is Brotherhood Week and we are more conscious right now of what Brotherhood means. It will help America and every American to make every week Brotherhood Week.

By James Kerney, Jr., Editor, The Trenton (N.J.) Times.

This is published in the interest of Brotherhood Week, February 17-24, sponsored by th National Confrence of Christians and Jews.

The Best. . . .

De Maupassant once said, "only a mediocre man is always at his best." In a sense this is true and yet a man who is not striving to do his best is only part of a man. Everyone knows that he should work to attain the highest goals that are possible for him to reach, yet so few of us put this knowledge in to practice.

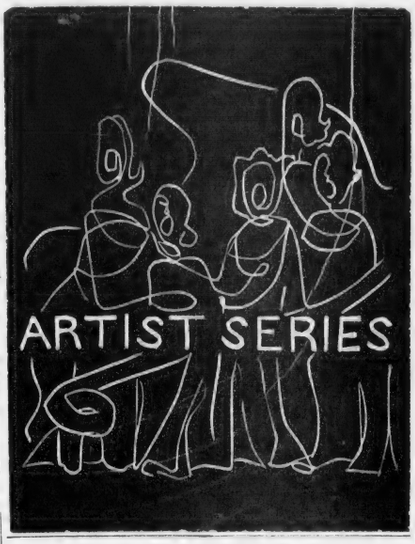
Scholarship is only one of the many points where this lack of effort is demonstrated. Few of us can truthfully say that we have done our best, even done justice, to our scholastic work. It seems that we students of the modern generation have adopted the attitude that we will get as little as we can from college and still comply with the graduation requirements. Ignoring all past, present, and future responsibilities and obligations, we resist most of the educational opportunities presented to us. We go merrily on our way picking up a smattering of knowledge here, a smattering there, and in the end receiving a diploma which is meaningless. What are we to do?

Each individual must solve the problem for himself. It is his to do his best or something less. William M. Elliott puts it squarely up to us in his book, Lift High That Banner, when he says, "All that God requires of any man is to be himself at his best." And Douglas Malloch put it into peotry:

"If you can't be a highway then just be a trail,
If you can't be the sun be a star;
For it isn't by size that you win or fail—
Be the best of whatever you are!"

—P.N.

Break It Now!



What major national and international events took place during the past week? Chances are, if you are a typical Maryville College student, you cannot answer this question. Anyone would argue over the importance of keeping in touch with current events, yet frequently the four years of college are characterized by a super-abundance of text-book material with almost no attention given to the reading of a newspaper. Aren't national and world affairs a part of our education, too? Why is the separation made?

The difficulty with college is that it is isolated——a part of the society yet, in a sense, apart from it. It is a community in itself, set in its own little world. There is a temptation to withdraw within the college and forget that theer is another world outside the campus gates. This artificial barrier must be broken—and broken abruptly—when we leave college and face the realities of life. Why not break it now?

TALK OF THE WEEK

By Sue Settle

Scots & Soda

By Margaret Longfellow

SAGA OF TOMINELLA

Once upon a time in the little college of Maryville, there lived a quiet and beautiful co-ed named Tominella. Ella was her real name, but her two mean and homely room-mates called her Tominella because she always sat in her room or in the library surrounded by tomes, working and slaving over the books. Tominella had also a wicked house-mother who made her make her bed and scrub her floor and watched what time she came in.

Spring finally came to this little college and it was time for the big spring ball. Tominella wanted more than anything to go to the ball, but there was so much left to study and besides—who would invite her anyway? But Tominella's two room-mates bought fine clothes and made Tominella help them get dressed for the big occasion.

Tominella felt so badly and left out that she decided to leave the Life History of the Whale until tomorrow and began to look in her closet for some rag to wear. Just then her wicked house-mother came in. "Tominella", she said, "Your room did not pass room-check. You must stay here and scrub the floors, make the beds, clean the desk, and wash the windows." Poor Tominella!

She cleaned the room and then went to the library and drowned her sorrows in a huge pile of tomes. Next to her sat a boy who looked rather like an owl, surrounded by a bigger stack of tomes. Their eyes met over "The Conquests of Napolean", and before you knew it they had decided to go to the ball.

Fairy Godmother to The Rescue

But how could she go to the ball? Oh, but her fairy god-mother would help her! She hurried to the house on the hill. "Oh, Fairy God-mother", she cried to the kindly lady, "won't you please give me permission to ride with a boy on his bicycle? I do so want to go to the ball!"

"All right this time, my dear", she replied. "But remember that you must be back by 10:30 else you will change from a social butterfly back to a bookworm". Tominella shuddered at the thought, but thanked her fairy and hurried to the ball.

Tominella had never had such a lovely time drinking lemonade, watching the people dance by, and talking about the Eskimo life and the Euphrates River. She heard the big town clock strike ten, but she was having such an exciting time that she scarcely noticed it. But suddenly she heard the clock booming the half hour.

Jumping from her seat, she rushed from the ballroom leaving her partner staring dazedly after her. She raced back to her dorm, and even when she caught her shiny black shoe in a crack in the walk she left it lying there because she was in such a hurry. She finally reached her room without anyone seeing her.

Back to the Books

Tominella stuck to her books for a week after that, hardly daring to leave her room. Until one night her wicked house-mother called her to the parlor. "There's a young man to see you", she said. "But don't stay."

Tominella hurried to the parlor with great anticipation. Had he really wanted to see her again? Perhaps she too could be popular! Yes, there he stood with her shoe in his hand. "Is this yours?", he asked hopefully. "I've been looking everywhere fr you. You never told me your name. I found this when I went after you."

"Yes, it's mine", sighed Tominella, slipping it on her foot.

"Thank heavens", breathed the boy. "At last I've found you. Come along with me—you forgot to sign in."

Music Appreciation (?)

It is quite often said that quantity will never replace quality. This can be proven to any skeptic in the group by suggesting that the quantity of 27 "F's" in a course will never replace the quality one "A".

One application of this controversy is in volume vs. quality of music. Very little is gained after the point of moderation and common sense by more and more volume. If you have ever sat in front of a rabid fan at a ball game, it is doubtful that you turned to your companion half-way through the first quarter and said, "My, doesn't he have a lovely voice?" even if the one in question happened to be Ezio Caruso Van Harter III.

In applying this idea of modulation to hymn singing, it might be possible to set up a simple algebraic formula, such as: (if V equals Volume, S equals Sincerity, F equals Faith, and it is assumed that an ideal F equals 1.000 or more) S over V equals F. It can be seen that S over V should be an improper fraction. If it is not, then something is wrong.

Some people think it more convincing to prove a point by Bible quotations than by logic, and at this time many of you are madly thumbing through your Bibles trying to locate "Make a joyful noise unto the Lord." Just in case you're going to try to prove anything by that, it might be well to add that "noise" is defined two sentences later as "singing." It also says to "Serve the Lord with Gladness." Shouting just for the pure competitive spirit is not recommended.

More Music

Calypso is one of those things which will probably go down as a part of the 20th century legend. It is defined by RCA as "traditional melodies of the English speaking islands of the Caribbean."

The present form of this music rose out of peculiar circumstances. Many years ago skin drums were banned in Trinidad by the British, in order to supress certain tribal customs. The natives then became quite adept at beating out melodies and rhythms with different sized bamboo tubes. Due to the danger of these home made clubs, they too were discouraged. So, garbage cans and other metal objects were called upon to replace them. The complete success of these "Steelbands", as they were called came when an American base on the island became the source of such things as oil drums and automobile brake drums. No one knows the origin of "Calypso", either the music itself or the name as applied to it. (The factual information in this paragraph was taken from "Time", Feb. 27, 1956.)

Calypso is currently being presented to United States audiences by Harry Belafonte, a native of Trinidad. His recordings in Hi-Fi are fascinating to listen to, both for his own vocal interpretation and for the instrumental side. The drums present an unmistakable rhythm and the fact that the flute-effect parts are the work of a tin-penny-whistle artist is food for thought.

Etc.

For you who have been too buried in books to hear of Calypso, maybe you'd like to hear what Conductor Thomas Beecham said about jazz, recently. He said (quoted from The Knoxville News-Sentinel, Feb. 12): "Think of jazz! I do not think of drains or stinks or frightful crimes or of rock 'n' roll or of the Bunny Hug! Think of jazz! Good God! The music is so frightful it drives me wild."

At the Capitol: today — "Hidden Guns," Mon. and Tues. — "Miami Expose" and for the remainder of the week that ever controversial "Baby Doll," which was reviewed in this column in the last issue of The Echo.

Man-Made 'Glow' Copies Nature's Phosphorescence

The mystery of "cold light" produced by luminous marine bacteria, seen at night as a continuous blue glow on dead fish or flesh, is well on the way to being solved.

In fact, that same light has been recreated with chemical compounds by a group of scientists at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory, one of these scientists using this project as his doctoral degree research at the University of Tennessee.

Work from the Atomic Energy Commission's ORNL, as well as a number of other laboratories, has contributed to the solution of this problem — for example, Dr. E. N. Harvey, of Princeton University, and Dr. W. D. McElroy, of Johns Hopkins University, have been pioneers in this field.

Dr. Milton J. Cormier, of Oak Ridge, who was awarded the Ph.D. degree in bacteriology from U-T last December, has worked on this problem over the past few years. In previous years he has been associated with two former Oak Ridge scientists, Dr. B. L. Strehler and Dr. John R. Totter, in the project.

Dr. Cormier is also searching for the answer to a similar phenomenon, the eerie glow of "fox fire" caused by luminous fungi growing on decaying wood.

By studying the luminous process, Dr. Cormier said, it is hoped that one of the most fundamental problems which confront scientists today may become better understood — the conversion of chemical energy into light. Answers to such a problem may also help to understand the reverse process — the conversion of light into chemical energy, which is the first step in photosynthesis.

The luminous glow of "fox fire" fungi, the light produced by certain bacteria, and the light from other luminous forms appear to be different phenomena, he said. That is, the specific chemical compounds involved in each case are different. However, the final light-emitting step may be basically the same in all cases.

The Oak Ridge scientists have produced, in a test tube, that came natural, heatless light of luminous bacteria and thus became the first to answer the ancient riddle of the "phosphorescence" of dead fish and flesh.

These experiments have served to identify the chemical ingredients necessary to produce light in luminous bacteria and the probable chemical reactions involved The only chemical substance required from nature is an enzyme called luciferase, which was isolated from the cells of luminous bacteria. This enzyme can be thought of as a biological catalyst because it is required in minute amounts, but it is not used up during the luminescence reaction, Dr. Cormier explained.

While attending U-T, Dr. Cormier was a pre-doctoral fellow of the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies.

JOKES

Two little rabbits were being chased by a pack of wolves. One little rabbit turned to the other and said, "How about you and me stopping a minute and outnumbering 'em?"

A not too prosperous London clergyman reluctantly accepted the offer of a commercial firm to supply his congregation with free books containing the standard hymns, with the stipulation that a little advertising might be injected. When the books arrived, the minister was overjoyed to find the books contained no advertising matter at all. But on the following Sunday he was horrified to hear the following hymn:

Hark! The herald angels sing.
Murphy's pills are just the thing:
Peace on earth and mercy mild.
Two for man and one for child.

Sports Spotlights

SPORTS SPOTLIGHT

By Joe Quinn

North Carolina is still the number one team in the nation, but but with a couple of real scares their lead over Kansas is getting smaller and smaller.

Kentucky, No. 3 in the nation, lost another game last week to Miss. State. This loss won't help their standings any.

Other teams in the Top Ten aren't making any notable changes in their positions.

The Boston Celtics continued on their spree through the N.B.A. after losing 2 straight.

The Warriors hung on to second place while the Syracuse Nats moved out of the Eastern Cellar at the expense of New York.

In the Western loop, Bob Petit is the big noice. The 6-foot 9-inch sensation has been setting a tremendous scoring pace. However his St. Louis Hawks still haven't found the top spot in the division.

The Big Tournaments such as the N.I.T. and N.C.A.A. are looking over the cream of the crop and Seattle became the first team to agree to play in the N.I.T. Tournament next month.

The lightweight championship remained in the hands of Joe Brown this week, as the nimble negro scored a TKO over Wallace "Bud" Smith the former champ, at Miami. Brown completely outclassed his opponent throughout the fight and the referee stepped in and called a halt to the slaughter midway through the 11th round. Wallace was in no condition to argue the decision.

AS I SEE IT

By Pete Nix

Based on information from the wrestling team

The 1957 Southeastern Conference Wrestling Tournament is scheduled for February 22-23 at Auburn, Ala. One of the highlights of Maryville College's athletic record has been its showing in these past tournaments. Although never winning the championship, we have always made a good showing and produced many S.E.C. champs in the various weight divisions. This year the outlook is not so bright, but you can still expect a respectable showing by the Maryville Squad.

In the 123 lb. class Maryville Captain and former S.E.C. champ Jerry Waters is the favorite. Auburn's Jerald Cresaps is the likely champ in the 130 lb. division. At 137 the favorite is Ackerman of Emory. A former S.E.C. champ, Malganado of Auburn, is the choice in the 147 lb. class. Auburn's Havgen is the man to beat at 157 with Maryville's Don Hill having an outside chance. At 167 Graves of Chattanoga is favored, but there are many good boys at this weight in the league. The 177 lb. choice is Dyer of Chattanooga.

The 191 and Heavyweight division is a muddle. If Auburn's heavyweight Rankin drops to 191 then Maryville's John Hawkins should take the heavyweight crown, but if he doesn't then 191 is wide open, and Hawkins and Rankin should have a great battle for the Heavy title.

Scots Win 3, Drop One

The Maryville College Basketeers added three more games to their two game winning streak before the torrid Carson-Newman Eagles cut it short. Jim Gregory and Capt. Bill Wallace led the Scotties to a five game winning streak before they were clobbered by Carson-Newman. Jack French's last second field goal gave the Highlanders a one-point decision over Tennessee Wesleyan. Playing one of their better games of the season Maryville defeated the Chattanooga Mocs 81-67. The Scots got hot with 8 minutes left to gain a come from behind 84 79 over the Emory and Henry Wasps.

The Carson-Newman Eagles ended the Scot victory skein with a 109-78 drubbing. The Eagles hitting at a 60 per cent clip never allowed the overwhelmed Scots to get within reach.

Scott Grapplers Split 15-17, 21-11

by Pete Nix

The Maryville College wrestling team lost a 17-15 decision to Chattanooga but came back to take a 21-11 victory over Emery for a split in their last two matches. Jerry Waters, Don Hill and John Hawkins contributed 15 points to each match with pins. A forfeiture in the 130 lb. class could well have cost the Scotties the Chattanooga match. However, at full strength the Highlanders took the measure of the Emery strongmen in one of tohe best matches ever seen here.

Intramurals....

by Joe Quinn

Basketball in both A league and B league concluded last week and the double elimination tournament has already begun.

On Monday, the Pre-Mins edged the Kappa Phi B's 23-22, the Kappa Phi Blue Barons downed the Alpha Sig Knights 31-28, and the Hot Shots whipped the Y.M.C.A. 33-22. The Alpha Sig Warriors drew a bye.

In the A league no games had been played at this time as yet However the Kappa Phi team was to play the Rooks in the first tourney game on Wednesday.

Swimming

Alpha Sig was victorious in the swim meet last Saturday by a wide margin after losing it the year before.

Badminton

The badminton tournament has begun its play and winners will be announced shortly.

Wrestling

All men who are interested in wrestling in the intramural meet this year should sign up now with Coach Johnson. The meet will be held on two days, Feb. 21-22.

Keep an eye on this column for tournament results.

The annual Stinkin Shoe classic was held, in abbreviated form, two weeks ago in the Alumni Gym. The Alpha Sigs got the jump early in the game on the Kappa Phi's and went on to score a 63-48 win.

Both squads cleared their respective benches in the game thus providing no one outstanding scorer.

John West did a capable job as the referee and both squads played good clean ball.

Months Added For Gigging Speargun, Bow

Chattanooga—For the 1957 season, speargun, gig and bow and arrow fishing dates have been extended two months on Watts Bar, Chickamauga and Hales Bar, the State Game and Fish Commission's 1957 regulations state.

The taking of all non-game fish, except catfish, will be permitted on these lakes April-July this year. Only April and May were open last year.

District 5 Supervisor Martin B. Clark of Chattanooga said the two month season extension was granted by the Commission after District 5 officers voted to request it. He said the request was made because more carp were observed shoaling during June and July and because April and May were considered cold for gigging.

Fishing with gig, speargun and bow and arrow is legal only during daylight hours on all waters except Buffalo River in Middle Tennessee. Possession of this equipment in a boat after dark is a violation of fishing regulations.

All tributaries to these lakes are closed for gigging, speargun and bow and arrow fishing.

No special permit is needed to fish either lake by these methods. Only a valid hunting and fishing license is required.

Retail Sales Gain Reflects Rising Prices

Slowly rising prices were reflected in Tennessee's near record retail sales toward the end of 1956.

The University of Tennessee's Bureau of Business Research, which waits until complete statistics are available before releasing its monthly reports, noted that retail sales for November were over five per cent higher than in the same month in 1955.

But the Bureau attributed only part of this gain to rising prices over the 12-month period, reporting that at least half of the increase represented higher volume.

A gradual decline in nonagricultural employment in recent months continued through November, and for the first time in 1956 was lower than the same month of the previous year. A drop in manufacturing employment has been responsible for this downward trend, according to the U-T Bureau.

Large demands from TVA and other industries enabled soft coal miners in Tennessee to continue to set new mining records.

Farm income through November was above the level of 1955. Construction activity in November showed a greater than normal seasonal decline as Tennessee fell further behind the nation's high construction rate for the year.

ECHO FORUM

On Better Preparation?

I would like to reply to an editorial entitled "On Better Preparation," which appeared in the last issue of the Echo.

I agree with L. T. that the preparation of Maryville College students is not complete as it now stands. Much is lacking on this campus, and the college definitely needs a re-evaluation of its social program. However it does not need the sophistication or pseudo-genuisses acquired by so called formal occasions for the express purpose of making cultured aristocrats out of crude barbarians. In my opinion, a formal social event is simply an aggregation of machines whose actions can be predicted by a little rule book.

Exactly what does L. T. consider an adult social world to be? It couldn't consist mainly of weddings, and formal parties, and formal business situations. Think twice! How many such occurrences will make their demands upon us?

Yes, college graduates are called upon to be leaders. Are leaders in college formed from big dances, receptions and the like? No! They are developed in the many small organizations such as YM and YW, Vols, various music, language, and business clubs, playhouse, the athletic program and the like. Cannot these be considered healthy activities, not to mention sundry "social" events?

Poise and sincerity are acquired in associating with people as they really are, not as they appear to be when seen in stiff collars. Informal activities provide opportunities for individuals to become persons in association with fellow human beings.

In concluding I would like to say that I believe the emphasis on improvement should be directed toward the healthy modernization of the unrealistic aspects of the informal life on this campus.

Bill Wilkie

The Ruined At The Ruins

Especially on this campus where there is a rule against smoking, except in the designated location known as "the ruins," there is a tendency for many to look down on those who smoke—to condemn them—to feel yourself better than they. Some have the attitude that those at the ruins are going to hell; they need to be "saved" and "prayed for." Along this line I would like to say that we have to remember that Jesus never condemned the sinner — only the sin. If we feel that smoking is a sin, then that is our business, and we should maintain our belief, but at the same time, we are an even, bigger sinner if we judge and damn the person who does smoke.

When we go home, or "out in the world", we will certainly not get very far as a Christian if we condemn all who smoke. Why is it when we go home and are in a group of old friends, there is smoking and yet, we do not think a thing of it. Still here, on campus, one might as well shout, "unclean, unclean," as they pass the ruins. This is not what Christ would have us do. If there must be a division, between smokers, and non-smokers (and I don't think there must) then remember that their souls are just as much worth to God, or more, than our very own, which we so self-righteously class as "better."

But there is another side too. Those of us at the ruins need not to be so "clickish." We do not have to feel persecuted or that we have guilt complexes. It is not just a one way affair of someone out to treat us nice. We need to re-evaluate ourselves and our smoking, discover the reason why we smoke (it may be for pure enjoyment). And then we have to be broadminded (but not flat-headed) enough to see why others do not like smoking and what their reasons, Christian or otherwise, are against it. We shouldn't be so dog-set certain that it's good.

Both sides need to have more discussion and understanding between one another and to realize that "all are equal in the sight of God." We are all His children. February meetings has helped each of us to become aware of our selfishness and unworthiness. They have made each of us think and discuss, but now what we need is some actual application of the principles involved and here is as good a place as any to start. Some people call it tolerance, but I think Christian love involves even more — something higher and something deeper!

Fashions

by Bobbye Carson
Anti-Elvis League

The keynote of men's fashions for '57 is the look of elegance. The sloppy look that was mostly supported by the high school clan is on the way out. This perhaps is brought about by the anti-Elvis Presley individuals. The trend toward elegance is to be found in sport wear as well as dress wear.

A new style lending its amount of that elegance is that of the newly introduced pleated and lace-trimmed shirts. Fellows have accused women of adopting their tailored look in shirts, but now it seems to be that the males have borrowed from the new sissy shirts for girls.

Van Heusen has several styles of these now on the market. Some are solid white with the tiny pleated fronts; while others are white with the pleats stitched in blue and have matching blue collars and cuffs.

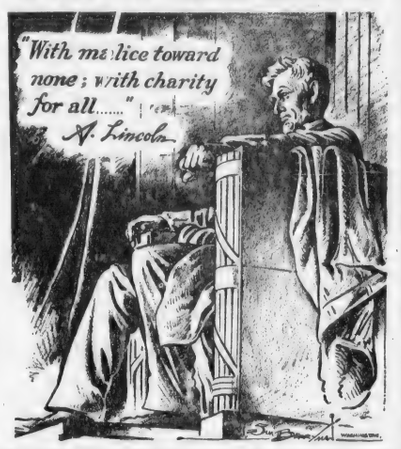
Arrow is featuring pleats and lace both. The more dressy ones of lace fronts are available only in white, while the pleated fronted ones come in blue, grey, or white.

These fancy shirts should be worn with plain, preferably solid colored suits and plain and simple ties. Hand painted and wild stripes are off the list!

Sweaters Too

Not only fancy shirts, but fancy sweaters are on the style wagon for the waning winter months and early spring. The coat sweater of which has always been deemed as belonging to grandpa and his rocking chair has been brightened up a bit and is now being sold in many stores and men's shops. Both the pullover and coat sweater are gaining their new airs from the bright and colorful patterns of which they are made. I am sure you can think of numerous examples seen daily on this campus of these sweaters.

The key word describing sports wear for the approaching spring is "co-ordinates". Everything matches! Swimming trunks, sport shirts, bermudas, and jackets can all be had in combinations to suit your taste. The patterns and colors are not as gaudy as in the past, but are still very elegant and colorful.



So, fellows, get in the swing of elegance and be Mr. Fashion of 1957.

Special Studies In Other Schools

Dr. Irl Brown Krause, who last year conducted a survey of the independent study programs for superior students in a hundred and eighty southern colleges and universities, has reported on his findings in recent letter addressed to Dr. Edwin Hunter. Since Maryville was one of the institutions asked to participate in this study, Dr. Hunter has asked the Echo to publish some of Dr. Brown's findings for the information and interest of the students and faculty.

From the hundred and eighty schools, one hundred and twenty-six reported that they had no formal program for their superior students. From the remaining schools, two allowed superior students to carry a heavier course load; two grouped its students by ability; and two permitted basic courses to be by-passed in favor of advanced courses, provided students could pass a proficiency examination.

Twenty-three schools provded a tutorial or honors program for their superior students; nineteen made these programs college wide; thirty-one used it only in certain departments; and thirteen provided for seminars or independent study plans for superior students.

The department which most frequently provided special study programs was English.

Dr. Hunter commented that Maryville was to be counted in the nineteen whose program extended to the whole student body.

The majority of the schools using a special program began it in the senior year, although many began — as Maryville does — in the junior year.

It was found that in twenty-four schools the program was placed in the hands of the dean of the college; in twelve it was placed in the hands of the chairmen of the academic committee for the college; in twelve the head of the department in which the student was majoring was in charge; and in two the president of the college personally supervised the program.

Love A Stranger As Thy Brother

by Ulyses W. Boykin Public Relations Counselor,
Detroit, Michigan

One summer evening as I ambled the two blocks between the bus stop and my home, I chanced upon four cowboys, all escapees from the surrounding ashcan prairie, hey ranged in age from eigh to twelve years. One of the older fellows, amply loaded with Hopalong Cassidy guns and holsters, was busy parting two of the younger hombres who had apparently been scrapping.

"Don't you hit my brother," he commanded.

"Well, you hit 'em, don't you?" retorted the other.

torted

"Yeah, but he's my brother," defended the older boy.

I walked on. I could remember very vividly the days of my youth when just such arguments arose. We kids could always iron them out without hard feelings.

But I thought of the many arguments older people encounter daily and cannot dispose of them as easily as the youngsters. Many of the disagreements are just as baseless in fact as that of the young cowboys. Oldsters cling to the idea of: I can say anything about my race, religion or what not, but you, as a stranger, had better not say the same things.

This same generation will laugh at the divergencies of children but fail to realize when they crack derogatory jokes about brother or stranger they are perpetuating the popularity of such embarrassing remarks.

I believe if everyone honestly tried to forget the many senseless remarks they make about themselves and refrained from making the same remarks about others we would have harmony among the different religious and ethnic groups in America.

This is not to say I would abolish the humor for which Americans are famous. But I would curb the practice of self damnation. If you don't respect yourself or others, then who should give a hoot about respecting you? Eliminating some of the bad jokes would certainly destroy some of the myths which affect all minority groups in this country.

Perhaps that attitude of never let a stranger tread on our sacred ground can be wiped out and we can invite healthy criticisms from anyone.

If we practice thinking before we crack jokes among orselves about others, I a msure we would eventually find ourselves accept ing strangers as "our brothers too." But the most important thing is to follow this philosophy every hour of every day of the year for the rest of our lives.

This is published in the interest of Brotherhood Week, February 17-24, sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Also returning to our campus for another visit were Lee Fowler, Eddie Grisby, and Bill Van-Zant.

What Is A Coed? Here's The Answer

"Between the innocence of bobby sox and the sophistication of mink there lies a curious, carefree creature called a coed.

Coeds come equipped with assorted pedal pushers and hairdos, but they all uphold the same creed: to enjoy every minute of every hour of every college day.

Teachers fluster them, mothers protect them, little sisters idolize them, and boys worship them.

They can be found in all places; lounging on, draping around, leaning against, busting to, and traipsing from. She is pride with a ponytail, nonchalance with a notebook, optimism with an overcoat, and the prettiest of woman hood in wool.

A coed is a curious mixture. She has the eating habits of a canary and displays the energy of a mountain trout. To her admirers she has the mind of Einstein, and looks of Kim, the personality of Grace, and the figure of Marilyn. To the other coeds, she has the form of a beer bottle, the personality of a wet mackeral, and the mind of a beetle.

She leads a martyr's life. No one else could stand time limits on telephone calls, the frustration of stolen bobbypins, and the pain of waiting for a date.

The coed loves weekends, formal dances, cashmere sweaters, red convertibles and men.

She doesn't like 8 AM classes Monday mornings and deadlines on English themes. No one else derives so much sheer pleasure from an extra hour of sleep on a misty morning or from a new record.

No one else can pack into 24 hours five classes, two hours study, three coffee breaks, a full length movie, and eight hours sleep.

The coed is here to stay with all of her curiosities. She may remain a bobbysoxer or attain the dignity of mink, but in between she is still that curious phenomenon . . . a coed."

2 Student Forums On S.C. Agenda

An amendment to the Student Council Constitution, which appears in this issue of the paper, has been passed by the Faculty Executive Committee and will be put up before the student body for ratification.

On February 14, Dr. Barraclough, affectionately known as Barry, was given an honorary Doctor's Degree for February meetings in the form of an orange and garnet hood made by Shirley McNeil and Barbara Wilkie.

Ted Frauman read a reply that he had received from Representative Howard Baker, our district's representative in the House in Washington, concerning the segregation problem in South Africa. Rep. Baker will comply with Ted's wishes in sending a letter to the South Africans.

The chapel service on February 16 is Maryville's time for commemorating "Brotherhood Week". Student prayers will be offered by Ann Murray, representing the YWCA; Jerry Platz, representing the YM; Betty Knott from Student Vols; and Dan Ellis from the Student Council.

On May 3, Student Council members will show visiting high school students from all over Blount County around the Maryville campus.

The SC Executive Council party is to be held soon. The party chairman is Gray Clarke and the committee members are Mary Murphy and Don Hill. Dick Henderson has suggested that problems of campus life be discussed during part of this time with the council's faculty members.

Student Forums

There are two Student Forums scheduled for the near future one on February 27 and one on March 19. Ted McDaniels asked the council members to think of good, pertinent topics for the forum discussions and also to keep in mind good forum leaders.

Our Student Council has received a letter from the SC of Arkansas College asking for information about our chapel and assembly periods, as they are making a study of it. At present they have compulsory chapel with twelve cuts per semester, but they are not entirely happy with their system and are contemplating a change.

Baldwin's milk machine has arrived and is in good working order. Memorial is next on the slate for machines, but it has been figured out that each girl in Memorial would have to drink a pint a day in order to make any profit.

The SC committee set up to look into possible changes in the dating system is meeting, but has come to no definite decisions as of now.

An evaluation of February meetings has been suggested. Dave Kotchko wondered how a true evaluation could be made, since neither printed forms nor opinions of select groups of people are very accurate ways to judge the meetings' true value. Dick Henderson suggested that the subject be brought up in the Student-Faculty Senate meeting.

Debate Tournament Being Held Here

Deerfield To Star In MC Production Of "Beggar On Horesback"

The Maryville College Play house has announced the full cast for the Spring production, "Beg ger on Horseback," written by George Kaufman and Marc Connelly, to be presented March 15th and 16th.

William Deerfield, senior English major, and veteran playhouse performer, will play the part of Neil McRae, a young composer. Mr. Deerfield has been seen in such productions as "The Importance of Being Earnest" and "Street Scene." Playing the part of Cynthia Mason, a friend of McRae's, will be Sylvia Smith, sophomore drama major, who is already well known for her performances in "Beyond the Horizon" and experimentals. Herchal Netherton will portray the part of Albert Rice, also a friend of McRae. Mr. Netherton is a senior Drama major, who has contributed toward many plays presented by the Maryville Playhouse, and also was on the staff of a summer stock theatre at Gatlinburg last summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Cady will be played by Curtis Burger and Ann Stuart Fulton, while Gladys and Homer Cady will be portrayed by Helen McDonald, of the cast of "The Importance of Being Earnest", and Tony Clark, senior Drama major and veteran of many major performances at Maryville. Jerry will be played by Howard Meyer and the train boy by Fred die McArthur.

Double Parts

Miss Hey and Miss You will be played by Gail Cholminsky and Carole Schade. Many people will double in parts, as the play consists of the reappearance of many people in different situations. These double parts will be played by Mae Collier, Judy Perov, Sue Short, Reda Kay, Carole Schade, Gail Cholminsky, Ronald Randon, James Marsh, Walt Thompson, Don Kidd, Wade Hampton, Howard McCuen, Bob Bowman, Newton Pike, Ronald Morley, Tom Eberhard, and Randy Rosensteel.

This play, first performed in 1924 in New York, will be recreated in costumes of that period. It is generally considered to be the best example of expressionistic play writing ever presented.

The first part of the first act is quite natural and realistic, but as Neil McRae drifts off to sleep his dreams appear on the stage, making fantastic situations, to be portrayed with projected scenery.

The Maryville Playhouse will present this as its participation in International Theatre Month, sponsored by The United Nations the theme of which is "The Theatre Promotes International Understanding." A letter has been received by the director, Miss Kathleen Craven, from the editor of "Theatre Arts Magazine" requesting post-performance information on the staging of it, to be published in that magazine this summer.

Commencement, 1928

It is interesting to note that this same play was presented as the Commencement production in 1928, under the direction of Mrs. West, then the head of the drama department. Mrs. West, who still lives in Maryville, will be present for this production.

Tickets for this production will go on sale March 8th, in the lobby of the theatre, every afternoon. The price will be $.75 for students and $1.00 for others.

The Constitution Revision Approved

On the 2 th of February, a revision to the Constitution of the Student Body of Maryville College will be presented to the Student Body for a vote.

The Executive Council of the Faculty and the Student Council have approved this revision.

The revision, if ratified by two-thirds of the votes cast, shall become effective thereafter.

The revision is made in Article VII — Student Council, Section 2 as found in the M Book, and reads as follows:

Sec. 2. The Student Council shall be organized as follows:

a. The membership shall consist of the following students:

(1) The Student Body President and Vice President.

(2) The Women's Student Government Association President and the Men's Student Cooperative Chairman.

(3) The four class Presidents.

(4) The following class representatives:

(a) Four Freshmen.
(b) Four Sophomores.
(c) Five Juniors.
(d) Five Seniors.

Science Students Enrolled For Graduate Work

Several Maryville College science students now enrolled in various preparatory and pre-professional courses have won definite positions for graduate or professional work in several Eastern universities. Others have applied to other schools and their applications are now pending final action.

Bainonian Discussed The Ideal MC Girl

"What kind of girl does the Maryville boy want to date?"

This question was solved in a skit at Bainonian February 16. Participating in the skit were Barbara Davis, Linda Hayes, Gretchen Hill, Helen MacDonald, Jan Peterson, and Carol Lee Williams.

Mrs. Lois Wilson of Charles of the Ritz could not speak that night because of illness.

Bainonian will meet tonight at 6:15.

A Letter From Barrie

To The Sudent Council and The Student Body
Maryville College, Maryville
Dear Younger Friends:

To say that Mrs. Baraclough and I enjoyed our stay in your midst is the understatement of the year. And you made it all the more enjoyable this year by the conferring on me of such a new and unique degree, that 1957 February Meetings will always be remembered with added pleasure.

Your gift of a sweet-smelling travel case will come in very usefully on many occasions.

Actually, I think this series was the best of the six at which I have been present. Not only were the sermons of Dr. Brubaker most outstanding, but your response to Dr. Magill's leading was an inspiration to me.

To the seniors, we hope you all graduate cum laude; and to the other classes, we hope to see you all next February.

Very cordially,
Barrie

Council Handles 7 Offenders

Seven town night offenders — three seniors, two juniors, and two sophomores — were brought up and discussed. One sophomore, one junior, and one senior forgot to sign in and were penalized one week. Two seniors and one junior were one minute late and were penalized two weeks. On sophomore, through a misunderstanding, took two town nights and due to extenuating circumstances had two weeks of town night privileges taken away from her.

The council received a letter from Barry thanking the student body for the gift given him and for the honorary degree bestowed upon him.

The amendment to the Student Council constitution has been passed by the executive committee and a student body meeting will be held to vote on it within the next two weeks.

The next Student Forum will be held on February 27. The topics for discussion will be "The Social Program" with Gray Clarke, Bob Goodlin, and Ann Newcomer as panelists; and "The Athletic Program" with Chuck Frissel, Shirley McNeill, and Dan Wiley speaking.

Dating Problems

The Dating Problem Committee has met two times, and Bill Lynch made a report on their progress. They have come up with several long-range suggestions: 1) having the gym, pool, student center, etc. open all at the same time one night a week; and 2) building a new student center for better dancing, society, banquet, and parlor facilities. The committee is also working on solutions for the present dating problems. These sugestions were all discussed during the meeting, and will be brought up again in about two weeks.

Campus Beautiful

Bob Goodlin, reporting for the Campus Beautiful Committee, proposed several ideas: 1) that a Campus Beautiful Week-End be held from March 18-23; 2) that classes purchase trees as class gifts, and that lists of types of

Bach-Bartok Festival To Be Presented

The Faculty of the Music Department will be presented in the Bach-Bartok Festival which is to consist of two programs on consecutive evenings of March 1 and 2, at 8:00 p.m., in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall.

The program will feature music of Bach, Brahms, Beethoven, and Bartok.

Special attempts have been made to select works which are both representative and entertaining. Though it is regrettable that one can not do justice to all four composers in two evenings of music.

In the light of the above statement, if you wish to hear Bartok, come on Friday night, but every one is cordially invited to attend both performances.

Sigs To Present Their Sweetheart Tonight At Seven

Tonight, February 23, is Alpha Sigma time at the annual Sweetheart Show. The evening's activities will start at 7 and the program will be held in the Intermural gym.

Each year Alpha Sigma nominates eight girls, selected from the members of Theta Epsilon, to be Sweetheart candidates. Three of the girls are eventually eliminated and of the remaining, the girl with the highest number of votes is elected the Sweetheart of Alpha Sigma. The other four winners are given the title of Alpha Sigma Cupids.

The Sweetheart, besides having the honor that goes along with her selection, wears an Alpha Sigma pin with an M guard for the next year. The only provision for becoming Sweetheart is that the winner must be planning to attend Maryville the year after her selection, as she is then "pinned" to Alpha Sigma.

The Sweetheart Show is the actual presentation of the winners along with a show that is incorporated into the program. The theme of the show is kept a secret until the big night, as are the names of the winning candidates.

The winners are escorted by Alpha Sigma officers the night of the show.

Summer Service Work

The program on Sunday, February 24, will be at 1:30 in the Y.A.C. The YWCA, YMCA and Vols will meet together.

It is to give information concerning summer service work and to provide opportunity for discussion of the various fields of work in small groups. These groups will be led by students who have had actual experience with the Migrant Ministry, recreation ren's hospitals, etc.), industrial service (mental hospitals, children's hospitals, etc.), industriadl Seminars, individual service (D. C. E.'s, Bible School leaders, etc.).

The purpose is to encourage planning now for the summer. Application blanks for some of the fields of work will be available.

At the area YWCA conference, Bennett College, Greensboro, North Carolina, March 1-3, Maryville will be represented by Anita Cole, Ann Wiley, Ann Murray, Janie Wall, Julie Sanderson and Mrs. Cummings.

The keynote speaker is Miss Frances Willlams of Washington, D. C., who will be discussing topics along the lines of one struggle for human dignity in relation to the world; struggle and our responsibility in the world revolution.

Workshops on Worship, Membership, Program Planning, and effective Citizenship are included in the schedule.

Students and advisers from North Carolina and East Tennessee Universities and Colleges will be present.

Film Series Present Two Russian Films

The fourth in the Maryville College Playhouse Film Series will be presented tonight in the theatre. At 7:00 P.M. a film, "Unconditional Surrender", will be shown, through the request and cooperation of the Physical Education Club. This film is the story of the Salk Vaccine, and will be free to all students. It will be repeated at 8:00 as part of the Maryville Playhouse series, and will be followed by two Chekov satires.

The two satires, "Jubilee" and "Marriage," will be in Russian with English subtitles, being presented by players from the Moscow Art Theatre, which, until Russia became dominated by Communists, was probably the best acting theatre in the world.

Janie Wall Attends Chicago Y Meeting

Janie Wall, junior sociology major from Burlington, North Carolina, represented the national YWCA at a committee meeting in Chicago February 16-17. She was co-chairman of a national committee to study YM and YW membership.

Included on the committee were students each from the YM and YW, and six from national and local staffs. Plans were made for further study of membership by NSCY (National Student Council of YM and YWCA), by regional conferences, and local associations.

Basic to the study were questions such as

What does the student Y seek to be?

What is its mission?

What does membership in such an association involve?

What makes the Christian association Christian?

The committee discussed whether all persons interested should be entitled to full membership in the Y. They were concerned that all interested people be admitted into full membership with the student Y but also that the Y be Christian in its motivation and outreach.

Whether personal or group committment should be the basis of membership was a question. Another matter was the question of changing the name National Student YM and YWCA to the College and University Movement of the YM and YWCA. They attempted to formulate a common statement of purpose for the YM and YW.

The meeting continued all day Saturday and until 11:30 A.M. Sunday at the Community Center Foundation at Palos Park, a suburb of Chicago.

Mrs. Russell Finds Herself Very Busy

by Joanne Causey

Left stage — a phone ringing insistently somewhere beneath a flurry of papers on a large desk, center and foreground — boxes of varying shapes and sizes; right — another desk in meticulous order. Enter from right in a half-trot a tall slender lady of distinguished appearance. After some moments of anxious searching among the mountains of papers on the desk, she succeeds in locating the telephone and deals quietly and efficiently with one of the small crises that are constantly developing in her work. This conversation concluded, she brushes a limp silver curl back from her forehead and asks the next person waiting to please come in with the inevitable, "And what can I do for you?".

"They call me the Housekeeper," Mrs. Russell told me, (by now you have probably guessed her identity) "but I really do a little of everything. Every day a new duty is assigned to me. At present, I'm in charge of the student cleaners and the janitors which means I'm in Anderson by 7:30 in order to check all the classrooms. I schedule their work and try to keep them busy. Oh and I'm also part-time office girl."

At this point Brownie put in his word. "Yup, she keeps this office running. Why, she can fill a waste basket faster 'n anybody I know. (She eyed the cluttered desk on the other side of the room.) Just hope she holds up — you know the last lady we had in this job ended up with only one leg. Been ten years since then 'til we could get another person to take the job."

I was wondering at this point just how Mrs. Russell did happen to take the job. She explained: "Five years ago I completed the course in institutional housekeeping at the Hannah Harrison School in Washington, D. C. For a time I was at Sweetbriar College in Lynchburg, Virginia — all girls but they made as much noise as all the girls and boys together here at Maryville. Later, I served as Building and Residence Director of the YWCA in Baltimore, Maryland. Last fall I came down to Knoxville to visit my son and his family and liking this part of the country so well and wanting to be near my grandchildren, I decided to try to locate a position in this area. So here I am."

Mrs. Russell's son is with the Institute of Nuclear Studies at Oak Ridge. Her other son is a Methodist minister in Pavillon, Wyoming.

Impressions of Maryville? "Everyone is very cooperative and nice to work with." The weather? "I think it's the wettest place I've ever seen" (Perhaps the shock is even greater because she comes from Kansas and Oklahoma.) On living in Pearsons: "It's just a

MSC Council Ready To Assume Dorm Control

The members of the Men's Student Cooperative Council met last week at the home of Dean McClelland. The Council discussed with the Dean and Mr. E. E. McCurry the problems involved in setting up suitable operating schemes so that the men of Carnegie and Bartlett may assume the responsibilities of governing their dormitories.

Among the tems discussed were study hours, use of income from the coke and milk machines and the companion problem of coke bottle economy, and plans for the coming open house. Plans were also discussed for greeting Freshmen next fall, obtaining washing machines and a phone for Bartlett, and a more effective scheme of room distribution. Mr. McCurry assured the Council that the men could take over control of the machines on March 1st.

Topic Is Foreign Economic Aid

The Smoky Mt. Forensic Tournament is being held at Maryville this Friday and Saturday. The nine schools represented are: Lenoir Rhyne, Mars Hill Junior College, Appalachian State Teacher's College, Carson Newman, East Tennessee State, the University of Tennessee, Vanderbilt University, Tennessee Tech, and Maryville.

There are 36 teams debating both sides of the national debate topic — Resolved: That the United States should discontinue direct economic aid to foreign countries. Each team will participate in four regular rounds of debate to determine which teams will be eligible to enter the semi-finals and finals.

Individual events the contestants may enter include Oratory, Extemporaneous Speaking, Oral Interpretations, and After Dinner Speaking. Each of the events — including Debate — is divided into separate divisions for men and women.

Last evening, a banquet was held at the College Grill for all contestants. Entertainment was provided by the contestants entered in after dinner speaking.

The tournament will close this afternoon with the presentation of awards.

Debates and speeches are open to the public and may be attended at the Chapel and Fine Arts Center.

Participants in the Oratory division have prepared speeches of ten minuate duration on an interesting and pertinent subject.

Each contestant in Extemporaneous speaking draws a subject. Then, he is given one hour to prepare a six minute speech.

In oral interpretation, the reader presents a poem with the interpretation necessary to permit the listener to understand the author's meaning.

For after dinner speaking the contestants are to prepare an interesting, but informative, speech appropriate to the occasion when given. These speeches are to last from 4-6 minutes.

Saturday Schedule

8:00 Finals in Oral Interpretation
9:00 Semi-finals in Debate
10:15 Finals in Extemp.
11:00 Finals in Debate

Maryville College Students— Broad or Narrow?

In 1945 an event occurred which has changed forever many of the currents of human thought in science, sociology, political philosophy, and religion. The explosions of the first nuclear weapons ushered in the cult of the tiny neutron, the power of the sun was in the hands of men, and in that year the new age of Science had begun. It is not the purpose of this writer to put forth any opinions as to where our bright new age is going to take us, but rather to present his personal views on the connection which now exists between students on this campus (and to some extent, small campuses across the nation) and the Age of Science.

The question of the breadth or narrowness of this campus has long been a subject for dormitory bull-sessions. During the recent religious emephasis week, however, the question has gained a greater significance. What we should remember in considering the question is that we, the students, ARE Maryville College; and it is not the narrowness of an abstract concept, but our own real personalities that we discuss when this question is raised.

The truth of our situation is that students in any college are likely to become very narrow. Current public opinion seems to be that this danger is gerally lessened in liberal arts colleges, and this is potentially true. In spite of this, however, many students feel that we are not really living up to our possibility as a great, liberal school. Could it be that, in some sort of reaction, we are falling behind the Age of Science and gradually decaying into a mere preparatory school for ministers?

Is it really fair in a liberal school for one group to force indirectly its creed on another in exchange for academic privileges—to say to a student who earnestly wants to think out his own beliefs, "Thou shalt attend a church or Sunday School teaching our (Orthodox Christian) faith or else lose your earned academic credit!" Is it really fair to enforce attendance at a series of strictly religious meetings one hour every day at the expense of everything else? One chapel monitor went one step further and passed around a note saying that anyone seen studying at the meeting would be reported absent. This occurred in spite of the fact that the audience was, in any man's language, a forced audience—its members had to be there and listen to gain the privilege of studying here. Now is this being broad-minded, or is it an example of retreating within one line of thinking while the developing new age moves on "outside."

Is it being broad-minded to include 10 hours of Bible study under the guise of liberal arts? The reader may answer that these are all administrative rulings beyond student control; but because we are here, such rulings reflect at least a majority of student assent, and the narrowness of ourselves is again painfully evident. No major in a difficult technical field is happy with the Bible requirement, yet the majority of students who assent to this requirement are indirectly implying their thinking along the line of only one life philosophy. This is narrowness, a narrowness more fatal to creative thought than any specialized training could ever be.

The specific examples of narrowness are only the biggest ones. Others, more subtle, exist in the words and actions of certain students to other students. Such a situation exists on many campuses, but the nature of our school automatically seems to put one group in a position where they feel they have the truth, and all dissenters are either narrow or lost fools. This atitude (in direct contradiction to a letter appearing in the Echo Forum this week) is one to be actively resisted, or else all that is fine at Maryville is in danger of being lost.

The great principles of liberal arts schools must be put into active practice if they are to remain liberal arts colleges. The part of these colleges in training leaders for all phases of our new Era must not be neglected. Forced thinking, prejudical attitudes, and smug prayer for the fellow who doesn't see things our way is worthless in useful living. The world in which we live will not tolerate these things, and those of us who fit under the preceeding examples of narrowness should correct such atitudes or else find ourselves pitifully lost reactionaries in a time which could well be mankind's most magnificent age.

—J. McN.

"Why Worry?"

To worry is one of the commonest of traits found in present day man. Whether it be about money, health, the future, or may be about the opinions that other people have of us. Whatever the subject is, we've all done it at one time or another.

The word "worry" literally means "to strangle." Funny isn't it—but that is the exact feeling it has on some of us.

This is a serious thing—to worry that is. It does an awful lot of bad to man today. There are many living examples of this in our mental institutions today.

It is high time we stopped saying "I know I worry a lot, but I just can't help it." That's an easy way to excuse ourselves but not a true way is it?

There's a big difference between worrying yourself sick and being concerned about something.

Remember what Jesus said, "which of you can add one cubit to his stature by being anxious." You can't change a thing by worrying about it.

Suppose problems do arise, worrying about them only takes that much more from our resources that we have stored to fight off such times with.

We'd cure a lot of needless torture if we'd stop puting off things we don't like to do.

If you've got things to do—do them. If you've had a fight with your roommate talk and pray it over with him or her. Don't be silent and worry about it.

The best cure for this problem is faith. Your faith in order for it to be really functioning must have the power to push you through rough times.

Prayer is another good cure. "O what needless pain we bear all because we don't carry everything to God in prayer."

Why haven't we learned to pray or to trust in God? Maybe we haven't practiced enough. You're not a good runner without practicing every day. The same applies to prayer.

There is little worry in the lives of those who have daily practiced trust in God.

"Tango Terrain No More"

This is the time of year that the frost is on the jonquil and we're in a state of shock (to paraphrase a well-known author.) A month of school has elapsed; February Meetings and the rains have come and gone; it's freezing cold out; and now the work piles on thick and fast.

Which reminds me of the tale ofwoe I read this week in "The Crimson and White" (U. of Ala.):

EXAM STORY

He read the textbook,
He studied the notes,
He outlined both,
Then he summarized his outline.
Then outlined his summary on 3x5 cards.
Then reduced the card outline to one single card.
Boiled the card down to one sentence,
Boiled the sentence down to a phrase,
Boiled the phrase down to a word.
Entered the exam.
Analyzed the question.
And then,
Forgot
The Word.

Ivy-leagueness

I have often wondered why Maryville can't be an Ivy-league school. It seems to me it has all the attributes of one. (Goodness knows we don't lack the ivy.) We have car coats (but no sports cars, unfortunately), bermudas (despite M-Book), gothic architecture (Chopel), and most of all, many inspiring and spirited fraternity (excuse the expression) songs. However, it is in this last category, namely songs, I feel we fail to come up to par.

(North America's only known diamond mine is located in Arkansas.)

Therefore, I have attemped to rewrite these songs to make them more suitable for the Ivy-league spirit prvading our campus. Perhaps someday Harvard and Yale will be proud to look up to us as the queen (not of the Highlands) but of the Ivy League. However, as a songwriter, I will not take as my example the illustrious ex-Harvard math professor, whose "Weiner Schnitzel Waltz" I am sure you are all familiar with. Also "The Boy Scout Marching Song," etc.) Instead, I have taken as my model a favorite school song of mine (although it comes from an even more un-Ivy-league institution than ours) called "George Attack":

"Armor rambling rack from George Attack,
And an eliphant engineer."

Why couldn't "Onward, onward, Alpha Sigma" be "Ornery, ornery, I've a sick Mut"? Or Bainonian's noble song could be "Armstrong bands all nervy broken," to the tune, of course, of "Far Up Offkey Hugo's Waters:"

Armstrong bands all nervy broken,
Singer preys ishah.*
Farce her passes well then spoken
Seal pie French hips tie.
Chorus:
Pine onion, Pine onion,
Deep gravy pony chart;
Wheel remaining wavery, true,
'Til we from colic psort.

Perhaps Theta will want to adopt this version of their song:
Hearse to Thaddeus salon;
Hearse four collar strew, etc. (You supply the rest!)
And I cannot resist this challenging rendition of Fight Song ("On Highlanders")
Oleanders dandruff eel,
Rolling opera ice gore————

This concludes (and none to soon) my suggestions for improving Ivy-league spirit on Maryville campus. But see if you can recognize this one (not an original):

"Worn shoe common to my parlor?"
Settle spotter tudor fly;
"Esther purchase litle parlor
That ever yodel spy."
O.K., O.K., then guess the rest.

Alpha Sig Enjoys Its New T.V. Set

Alpha Sigma Society has recently purchased an Emerson 17 inch television set with one VHF adapter channel. This acquisition was made possible through voluntary contributions of members and the interest and aid of Dr. Paul Cooper.

Many have enjoyed the set already and it is hoped that an outside antenna will soon be installed to bring even better reception.

The society will not meet this evening but will present the annual Sweetheart Show instead.

As the fellow said, it's chile today and hot tamale.

Spanish Club Events Told

The Spanish Club was brought to order for the first time this year on Jan. 31, with a program given by Joanne Causey. Joanne, who had returned to Maryville this semester after a year in Europe, showed colored slides of her trips through Franch and Spain. The Spanish Club and the visiting French Club enjoyed the views of Marscilles in spring and the bullfights in summer.

The second meeting of the Club consisted of an evening of Spanish music heard in the Fine Arts Center Lounge.

The schedule for the coming Spanish Club meetings is:

March 7—Program of Spanish games
March 21—Travelogue movie
April 4—Guest speaker from a Spanish speaking country
April 18—Student speaker
May 2—Picnic

Sports Spotlights

College Basketball

Last week-end ran fairly well for most of the nation's top teams. However, West Virginia was upset by the sharp-shooting quintet from Penn State. The lions hit an amazing 63 percent of their shots to waltz off with an 86-65 win.

Kansas moved a step closer to the Big 7 Title with a lopsided victory over Missouri. Wilt Chamberlain playing about half the game scored 32 points in the 91-58 rout.

Across the country, Yale just about wrapped up the ivy league title by downing Corwell. However, Princeton and Columbia still have outside chances here.

Indiana held on to the top spot in Big 10 Conference by whipping Purdue 87-74.

S.M.U. has had smooth sailing in the Southwest and Kentucky has just about closed, the S.E.C. race.

North Carolina should take their conference but they've had many a shaky moment lately.

U.C.L.A. and West Virginia round out the most likely to succeed conference teams.

A few good independent teams to keep an eye on in tournaments next month are Louisville, Bradley, Lafayete, Temple, St. Joseph's, Dayton, Penn State, and Cincinnati U. who have accepted an N.I.T. bid.

Pro-Basketball

The Pro ranks show the same old picture. Boston is far in front in the East while Philadelphia, New York and Syracuse follow in order.

The Western division hasn't got a team playing better than .500 ball. Ft. Wayne is on top here.

Sports in General

Spider Webb scored an exciting win the other night over Neal Rivers which highlighted the Boxing picture of late. However Boxing enthusiasts have a title bout coming up this week. Carmen Basilio defends his welter title against Ex-champ Johnny Saxton on Friday.

Ron Delaney defeated Fred Dwyer in the featured mile event at a New York Track Meet last week. He was timed at 4:06.5.

Hockey

The Detroit Red Wings have taken over the top spot in the N. H.L. race with Montreal and Boston following in close order. Toronto, New York and Chicago follow in the second division.

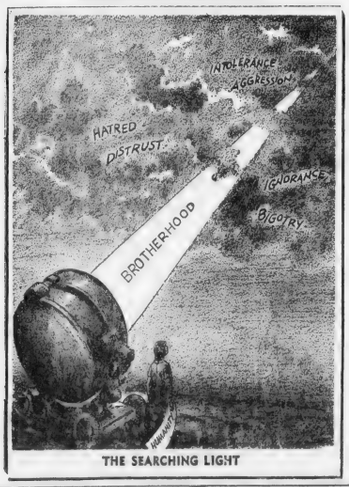
The individual scoring race in college Basketball hit a dramatic climax last week. The race is a four player scramble with Grady Wallace of South Carolina seting the pace. Forte of Columbia holds down the number two spot and Gene Bradley of Seattle recently moved into the third slot. Pace setter for many weeks, Wilt Chamberlain fell to fourth as a result of a very bad night against Oklahoma on Monday. The Soph sensation got only 11 points in his team's 76-56 conquest of Oklahoma. Wallace lengthened his lead with 27 points on Tuesday against Furman.

Maryville

The Maryville College Basketball Team will take on Chattanooga in their last game of the season here on Tuesday.

The Scots have given us all something to yell about this year. We've had some pretty exciting moments this season and while we haven't got the best record ever, still all in all we've had good year.

Let's all go out and give them support in the season's finale in appreciation for the fine season they've given us.



Let's go get 'em Scots! Beat 'Nooga!

The Grapplers of Maryville are at the present time competing in the S.E.C. Tournament held this week-end at Auburn.

The locals have a few good chances to bring home some trophies in the persons of Jerry Waters, defending S.E.C. champ and John Hawkins in the Heavyweight division. Don Hill is also considered as a strong contender in his weight class.

The team has really improved as the season has progressed and Coach Davis and his boys should be congratulated on a fine mat season.

Good luck at Auburn!

Scots Drop Two 86-68 And 78-77

Against the visiting Emory and Henry Wasps Tom Morris' desperation goal from the half-line came a fraction of a second behind the game ending whistle as the Scotts lost to the visitors 78-77. Jim Gregory was the big man for Maryville with 25 points. Wallace and Morris added 19 apiece. The Wasps were led by their two stellar guards, Bennet and Raines, who tallied 23 and 24 respectively.

WAA Basketball Teams Announced

Basketball season has not forgotten Maryville's W.A.A. Since February 12, four teams have been playing basketball on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons at 3:30 and 4:30.

The four teams are: the Chillie Beans, whose captain is Sue Kindred, a freshman from Rockwood, Tennessee; the Chillie Peppers, claiming as their captain Wilia Duvall, a junior from Louisville, Kentucky; the Howie Hillbillies, headed by Jane Burn, a junior from Red Springs, North Carolina, and The Howie Ridge-Runners, captained by Helen Franklin, a junior from Dandridge, Tennessee.

Competition will continue until February 28, at which time the winning team will have the opportunity of playing a team from Maryville High. The victor of this game will receive a trophy, which at present is on display at the Inter-Mural Gym.

Intramurals....

by Joe Quinn

Both Intramural Basketball Leagues are still involved in their respective double elimination tournaments.

In the B League, the Hot Shots and the Warriors will go at it in the battle of the unbeatens. The Blue Barons will take on their brother Kappa Phi team, and the Y.M.C.A. B's face the Pre-Mins. The losers of these games will be eliminated from competition. The Alpha Sig Knights already are out.

A League

In the A League, the Y.M.C.A team has been ousted. The Sledge hammers face the Outcasts and the Kappa Phi Dukes tackle the Rooks.

The results of these games were as follows — the Kappa Phi team whipped the Rooks 40-31 and the Sledgehammers edged the Outcasts.

MC Wrestlers Now In Auburn

The Maryville College Wrestling Squad left Thursday for Auburn, Alabama, where they will participate in the Southeastern Conference wrestling tournament. The tournament began Friday and runs through today.

Maryville's brightest hopes for championship honors lie in Capt. Jerry Waters at 123 lbs. and Heavyweight John Hawkins. Don Mull at 167 and Max Williamson at 147 should be contenders all the way.

Those making the trip were: 123—Jerry Waters, 130—Ralph Ayers, 137—Gene Garren, 147—Max Williamson, 157—Don Hill, 167—Don Mull, 177—Jack Emery, 191—Bruce Bevins, Heavyweight—John Hawkins.

Although not as strong as some of the past Maryville wrestling teams, with a good draw or two, they could make a very respectable showing. The turnament results will be published in the next issue of the Highland Echo.

Voices, Masks, and Shadows

Ever need the urging effect of the medicine of a good raucous belly-laugh? The library is the place to find one, only run in and get the medicine and run outside . . . the library doesn't appreciate good raucous belly-laughs no matter how good and purging the effect! At any rate, the library is at fault for having such books in its collection. What books? These are but few but I don't think I could review anymore at present and keep my good standing with those who think I'm a nice, quiet girl. There are those who are sure I am not and I would prefer to keep them in the minority.

These first three are in the reading room fiction collection in about the 817 section. Mr. James Thurber is at it again. Old favorites by Thurber are Thurber Country and The Thurber Carnival, both accompanied by typical Thurber illustrations and including such enlightening article titles as "Here Lies Miss Groby," "The Rabbits Who Caused All the Trouble," "The Little Girl and the Wolf," "What's So Funny?" (read it and you'll never wonder again). "Do You Want to Make Something Out Of It?", and "The Girls in the Closet." Some of these have appeared in the New Yorker on in other collections by Thurber. These are old stuff to some of us yet never cease to be funnier than ever on second reading. Thurber doesn't stop, though, and in 1956 published a new collection, Further Fables for Our Time. Like his others, some of these have appeared in the New Yorker but ten are printed here for the first time. (All are a scream.) Thurber has discovered that the nice thing about fables is that they always have a moral. We have discovered that Thurber's morals (of the fables, that is) to be the nice thing about Thurber's fables. Fables with titles such as the following are included in this newest edition: "The Shore and the Sea," "The Sea and the Shore," "Tea for One," "The Peacelike Mongoose," "The Bat Who Got the Hell Out" and "The Wolf Who Went Places." A typical moral is this one from "The Wolf Who Went Places" . . . "Where most of us end up there is no knowing, but the hellbent get where they are going." So much for Thurber . . . look him up!

Another trio of laugh material can be found in the 779 section of the reading room collection. They are by Clare Barnes, Jr., and are actual animal photographs coupled with typical comments or satire on all the "types" you've ever known. Campus Zoo, White Collar Zoo and Home Sweet Zoo are just the diversions you need from term papers, special studies or just ye olde February Fag.

The pride of the English Department is American Literature in Parody by Robert P. Falk. It is a collection of parody, satire and literary burlesque of American writers, past and present. Close on its heels is From Beowulf to Virginia Woolf by Robert M. Myers, another take-off on what we once thought was serious literary history.

Hope no one minds that this wasn't particularly a "culture column," but maybe it will give you

ONLY HUMAN

by Sidney Fields
Courtesy New York
Daily Mirror

This is published in the interest of Brotherhood Week, February 17-24, sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

The cost of prejudice to American industry is $30,000.000,000 a year in wasted manpower, production, and morale. The figure cannot include the incalculable and far more terrible cost in human suffering and indignity.

"That means that $10 out of every $75 paycheck are wasted on the phony luxury of indulging our prejudices," says Dr. Everett R. Clinchy, who as head of the National Conference of Christians and Jews has been laboring for 28 years to convert hatred to understanding.

Discrimination in industry is most commonly based on color, religion, language and national origin, economic status, education and politics. (Try being a Republican in some areas of South Carolina or a Democrat in Vermont.) But prejudice at the hiring gate, or the dislike on the job of white for Negro, German, for Pole, Protestant for Catholic or Christians for Jew is only one part of the vast hate problem that infects our society and the world.

"If civilization is to survive we must learn as much about the human personality as we do about the atom," Dr. Clinchy says. "We have never developed the love, compassion, and understanding in human beings to anywhere near their capacity. Psychiatrists are probing for this now. And it's here that science converges with faith and reaches for the highest ideas in both."

Dr. Clinchy, tall, spare, white and 59, with three children and nine grandchildren, was born in Harlem when it was a suburb. His father was a carpet salesman. During four years at Wesleyan University, interrupted by service in World War I, Clinchy held a job as a student-minister in a little church in Fairmont, N. J.

"They took me because they couldn't get anyone else," he says.

He got a Bachelor's degree at Lafayette, went to Union Theological and Columbia where he got his Master's and was ordained a Presbyterian minister, and went on to Yale for his Ph.D., but had to quit for lack of money. He eventually got the Ph.D. at Drew, writing a history of hate in America, called "All in the Name of God," which was changed to "Growth of Good Will."

When he first came to Wesleyan in 1924 Clinchy tried to bring students of different faiths together. That same year the Federal Council of Protestant Churches met in Atlanta, Ga., the headquarters of the Ku Klux Klan and formed a "Committee of Good Will Between Christians and Jews" to study "How does a klansman get that way?"

Amid the terrible hate engendered during the Al Smith presidential campaign, five prominent men on the Committee — Charles Evans Hughes, Newton D. Baker, S. Parkes Cadman, Carlton J. H. Hayes, and Roger W. Straus, formed the National Conference of Christians and Jews and asked Clinchy to run it.

"Its purpose then was not only to dissolve the Klan's hate," he says, "but man's hate against man no matter where he found it. We held our first meeting at Columbia and I plastered the walls from floor to ceiling with all the hate posters against Smith, and people were shocked such venom existed in America."

His staff then was one stenographer and his office a tiny room on lower Fourth Avenue. Today the National Conference of Christians and Jews has 25,000 volunteers and contributors, and 250 employees in 64 offices in the U. S., serving 500 chapters.

"The Conference was the first systematic and persistent attempt to allay the hostility and prejudice which have discased social, political and business relations in America," says Dr. Clnchy.

He began with the children by alerting their educators to the disease of hate. And it's to their everlasting credit that every school is aware of it today, even if negatively aware of it, as in the South.

Then he turned to the adults reaching into every community organization from churches to veterans posts. And then they went into industry through unions, personnel chiefs and chambers of commerce.

"At the suggestion of a Catholic priest we began Brotherhood Week," Dr. Clinchy says, "It's now celebrated in 3,000 cities and towns and is a national institution independent of us."

From the first Dr. Clinchy took to the road to do his work, not only in America, but all over the world. He's about to help set up a center of human relations in Holland. On one ocean trip, after meeting Dick Rodgers, the song "You've Got to Be Taught to Hate," showed up in "South Pacific." Quietly, tactfully, Dr. Clinchy and the National Conference wrestle daily with such problems as Negro pilots on commercial airlines, a suburb in Richmond barring Jews, or asking a professor addressing a literary society how literature would be served by reading a paper on the immorality of the Popes.

"It's a truism that freedom from hate always brings the individual happiness," says Dr. Clinchy, and then he concludes: "Science has hurdled all the boundaries and made this planet a single home for a single interdependent family. Whether we like it or not, there is only one family for the world — the family of man."

ECHO FORUM

Why I Don't Fight Back

The reason I don't fight back is because I do consider myself an agnostic of sorts, or a skeptic, if you please. The true skeptic, in his search for the right interpretation and explanation of things, never reaches any resting places or final truths. How can one fight back if he truly doesn't know? A skeptic can be willing to express disagreement when properly approached, that is, in the spirit of sincere intellectual endeavor, but for him to go about challenging other people's beliefs is only an inverted dogmatism. The true skeptic must first of all be tolerant of the beliefs of others, which involves, believe it or not, a good deal of restraint and a close-mouthed attitude. All the rigamorole about free discussion (and I do advocate it) is generally a by-product of self-assertive attitudes quite foreign to a skeptic or agnostic. Perhaps it is not sufficiently realized that "agnostic" does not merely pertain to ideas about a god, but that it must pervade the person's entire scheme of thought to be at all applicable.

So Dr. Brubaker said that Maryville College has no healthy agnostics. All that means is that he didn't meet any. In many ways he seemed to lack sympathy. His arguments were constructed like a debater's or a lawyers, with about as much sincerity. Why should I presume on his six years or so education beyond the B.A. while I am still over a year on this side of it? What can I prove by challenging him to a duel? That I am smarter than he? Then where is my skepticism and free spirit? So I didn't have any conferences with him and he didn't meet one healthy agnostic. How could we meet on any common ground when he dogmatically holds to the acceptance of the New Testament as literal, historical record? He would calmly say that he had passed through the stage I am at (if it is only a stage), but that he had reached the inevitable conclusion that the New Testament is incontestable. Drowning man grasping at a straw!

The doubt Dr. Brubaker went through, and many like him, isn't doubt at all, because he knew he would end up where he started. Many people doubt in that fashion, and in the end, to feel secure and successful, retrogress to childhood supersitions. This isn't doubt. This is fortifying present beliefs, despite the appearance of honest effort and analysis in the search for "the truth."

Now a final note to anticipate the inevitable smug question from the archreligionist: "Why do I go to Maryville College?" That's simple — and results from the true skeptical attitude. How can I not try to understand the major religion of Western Civilization? How can I reject some of the most beautiful poetry, some of the deepest allegory, ever written.

POET'S CORNER

Project Vanguard

Here beginneth the warping of time,
This assault on space by the hands of men.
Still enemies, they work from every clime
To spread the ends of man's kingdom again.
Not the good of their fellow men they seek,
Nor to renew their dignity and worth,
Indeed, their path tramples under the weak,
"The strong have the stars, let the meek have the earth."
And thus man turns his back upon himself,
Seeking, but not knowing what he shall find,
Unaware that his answer lies in that self
Which he so casually leaves behind.
What shall confront him when his path is trod?
Not his futile stars, but the might of God.

Fashions

by Bobbye Carson

Girls . . . Suits and Capes For Spring!

As for most any spring, suits get the nod from most fashion commentators. This spring's suit line has a few new twists, which we will discuss briefly.

A prediction for spring concerning suits as well as dresses is that hemlines are going to be slightly lowered.

One of the smartest suits that will welcome the spring is this new style composed of a slim skirt, and slightly fitted waistlength jacket. This suit is sometimes seen with a double row of big buttons on the front of the jacket. If the suit is of a solid color, polka-dotted blouses are very complementary. For warmer weather this same skirt and short jacket is very good in checks and plaids with short sleeves and wide collars.

Other fashion experts still favor the boxed jacket for suits. These are very interesting for spring, but at any rate, the boxed jackets lengths are just barely below the waistline, which is shorter than those of last year.

A revival from the 1930's is seen in the all popular navy worsted flannel suit, with pleated skirt and tailored box jacket. The touch of a white collar makes it blossom forth in attractiveness.

Capes

Make way for Capes! — It's one of the newest styles. Capes seem to have captured fashion headlines.

There is the cape suit: It is composed of a very slim skirt and straight lined cape, either of three-quarter length, or just below the waistline. This cape may be further characterized by small bound arm openings, brass buttons, down the front, and a small flat collar. Worn with such accessories as an attractive hat and long gloves, this outfit can be very striking. Fabric suggestion: light weight wool flannel.

A caped coat is very new also. It is rather difficult to describe but it is something like a long cape with large arm openings. It is worn with elbow length gloves.

The elbow length cape is worn as pretty protection for spring sheath dresses. A collar and bow tie adds interest. These capes are quite fashionable in their double-breasted styles.

The capelet suit is designed as a suit and detachable elbow-length cape, which fastens under the collar of the suit.

Color suggestions: Combinations of black and white, navy and white, pussy willow grey, yellow, and lavender are all good for spring.

YMCA Discussed Life Preparation

The subject for discussion at the YMCA meeting last Sunday, March 3, was "Does Maryville College Prepare Students for Life in the Outside World?" A panel of members analyzed the question with regard to social, political, and religious training. It was stressed in the meeting that the problem is a highly important one requiring careful review by organizations and individual students.

Mr. Bushing of the English Department served as moderator for the discussion and introduced the topic. The discussions that followed centered around the preparation received here for meeting the various problems in life after college. Jim Conklin presented the controversial question of social preparation, defining "maturity" and suggesting ways to reach it on this campus. The necessity for constant willingness to change was stressed.

Gene Spiekermann continued the program with the question of preparation for political life. The value of curriculum offerings in political science and practical experience in student government was analyzed. Intellectual preparation was discussed by Clem Birklebach, who stressed the importance of thorough integration of learning into general life purposes. Preparation for religious development was discussed by Bob Finertie.

Woman's Work To Be YW Topic

YWCA will meet Sunday, March 10, at 1:30 p.m. in the Y Rooms. The topic will be "What is Woman's Work?" with Mrs. Robert Wilson, wife of Minister of Education at First Baptist Church, as guest speaker. After the meeting there will be a discussion led by Mrs. Wilson.

On March 24 YM & YW will have a joint meeting and the topic will be "Values in Marriage and in the Single Life."

The last days to make payments to the Fred Hope Fund are Saturday, March 9, and Monday, March 11. Payments can be made afterward, but everyone is urged to fulfill his payments on the above two dates.

Play Committees Hard At Work, Scenery Is Flying, Homer's Sick

by Barbara Wilkie

Committees are hard at work on the task of producing "Beggar on Horseback" next weekend, as a survey of their jobs will show.

Elaine Bowman, chairman of the set committee and also in charge of props, replied, "Well, we're working!" when questioned on the subject. In the two acts there are to be nine scenes and eleven scene changes — facts which pose problems for set builders. To handle the situation, the set committee will make use of the elaborate counterweight system in the stage housing to "fly" the living room scene. The entire set will be whisked out of sight into the upper regions. Some of the scenes will be projected onto the backdrop by a projector containing a pane of glass about five feet by one and one-half feet on which the scene is painted.

Mr. John Cauble, of the drama department, is overseeing the building of the set. Other members of the committee are Ross McGill, Ralph Ayers, Curtis Burger, Bob Bowman, David McLean, Jim Marsh, Rosemary Lee, Nancy Potter and Ron Randon.

Problems in lighting the projected sets are being overcome by Ruth Wagner's committee. A system of side lighting will be used in those scenes which are projected, while regular lighting arrangements will be used for other scenes. The fact that the living room is to have a ceiling also calls for different lighting.

Other members of the lighting committee are Dave Gilliland, John Mollard, Dan Perez, Bob Freidank, and Libby Turner.

Props

The prop committee will be securing up some 200 articles ranging all the way from "golf balls that don't go far" to a baby grand piano. The props will help carry out the expressionistic theme of the play, chairman Elaine Bowman stated. A few of the other articles beng hunted are a long snake whip, two type writers, cigars, one tobacco jar, a press photographer's camera, one pill bottle, a large stamping machine, and checks which must be pink, blue, and yellow.

Members of this scavenger committee are Judy Eldridge, Hugh Clark, Sue Fowell, Janie Wall, and Mary Mottola.

Peggy Longfellow is heading up the costume and make-up committees. Dress of the 1920's will be in order. Working on costumes are Helen Rankin, Maryanne

Council Proposes Student Center

Two town night violators, both sophomores, were given two week penalties at the opening of the Student Council meeting this week.

A nomination was made and seconded that the proposed new student center be built, and a committee of four was appointed by President Henderson to study the idea.

Dan Wiley and the Athletics Committee members are to meet soon with Dean McClelland to go over problems.

The Dating Problem committee has nothing new to report except that they will be meeting several more times to study the dating program.

The next Student Forum will be on March 17. Opinions were expressed at the council meeting as to the merits or disadvantages of the forum. Dick Henderson suggested giving the forums more thought.

An election will be held Tuesday to elect a representative to fill Charley Garreson's place as Pep Committee Chairman.

The schedule of coming events pertaining to the council is this:

March 19 — Student body and class meetings to nominate May Queen

April 1-7 — Academic Week, the purpose of which is to prove that we do have academic freedom

April 13-18 — Campaign Week, with the campaign speeches on April 11

April 29 — Election of class officers, Chilhowean editor and business manager.

Of the programs received for skit night, two have been rejected and a few revisions made in the others. The program for freshman night has not yet been received.

The Student Council and Executive Council party will take place on April 4.

Campus Beautiful Week is planned for March 18-23. The plans are to have the four classes take care of planting trees and working with the garden beds and landscape, the societies to plan on landscaping around the society houses, the faculty to worry about the new walks, and the maintenance crew to clean up generally.

Joan Neckerman, Ted McDaniels, and Miss Massey have been working with the societies to help them get their social calendars straightened out.

A suggestion was made that the Rush Weeks be put off until October and it was decided that a meeting of the society presidents should be called to find out what they think about the matter.

Children's Film Series To Show Films Each Sat.

The Children's film series is being done as a community service. It is administered by the Playhouse Film society and any profits from the showings go toward paying for equipment. The schedule for the films is:

March 23 — "Circus Boy," and Walt Disney's "Beaver Valley," Technicolor and actually filmed in nature.

March 30 — "My Friend Flicka" (a horse story).

April 6 — "And Now Miguel," also Daniel Boone in "Frontiersman."

April 13 — "Johnny on the Run" and "Christopher Columbus."

April 20 — No decision on a certain film yet.

"Circus Boy," "And Now Miguel," and "Johnny on the Run" were made in England by J. Arthur Rank especially for children and are acted by child actors.

The admission is $.25 and the time is 10:30 each Saturday morning.

Dating, Athletics Subject Of Latest Student Forum

At 7:15 P.M., February 27, Ted McDaniels, discussion leader for the session, called to order the latest Student Forum meeting. The meeting's purpose was to acquaint participating students and attending members of the faculty's Executive Council with representative student opinion regarding social opportunities afforded this student body and the strong and weak aspects of the present athletic program. To begin the discussion, Bob Goodlin and Gray Clarke presented sample opinions which they had collected of the ideas of students concerning our social scene. Later, Dan Wiley and Chuck Frissell, respectively, presented some of the objectionable and good aspects of our athletic picture.

Dating

Mr. Goodlin presented the following ideas concerning the present number and nature of social liberties which we currently enjoy: that they seem to indicate an attitude of distrust on the part of the faculty, toward the student body; that they premise the assumption that the students must be protected from themselves; that they don't give students enough opportunities to apply, independently, Christian principles of behavior; that the number and nature of social liberties should be increased to more than they are at present, so that opportunities to make independent choices would grow proportionately to the advancing student's ability to choose.

Miss Clarke presented these collected opinions: widespread dissatisfaction with the lack of off campus dating on weekends for underclass women, the wish of students for more town nights for underclassmen; a desire for more dances and a later time limit for them; the opinion that those girls who use the ruins should be permitted more time there; the desire for the societies to produce more social functions; a concern about the cool relations between "hill" students and town students, and that "hill" students are much at fault for this relationship; enthusiasm for the small size of the student body, and for its friendly, unstratified nature, and for the absence of barriers between the student and his faculty; special appreciation for readiness of the faculty to give students individual help.

Discussion

Several of the aforementioned views were underscored during the discussion period. Among other students' ideas heard were that since underclass women, and many upperclass women too, cannot go to town on Saturday nights, there should be a choice of campus activities which they would be able to attend; that the present social liberties afforded senior women imply that their ability to decide wisely how to use their time and money, as well as to make moral choices, have not matured significantly since their freshman days; that the men are very glad for the facility with which they can date; that perhaps if fewer minor and marginal regulations for women, and more of the major ones were enforced, adherance to them and attitudes toward them could be improved; that the men appreciate the inexpensiveness of dating in Maryville; that a vote of girls in Pearson's has proven the upperclass women would be glad to see underclass women granted more Sunday dating privileges.

Mr. McDaniels asked Dr. Lloyd to contribute a few comments on

Bach Cantata To Be Given Sunday

At the weekly Vespers Service, Mr. Arthur Bushing, assistant professor of English, will be the speaker, and the Vespers Choir will perform in its entirety Cantata No. 182 (Himmelskonig, sei willkommen) by J. S. Bach. Mr. Bushing has chosen Lenten Meditations as the subject matter of his sermon.

Cantata No. 182 is accompanied by an instrumental ensemble composed of violin, Miss Katherine Crews; viola I and II by Margaret Jones and Sidney Tedford; flute, Nancy Stere; and harpsichord, to be played by Louise Ogden and Lynn Mitchell.

Solos

This cantata is composed of three choruses and solos for alto, tenor, and bass. Carol Lee Lacy and Bobbye Carson will be singing the alto solo; those to sing the bass solos are James Laster, Richard Conway, and John Ribble; the tenor soloists will be Sidney Tedford and Perry Fuller.

With the exception of the bass recitative, following the opening chorus, which is a quotation from Psalms 40:3-9, the text is all free poetry. The text is treated with the highest musical feeling; there is artful relationship between the atmosphere of joy and that of Palm Sunday; the Cross with Good Friday; the love of Christ and his martyr death.

The opening sections describe the entry of Jesus into Jerusalem; to this effect the music is march like in character. The opening chorus represents the crowds of people rejoicing at the triumphant entry. Later on, the music changes as befits Good Friday and turns into an expression of quiet peace in the proper mood.

This work is a part of the touring program.

Reception In Lobby Among the Honors

On next Friday night the Maryville College Playhouse will present both "Beggar on Horseback" and "Mrs. West Night." The latter is a special recognition occasion for Mrs. Clyde West, a Maryville resident and head of the Maryville College Drama and Speech department for about forty-five years. Mrs. West came to Maryville, as nearly as records show, in 1899 and retired in 1947. During that period three-hundred people graduated with a major in Expression (later changed to Drama and Speech).

Honorary Membership

Between the two acts next Friday, she will be presented with an honorary membership in the Maryville College Playhouse, which was not organized until 1949. This particular production time was chosen to honor her because she directed the 1938 Commencement play, "Beggar on Horseback." She says that it was the most difficult play she ever directed and that she would rather direct the ominous "Hamlet" several times than "Beggar" once.

After the performance Friday night, the audience is invited to a reception to be held in her honor in the lobby of the theatre. Hostesses for the occasion will be Mrs. David McArthur, Mrs. Earl Blazer, Mrs. C. B. Morton, Mrs. Catherine Harvey, Mrs. G. H. Traylor, Miss Frances Massey and Miss Arda Walker, all of whom were quite active in the drama department when they were students here.

80 Years Old

Mrs. West, who celebrated her eightieth birthday last month, graduated from a college formerly located at Sevierville, of which her father was president, and took graduate study at Grant University, which was located at Athens, Tennessee.

Tedford To Give Senior Recital

Mr. Sidney Tedford will be presented in his Senior Voice Recital Monday evening, March 11, at 8:00 p.m., in the Music Hall of the Fine Arts Center. Mr. Tedford is a voice major from Pittsburgh, Pa. He will be accompanied by Miss Lynn Mitchell.

The program is as follows:

Recit: 'Tis Well My Friends
Aria: Call Forth Thy Powers My Soul (Judas Maccabaeus) Handal

Propit Kuvanonda, Dean of Academy In Thailand, Thinks M. C. Friendly

by Walt Thompson

Among the several foreign students inhabiting "the Hill" this semester is a personable native of Thailand, who matriculated in January for a semester of graduate work. Her name is Propit Kuvanonda, dean of the 536 young ladies, aged 6 through 18 years, who make up the student body of Wittana Wittaya Academy, a Presbyterian mission school in Bangkok. The school's faculty includes ten partieipating American missionaries, 36 regular teachers, and eight salaried part-time teachers.

Wittana means progress, and Wittaya, knowledge, an apt title for an institution which has recently produced three winners of the King's Scholarships, which are awarded to high school graduates with the highest scholarship record in Thailand. The most recent of these winners is attending Wellesley College in Massachusetts, where she enrolled last June. Students at Wittana Wittaya attend a morning devotional service much like our chapel meetings, similar even to monitors at each end of the rows. Although the academy has government authorization for 1280 students, qualified teachers are not available to accommodate more than the present number attending.

Propit Kuvanonda, who was taught her excellent English in a mission school in Thailand, is engaged here in a term of study concerning the Christian education of salvation. Next September she will enroll for a semester's work at Biblical Seminary in New York. From there she will return to her position at Wittana Wittaya Academy.

Thailand's history (thai — from sanskrit — "free") is unique in southeastern Asia. Thailand has never been subject to any other nation, and boasts two thousand years of independent government. She was ruled by absolute monarchs until 1934, and is now a democratic constitutional monarchy. Burma, to her west, Indochina to her north, and Malaya to the south have been colonies of England, France, and the Netherlands, respectively. Several dialects of the Thai language are used by Propit's countrymen today, whose race is a mixture of Chinese and Indian bloods. Their individual culture is a refinement of the traditions of both China and India. Although the nation produces adequate food for itself, its economy can support only very humble living standards, while exporting rubber, rice, copra, salt, and tin.

The few communists active in Thailand today are an insignificant underground movement, since the nation has outlawed that party. During recent years agricultural improvement units from the United Nations have worked in Thailand, and this country has also sent her economic aid. Her several higher educational institutions are all government owned and operated, and are currently exchanging students with Indiana University.

Propit has been in this country since September 6, 1956, and assisted in an orienation program for a foreign-bound group of missionaries at Mt. Freedom, New Jersey, before she came to Maryville. She says her most noteworthy impression of the United States is that of the warm Christian attitude of those with whom she has stayed, and she heartily commends the friendly Christian emphasis of this college.

Such letters should show thoughtful, representative criticism or appreciation on subjects of general interest. The editor reserves the right to edit letters for convenience of publication. Please Help Us

As was probably noticed by most readers, the Echo practically scraped bottom several weeks ago. There was a vast improvement the next week, but the bitter still rankled from the week before. Copy hadn't come in and instead of the good news stories we should have had, there were "canned" articles, chiefly designed to take up space and nothing else. The Echo staff knows that the Echo needs to improve. We know that you know, but we know even better. Sometimes we think it's hardly worth the trouble, the time and the ultimate controversy, but we plow through. Believe it or not, the staff may not be completely at fault. Did it ever occur to you that you might help the Echo be more of what you want it to be? You can. . . just by giving us your suggestions—— (not just your criticisms. They help, too, but suggestions can be put more quickly to constructive use.) If you have a news story, an item of interest, a scoop of campus concern. . . let one of the staff members know, and we'll gladly include it. Give us the names of newly engaged couples, or if you've had guests for the week-end (or a longer or shorter time), give us their names. "Socially Speaking" can't speak if information is withheld! (This is really beginning to sound ominous!) Oh, yes. . . write to the Echo Forum. It is a successful column just as long as it is supported by ideas from everyone on campus.

These are just a few of the things you can do to help. We're not oblivious to our shortcomings. . . we merely need the cooperation of everyone who is interested in the Highland Echo and Maryville College.

The Hollow Men

What's all this about "positive Christian emphasis?" It seems to many people that this phrase has become hollow and meaningless, if not actually ridiculous, in regard to the situation here at Maryville. Evidently, it is the prevailing idea among some people that this emphasis is accomplished through a maximum number of chapel services, Sunday Schools and other such programs. Is this idea correct?

Hollow ritual is the threat of the church. When a service takes place through the desire and consent of a group it is meaningful to it, but when it is merely a requirement, and attendance only preserves academic hours it ceases to serve its purpose.

The eight-o'clock chapel services have come to serve little or no purpose. First come the announcements which could just as easily, and more permanately, be made known through posting them. As for the worship services which follows—very few people can help admitting that they are usually quite inferior and have come to mean very little to nearly everyone concerned. Perhaps if these services were less frequent, possibly three times a week, they would mean more and would help to revive the "positive Christian emphasis."

That is just one illustration that something must be wrong. Another is the attitude of individual students. There must be something wrong in a situation which turns people away from the church. Some students come here with the idea and conviction of going into full-time Christian service and before they leave they have given up such ideas and have become skeptics and agnostics.

A Christian atmosphere should provide room for growth in many things; faith, understanding, respect for those in authority, and moral strength. Here, it seems as if these are thwarted. A growing contempt or disregard of rules seems to tear down whatever is built up by chapel services or Sunday School teachers. Many people on campus who are held in quite high esteem by faculty and students, and some who are preparing for Christian work, think very little of signing false honor reports on Tuesday mornings. Others, girls, can not even count the number of times they have been to the drive-in. Many "cut campus" regularly. There must be a weak spot in this "positive Christian emphasis" for there to be such complete disregard for the standards and rules to which we have pledged ourselves at the beginning of each semester.

It was said at Vespers Sunday night, that a living organism has as one of its characteristics growth. To clarify that one more degree, it does not mean growth of one part to the exclusion and destruction of all others; it means a proportional development of the body as a whole, to serve every purpose which it has set up for itself. It means an inner growth by which the body can recognize its own short-comings and can correct them.

A Modern Short Story

By Carolyn Cones

Eloise was a college studetn——and like college students everywhere she, on occasion, would complain bitterly about not having sufficient time to do all the things she really wanted to do. Like others, there were occasions when the unhappy necessity of postponing the hour of retirement appeared. At these times Eloise utilized all the known methods at her disposal for warding off sleep. She drank coke after coke and strong hot tea or coffee. She had left the window up on even the chilliest of nights and shivered as the cold gusts of air helped to clear her head. She had laid a cold cloth over eyes at intervals. She had chewed gum viciously, and at times peanuts would seem to help. She had, on extra-pressing occasions even been forced to rely on certain commercial compounds supposed to produce the desired result.

She always emerged from these ordeals with a disgust at the quest of knowledge and at life in general. She grumbled about how futile——and senseless——it was for people to be forced to spend such a large proportion of their lives collopsed on a bed in a state of unconsciousness.

Then the change came. Eloise did not know when she had first noticed it. It had come so gradually that its effects were not easy to detect, yet now there was no doubt about it. She definitely requiring much less sleep than usual. This would perhaps not be so remarkable if the hours of sleep had not continued to decrease——even to an alarming (to some) rate.

Eloise, however was quite gleeful over the situation. She began to carefully time her slumber and was always elated to find that each night the interval between retiring and awakening was ever shortening. This addition to her waking hours she found to be a distinct advantage. While others gave up the struggle and succumbed to the pillow, Eloise, clear-minded and unfatigued, toiled into the late hours of the night. Her friends began to be concerned, not only because of the destruction of her class curves, but mostly because she had gotten to the point where she slept only three hours a night——with a continuing decrease.

Yet Eloise appeared to be in perfect health. Her eyes sparkled; her hands were steady; her spirits were high. She could offer no explanation of how she could do with so little sleep with no ill effects, yet she was constantly benig begged to disclose her supposed secret. She could offer no advice to these drowsy class mates. All the devices which she had formerly employed to maintain consciousness were now unnecessary to her, and although the problem puzzled others, she went on with her affairs with blissful unconcern.

Finally the time came when Eloise had reached her ultimate——she did not sleep at all. She threw an over-night party in her room to celebrate the event, but to her disappointment one by one her guests fell victim to slumber until she alone was left to carry on the festivities.

She relaxed in the day time and studied all night. Her grades went up and up, and her perfect papers made her the pride of the professors and the despair of her fellow classmates.

Yet while Eloise rather smugly looked down upon those who used at least a fraction of the day-light hours poring over some weighty and probably dull, volume, the novelty of her nightly encounter with the great fields of knowledge gradually died away. She became slightly irritated to see others resting while she worked——and she became lonesome. It was difficult, she found, to spend such a long period of time of each day in utter solitude, with not even a muttering about how unfair a test was, or how unconsiderate some people are, to break the maddening silence.

So Eloise sought other ways to occupy her mind during the long nightly vigilance. She worked puzzles—cross-word, zig-saw, mathematical——but soon tired of such an idle occupation, so she decided on something more constructive. She took up knitting. At first she was very enthusiastic, but after she had finished knitting a sweater for almost every girl on the floor, the project sickened her, and the sight of a pair of knitting needles was enough to throw her into a mild state of shock.

She took up sewing. She was thrilled to see how quickly she built up a glamorous array of clothes, but when she progressed to the time when she couldn't fit another garment into her closet and when the expense became prohibitive, she was forced to terminate her experiences with thread and needle. Besides, she was tiring of such confining work, and the thought of acquiring another article of clothing had definitely lost its appeal.

She had to decide upon another time-consuming device. She idly counted the cracks on the walls and tried to form a picture with them. Perhaps she could take up painting. No, this was not practical, since her artistic ability was virtually nil. Perhaps anohter fine art, then. She decided to study music—to learn to play an instrument. Eloise borrowed a bassoon, but the ensuing disturbance of the silence of the night produced such a clamor from angry people awakened from a peaceful sleep, the instrument was quickly abandoned.

She continued in her quest for activities but ever the superabundance of idle time plagued her. She became hyper-critical and irritable. She became resentful of others. She became extremely unhappy and depressed.

She tried to sleep. She tried warm milk and sleeping pills and soft music and counting sheep. Yet nothing would help. She tried to stretch out on the bed and relax for a few moments, but her mind was too active.

Eloise finally took her problem to a doctor. He gave her a complete physical examination but could find nothing wrong. He consulted with other doctors, but all were equally puzzled. All the while, Eloise dragged through each day—a day that seemed to have no end.

Not too long afterwards, Eloise was sitting in a class listening to a lecture. It was, without a doubt, the driest lecture she had ever heard. She noticed how the words seemed to be so far away, how they were so strangely entoned, how they were so meaningless. She fell asleep.

No one could wake her. For weeks she lay as if in a coma. The doctors watched her carefully for a sign of movement, fearing that any breath might be her last. One morning, she stirred slightly, and the doctors were summoned. She awoke, looked at the clock, uttered a groan of surprise, and lept from the bed.

She slept normally after that. No one could give a logical explanation for her strange experience, but Eloise didn't care——or complain.

TALK OF THE WEEK

By Sue Settle

Voices, Masks, and Shadows

by Margaret Longfellow

There is a saying among theater folk — "The play's the thing." This will be the watchword on the Maryville campus during the week-end of March 15-16. That is the week-end when the big, spring drama production, "Beggar on Horseback," will be given in the theater.

The play was written in the 1920's and was popular during that period. The play itself is a satire on big business, although this fact may not be obvious at first.

The story may be said to involve "to different worlds" — the real-life happenings of Neil McRae and the other characters, and Neil's dream sequence in which all are involved in fantastic situations.

During the dream sequence there is a decided change in tempo. Everything has become more pronounced and more grotesque than in real-life, and the characters are seen to engage in many seemingly weird antics.

The costumes are straight from a flapper's wardrobe with the dress hems coming just below the knee and the dresses properly shapeless.

Everything short of altering their suits has been done to the boys' costumes to give the illusion of the best dressed man of 1920.

A lot of work has also gone into the sets, which were complicated but not many. Extra attention has been spent on such projects as patterned wallpaper, special wall projections, a ceiling, and a judge's stand.

Movies

While the campus population is waiting expectantly for the play, movies are still being shown in the Maryville metropolis. On Thursday, Friday and Saturday the Capitol is showing "Don't Knock the Rock", a rockin', rollin' musical show with the popular young crooner Alan Dale and rock 'n roll's favorite band — Bill Haley and His Comets.

On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday the feature is "The Girl He Left Behind" with Tab Hunter and Natalie Wood. The picture is the story of a rich, young swain, accustomed to the finer things of life, who keeps up his college marks in order to dodge the draft. After quarreling with his girl, his marks drop and he becomes a member of the U. S. Army.

His girl troubles all stemmed from the fact that he didn't have any responsibility, and his army experiences all point up this lack. The picture ends "happily ever after" when a heroic act helps the hero patch matters up with "The Girl He Left Behind."

An interesting and edifing form of recreation to while away the time is reading. A current fiction book on the library's shelves is "Brave, New World" by Aldous Huxley. The book tells of life in a scientific, industrialized Utopia. In this Utopia everybody works for the good of everybody else. Nobody is unhappy because everyone is taught from birth to be happy in his station of life and to be happy with the work he is doing.

Mass Production

Everything in this brave, new world is done on a mass production scale, including birth. Lives are begun in the test tube and are injected with various serums and hormones to keep them immune to disease and discontent. As these people age they are injected with another serum to keep them from becoming "old".

These test-tube people are instilled with all their ideas at birth. They are taught that they must use up the supplies to keep the production going, and so clothes are thrown away and new

College Basketball

The North Carolina Tarheels remained on top in national rankings according to A.P. and U.P. Polls. Kansas continued as the No. 2 team. Kentucky, S.M.U., Seattle, U.C.L.A., Louisville, Michigan State, West Virginia and Bradley follow in order.

The tourneys are still picking teams for the Big ones coming shortly. Pitt and LaFayette were recently added to the N.C.A.A. along with Michigan State.

North Carolina still has its conference tourney to win before it can accept a bid anywhere.

Other conferences have champions to crown as well to complete the field for the N.C.A.A. Tourney.

The N.I.T. has 3 positions to fill for its event at New York. Temple has a good chance to win one of these spots.

The individual scoring still belongs to Grady Wallace of South Carolina. Other leaders are Chamberlain-Kansas, Forte-Columbia; Gibbons-Miss., Bradley-Seattle.

Pro Basketball

The regular season almost over, and people are wondering if the Celtics will fold in the playoffs as previous teams have done from Bean Town. Philadelphia was tied by Syracuse and New York ended at the bottom.

In the west Rochester is making a comeback and Ft. Wayne is about through. Minneapolis has gone into a tailspin. The St. Louis ball club without the full time services of Bob Petit can't move at all.

Arizin of Philadelphia continues to get closer in the individual scoring race along with teammate Weal Johnson.

Baseball

Bill Sarni's career as a player came to an end last week. The 29 year-old catcher of the New York Giants suffered a heart attack in his first workout of the new season.

Don Newcombe injured his arm which has the Brooklyn camp in an uproar. Just how serious the injury is has not been determined.

The American league is griping over the impossibility to beat those Yankees. After that trade with Kansas City the Yanks their only question mark—pitching.

The Yanks will be tough again as will the Dodgers, Reds, and Braves in the N.L. loop.

It should be another good year at the major league ball parks this summer is the general opinion.

Sports in General

Ron Delaney won the 1,000 yard run and the 2-mile run in record time at the IC4A meet in New York last week.

Johnny Saxton was put away by Carman Basilio in 2 rounds at Cleveland for the Welter crown.

Detroit stayed atop the N.L. Hockey loop but Montreal and Boston both picked up ground on the leaders.

L.M.U. whipped Carson Newman for the Smoky Mountain Conference title at Harrogate, Tennessee, 83-61.

Thus is the sports picture for another week.

SPRING SPORTS

Spring is just about upon us and with it comes the advent of new seasons for the sports of Tennis, Track and Baseball. Practice has begun in all three and before long the intercollegiate competition will begin. So below you will find a few words about the prospects of each of the teams as seen by a few of their more prominent members.

BASEBALL

By Bill Dent

With the dosing of basketball season last week, baseball swings into prominence on the Maryville Campus. The six lettermen returning from last year's team and one more from the service form a strong nucleus for the formation of another strong team. Last year we finished the season with an 11 won and 7 lost record, winning 5 out of our last 6 games. This year the boys are confident that they will improve this record.

The strongest spot on the team seems to be the infield with four lettermen returning. Last year's squad had John West at third, Bill Dent at short and Jack Woodhall at second. But with the return of Earl Lawson from the army, possibly one of these three will be made into an outfielder. First base and catcher are wide open and another good utfielder is needed to help Don Hill roam the pastures.

All in all, the team has experience, but one or two more pitchers to help Bill Evans, Max Williamson, and John West could make this year's team a winner. Practice starts this week in the Alumni Gym, any men who are interested should report to Coach Honaker.

TRACK

By Joe Williams

Before any comments on the coming track season, let me pass on to you of the grandstand section a word of thanks from last year's team. Perhaps the best way to express how much we appreciated your support is this: no team discussion of last season has ever ended without the talk having shifted to how fine your backing was at the two meets we ran here. And we all want you to know that it went a long way toward making the season's record such a good one.

Now about the season coming. Though it is too early to be sure, the prospects look bright. Our only big weakness is in the mile, and eve nthere we hope to turn up a strong runner from among the many even there we hope to turn up a strong runner from among the many comers Dan Wiley, Jim Cates, John Hawkins and others should give us better balance and more depth than we had. Each of the ones mentioned looks like a real standout and has great natural ability. If they come through as exepcted, we should turn out a team worth watching.

The way the faculty, especially Dr. Lloyd, has supported us also deserves mention. An outstanding athlete himself in his undergraduate days, Dr. Lloyd has shown keen interest in the revival of this Spring sport. And his promise to have the track put back in good shape for the coming season is a further incentive to work harder for a good team.

So that's how things stack up at present. Our first meet is April 9. We hope to see you there.

TENNIS

By Stan Mont

Any look at tennis prospects for this spring could probably be explained in one word, inexperience. Only three men have previously played intercollegiate tennis and the most experienced has only one complete season. Ted Engle and Bruce Ingles should have good seasons. Ted has turned last year's often erratic play into a fine solid steady game. The team will have a strong middle with newcomers, Jim MacCall, Bob Bigle, and Bill Bolger. The team as a whole is fairly well balanced and most probably be strongest in the lower three team positions. There are several other men out each day and who will make ladder matches quite interesting. By the first match on the 23rd Bob Davies, Don Neuroth, Tom Eberhard, Don Roulet, or Bruce Lundberg might be on the top six. It is too early to make any predictions but judging from the spirit of the team the season will be successful, win or lose.

Watching a tennis match is almost as hard to follow as a track meet. Last season the tennis squad received excellent support, and I am certain we shall receive the same this year. In closing, I want to mention something that I feel is important. I personally, want to thank all people who did compose the tennis galleries here at M.C That fact helps the spirit of the players as well as the game.

Finally, a bid for tennis. Men, remember that tennis is excellent for a means of courtship; and ladies, it is the best way to remove a week of dieting. See you on the courts!

WAA Trophy Won By Franklin's Team

The newly acquired trophy in the new trophy case (sponsored by the Woman's M Club) was won by Helen Franklin's basketball team in the W.A.A. tournament. The team was composed of: Captain, Helen Franklin; Manager Lila Crane; Team Roster, June Keeny, Dona Sarver, Sue Short, Judy Trnavsky, Diane Wadas, Joyce Runyon. The "Ridgeway Runners" as they are called played a Maryville team on March 6.

The four teams in the tourna ment were:

Sue Kindred: three wins
Willa Duvall: three wins
Jane Bryne: no wins
Helen Franklin: four wins

Jane Bryne and Helen Franklin are in charge of softball which started on March 7. After the softball season is over, track will begin.

On March 6 and 13, between 7 and 9 o'clock, there will be a swimming test for anyone in W.A.A. who is interested.

A major project of the W.A.A. is to get more people to come out for intramurals. They want people to come out even if they are not working for an award.

Echo Forum—

Dear Editor:

In defense of walking, I would like to make a few comments regarding the dissention here on campus. I realize that I run the risk of being termed a reactionary conservative — perhaps I am. But I do not believe that Maryville College should allow the dorm students to have cars on campus. There are certain obvious limitations: where are the cars to be parked? Where are they to be kept at nights? How much is gas going to cost? If you have a car, buy gas, pay for a movie, buy some refreshments after — then where are the $1.00 evenings that the fellows love so dearly? One of the aspects of Maryville College that is a favorable one is the financial aspect. Students say that this matter doesn't worry them. But that is because Maryville does trend toward low-cost entertainment. You can have fun on a dollar. That is why the majority of students come to Maryville. If the situation created by cars were allowed to evolve, then one of the major purposes — and I believe a very vital one — would be neglected. There are also other points to bring up. There really is no need for a car. Maryville is a compact campus only a short walk from the center of town. And then of course, after sitting in desks all day, we need the exercise.

Seriously, it the expansion of the social program were initiated, cars would not actually be such a necessity in the minds of the students. I do think that we should be allowed to ride in cars occasionally without having to flood Miss Massey with our petitions. As it is now, one can hardly go riding with a brother! But this would be a point to consider in the gradual expansion of the social program here at Maryville. The student-faculty committee is working on this and at the student forum last week, several constructive ideas were brought up — like extension of town night, allowing couples to walk on campus between 9:30 and 10:15, or even sit on benches, to allow more privacy for talking things over, and other changes in minor, but irritating rules were suggested. These we should follow up. Every college has rules, not just Maryville. For example, the girls at U-T have to be in on week nights at 9:30.

Now at last students have an opportunities to work constructively rather than merely sounding off in bull sessions. If you have a pet peeve, then present it to one of the members of this committee set up to investigate this very problem. But, for heaven's sake, if you have nothing constructive to add, then don't perpetually add personal grievances. Just go take a walk.

Student Body and Faculty:

The members of Pi Kappa Delta and the debate squad would like to express their thanks to all those who helped to make the Smoky Mountain Tournament such a success. Especially we would like to thank the Administration for making the necessary arrangements, the teachers who forfeited their lectures and classrooms — as well as those who forfeited their time to act as judges — and the students who acted as timekeepers for the debates, and The Echo for the publicity given to the tournament. We would also like to thank publicly our coaches, Miss Arda Walker and Mr. Newell Witherspoon for all the many hours devoted toward making our season a success.

Again we say to all of you, thank you.

In the last issue of this newspaper there appeared several articles which undoubtedly have stirred up somewhat of a controversy among various individuals on our campus. There are dozens of these people who have either violently agreed or disagreed with the ideas set forth in these articles, but I can count on one hand the number that have done something about it. By "doing something about it" I do not refer to holding Prayer Meetings, nor do I mean blind and thoughtless criticism and condemnation, but rather an intelligent evaluation and answer to these ideas — an answer placed where it will be most effective. Obviously, a complaint to Brownie will not improve the food in the dining hall, but we have the same type of idea when we present a gripe or suggestion to our roommate or the friend down the hall about something completely out of their hands. Last week's articles are used only as an example, for only one or two replies were received by the Editor of the Echo. Surely there are more students at Maryville College who have something to say on matters such as these, or is Maryville really as "deadbeat" as some think.

The student newspaper should be the "Voice of the Students," and for many of us it is the only means of being heard above the rumble. What do you think about Sunday dating? What kind of student entertainment do you like? What do you think about our "Tuesday Morning Club?" Drop a letter to the editor in the next mail. Just address "Editor, Highland Echo," or deliver it in person to any staff member .All must be signed, but names will be held upon request.

One last thought: the Echo belongs to the students — use it!

Intramurals....

By Joe Quinn

The Basketball League Tournament in the B League was finally decided last week as the "dark horse" came through. The Pre-Min team took the final by a 61-55 score over the tourney favorite, the Hot Shots.

Ross McGill led the scoring for the preachers with 24 points and Graham Bardsley hit for 18 markers.

Wrestling

The Wrestling Tournament saw Bob Finertie edge Bob Muir and Joe Tropansky defeated Dick Bickford. Tom Bass won over Bob Krough. Ted Lawson pinned Murt Hall and Buddy Beam pinned Joe Quinn for the heavy title.

Volley Ball

Volley Ball is the present subject on the scene. Two leagues were formed, an Orange League and a Garnet League. An interesting note is that the faculty has entered a team.

Volley Ball will continue approximately 3 more weeks. Games are played every week day in Bartlett Hall, if you're interested, you can still sign up for a team.

Ping Pong

Ping Pong Tourney results are still not complete. The next sport in the intramural scene will be softball. Teams should begin to loosen up those tight ars.

Suggestions are still being heard for the drafting of the intramural constitution to be enforced in all competitive sports in the college intramural program.

Scots Win Two Out Of The Last Three Games

Scot Grapplers Are Fifth In S.E.C.

Three second places and one third gave Maryville College 5th place in team points in the S.E.C. wrestling tournament held February 22-23 at Auburn, Alabama. Auburn ran away with the team title garnering eight first places. Captain Jerry Waters, 123 lb., Max Williamson, 157 lb., and John Hawkins, heavyweight, all reached the finals where they were beaten by Auburn wrestlers. Don Hill was Maryville's only other point getter, taking third place in his weight class. Hill was recently elected captain of next year's wrestling team.

The Maryville College High-lander basketball team took two of their three final games to wind up with an 8-8 record for the season. They defeated Tennessee Wesleyan for the 2nd time. The score 85-78. The Carson-Newman Eagles fought off a last-half surge by the Scots to take a 78-74 decision. And in their final game of the season the Highlanders set a new school scoring record as they defeated the University of Chattanooga 119-83. Bill Wallace was the leading scorer for the Scotties in all three encounters. He was followed by Jim Gregory and Tom Morris.

Cuba

In Cuba, the Cuban-American Cultural Institute offers the Father Felix Varela Fellowship in honor of the widely known Cuban educator. Candidates in the fields of philosophy, Spanish and Spanish-American literature, history education, social sciences or law are preferred for this fellowship which is for study at the University of Havana during the 1957-1958 academic year.

In addition to these opportunities for 1957-1958, the University of Vienna summer school offers courses, open to American students, from July 14 to August 24, 1957. These classes, open to students who have completed at least two years of college work, are designed to promote better understanding between Europeans and Americans. The curiculum includes German and Austrian art, history of middle Europe, and the formation of the modern European mind.

There are eight scholarships available for qualified students who would not be able to attend without financial assistance.

Further information and applications may be obtained by writing to the Institute of International Education, at 1 East 67th Street, New York City.

the discussion. Among his comments were these: that there are definite purposes, beyond the mere restriction of students, for the limits placed on students' social privileges, and that the faculty's job would be much easier if these rules were not in force; that they are intended to protect the student from interference by other students in his academic life, as well as from the other hazards inherent in living in a compactly grouped community of young people far from home; that the faculty has proven itself willing to experiment with new privileges for students, in that some of those now enjoyed were granted on that basis and kept. In the following discussion the view was expressed that many social liberties yet remain with which the faculty might experiment. Another of the faculty present emphasized the sincere desire of the faculty to maintain the friendliest relations with every student, and it's desire that every student should know this.

Mr. Wiley presented the following complaint concerning the management of our varsity athletic program: that for reasons generally unknown the athletics committee, provided for in by-law 2 of the Constitution of the Student Body of Maryville College, which includes student and faculty members, had not met during the present school year, and therefore had had no voice in the election of athletic team managers, or in the awarding of letters and monograms.

Chuck Frissell commended the intramural athletic program for its wholesome diversion, morale building qualities, and wide group of participants, as well as for its well varied activities which continue throughout the school year. He pointed out these weaknesses in the program: lack of consistency in management of the program, such as in deciding which facilities are to be available for specific games, and the designation of unqualified persons as referees. He suggested that perhaps much of the widely noted ill feeling between "hill" teams and those of town students may stem from individual persons who question the equity of selection of varsity players from local and "hill" students, with the alleged result of varsity players on some intramural teams representing the "hill."

In the discussion which followed, three persons expressed the need for organizing the athletics committee for this year. The view that the committee's normal functioning might facilitate the equity with which the varsity program is pursued, and also reduce possible resentments and friction, was expressed. Several other opinions held the director of athletics responsible for alleged favoritism in the selection of varsity athletes in the three major varsity sports. Dr. Lloyd questioned the wisdom of publicly criticizing an absent person before one's complaint had been presented to him privately. Among his other comments, the President disclaimed any responsibility of the athletic department for the failure of the athletics committee to function, and pointed out that no college can engage in a varsity schedule unless that program is controlled solely by the faculty of the college.

ther of the aforementioned gentlemen; I merely want to point out where I agree and disagree with them.

In general what Mr. McNeal said about required Sunday School, Church and Chapel attendance is all well and good. However, to carry it as far as to question the advisability of required Bible courses is bordering on the ridiculous. Can we strip this college of every vestige of Christian emphasis and still call it a Christian school? Complaining about the various vestiges of Christian emphasis is like sending your child to a music school and complaining when they teach him music. And when they force him to practice the scales, oh that's just terrible.

As for myself, I wanted to gain a college education, but at the same time I also wanted to be educated in my faith. Consequently, I came to this school. This institution was founded by the Presbyterian Church and is still affiliated with it. It is apparent from study that the school is open-minded in that it admits both Christians and non-Christians. So I cannot see how these "healthy agnostics" can rightfully complain about the present policy of the school.

If you believe that religion should not be crammed down your throat, then why do you cram it down your throat? You came here of your own free will. You could have easily found a school that had all the qualifications of this one except that it had no program of "forced religion." But you came here instead and again, I might point out, of your own free will.

This school might make some false pretentions but I do not feel that it makes such pretentions in the field of religion. The literature that is sent to you as prospective students indicates the program of religious emphasis on this campus.

Many would point out to you that many of the best liberal arts schools in the country have no required Bible courses. But this is not just a liberal arts school; it is a liberal arts school which is affiliated with the Presbyterian Church.

I think Mr. Vandenberg started his letter very well in pointing out that Christians are very quick to condemn skeptics. However, before his letter was completed, he passed judgment on Christians referring to them as child-like creatures who believe in superstitions. But how are these child-like creatures capable of writing "some of the most beautiful poetry, some of the deepest allegory, ever written?"

Tickets

Susan Parkinson, ticket sales manager, will be aided by Gail Harrison, Judy Helton and Susan Miller. Tickets went on sale yesterday and will be sold every afternoon next week in the lobby of the Theater from 3:30 to 4:30. Prices are 75c for students and $1.00 for others. Most of the faculty have bought theirs already, Parkinson stated.

Nancy Potter, head of publicity, is busy "getting people doing things," as she put it. Her committee is making silk-screened posters, seeing that articles appear in the local papers as well as in the home town papers of leading members of the cast, and arranging for radio and TV announcements. On her committee are Fred Key, Joan Marston, Lorraine Torres, and Jeanne Ginaven.

Ann Wiley, house manager, stated that she thought everything was "just dandy" so far. Her job will be to "wander around" on the night of the performance to see when the house is full and to signal the lighting crew to begin the play.

One member of the cast (Mrs. Cady) when asked to make a statement about the production, replied enigmatically, "Homer's sick." Perhaps that is a line from the play. Who knows?

er mended. They are also taught that the social class into which they are born, is the one in which they will be the happiest. When a baby of the lowest class reaches for a flower or a book he receives an electric shock. This is repeated over and over again while he is still an infant, until he associates beauty and culture with pain. The theory behind this system is — "Whatever man hath joined together, let nature not put asunder."

Vol. 42 MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE, MARCH 16, 1957 No. 14

Hi
Lily Leaguers!

Beggar On Horseback Gives Last Performance

Practically everything has already been said about the spring play, Beggar on Horseback, which gave its first performance last night and will repeat it again tonight. Some cast changes have been made since the first notice, so here's a review of the cast. Albert — Herchal Netherton, Cynthia — Sylvia Smith, Neil — Bill Deerfield, Mr. Cady — Curt Berger, Mrs. Cady — Ann Fulton, Gladys — Helen McDonald, Homer — Tony Clark.

Other members of the cast are: Wade Hampton, Don Kidd, Ronald Randon, Dave Pierce, Fred Kay, Randy Rosensteel, Ron Morley, Tom Eberhard, Howard Myer, Freddy McArthur, Bob Bowman, Newt Pike, Jim Marsh, Elaine Bowman, Carol Schade, Walt Thompson, Judy Perov, Sue Short, Mae Collier, Reda Kay. Several members of the cast are playing two, sometimes three roles. It must be confusing to be someone now and someone else, several minutes later!

It has been a known fact that mothers have a hard time, but the "mothers" in the Maryville College productions seem to be jinxed! In Death of a Salesman, "Linda Loman" had to miss a rehearsal three nights before the production because of a back ailment, and in Beggar on Horseback, "Mrs. Cady", or Ann Fulton, has been incapaitated by bronchitus. Everyone hopes that she has recovered sufficiently.

Everyone who didn't get to see the play last night, don't fail to see it tonight. It is a take off on the American way of life and Big Business that no one will want to miss!

Problems Aired At First Meeting Of The New MSC

On Wednesday, March 6, the members of the Men's Student Cooperative held in Carnegie lob by their first meeting since the formation of the new governmental group and the MSC Council. Guy Selander, MSC Council chairman, led a discussion of many dormitory problems and projects, and the Council reported on progress to date in the new organization.

Much work has been done already by the new association. Study hours have been established, and posters announcing them have been placed in strategic spots on all floors. The men have assumed control of the coke machines and are planning to cut down on coke bottle waste. Plans for clearing up the mess on the grounds back of Carnegie and at the ruins were discussed.

Decorations for special events, notably Homecoming, Christmas, and Open House, were discussed. Plans for greeting freshmen next year and for room distribution and storage were suggested. The possibility of another dryer for Carnegie and the reality of a washing machine in Bartlett were announced.

The principal item for discussion was fire protection. It is hoped that a definite program will be set up which will include fire drills and other concrete approaches to the problem of fire prevention and escape from any fire which might occur.

Beard Shows Paintings At Berea College

Twenty-eight watercolor paintings by Richard E. Beard, instructor of art, are currently on display at Berea College, Berea, Kentucky. Included in the exhibit are landscapes, abstractions, and some religious art, which was done during the past year. Mr. Beard's exhibit will be at Maryville for the opening April 2, to be in the gallery for three weeks. The Berea display is part of an exchange program of faculty art work between Berea and Maryville.

Campus Beautiful Week To Be 18-23

The project committee of Student Council, under the chairmanship of Bob Goodlin, has chosen as its project this semester the cleaning up of the campus. The major part of the committee's efforts are being focused on the coming Campus Bautiful Week, at which time the various classes and student organizations will be asked to work with the faculty and administration in improving the appearance of our campus.

Campus Beautiful Week, which was called to your attention at the recent class meetings, has been scheduled for March 18-23, by the council's project committee. Even thought we already have a picturesque campus, we will all enjoy the improvements to be made more if we all pitch in and help. There are many situations on campus which could be improved upon and the committee would welcome any suggestions for such from the student body. Some specific plans already under consideration by the committee include (1) the planting of trees and plants by each of the four classes with each class choosing the kind of tree and place of planting; (2) the improving of the landseaping around Bartlett and the Student Center by the Y.M. and Y.W.C.A.; (3) the construction of new walks and the repairing of old walks by the faculty and administration; (4) the tagging of trees on the campus with scientific and common names.

The committee is urging everyone to accept his responsibility in helping improve the appearance of our campus. Much attention could be directed to the areas around the dorms and especially around the ruins.

So if you have a green thumb, a yearning to work, or just a plain desire to keep our campus beautiful, lend your support to the Student Council and help make Campus Beautiful Week a success.

John Cauble Makes A Big Impression As Technical Director Of Playhouse

by Walt Thompson

One of the newest of the Maryville College faculty, as well as one of the busiest, is the Technical director of the Maryville College Playhouse, Mr. John Cauble. This tall, sandyhaired, friendly young man makes his biggest impression when observed in the midst of the complex technical details of a theatrical production, where his facile efficiency and comprehensive knowledge, plus plenty of hustling, are a major impetus behind the ever new successes which are witnessed in the playhouse throughout the year.

A native of Hickory, North Carolina, where his parents still live, Mr. Cauble is a graduate of the University of North Carolina, the drama department of which currently enjoys a position among the nation's top ten. While among the "tarheels", he delayed his final decision to major in drama until his senior year, having concentrated on physics up to that time. Mr. Cauble's parents had considered drama impractical as a vocation, though his schedule had been heavy with drama electives, including television courses and work on a full scale documentary series on The Tennessee Valley Authority for T.V. release.

Mr. Cauble's varied technical experience includes work on several historical panoramas, which are produced at various sites of historical interest during the height of the tourist season each summer. Among these have been "Lost Colony" at Manteo, N. Carolina, the story of the first English settlement in America at Roanoke, and "Voice of the Wind," a historical fiction production at Ruskin, Florida, which is concerned with the Seminole Indians under Chief Osceola. This summer will mark his third season as technical director of "Wilderness Road", a Berea, Kentucky, production. Mr. Cauble earned his first weges in professional drama working for Charles Laughton during rehearsal of "Don Juan in Hell", which was on tour through North Carolina.

Mrs. Cauble

Mrs. John Cauble is the daughter of Rev. J. Louis Thornburg, a Lutheran minister in Hickory, N. Carolina. She holds a BM from Salem College at Winston Salem, and gives piano lessons at Maryville College. Mr. and Mrs. Cauble plan to return to school at the same time to work toward their Master degrees.

Concerning Drama as a profession, Mr. Cauble has this to say: while recounting the expanding mediums, such as Radio, Movies, Television, educational and community theatres in which theatre personnel are used, it is necessary not to overlook the fact that there is still no room for mediocrity, and that no one should consider a dramatic vocation if he could be happy doing anything else. He says the greatest reward the field offers is the satisfaction of seeing your work warmly accepted

MC To Be Hosts To Prospective Students

Maryville College will be host to a number of prospective students on March 15 and 16. These students are from: Atlanta, Georgia, Knoxville, Chattanooga, and Allerat, Tennessee. During their stay, the students needs and entertainment will be provided by the Y.M. and Y.W.

F. L. Shuman To Lecture On The Soviet Union

The third number of the 1956-57 lecture series will be presented in the Maryville College Theater on Monday, March 25, at 8 p.m. The lecturer on this occassion will be Professor Frederick L. Schuman, Professor of Government at Williams College in Williamstown, Massachusetts.

Professor Schuman is the author of many books in the political science field, notable among which are Soviet Politics at Home and Abroad and International Politics. He has travelled widely, including three extensive tours of the Soviet Union since 1928. In addition to his teaching, writing, and travelling, he has lectured before many colleges, universities, and important organizations throughout the country.

Professor Schuman will bring to Maryville students, faculty, and community residents, his knowledge of the nature of the Soviet Union and its place in the world, a knowledge gained partly through actual visit to the country during the last 30 years of its development. The general topic of his lecture here is "The Future of Russia and the Free World."

The Maryville College Lecture Series is presented as a part of the institution's attempt to bring outstanding scholars in all fields to Maryville. Admission is free to both college personnel and community residents, part of the activities fee being set aside for the maintenance of the series. Previous numbers have presented lectures on factors affecting human life span and on the nature of journalism.

Study To Be Made Of Special Studies

The standing Faculty Committee on Special Studies composed of representatives of each of the six Divisions of the Curriculum plus the Librarian, the Dean of Students, and the Editor of Special Studies, at a December meeting authorized the setting up of a smaller committee to make a study of the program of Special Studies as it has been and is being conducted with a view to suggesting any needed improvements and helpful changes in the program.

This smaller committee comprises five persons: Mrs. Sarah Brown McNiell, Miss Matilda Cartledge, and Professors A. S. Bushing, L. L. Williams, and E. R. Hunter.

The committee has had a number of meetings and has developed some procedures which it hopes will be of help in an evaluation of the Special Studies enterprise. In the very near future the committee plans to circulate questionnaires to at least two groups. (1) To faculty members who during the ten years of the program have supervised Special Studies students. (2) Present seniors who completed Special Studies projects last December. Later a similar survey of opinion will be made among alumni who participated in the program while they were seniors.

It is hoped that juniors now engaged in the program in their first semester will not feel slighted if no questionnairs comes to them. If they have really red-hot ideas to contribute they may relay them through their faculty supervisors or directly to any member of the committee.

The present group who began work in January is the tenth annual group of this process. The achievement of ten years of experience was a main factor in the setting up of this study which the committee is projecting.

Special Studies, as conducted at Maryville College, is not a unique idea with us. A large number of other colleges have a plan closely or less closely similar. But our program is set up to give a distinctive quality to our processes of education. If it is weak, it should be studied and strengthened; if it is, in the main, good, it should be made better.

Miss Massey To Be Honored At Tea

Sunday, March 17, is the day that a special tea will be held in honor of Miss Frances Massey, Dean of Women. The tea will be given by the WSGA and will be a celebration to mark Miss Massey's tenth year of service at Maryville College. The hours of the tea are from three to four thirty and it will be held in the Y-rooms. All women of the student body, the faculty, and the staff are cordially invited to attend the tea.

Miss Massey Is Kept On Her Toes By Her Work With The Students

By Peggy Longfellow

Hundreds of students — bewildered freshmen, committee heads, sophisticated upperclassmen, students needing advice — have come to know and admire the smiling, dark-haired woman with the neat coronet of braids sitting at her desk behind the door marked Dean of Women.

This year marks Miss Frances Massey's tenth year of service at Maryville as the Dean of Women, and as she says, "It's almost impossible to believe that it's been ten years!"

Miss Massey came to Maryville and her position as Dean in January, 1947, leaving her place at Anniston High School in Alabama. She had taught for a number of years at Anniston and in a way was sorry to leave, as she was working with "one of the best groups of students we'd ever had."

However, she was also glad to come back to Maryville, her alma mater, for she believed in the kind of school that it was and the type of students that came there.

1947, the year of her arrival, came shortly after the close of the war. Maryville, at that time, had a large enrollment and quite a few more men students than women, which she said the girls all seemed to like. Dormitory space was very limited and some students were forced to live in town with friends and relatives.

Miss Massey remembers that in her first year here there was a lot of pressure to relax the social regulations just as there is today!

During Miss Massey's ten years here many changes have been made in women's and social affairs and many programs have been strengthened.

WSGA Improvements

Senior privileges were worked out through the WSGA, and the WSGA program was strengthened. Town night no longer came on a specific night of the week, but the students were free to choose their evening out. Town night privileges were made more lenient for upperclassmen, and permission slips from home for absence over week-ends were put into use.

Miss Massey's job requires a busy schedule of counseling, meetings with committee heads, special meetings on campus, and other such duties. But Miss Massey says that there is no aspect of her job that she likes any better than the rest although she says that she loves counseling with the students. As she stunningly put it, "When one's job covers the area of women's affairs as well as the broader scope of social affairs, there are bound to be variations in every day's schedule."

When asked what her thoughts were as she looked back over her ten years here she replied, "I found the job just as challenging as I expected it to be. I've found the work with the students, particularly with committees that Misdirected Energy ?

Those individuals who are always looking for ways to "improve the situation here at Maryville" might do well to center their attention on some projects which would yield tangible results instead of continually becoming excited about changing the rules and policies. The misdirected zealousness of those keeping up the battle (and such it is) with the enemy (presumed usually to be the "faculty") can only result in frustration. Theories declared to be absolutely infallible by their sponsors are proposed but invariably collapse because they are groundless or they are improperly presented.

Perhaps all the energy lost in debate over rules and policies could be channeled in other directions, namely those on which both students and administration could agree. A project of this type is before Student Council at the present time and will be known as "Campus Beautiful Week."

Now we are not going to launch into a tirade about walking on the grass; actually there is little grass left to walk on. And no sermon will be preached on strewing paper and coke bottles under bushes. Rather, the object of this editorial is to suggest that the college take "Campus Beautiful Week" seriously.

One of the worst eyesores on campus is the bank on the North side of Pearsons, which is among the first things visitors driving up would notice. A little filling in of topsoil and reseeding would remedy this. Similar patches of unattractive bare ground are found near the road by the Alumni Gym, in front of the Fine Arts Center (toward Pearsons), in front of Carnegie, and behind Thaw. The constant rains and tramping students seem to be making the situation worse. However, the solution lies not in forbidding students to walk on the grass, but rather in providing suitable paths and replanting with a hardier variety of grass.

Certainly the path between Carnegie and Pearsons is dangerous because of its loose bricks. And the remains of "Anderson Pool" are a mar on the landscape. (The Ruins can also be mentioned in this category in their unkempt appearance.)

These are a few areas in need of improvement, and spring is one of the best times for rejuvenation along this line. Perhaps this project is one of the best ways to achieve student-administration cooperation; certainly its benefits are mutual.

B.J.W.

NO!

Lately there has been a tendency for students to express more openly opinions which are normally confined to dormitory bull sessions. This is a good sign in that it stimulates further thought on matters of common interest and because open discussion is conducive to constructive action.

The positive good which can be achieved through such a critical analysis, however, is thwarted by those with an adverse attitude toward criticism. It is argued that students must accept wholeheartedly every policy of the college, since "they know what it is like before they come." This is perhaps a somewhat flimsy argument on which to base a case. It may be safely said that few new students to any college really know everything about the school they enter. The pieces of "propaganda" sent out to prospective students by any institute of higher learning rarely, if ever, mention in entirity, the multitude of rules and policies to which it expects its students to adhere. Then, too, it must be recognized that it is an unusual student, indeed, who does not change during his four years of college. A student entering college from high school expects and, in most cases, wants guidance in the form of regulation. As he matures, his expectations of college are liable to change. These points, however, are purely relative and are not absolutely vital to the question at hand. They are mentioned to show that the problem of "voluntary selection" cannot be so simply dismissed.

The basic problem, here, is the attitude toward criticism. Few of us would be so foolish as to sincerely believe this institute to represent the ultimate in higher education, an infallible college that rates a Utopia in actuality. Yet isn't that the impression that is made when we rebel against criticism? Is this approaching the question from a mature standpoint? Wouldn't it be better to take off our rose pair of rose-colored glasses and face reality—to realize that this college, or any other college, is not perfect. It is not reasonable to expect perfection, but the next best alternative, the conscientious striving toward perfection, is within the realm of our endeavors. Complacency and self-righteousness cannot lead toward improvement of any situation; it can only bring about a stagnation of what has already been achieved. Progress can be made only through an attitude of open-mindedness.

College might be compared to a political party. An individual supports a particular party because it best represents his views. He may not agree with all the policies of his party, but rather than withdraw his support because of a few differences, he remains with the organization and works to resolve the conflicts. Likewise, a student does not have to believe in every single one of a college's policies in order to support the institute as a whole. The argument of "you don't know what it was like because you haven't been here" because "You know what it was like before you came" simply does not stand up. It is not fair to stifle criticism by such narrowness.

There are a number of letters in Echo Forum. Let us read them with an open mind and try to see the weaknesses and strengths of each in order that a conscious attempt may be made to examine both sides of an issue. Let us exercise a more mature attitude toward criticism.

Who's Who Among Maryville Graduates

Scene: that part of graduation in which awards are bestowed: gold pins to those who are the eighth generation of their families attending Maryville, twenty year certificates, thirty year certificates, forty year certificates, merit badges, and honorary degrees (just pick the letters you want. Requirement: that the recipient be a Maryville graduate and a Presbyterian minister with at least one year's attendance at the General Assembly and a write-up in Presbyterian Life.)

"We are gathered together. . . . on this auspicious occasion. . . . to bestow the highest honor on four alumnae that can be bestowed. It is only after exhaustive study and sifting and elimination. . . . that we made our final choice. . . . and it was a difficult choice, ladies and gentlemen, for they are all so fine, our graduates, and so full of zeal. . . . that it is a shame, a shame I say, that they cannot all receive an award today. . . . From the little nucleus of light that is Maryville, they have each taken a ray, as it were, ahem, to lighten some corner of this dark world. To reiterate, it was a difficult choice. But I say to all the Maryville graduates all over the mission field—and in other fields, too, of course, that we would like to award each and everyone of you our admiration and respect for the work you are doing to change this frightening world. And now I won't keep you waiting any longer, folks, here are our selections for Who's Who Among Maryville Alumnae!

Miss Sarah Pimpsett: Sunday School teacher and superintendent for thirty years in the largest Presbyterian Church in the largest presbytery in North Dakota; tireless worker in the building drive for the new church there; author of that well-known column in Presbyterian Life entitled, "You, too, Can Be a Circle Chairman,"; donator of the chintz curtains in the Church kitchen. We feel that Miss Pimpsett typifies the Maryville graduate and we hold her up as an example to the graduating class. Congratulations and welcome back, Miss Pimpsett! Would you mind coming up to the stage to receive your Maryville College Commemorative Plate?

Second Celebrity

Our next celebrity will be Mr. Leroy McPheeters, for twenty-five years head of the animal husbandry and education departments of our sister and rival institution, Tecumset Teachers College at Split Gap, Tennessee. Mr. McPheeters has pioneered in the field of agricultural fair displays. His primary education majors are always praised by their employers for their superb lesson plans and his class in Animal Husbandry has for years been the winner of the cattle and poultry judging contest at the Saggerneck County Fair. However, Mr. McPheeters' achievements are not limited to the academic world. He has always been the leader of the Split Gap Scout Troop and his wife, also vitally interested in this work, serves as den mother. Oh, I can scarcely restrain myself when I talk about Mr. McPeeters, but I'll content myself with saying nothing more than that he was an education major here at Maryville. Now I must call him up on stage to receive his plate. Welcome back, and congratulations, sir!

As our time is running short, I will mention briefly our two remaining choices. Miss Leslie Lawton, famous, ahem, actress, of whom TIME magazine writes, "the greatest talent of our day, remembered for many intense and moving portrayals and winner of nearly every acting award that it is possible to win." This being the case, we here at Maryville feel that it is impossible to ignore her. She is at present starring on Broadway in a play called Medea. Unfortunately, Miss Lawton is not with us today.

The last award goes to Mr. Richard Brooks who, as some of you may know, is this year's winner of the Nobel Prize for Literature. I can't seem to recall the name of his novel. He is, to quote the Nobel citation, "the author of the Great American Novel and the discoverer, herald, and bard of the American people." Mr. Brooks is with us today, but I won't ask him to come forward as we are somewhat pressed for time.

I now have the great honor and deep privilege to introduce to you our commencement speaker, Reverand Calvin Smithers. . . . ."

FYI

At the movies this week the Capitol is showing "Written on the Wind," which will run through Tuesday. At the Park on Monday and Tuesday "Black Tuesday," with Edward G. Robinson, and "Wyoming Renegade" will be shown. "The Virginian," and "The Creature with the Atom Brain," will be playing Wednesday through Friday, and "Frontier Badman," and "The Go-Getter" will be shown on Saturday.

IGY

"Our earthly environment is formed by an undefined alliance of earth, oceans, polar areas, and the chemistry and physics of outer space — all centered in an equally mysterious relationship with the sun and moon. The interactions between these factors affect the daily lives of every person . . . "

This passage, quoted from physicist Joseph Kaplan's article "IGY — International Geophysical Year," appearing in the June, 1956, issue of "The Rotarian," illustrates the spirit in which the scientist of more than forty-six nations will enter into a joint attempt to unravel some of the mysteries of this "undefined alliance."

In the eighteen month period from July 1, 1957, to December, 1958, scientists will be making a concentrated effort to increase man's understanding of the world in which he lives by consideration of such problems as "solar activity, longitude and latitude determinations, glaciology, oceanography, meteorology, geomagnetism, aurora and airglow, seismology, ionospheric physics, cosmic rays, and upper-atmosphere rocket studies." (Mr. Kaplan's article.)

To touch more specifically on four of these major problems: In the field of meteorology scientists hope to solve the problem of long range weather prediction. This involves more knowledge of global weather conditions than we now possess. To gain this knowledge, a world-wide chain of weather stations will be set up to make simultaneous observations and to give a clearer picture of weather conditions over the whole world. Scientists also hope to establish whether the earth's climate is getting warmer or colder and if artificial cloud "seeding" on a wide scale is workable.

In the field of seismology they hope to acquire the ability to predict earthquakes by a careful study of the strains and stresses in the earth in relation to the gravitational pull of the sun and moon.

Another important feature of the IGY comes under the heading of latitude and longitude determination problem. It has been known, among scientists, that no reliable facts exist as to the exact size and shape of the earth. (This in spite of the "facts" printed in textbooks — which are by no means universally agreed upon!) It is also known that nobody knows exactly how far apart the continents are, and that there are islands whose locations on the maps vary by as much as a mile. This was clearly realized in the Italian campaigns of World War II, when radar-guided missles failed to reach their assigned target of Corsica. Blaming their radar, questioning officials and technicians soon found that it was literally "right on the beam," but Corsica wasn't where the map showed it to be.

Our present maps would probably be useful for most non-scientific purposes, but in this day of radar, shoran, loran, guided missles, etc., a knowledge of the exact latitudinal and longitudinal locations of targets is essential. For this our maps are hopelessly inadequate.

Earth Satellite

Perhaps the most publicized phase of the IGY is the proposed launching of the earth satellite (Project Vanguard). This satellite will be sent into the upper fringes of the atmosphere to collect and transmit back to ground level, data on temperatures, cosmic rays, ultraviolet rays, and the general conditions at the edge of outer space. More important than this is the fact that the satellite marks mankind's first step into space — a step which will be soon followed by bigger steps.

I had attempted to state briefly a very few of the highlights of the IGY. For further information and details, I refer the reader to the many excellent articles available in current periodicals in the library — under the headings "Geophysics" and "International Geophysical Year" in the Index to Periodicals.

And Interplanetary Flight

Speaking of space, I seem to be running out of it. However, I don't feel justified in writing a column of this sort without at least a passing reference to Arthur C. Clarke's two works on space travel — Interplanetary Flight (which is in the library), and The Exploration of Space (which is available in the Cardinal paperbound edition). Mr. Clarke is recognized as a writer of mature science fiction of the first rank, (memo to the skeptics —there is such a thing) as well as a scientist of first rate ability. Twice chairman of the British Interplanetary Society, he is also a fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society. He holds a First Class Honors B.S. in physics and pure and applied math from Kings College, London.

In these two works, which stand as landmarks in the field, he discusses clearly and concisely the principles of space flight, as well as the major problems it now faces. I think these two works are essential reading for any one who is at all interested in the problems of space flight.

P.S.: I refer the skeptics to the Special Science Report on page sixty-six of the March 4th issue of Newsweek, and I also direct a closing comment, from the preface to The Exploration of Space, to them. " . . . in the long run we can be sure that our wildest flights of fancy will fall far short of the facts — as has always happened in the past history of scientific prediction."

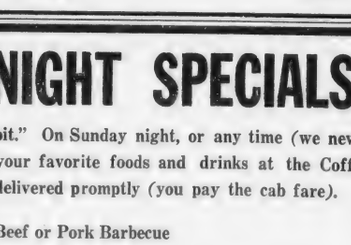
Fred Hope Pledges Not All Paid Yet

At this year's Fred Hope fund drive comes to a close, an account of what has been pledged and paid is in order.

Of the 385 pledges made, 188 have been paid in whole, 101 are totally unpaid, and 98 have been paid in part.

The amount pledged was $2,285.35, but the amount received was $1488.45. This leaves an unpaid balance of $796.90. The unpaid balance can be divided into the $468.00 pledged by 101 people but never paid, and the $328.90 is the balance from the 98 pledges that have been paid in part.

A word of appreciation is offered to those who have met their pledges.



Everyone is urged to meet their pledges. Payments may be made at anytime to Miss Miles at the student help office.

College Basketball

The college hoop squads set their sights on on the tourneys as they open this week. Conference champs have been named and "at large" members have been picked in the N.C.A.A. Tournament.

The National Invitation Tournament has its final set up already for its invasion on Madison Square Garden.

Results in the elimination round of these events were not available at printing time.

The college All-American Team was selected last week by the Associated Press writers and it came out this way:

Wilt Chamberlain (Kansas)
Rod Hundley (West Virgina)
Chet Forte (Columbia)
Gary Thompson (Iowa State)
Lew Rosenbluth (North Carolina)

The scoring title went to Grady Wallace who averaged about 31 points a game. He was followed by Gibbons, Bradley, Chamberlain and Forte in that order.

The game of the year is expected to be played in the N.C.A.A. Tourney as there is a very good chance that the number one team in the country will meet the number two team. These two squads of course being North Carolina and Kansas. That should be quite a ball game.

Base Ball

The Grapefruit league officially opened during this last week. Startling results were viewed in some camps but of course it's too early to say anything concrete.

Bobby Shantz pitched 3 scoreless innings for his new teammates the Yankees.

The Phillies lost twice to the Pirates despite the home run efforts of ex-Cardinal Rip Repulski. The Dodgers split 2 games with the Milwaukee Braves.

All the teams have their entire squads signed to contracts as Mickey McDermott ended his holdout with the Athletics.

Rumors are still hot about the possibilities of the Dodgers moving to Los Angeles for the '58 campaign. Unless they get the new field they were promised, the Brooks say there is a chance of the shift coming about in the near future.

Pro Basket Ball

The Boston Celtics cinched first place in the Eastern division and Philadelphia and Syracuse have the other two coveted playoff berths for that division.

In the west, St. Louis and Ft. Wayne cinched play-off positions but there is still a scramble for the last berth between Minneapolis and Rochester. At the present time the lakers have the upperhand in the situation.

Bob Petit has just about cinched the individual scoring despite the late surge being put on by Paul Arizin.

Sports In General

A U. S. court judge recently declared the International Boxing Commission was controlling a monopoly on championship bouts and was therefore subject to the Anti-Trust laws.

Detroit despite a loss at the hands of Boston remains on top in the N. L. Hockey League. Montreal and Boston are very close behind. Toronto and New York continue to fight for fourth place.

Lombe Really Knows Baseball

Want to learn more about baseball? Then go out for the sport here at Maryville, for Maryville's Athletic Director and Coach, Lombe Honaker, is recognized as one of the best teachers of the game in the South. His reputation as a teacher of baseball has been built on many years of success. Many times with little or no material to work with, Lombe has "squeezed", "stolen", or "hit and run", his teams into winning seasons.

His favorite stragem is the "suicide squeeze." It is nothing new or original but Honaker has used it with phenomenal success for many years. The play goes something like this. With a man on third and either no outs or one out, the base runner breaks from third as the pitcher begins his delivery. The batter then must bunt the ball into safe territory and the runner scores. A milder form of this play where the runner does not break for the plate until after the ball is bunted is used by most coaches today, but Lombe still stands by the "suicide" and wins ball games with it.

Hitters who can execute the "hit and run" with any amount of proficiency are few and far between, especially in college baseball. Yet, by some means, Maryville usually produces at least one boy sometimes more, who has that knack of being able to hit behind the runner. (In the "hit and run" the runner leaves the base with the pitch and batter tries to hit the ball safely behind the runner.) This play is seldom used in college ball, but Maryville teams have used it with some success.

Although a boy may possess only average natural ability, Coach Honaker makes a better than average ball player out of him by thoroughly drilling him in the finer points of the game. And from these boys he turns out winning baseball teams year after year. He has probably had more success with his baseball teams than with teams in any other sport.

So come on out this Spring and watch one of the country's finest teachers of baseball fundamentals at work as he guides the Scottie baseball team to what should be another winning season.

The volley ball league moved into its second week of action. There are six teams in each league.

The Bartleteers, Pre-Mins and Quakers are in strong positions at this time in the Orange League.

The Kappa Phi Squires, Faculty and the Y.M.C.A. hold top spots in the Garnet League.

Softball will be the next sport to be played and will come on the scene shortly if the weather stays as nice as it has been.

Echo Forum-

Does Maryville College Prepare Its Students To Meet The Situations That They Will Encounter After Graduation?

In at least one respect my approach to this problem is different. While many people protest about the social program being inadequate, I have never heard anyone complain that there is not enough opportunity for religious growth at Maryville. It is interesting to me that all the complaints about the religious atmosphere are likely to be of the opinion that there is too much religion here.

In the books that I have read on the topic of abnormal psychology I have found one very interesting fact. Namely this: that while our mental hospitals are growing more crowded every day, and men and women are constantly being institutionalized for a variety of reasons, I have yet to see religion listed as one of the causes!

Many people seem to think that Maryville is an ivory tower isolated from the BIG WIDE WORLD (whatever that may be). They look upon Maryville graduates as innocent sheep going to the slaughter. However, I think that men like Dr. Brubaker and Dr. McGill are none the worse for their training here. I won't go on to enumerate the thousands of other students who have left these portals and gone on to successful participation in higher education and numerous professions.

Maryville is very life-like in this respect: ALL LIFE REQUIRES ADJUSTMENT! We either adjust or die; eat or starve; remove our finger from a hot stove or get burned. There are two ways to adjust: (1) We can either adjust our environment to suit ourselves or, (2) adjust ourselves to suit our environment. Adjustment requires an evaluation of alternative courses of action. We should learn how to decide when to assert ourselves and when to deny ourselves in favor of greater good to others. Here are some examples of what I mean by this:

1. A Medical Doctor with a practice could go about healing 24 hours a day. However, it is evident that he would soon drop from exhaustion. His ministry of healing would be much more effective if he would take time out to rest.

2. How much service should a pre-ministerial student try to render while in college? Many times a student may sacrifice his only opportunity to get a formal education by spending a misproportionate amount of time in community service.

3. Which should I put first — my social life or my education?

In all these examples it is easy to see that neither extreme will do. It is important to achieve a workable balance. College helps us to do just that.

THE ABILITY TO EVALUATE IS CHARASTERISTIC PECULIAR TO MAN. In the jungle a lion doesn't consider a man any more valuable than a gazelle. We never hear of a machine trying to decide whether to operate or not; that's all up to man. And who ever heard of an animal turning the other cheek?

If all life requires adjustment, then religious life is no exception. We must either assume that there is NO God and live in the light of that assumption, or condition our lives to the assumption that there IS a God who cares for us. But, it is important to notice that our whole lives are determined by the alternative we choose. The life of a religious man takes on a different quality from that of an atheist. A religious man may be defined as a man who orients his life to the fact of God's existence. This happens in the same way that a man orients what he does today in the light of the fact that he assumes that he will live tomorrow, or better yet, to the assumption that the sun will come up tomorrow.

An atheist considers himself self-sufficient; a religious man knows his own limitations and recognizes his dependence on God. Literature is full of examples of alcoholics who go on trying to cure THEMSELVES and end up in a hospital, a mental institution, the morgue or Alcoholics Anonymous. The ones who are fortunate enough to be cared for by A.A. are only able to be cured when they recognize their utter state of despair, when they stop trying to lift themselves out of the quick sand by their own bootstraps, and seek aid from their Creator, Helper and Sustainer.

THE ABILITY TO ADJUST IS AN INDICATION OF MATURITY! Men who go into the Army find basic training VERY different from the home-life to which they have been accustomed. However, the way they live in the service is designed to make them soldiers. The most efficient way to accomplish the desired end is the way the Army does it, (contrary to what some people think). Do we consider those who drop out along the way as mature as those who make the most of the situation in which they find themselves?

At Maryville the curriculum is designed to produce LIBERALLY EDUCATED PEOPLE: not social-climbers or ministers or politicians AS SUCH. If we want to be an engineer, go to M.I.T.; a Doctor, go to medical school; a social-climber, go to a school known for its social program; a minister, go to seminary. But, if you want a LIBERAL ARTS FOUNDATION FOR LATER GRADUATE STUDY OR JUST TO MAKE LIFE MORE MEANINGFUL — STAY AT MARYVILLE. Surely no one can believe that the four years he spends at Maryville will make him LESS well prepared to cope with the problems of living!

Bob Finertie

Editor:

It was brought to the attention of the seniors that there is no possibility of any representative choice on their part for the commencement speaker.

I have attended the last three exercises because of certain duties. If I elect to attend any gathering and find myself bored and imposed upon, I charge it to experience and bear it; however, when I am required to be bored, I rebel. Now as my own graduation looms imminent I feel, and I know for a fact that I am not alone, that I would like to hear a vital, worthwhile address — a highpoint to remember, not frustrated indignation.

Although it took me two years to do so, I have become acclimated to Maryville College and its policy and have very little, if any, adverse criticism towards it. However, I feel compelled to speak a word now concerning this matter of choosing a commencement speaker. The tradition of conferring an honorary degree is held as a reason against our having representation in the matter, in that a degree involves the board of directors, the faculty, and the president of the college and not the students. If this be the case, perhaps the exercises should be held for this former group, and the latter group, the seniors be dismissed and sent their diplomas by mail, since they seem to be incidental.

If it is a question of the quality of the speakers which the students would recommend, I personally think that with a little thoughtful consideration the seniors could be of invaluable assistance. Since there is opportunity for individual recommendations, I think I shall submit a few suggestions and heartily recommend that other seniors do likewise.

This letter is far from being one man's opinion; I believe that the seniors, bar none, would appreciate an opportunity such as this to take an active, intelligent and mature part in this question.

Very truly yours,
Perry T. Fuller

Editor: Highland Echo,

As I have read the recent issues of the Echo, I have been distressed, wryly amused, indignant and amazed at the immaturity lack of insight and destructive criticism revealed in many articles dealing with religion at Maryville College.

I chose to come to and complete two majors at Maryville especially because of its "positive Christian emphasis". Low expenses could be gotten at a state university or through scholarships. The academic courses leading to the B.A. and B.S. degrees are offered in hundreds of colleges. But I felt and still feel that Maryville is unique in its courage to uphold high Christian principles so that Christian concern and fellowship permeates the entire College program.

It seems most unfortunate that some students eagerly accept the benefits of M.C.'s basic Christian principles, such as the friendly atmosphere or the personal interest which the faculty takes in each student, yet they reject the opportunities provided to grow spiritually.

Undoubtedly there are ways in which the religious program and other aspects of Maryville College might be improved. This is recognized by the Faculty, Administration and many students who have worked for years to provide different types of experiences which will stimulate interest in and deepen understanding of Christianity. The Pastoral Counseling Program begun this year is one example.

But, no program, however well planned or enthusiastically carried on, will "make" anyone religious or "make" him learn anything. Every individual chooses those parts of his environment which he incorporates into his own personality. Spiritual truths are always present like a beautiful sunset, yet, man has the freedom to blind himself from the light of truth and beauty if he so chooses.

If those students who have been so volubly denouncing religion at M.C. would spend that effort in the study of Philosophy, Psychology and Religion, make constructive, practical suggestions and become actively engaged in projects they might grow spiritually and make helpful contributions to the rest of the campus.

The Editor:

A traveler nearing a strange city stopped an inhabitant and inquired about the nature of the town. The grumpy man snapped, "It's a dreadful city full of unfriendly grouchy people. I'm moving out! Don't bother me with more questions." The bitter man shoved past and went on. The visitor approached another inhabitant and repeated his question. Cheerfully the man replied, "It's a wonderful city. In the six years I have lived here everyone has been friendly and unselfish. Not one unkind word have I heard. Sir, would you accept my hospitality for the duration of your visit in our town?"

Maryville College can only mean to you what YOU want it to mean. Maryville College is not forcing religion on anyone. Force implies resistance which implies YOU. You are forced to eat in order to live but one never hears complaints about having to eat!

May I also point out that the 3 hours and 40 minutes spent each week in chapel and church hardly compares with the 10 hours and 30 minutes spent eating or the 5 hours spent changing classes.

Do you expect to bring peace in the world with the science that builds the hydrogen bomb or the atomic warhead? Do you think your mind will acquire immortality by being trained in the "truths" of chemistry when today it's "laws" are being challenged? A great scientist, Dr. LeComte du Nouy (LL.B., Ph.B., Sc.B., Ph.D., Sc.D.) states in Human Destiny, "The aim of science is to foresee, and not, as has often been said, to understand." Dr. du Nouy points out that the pattern of progress is stamped on a cloth in which religion and science are interwoven.

May I mention that medical schools and institutions of higher education are asking for students having a liberal arts background rather than those having one small focal point of interest. There is a narrowmindedness in science as well as narrowmindedness in religion. The world's problems are not solved by great knowledge in one subject for the world is not limited to one field, but rather they are solved through a fuller and deeper understanding of as many of the facets of man's being as is possible. This, I believe, is the type of education Maryville College is giving us.

Peggy McClure

Editor, Highland Echo:

In a recent issue of the Highland Echo a letter in the Echo Forum dealt with the fact that people who go to the Ruins are discriminated against by the rest of the student body. I feel that this very same thing might be applied to the "town students." Very little is done to try to incorporate them into the activities of the school. For example, the Society meetings are held at 6:30 on Saturday night. No time could be more inconvenient. The same thing is true of other club meetings.

Another thing which is inconvenient to town students is the fact that during semester examinations, we are required to attend chapel even if we do not have an examination that day. Spring semester last year, the seniors began their examinations a day early. No underclassmen had exams, but still we had to come to chapel. It lasted approximately fifteen minutes! I feel that this situation should be looked into immediately and that something should be done about it.

Maybe the "isolated" feeling is due partly to the fact that town students do not invite dormitory students out to their homes enough, and vice versa. Anyway, there is an absence of the feeling of unity which is necessary if we are to feel that we and the dormitory students together make up Maryville College.

Helen Rowan

Dear Editor:

During the past few years, I have had the opportunity to observe various activities of organizations on the campus, especially the Christian student organizations. I have been deeply impressed by some of their programs presented at meetings while I have also noticed some weaknesses of the existing system, some of which are now being talked about among some students on the campus.

There seem to be some advantages in the present set-up of the Christian student organization in that leadership can be shared by a larger number of students; and a group of students of the same interest can find the opportunity of mutual sharing, which have sometimes the danger of developing into a sect, and so forth. However, I have noticed that the leadership is shared by the few who hold several responsible positions in different organizations. Also, in keeping up with supplies for program, they run into difficulties of overlapping and duplication. My experiences with one of these organizations in the past proved that the length of time for meeting was too short to hardly develop into a full discussion of the issue.

Many of us find it difficult to abandon tradition and we often hesitate to try out a new way in lieu of the old. Some people oppose such an attempt in the fear of destroying the traditional uniqueness. In one of his sermons during the February meeting, Dr. Brubaker pointed out lack of concern on social problems among college students today. One surprising fact that many foreign students encounter in American college life is that they have very little opportunity to talk on social, political, and international issues on intellectual level with their fellow American students.

Being in a Christian college where the Christianity is taken too much for granted, it can be easily seen that many of us fail to see that our faith is inherently and irrevocably relevant to all the problems of our personal and social life. The failure to see this leads us to a smug complacency. If there were only one Christian student organization on the campus, there would be available more effective, vigorous, and truly college-level programs with the help of outside speakers or faculty members. A deeper insight of the Christian mission and approach to social and world affairs could be discussed. Such an organization could really serve the purpose of stimulating a deeper concern and understanding of Christian life and developing a sincere intellectual quest for vital problems we face in this generation.

Pathetic Fallacy

In reply to "The Hollow Men," I believe that anything becomes hollow when motivation is misplaced and off-centered. Ritual [illegible] IS a continual threat to individuals and the church, for passive participation in anything becomes worthless and of no value, particularly when perverted from its original intention; yet it is easy to accomplish such a status, for it does not take much brains, energy, coordination, personality or creativity. This demands nothing from the individual. Rules can NEVER make a person Christian, Atheist or Skeptic. Rules are a channeling process to protect, to assist, and to direct individuals into a healthy, appreciative and understanding of life. This supposed "voice of Maryville" is making broad generalizations when it proposes that the morning chapel services have come to serve little or no purpose. Would these so-called Ichabods, meaning glory departed, suggest we become Narcissuses or bow before the microscope for fifteen minutes everyday or every other day? Chapel, as it is true of everything in life, is entered into on an individual basis which makes you liable for your own response. One's ATTITUDE is the determining factor in the key to personal response. Maybe we all should re-avaluate our motives, and then pull the plugs from our ears and listen more attentively.

But I ask what kind of faith did these "Atlases" have before they came to M.C.? If their reality of God is so easily disposed of, I believe it is just as well they are not entering into church vocations. Actually, what are they prepared for — certainly not life. Are they resurrecting another Brook Farm Movement? But I am afraid that even within the bounds of this utopian settlement that they will have to condescend to the use of "human" rules. Cutting the number of chapel, Sunday School, and church requirements certainly is not altering the crux of the situation. I would ask of them, when and if they ever would go to church. It seems to me that the natural expression of one's religious experience is to worship and share with others regardless of the "maximum number" of cuts. Again I stress upon ATTITUDE which is each individual's responsibility. Because some people, whether esteemed or of the common lot, have no integrity, it does not say rules or the system is of no value. Unprincipled characters will be found in any and every situation. They are Christian? No one but themselves do they cheat. They are a misrepresentation of Christ.

Fashions

by Joanne Causey

Seems like every time you pick up a fashion magazine, you read something about what the kids at the Ivy League schools are wearing. The captions go something like this: "Harvard's Richard Van Wharton III likes this new mauve Edwardian-style smoking jacket," or "Here a group of Eli's sons gather after the hunt in casual cashmeres." And the female Ivy Leaguers just reek with it: "Miss Tweed Lawrence of Southampton, New York and Miami, lounges before her favorite Renoir in her dormitory room at Vassar in these velvet toreador slacks and velvet brunch coat of contrasting color," or, "Note the sleek, sloping shoulders of this short shaggy sealskin suit in the new saffron hue which Miss Sybil Simone of Barnard has chosen for a day in the country."

Lily Leaguers

Doesn't it make you tired? Don't you want to be pictured in your lounging outfit, too? Why don't they write about our own Lily League sometimes? And what do you do when it's four years that you're spending in the country instead of a day? These and many other questions of heart-rending poignancy have been pouring into our office until we can ignore them no longer. So . . .

Henceforth, we are going to set the pace with the new "Intellectual Look", sometimes referred to as the "gaunt" look, although I don't know why. Why not let the whole world know the sweet simplicity of the Lily Leaguers? For a mere pittance, you can have the Lily League "intellectual" look, while that "little basic" wardrobe of our climbing brethren and sistern runs at least $500.

Bookstore Fashions

The intellectual look consists of, first of all, a dark blue sweat shirt with the letters M-A-R-Y-V-I-L-L-E emblazoned across its front. This is an absolute must for you first acquisition because "Maryville" is a positive by-word among intellectuals. Boys are permitted a slight deviation in the form of a white nylon windbreaker — with the same word inscribed upon it, of course. Now, since the Intellectual look is a basic expression of contempt for worldliness, of freedom from the annoyances of the inanity of dress, from here on out, the more casual and "day in the countryish" your apparel can be, the more stylish you are. Men's shirts with the tails out are delightfully casual for both sexes. Blue jeans are basic also and some may feel the need of a white (at the outset) sweat shirt to augment the freedom of the blue one. No "Maryville" is necessary on this one because we don't believe in being flagrantly cultural. Once this shirt gets greasy and dirty, you can be sure you have that carefree look—cleanliness being, after all, a fetish which only the stupid rich should indulge in. Besides, washing prevents you from living in a State of Nature which, needless to say, is another absolute requisite for the Lily Leaguer. For foot wear, we recommend navy blue sneakers, and cotton knee socks. On Sundays, we are forced to admit the necessity of skirts for the girls. But don't feel too crestfallen — you may continue to wear your men's shirts — tucked in, alas. And your knee socks must (but only for four hours) be substituted for cotton stockings.

Well, from here on out, you can sort of feel your way. You are emancipated. You are forerunners. I can see it now . . . "Miss Leslie Lawton of Maryville and Slippery Rock models a delightfully casual denim skirt and loose fitting grey cotton jersey for that after-Sunday-School get-together."

Poets Corner

FIFTH SONNET

How many times the human heart must break,
And shatt'ring, crash on the lake-stones of despair.
It lies, with little hope of repair,
Wounded and crushed, by life's turbulent lake,
Cast ashore on emotion's stormy wake.
Its compass failed when blue Polaris fair
Shrank from its sight—dark and misty the air—
The course was lost, it crashed beside the lake.

But yet its compass star will rise again,
Through stormy clouds will break its pale blue light
To gently touch the wounds that throb in pain,
And heal; then point the course back through the night.
The heart will rise with scars as a token—
But all the stronger for having been broken.

An Historians Approach to Religion
By A. J. Toynbee

Toynbee! Christianity has need of thee!
She is a tangle of ancient thoughts entrapt
By snobbish schemes of intellect, unfree
From fatal pride since Paul the great inept
Did chain Greek thought to Hebrew hope,
Attemping to enforce a myth and see
The world and all within its single scope:
An ecumenical community.
Augustine, Luther, Calvin, all sustain
The church, by which idolatry will come.
Infallible creeds and faultless books remain
To win free minds and issue false aplomb.
Toynbee! Show the way with native sense.
Thou shalt direct my mind from this day hence.

A Better Track!

By Pete Nix

In case you haven't noticed, track practice has begun, as has tennis and baseball. And if you will take time to inspect the situation you will find that the cinder men are running on a pretty poor track. So poor that one school, East Tennessee State, won't even run on it.

Before practice began the members of the track squad were assured by the powers that be that if they conducted themselves as a varsity squad and really showed some interest, the track would be put in A-1 shape for them. The coaches and members of the track squad are upholding their end of the bargain.

What little work that has been done on the track was done by the members of the track squad themselves. And after working out for an hour or two a boy can't be expected to put in another hour working to get the track in shape.

The Track team made a fine showing last year and is giving all indications of doing the same this season. Even though it is a new and minor sports here at Maryville it deserves more respect than it has been given. A few days of concentrated work and a little expense would be all that is required to get the track in good shape for running. The first meet is April 9th, let's hope by then something has been done.

Barbara Larson, sophomore English major from Tarpon Springs, Florida, recently received notice of her appointment for Presbyterian Junior Year Abroad Study for the 1957-58 school year.

Applying on the advice of a friend connected with the Board of Foreign Missions, Barbara learned of her acceptance by telegram, February 18.

Miss Larson will leave by boat for Lebanon around September 1 and will arrive at her destination the first week in October. On her way home, she plans to go around the world, stopping along the way for the Ecumentical Work Camp.

On April 1 and 2 there will be three rounds of debate on the topic: resolved: the United States should channel all foreign economic aid through the United Nations. These rounds will be judged by members of Pi Kappa Delta.

On the basis of the number of rounds won and the number of points accumulated, a winning affirmative and negative team will be chosen to participate in the finals. The finals will be held Wednesday evening at 7:30 in the Ethics Lecture Room. Faculty and towns people will judge the final round.

Freshman upholding the affirmative position are: Jan Peterson and Lara Larson, Lu Brininger and Peggy Ried, Bobbie Groters and Sue Guinn. Maintaining the negative are the teams of Margaret Sample and Bonnie Lehr, Anemone Smith and Anna Keit, Dave McLean and George Stewart.

Everyone is invited to attend all the rounds of debate, but a special invitation is issued for all to attend the final round.

Tomorrow Is Open House

It's spring cleaning time again, but at Maryville these days it's for a special purpose, for tomorrow is the first day of 1957 Open House. The girls of Baldwin, Memorial, and Pearsons are playing hostess tomorrow, while Carnegie will do the honors next Sunday afternoon.

In order that open house be as successful as possible, the following suggestions are offered:

(1) Open your own room to us all — it needs cleaning anyhow.

(2) Visit all the rooms you can.

(3) Don't use open house as an excuse for a Sunday afternoon date — keep moving.

(4) Go easy on the refreshments.

Dr. Shuman Spoke On Power Politics

by Virginia Hine

On Monday night, March 25, in the third of this year's lecture series, Dr. Frederick L. Schuman spoke on the future of Russia and the free world.

Mr. Schuman took as text, "for his sermon," (in his words, the conversation between Alice and the Cheshire cat from Alice In Wonderland, laying special emphasis on the cat's comment that we're all mad here. He applied this comment to the present day world situation, and went on to point out the need for power politics in the world situation. The tragedies of the past six months (Israel, Egypt) might have been avoided if the United States had been aware of this need for power politics.

The government and policies of Russia must be understood, Mr. Schuman stated, if one is to understand the world situation. He discussed his three visits to Russia in the past twenty years, describing in detail his most recent visit last year. In the course of twenty years, Mr. Schuman notices three main changes. These were cleanliness, punctuality, and efficiency. The Russia of twenty years ago had none of these characteristics. Russia of 1957 is a growing concern.

Moving on to the subject of Soviet policy, Mr. Schuman stated that he could reveal no secrets of top level Soviet foreign policy, because he didn't know any; but that he hoped to clarify for his audience some of the policies of the Soviet Union.

In Russia today, Stalin is still being downgraded, while Lenin is being upgraded. However, there are still many portraits and statues of Stalin displayed in public places.

The new collectivc Russian leadership, Mr. Schuman stated, is trying to liberalize and democratize Russia, and to establish new friendly relations with the western world. But, he hastened to add, the United Staes isn't helping the relationship by her actions, and is even hindering by such actions as refusing Marshall Tito to come to the United States and the severing of cultural relationships with Russia — which the State Department did last year.

Hungary and Egypt

How can Hungary and Egypt be linked, Schuman asked. He went on to state that, in his opinion, Russia, in her dealings with Hungary, merely followed the example of England, France and the United States in their actions in Egypt. Russia was ready to negotiate with the Hungarian government, but the revolt degenerated into anarchy, and the Hungarian government and the Western powers began agitation for Hungary to become anti-communist. Even then Russia might have accepted this but for the fact the Egyptian crisis convinced her that an anti-communist Hungary would be a serious threat to her safety. Therefore Russia drowned the revolt in blood.

Mr. Schuman wondered why human beings act the way they do in government affairs. Perhaps the answer is that circumstances beyond their control are threatening their community. Thus ambition arises out of fear.

We can understand the fears of Egypt. We can understand the fears of Israel which for nine years the Arabs have been threatening to push into the sea. We can understand the fears of England and France when Nasser swore to drive all western powers out of Middle East. Can we understand the fears of Russia? This is

Hungarian Students Tell Their Stories

BOY

I was asked to write a short composition about what happened to me and about my first impressions of the United States. It is very difficult to really answer such a question because my experiences and feelings are so many and widespread that I could not describe them within the frame of a short story.

People are different. All have different ideas, and perhaps this difference of opinion promotes world development, and pushes our life forward. But there are special circumstanoes in which people experience outstanding events and have the same topic on their mind.

Not so long ago I was in such a situation on the border between Austria and Hungary. I started alone from Budapest and after four days of marching, I arrived at the frontier. It was at night; I could only guess the direction of the border. My left foot, on which I wear a machine, was bloody by the end of the long march. I thought, I felt I could not go on. Finally, I perceived the border sign meaning life to me. After a few more steps, I was standing on Austrian soil. The Austrian border patrols carried me in their hands to the nearest community. Here I met more exhausted, tired, and torn people . . . both men and women. They were lying on straw prepared for them in a hurry. We waited for the morning to see what was going to happen to us.

And perhaps the same thoughts were on everybody's mind and perhaps everybody would give a similar answer to an occasional un-asked question. If someone had asked me what I felt and I knew in advance that a month later I'd learn the English language in one of the most beautiful colleges as a result of a scholarship, in relatively the greatest luxury, I would surely have cried from happiness. And now as I think back, I am convinced that we would have been all very happy to see in advance what has happened to us since, there at the Austrian border in a situation without perspectives, in uncertainty and fearing the future.

And why do I describe all this? Just to remind many, many Hungarian youngsters and perhaps adults too, of something that happened to us not so long ago Sometimes it is uesful to remember past events and learn what we owe to ourselves in the first place and to many others like us.

Nobody can build his or her future life on what he or she did or did not do in Hungagry. We have shown and still can show how much we are worth and to show who we are. Let us not save our efforts to do what we have to do, because we shall enjoy the fruits of our efforts.

GIRL

Before begining to talk about the Hungarian events, I should like to make clear some special ideas in close connection with peoples of democratic countries . . . because my experiences show that a person ignorant of foreign countries can not even get near enough to understand the home events without these facts. These ideas are the following: Dislocation, Deportation, Starvation, Wages. First is Dislocation:

During a conversation with an American girl, I mentioned that my parents had a considerable amount of wealth, land, houses . . . without giving any reasons for my father's deportation by the Council Handles Ruins Conduct

March 20 — The discussion of town night violations began this week's meeting. Two freshmen and one sophomore put their town night slips in the wrong box and were penalized one week. One freshman was one minute late and was campused for two weeks.

A committee was appointed to look into the building of a new student center. Dan Ellis was made chairman of the committee and Ann Newcomer and Don Hill were asked to work with him.

Joan Neckerman announced that Open House would be March 31 in the women's dorms and April 7 in the men's dorms.

All of the classes except the sophomore class selected trees to be planted and the places where they are to be located. Some shrubbery is to be transplanted from the drive along Morningside to areas around the society houses.

A committee has been selected to evaluate the work of the Student Council during the past year.

Ted Frauman suggested that the cheer-leaders receive a letter after only one year of cheering instead of two. Dan Wiley was then advised to hold an Athletics Committee meeting to look into Ted's suggestion.

The council voted to set aside an amount of money to be used during Campus Beautiful Week.

Eleanor Koster was elected the new Student-Faculty Senate representative to fill Charley Garrison's place.

March 27 — Town night violations also opened this week's meeting. A freshman put her town night slip in the wrong box and was campused for one week. A junior forgot to sign in and was also penalized one week.

Gray Clarke reported that the Student Council-Executive Council party will be April 2 at 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Lounge.

Shirley MacNeil announced that the election campaigns will be the week of April 8.

A series of new dating privileges giving more freedom to each class has been passed by the Student-Faculty Senate and will go before the Executive Council tomorrow.

The council voted to recommend to Dr. Lloyd that we have an unannounced spring holiday instead of an announced one.

President Henderson brought up the fact that the conduct at the ruins needs to be improved. The council discussed ways of reaching the worst offenders. Since the problem comes under the jurisdiction of the Town-Night Committee, Eleanor Koster and a grgoup of council members picked by Dick will look into the matter.

Scholarship Bill In Congress Now

A bill to provide Federal assistance to higher education, the "National Scholarship Act of 1957," was recently introduced in Congress by Sentors Wayne Morse and Joseph Clark. "This act authorizes the granting of 50,000 scholarships for higher education to eligible high school graduates each year," Senator Morse declared. "It also authorizes allocation to the states—which would be responsible for administering the plan—of amounts equal to $500 for each scholarship to be awarded in the state." The scholarship bill and its companion resolution, which provides $1 million a year in federal aid to primary and secondary schools for general education purposes, "constitute," added Senator Clark, "a comprehensive approach to the solution of our educational crisis, and together meet the basic needs in the three major areas of education: more school buildings and equipment, better teachers' salaries, and scholarships for higher edueation." Similar proposals pend consideration in New York State, reports the regional Newsletter. Further legislation has been introduced in Congress relating to school construction, student loans, and veterans benefits.

MC Chosen Site Of Math Testing

On April 12 at various testing stations of the Tennessee Mathematics Association some 1200 to 1500 of the best students of mathematics in Tennessee will compete on several levels of testing for recognition as the best math student in the state. The tests on April 12 will eliminate 95 per cent of the students from the competion by selecting regional winners at the many testing centers across the state. Tests will then be administered to the best students in East, Middle, and West Tennessee to determine the first place winner in each section.

Maryville College will play host to many area students on April 12 for the preliminary tests. A program of entertainment and dinner is being planned along with the tests. It was also announced by Professor Mack Tolar that Maryville College has been selected as the location for the final tests on April 26. This will bring to our campus the upper 5 percent of the best math students in Tennessee.

Professor Tolar stated that the honor of being selected as the site of the final tests was a highly coveted one. This will give the cream of the mathematical crop a chance to see our campus and consider our math department. It presents, in any case, an invaluable opportunity for the college and its students to win immeasurable good will.

The mathematics contests are designed to instil a professional interest in mathematics in high school students who have the necessary ability. In view of the increasing dependence of the national security on the mathematically trained person, the shortage of such people is deemed critical it is hoped that programs such as the present one can help correct that shortage.

We praise a man who is angry on the right grounds, against the right persons, in the right manner, at the right moment, and for the right length of time.—Aristotle, 340, B.C.

Trade names are curious words, often with no apparent derivation. "Kodak" for example, was the result of George Eastman's experimenting with hundreds of combinations of letters in 1888 in an effort to coin a short, punchy and easily-remembered trademark for his camera.

Band To Present Outdoor Concert

The band will present a short pop concert on Tuesday, April 9. It will be given in the Chapel court and will last from 6:45 to 7:15.

The program will consist of marches, well-known songs, and appropriately for the Easter season, three chorales. The marches will include "Sabre and Spurs", "Chicago Tribune", and "Thunder and Blazes." The chorales will be "Jesus, Priceless Treasure", "Come Soothing Death." Other pieces will be "Daisy Bell", "The Band Played On", and "Little Brown Jug."

The word "nut" we are told by the processors of Royal Nuts, comes from the Anglo-Saxon hnutu, which has lost two letters in modern parlance.

Dr. Phillip M. Hauser To Lecture April 11, On Trends Of Population

Dr. Philip M. Hauser, recently appointed head of the University of Chicago Department of Sociology, will speak here on Thursday, April 11, taking part in the Maryville College Lecture Series. Dr. Hauser is a recognized expert in the field of population trends, which will be his topic here.

He has served in such capacities as United States Representative in the Population Commission of the United Nations, Director of Program Planning for the Department of Commerce and as Acting Director of the Census Bureau, as well as several other important posts. He is widely recognized as a polished and well informed speaker.

Campus Beautiful Week Yields 31 New Trees

Thirty-one new trees, 4 azalea bushes, and some shrubbery have been the result of Campus Beautiful Week. The Y's will soon provide the front of the student center with some color when they complete the flower beds.

The construction of new walks has been postponed due to a lack of funds. Those contributing to the effort were the Freshman Class with an azalea bush and flowering crab trees; the Junior and Senior Classes with two maple trees a piece; and the Student Council with four azalea bushes, a flowering crab tree, and two pink dogwoods.

Why An Academic Freedom Week ...

Student government has a primary responsibility in the promotion of a free atmosphere among students on campus. The general atmosphere of the campus should be one that allows minority opinion, the eccentric idea, the unpopular speaker, and the militant opinion. Freedom is dependent upon each individual's attitude toward his fellow citizens. If students are guilty of bringing social sanctions against a fellow student for his unpopular ideas, they are on poor ground to argue before administrators, trustees, or state legislatures in opposition to restricting campus freedom. A student government which fails to insist upon standards commensurate with freedom in all student activities cannot justify its usurpation of time from the classroom on the basis that student government is a laboratory of democracy.

Nor can students ignore their responsibility to society in attempting to maintain academic freedom and student rights. Academic freedom is integral to all freedom, for freedom depends on the right to choose among alternatives, and it is in the pursuit of knowledge through unfettered research and the liberty to express one's conclusions that man's choices are provided. It is in exploring the depths of reality and in the willingness to express one's conclusions that man's creative genius finds its fruition. That genius left unused constitutes a wastage of human resources amid the battle for human survival which requires the use of man's fullest creative potential.

You may ask, "What is Academic Freedom?" Its meaning is not intangible. Its importance exists not as an abstract phraseology bantered about and lacking in application. It falls into a category of other ideals—liberty, justice and equality. These must constantly be reclaimed and reenunciated by each generation. These, as academic freedom, have existed and can only exist if there are men who have the strength to defend their rsponsibility to adhere to their common ideals.

The preservation of academic freedom is not only written by guns and by riots. This nation—no nation, the student in America—the student abroad, cannot afford to wait until freedom is so endangered that it cannot be preserved through means other than violence. Academic freedom must be preserved wherever it is found. Academic freedom is found in the classroom, in the words of a lecturer, in an assignment, in the selection of textbooks available to the student. It is found in the dormitory, in student government and wherever the quest for knowledge lives.

Feeling then, that there is a need on today's campuses for students to be challenged to ask what is academic freedom, to define their own position in the college, the United States National Student Association sponsors an Academic Freedom Week—April 1-7.

About Plagiarism. . .

It is surprising that more hasn't been said about that nasty subject, plagiarism. Occasionally there is a news item about a law-suit stemming from such a case, but this is not prevalent. We have heard it said that some would be flattered that anyone would think what they had written was worth repeating, with or without their names stuck on. Nevertheless, plagiarism is a nice, elongated, literay term for stealing. When one copies from someone else's paper in the classroom, that is plagiarism. When an editorial is repeated in another newspaper without a footnote, that is plagiarism. When a University grad student turns in a Maryville College Special Studies for his thesis (it has happened), that is plagiarism.

Someone once said that there were never any new ideas. How true! And how often have you thought something and later found it written almost as you would have writen it? But corresponding ideas and a verbatim (even to an expletive) reprinting are two different things.

When English professors and special studies editors spot-check passages or look up something which sounds too familiar, it is because they want to wave a red BEWARE sign and put a stop to plagiarism before it starts. It is a serious and dirty business, and there is no place for it in Christian colleges, journalism or anywhere else!

TALK OF THE WEEK

By Sue Settle

Scots & Soda

By A. Nony Mous

Tomorrow the sealed doors of the girls' dorms will open for that long-awaited "Open-House." There has been much preparation for this event—the moat is drained, the drawbridge is down and the kettles of boiling oil have been allowed to cool.

Guess you heard about the experience one young man had last year on this occasion. You probably heard rumors and rumors of rumors. Here at last is The Echo exclusive. Yes, The Echo has gotten in ahead of all those publications which always have the first, first, first exclusives. The Echo has taken great pains to get in ahead of "Liff," "Coliers," and it has even accomplished the feat of selling the first reprint rights to the "Reeder's Digest. Here it is—an Echo Exclusive, as to told to this reporter.

I thought you would like to hear this story. It may serve as a warning for some of you. Not too many months ago, I, too, was a laughing, carefree college student. On a certain Sunday, I decided to go to the open house at the girls' dorm. A group of us belted on our cutlasses, blew out the candle and started out.

We got along fine until room 492. While I was talking to one of the inmates, the others left. I looked around and there I was—unprotected. I thought, while this inmate eyed me viscously, that perhaps I should humor her so I sat down to talk. I didn't dare taste the food for fear of poison.

After we had talked for a while, I noticed that it was getting dark, so I asked what time it was. It was 6:30 so I said that I had better leave, whereupon my hostess pulled a rope which hung behind the curtain and a steel door and window guard slipped into place. (These are usually used to keep people out rather than in.)

I began to feel hungry but I was still afraid of the food. We talked on. Suddenly, someone knocked on the door. I thought I was to be freed. She (Agatha was her name.) walked to the door and as I thought she was going to open it she pushed a button and down I went through a trap door.

Low Down

I lay on the floor, stunned, and heard Agatha talking above me. Soon she descended the stair into my dungeon and asked me how I felt. She gave me a dish of bread and water and told me that she was going to keep me here until I promised to take her to the Spring Formal. I sank to the floor in despair, (also in the bread and water) and she ascended the stairway jangling keys and laughing horribly.

I slept little that night—I thought of all my friends free—free to go to Vespers and work on special studies and do outside reading and I was very envious. The next morning at 6:30, I heard Agatha coming down. She brought more bread and water and asked me if I was ready to promise yet. I answered "No," and asked her what her roommate would say when she discovered me.

"Don't worry about that," she said. "I've taken care of everything. And she shone a light into the corner, where there was a small pile of bones. Agatha made her exit as before.

When she left I thought about the bread and water. I sloshed the water onto the dirt floor, resolving not to eat anything, and was bout to do the same with the bread when I noticed that the water had uncovered a small iron ring. I pulled at it, and with much creaking and groaning it opened a trap door. I could see nothing below but three steps and then darkness. I carefully considered the situation——"Tonight, while she is asleep I will escape," I decided.

When she came down that evening I asked her for a candle and pencil and paper so that I could write my will. She laughed, but supplied me with them. When she left I quickly ate my bread and water, to gain strength, and lifted the ring. Holding the candle before me I escaped into the unknown.

I was in a long passageway and ahead I saw a small light. Naturally I hurried toward it, and when I arrived found that it shone on a small sign which said "Please secure your parking permit at the Personnel Office," and below that was a lot of small print which I skipped.

Onward

I walked on. It was very dark again. I wondered what time it was. Soon, just as I suspected I would, I came to a sign that said "See Rock City."

The tunnel was certainly not hard to follow, any way. But, soon I came to a fork in it. I was stumped. After due deliberation I resorted to that ancient philosophy which I learned at college, "Flipism." I took a dime from my loafers and flipped it. Heads—I go to the left. Father and farther. The ground was muddy for a while—then it got harder and I assumed that I was going up. The candle sputtered. It was getting low. I was tired and hungry.

Suddenly I saw another crack of light. I hurried on and found it was coming from a door in the top of the tunnel. I climbed up the steps to it and flung it open. Theer stood Agatha. (I should have gone to the right.) with my morning bread and water.

Trapped.

I took Agatha to the Spring Formal.

THIS HAS BEEN AN ECHO EXCLUSIVE.

Voices, Masks, and Shadows

By Joe McNeal

To any appreciative reader of good literature the most alarming trend in modern publishing is the almost fantastic popularity of the so-called "pocket sized books." The reason for the alarm has nothing to do with the size of the books, however, but with the regrettable tendency of their publishers to turn to cheap, sensational literature as an easy means of appealing to a wide audience. It seems that more money can be made by appealing to the baser part of man's nature than to the robler.

The basic idea of the "pocket-book" is not a bad one. Ideally speaking, "pocket books" could serve as inexpensive guides to a finer national culture. They could place in the hands of Mr. John Public, who may never have been to college, his own copies of literary works of art at a price he can afford with no difficulty at all.

Some of the more responsible publishers of these little, paperbound books have already realized their opportunity to raise America's cultural standard and profit by it at the same time. Many of the great standard "classics" like Moby Dick and War and Peace have been issued at prices ranging from 35c to 75c and $1.00. The longer works have been edited (rather skillfully) to shorten their length for the general reader, but regular length pieces are presented "complete and unabridged."

Paper bound editions of the better modern novels have also been issued to the delight of the reader who can not afford the more expensive cloth bounds but would still like to have his own copy to read at his leisure. Many best sellers have been issued in the inexpensive editions and have thereby reached almost one million people that otherwise might never have read them.

Another notable trend in the pocket book industry is the appearance of works of scholarship in these inexpensive editions. This is taking books formerly hidden away on dusty library shelves where only a specialist in scholarly fields would stumble across them and putting them out before the general reader. The best products of modern thought are now in view of the busy commuter who stops by the newstand a few moments each day, and they are well within the reach of his pocketbook. They are available also to the student who has little money but likes to own good books.

To select just one such series of books, the New American Library which publishes Signet and Mentor Books has released The Mentor Philosophers, a "distinguished series of paperbound books which presents philosophical thought from medieval times to the present." Six volumes, priced at 50 cents each, comprise the series.

The titles in The Mentor Philosophers include The Age of Belief, dealing with the age of Christian theology (5th to 15th centuries A.D.); The Age of Adventure (the Renaissance); The Age of Reason (17th century); The Age of Enlightenment (18th century); The Age of Ideology (19th century; and The Age of Analysis (our own century.

The last of these books, dealing with modern analytical thought, which has come to be the philosophy of science, follows the same pattern as all the others. Short selections from leading 20th century thinkers (Pierce, James, Whitehead, Russell, Santayana, etc.) are included together with introduction and a connecting commentary by Morton White, Professor of Philosophy at Harvard. Other books are selected by experts in the particular philosophic age discussed.

Perhaps the example of good taste and interest in education of the people shown in this series and others like it will be successful enoughg that the more objectionable pocket books will begin to lose some popularity. At any rate the pocket book phenomenon is an interesting one, and the results of the sales of the bette. books as against the poorer ones will provide a reliable indication of the taste of the American public.

Sports Spotlights

By Pete Nix

Spring Prospects

If and when Spring ever gets here the outlook for the warm-weather sports here at Maryville is very good. The baseball team is stronger than it has been for two seasons. The tennis squad, although clobbered by U.T.'s play for pay boys, should make a fine showing in their small school competition. And the cinder men's only real trouble should come from East Tennessee State.

Baseball

If Coach Honaker can find any way to bolster his pitching staff (and 10-1 he will) the baseball team should have an excellent season. Three of last year's starting infield, Bill Dent, Jack Woodhall, and Jack West, are back and will be aided by the return of Earl Lawson from service. Chuck Dunn is gone in centerfield, but Don Hill is back in left and letterman Bill Evans, the Scots' leading hitter last season, will more than likely hold down the right field post along with some pitching chores. The Highlanders lost a very fine catcher when Don Moore graduated, but there are a number of good candidates for this position with Buddy Beam having the inside edge. The pitching returnees are West, Evans, and Max Williamson. If Coach Honaker can add some strength to this pitching corps, the Scots should have a very successful season indeed.

Tennis

The position of the top six men on the tennis squad is constantly changing, but at this writing the team shapes up something like this: 1—Ted Engle, 2—Stan Mont, 3—Bill Bolger, 4—Bruce Ingles, 5—Jim McCall, 6—Bob Bogle. This team is considerably stronger in the lower parts of the ladder than last year and Engle and Mont should win their share of the matches at 1 and 2. Bolger, McCall, and Bogle lack playing experience. But as the season progresses they will undoubtedly improve. All indications point to a winning season on the courts.

Track

The Scot track squad was dealt a hard blow when hurdler Tom Dolch fell victim to the virus bug, but as was said in the opening paragraph, if the Scots can get by East Tennessee State on April 9, they should have smooth sailing.

The Cindermen's big problem at present is lack of depth in the running events. A few more sprinters and middle distance men would not pain Coaches Johnson and Ramger at all. In track, as in baseball and tennis, a winning season is in view.

The above words are all of wins and successes. But a sore arm, pulled muscle, or sprained wrist could cause a lot of difference. However, barring any unforseen mishaps, it should be an exciting and successful Spring of Sports at Maryville.

U.T. Defeats Scot Netters 8-0

The University of Tennessee tennis team shut out the homc standing Maryville College Highlanders 8-0, with the Number 1 doubles match being rained out. The U-T squad with many new faces and led by Kyle Testerman and Fred Brackney took every set from the Scots. Bob Davies and Bruce Lundberg also lost exhibition matches.

Testerman (T) over Engle, 6-1, 6-3.

Backney (T) over Mont, 7-5, 7-5.

Arnold (T) over McCall, 6-1, 6-1.

Westerguard (T) over Ingles, 6-1, 6-1.

Vandergriff (T) over Bolger, 6-3, 6-1.

Terry (T) over Bogle, 6-1, 6-2.

Testerman and Brackney led Engle and Mont 5-1 in the first set when stopped by rain.

Terry and Westguard (T) over McCall and Ingles, 6-1, 6-0.

Arnold and Vandergriff (T) over Bolger and Bogle, 6-1, 6-0.

Intramurals....

The Orange League Champion AE Hammers took the Intramural Volleyball trophy by defeating the Garnet League's Quakers, who were playing without their ace spiker Tom Morris. Led by Bob Goodlin and Bob Finertie the Hammers defeated the Quakers 15-10, 15-8, and 15-12, to take the trophy. The Hammers gained the finals by defeating the Y.M.C.A. in a playoff for the Orange League championship.

Softball

Softball play started Tuesday. The league has six teams and any one wishing to enter a team should get a team list in as soon as possible.

YWCA Will Hold Elections In April

The elections for the new YWCA officers will be held next week, the first week in April. The nominations for the next year's officers are thoseon this slate:

President — Ruth Morris, Ann Murray

Vice-president — Anita Cole, Sharon Rise

All the YWCA members are urged to consider their choices new and vote next week.

Thanks are due Millie Beard, Clem Berkelbach, Margie Jones, and Bob Wyman for the Lenten devotional booklets that were given to every student several weeks ago. These four young people comprise the Devotional Committee of YW and YM that gathered together the daily devotionals and put them up in booklet form.

Plan of Merger Conference

Last week-end, March 22-24, Mary Murphey and Pete Bailey attended a Plan of Merger Conference at Westminster House in Nashville, Tennessee. There were fifteen delegates present and ten colleges represented — Vanderbilt, Peabody, Fisk, North Carolina College, U-T, Tennessee Tech, Centre, Warren-Wilson Junior College, A and I University, and Maryville. The delegates discussed various student Christian movements, but most especially the Plan of Merger.

The Plan of Merger would be the uniting of various denominations on college campuses. The pros and cons of this plan were discussed and the general feeling of the group present was that the students on the various campuses need to be informed as to what other students are thinking and doing about Christian student movements.

The group meeting last weekend was attended only by U.S.A. Presbyterians, however, the Congregationalists, Methodists, and the Evangelical and Reformists are three other groups that are willing to merge at this time.

This meeting was a regional meeting involving only three synods, but a national assembly of this nature will be held in the middle of August. Three delegates from the meeting held last week-end will be sent to the national assembly.

The YWCA meeting this Sunday will feature Dr. Mary Cragan who will conclude the Y's series on "Being a Woman" with a talk on sex. The talk will be given at Willard House Sunday, March 31, at 1:30.

ECHO FORUM

Having read several times your well-written and well thought-out essay, Joe McNeal, I feel compelled to throw out several ideas which you and other students may be interested to carry through.

First, may I call this to your attention. The topic under discussion here is narrowmindedness especially as it concerns the Christian and the scientist (thus separated in "Maryville College Students — Broad or Narrow?"). This essay deals only indirectly with its several ramifications such as Chapel and Church attendance, vital as they may be in the scope of the problem. Let us try instead to get to the heart of this matter.

Our first endeavor must be to clarify our terms — specificly, "narrowmindedness." What do we mean when we say "narrowminded", Do we mean narrowmindedness to the point of exclusion?

In this instance, we must say no. As the term was originally applied to the college, let us turn there once again. Although Maryville College requires ten hours of Bible for science majors, it also requires eight hours of science for Bible majors. The term, then, as applicable to the college, may not denote exclusion.

We are driven, therefore, to the degree (if there can be degrees! if not, the term has been misused) of emphasis. The college does strongly emphasize Christianity. This being the case, it appears necessary that we must proceed with this distinction clearly in mind. We are speaking of narrowmindedness to the point of emphasis, not exclusion.

Now, what do we emphasize? For our anwer, let us look at ourselves. There are three facets of our human make-up: mental, physical, and spiritual. Each of us places particular emphasis upon one of these — some to the exclusion of one or both of the other two.

Inevitably the question rises: is this good? should this be so?

Perhaps it should not, but the fact stands that this is the way we people operate. We must have something, anything definite to which we can hold. Which of us would be happy, content with a great, open, howling tundra of a mind? If one such happy being exists, I have yet to meet him. Therefore we must say that even if particular emphasis is not good, it is necessary to an individual.

From this let us move to the inevitable: an application of this to the Christian-Scientist problem. Knew this was coming, didn't you?

There appears to be a grave misconception of the relation of the Christian to science. The essay mentioned before is only a reflection of that whole trend of thought.

What is the relation of a Christian to science?

First, and very important, the Christian does not reject science. He does not fear it. Rather, he holds it in a greater perspective. Besides that of only here and now, he sees science also in the perspective of all time. He has nothing to fear from science. On the contrary, he rejoices in it — for in it he sees the development of man's mind and the betterment of man's body. Certainly a Christian may be a scientist!

This resolves into the second point. The Christian is one who is sharply aware of the worth of each facet of his make-up: mental, physical, and spiritual. He is one who sees no cause to reject any one of the three; one who recognizes a duty to develop each to its capacity.

I would ask now, does the Christian's emphasis on the spiritual justify an attack on his set of values? I believe, Joe, and all other thoughtful students, that we must acknowledge the fact that each of us does emphasize one of these three attributes — and that each of us believes equally strongly that he is emphasizing the most important.

Are we at a stalemate?

Fashions

By Bobbye Carson

Every generation has its chosen example of what it considers to be a general type character in Fashions. With every few years' duration, this character changes personality and style. Such characters as the Flapper and the Gibson Girl have been popular in their day. The serene, hard boiled, career women type of the past few years has left the scenes. In her place you'll find the "gentlewomen" type. For the current times this type is fashionably displayed in its trend toward simplicity.

Hair styles are becoming simpler. Also, make up is used in such a way to blend in naturally with the skin as to appear to be the spring desire of freshness.

Some program notes on the scene of spring simplicity are THE CAPE STYLE is a returning feature from previous years. Capes of all lengths are very good, while variations of cape-sleeved coats, cape-collared coats, cape suits, and dress and cape ensembles add interest to the styles for this approaching spring.

BLOUSED-BACK JACKETS add to the straight lines of sheaths and tight skirts.

LANTERN SLEEVES are good in jackets and blouses.

SHIRT-WAIST DRESSES with straight or full skirts are one of spring's best offers. Tucks down the front of the blouse add interest!

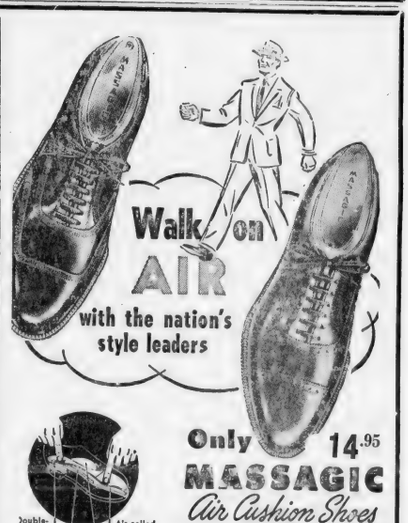
BLOUSES are being greatly emphasized. The sissy-shirts, the chiffon blouses, and the Vionnet style of no collar and very straight lines, are top notch contenders.

CHANEL SUITS, ones with jackets half way between a box and a fitted style are one of the best suggestions in the suit line.

PEARLS are the thing in the way of jewelry,— long, single strands, and many shorter strands are both in excellent taste.

CLOSE-CUPPED HATS are just what you need to add the final touch to any outfit for Spring.

HOSE are now on the market in many different colors and shades to match your outfit.



These are but a few suggestions of the theme of simplicity which seems to be the trend for spring. It is a trend that can be easily carried out with your previous wardrobe to help give it that new look.

A mother entered a drug store and was horrified at discovering her small son, sitting at the newsstand and enthusiastically perusing a ribald photography magazine. Snatching up the book and placing it back on the shelf, she harshly reprimanded: "Young man, you ought to know better than to read such trash."

"Oh, that's all right, Mom," replied the lad; "I was just looking at the pictures."

The Hypericum with its characteristic daffodil-like flowers is being increasingly grown as a ground cover. It is one of the most widely grown species of plant, being scattered over the whole world.

Communists, which virtually put the rest of the family in the streets. Later, we received a room in the country side. In contrast with the little American girl's imagination, it was unfortunately far from being similar to a pleasant weekend spent in the friendly milieu of a well-equipped house in an American village: a wet room with an earth floor, muddy ways without side-walk, nearest shopping was 6 to 8 miles away, no school, and therefore no possibility for an education.

After his liberation, my father could not get any kind of a job. I finished secondary school just then but was refused entrance by the university. I had to look for a job, but to get a job in the village where my father was known was impossible. I had to work elsewhere. I earned $8 a week and from this sum I helped my parents get along.

The above mentioned American girl asked me amazed, "Why did I not look for another boss who would pay me more?" There was only one boss — the State, and the so-called "bad cadres" had to be happy that they could work at all, without demanding wage increases. In spite of the fact that I was always an excellent worker, I was released on the Government's Order as soon as the information reached me concerning my parents' financial circumstances and political attitude. I lost my job in 1955. We all hoped to get rid of this situation on October 23rd. One could speak much about the events before and after the 23rd . . . filling volumes.

During the revolution, I was a voluntary ambulance nurse. Later, I worked in the surgery section of a hospital. In my private statistics, the most shocking fact was that 90% of the wounded were under 20 years of age and 95% of the mdid not leave the hospital at all. I'll never forget the enthusiasm of our seriously wounded youth. Never did a single complaint leave their lips, except of course when the battle-noise silenced a little while. At such occasions, they wanted to go to the streets again, fearing that there would be no one to carry on the fight. It was not an isolated case that youngsters came up to give blood and then went back to the battle field. A boy with a lung-shot, on learning that he was a critical case, ran away from the hospital to carry guns, attached to the bottom part of his motors side car . . . to the rebels at Godollo.

It would take a better writer's pen to be able to dedicate a lasting monument to those heroes, and not to degrade those events to cheap-seeming boring phrases.

Why did I come? I want to continue my studies by all means, with all the stubborn willingness of my spoiled youth and a strong feeling of professional devotion. Shall I succeed? How can I create the financial means? I don't know.

BOY

I am an Engineering student in Electronics of the third year.

In the revolution of the 23rd of October, 1956, the students of the University of Technology played a great many roles. They started the revolution with their demonstrations. I was in the fighting too the first day at the Radio Building. I was fighting three long days at the "Szabadnep" House and the "Calvin Square." After the first victorious days of the revolution, I was the first district commander of the National Guard for university students.

After the Russia attack, I fought on Szena Square. When we could not hold our positions in the face of Russian superiority, I wanted to go home. But in the meantime, I was captured by the Russians who closed me in a cold cellar for two days. They did not even ask: who or what I was.

On November 25th, we were put on a truck with several other captives but we succeeded in escaping at the Margit Bridge. I did not go home but started with a friend towards the border. Until Mcsonmagyarovar, we traveled by train and crossed the border by foot. On the 27th of December, I arrived in America.

I should like to continue my studies here. I hope that the promises will come true and that this will be successful. I should like one more thing and that is to return to Hungary when Communism is at last abolished.

At last in America. This was my heart's desire since my childhood. To learn here and to live in freedom. To learn? Will this desire come true? This is my desire. At least it was promised. I came here alone leaving behind country, parents, and escaping from Red terror. I should like to find a new homeland here and to promote development as an educated man.

BOY

I was a medical student in Budapest. I took an active part in the revolutionary events. This is the way I escaped.

My mother died in 1938. My sister learned in Budapest. I don't know anything about her whereabouts now; I was told she died in the second Russian assault.

My father was arrested after the revolution was defeated.

I should like to continue in medical school. At home I had to wait four years before I was accepted. Here we get no promises of protection in the medical field. Everybody tries to divert us from it. But I wish to stick to my choice of medicine. I did not want to go to Medical school in Budapest for just money and a diploma because beginning doctors were poorly paid. I am not much more interested in money here either; I want to cure the sick. I consider medicine my life profession and will stick to it.

During the second Russian attack, one of the centers of resistance was the Hotel Royal. I was enlisted here. We left the hotel during the night of November 10 through the cellars, and fled to the Buda-hills. The Budapest Medical University called all students by radio on November 12 and asked that we report to the university at 10 a.m. that Tuesday. We were called on to go to the clinics and clean up the ruins before lectures could begin anew. During the fighting in Budapest, many hospitals and clinics were bombed. I have seen the following hospitals in very bad shape myself: Uzsoki-Street Hospital, Rokus HDospital, Tuzolto-Street Hospital, Surgeonary-Clinics, Eye-Clinics, and the Criminology-Anatomy Institute.

Many medical students went to the hospitals. I wanted to go but the Buda area rebel commander refused to give me permission. This was my luck. My colleagues who went to Hajnal-Clinic were deported. The medical students working in Ezovetseg-Street Hospital were deported to.

Meanwhile, my father was arrested. They started a search for me at my home too. Therefore, I had no choice but to escape.

The happiest conversatin is that of which nothing is distinstly remembered, but a general effect of pleasing impression.—Samuel Johnson, 1781.

DR. SHUMAN . . .

more difficult. They fear a western effort to destroy by violence their government and country. Their action in Hungary is a direct result of this fear. Mr. Schuman, at this point, cited the action of the United States in Guatemala three years ago. By driving out a duly elected government, the United States violated both the United Nations charter and international law. This proves an attitude the Soviet Union and the United States have in common — each has decided that it cannot endure, on its borders, a government controlled by the other.

The Anglo-French action in Egypt was a blunder, which is, in international affairs, worse than a crime.

Irresponsible Policy

Mr. Schuman termed America irresponsible in her policy toward Hungary, and toward all Russian satellites. The Hungarians took our promises of aid seriously and revolted. When we failed to support them militarily and financially the result was the fall of Hungary.

Irresponsibility may also be applied to the policies of the United States in the Middle East. By their endorsing of the Bagdad Pact — which allied and armed Arab states — they drove the other Middle East states to Russia in self-defense.

Middle East

As far as American policy in the Middle East is concerned, Mr. Schuman wondered if we have any. We are, however, in agreement with Russia in wanting to restore the status quo. The only result of this attempt will be more violence. Relying on the United Nations has no power of its own.

Speaking of the Eisenhower doctrine, Mr. Schuman believed that it is useful in defending the frontiers by preventing aggression in any part of the world which the United States has claimed it will protect. However, the Eisenhower doctrine is based on the false (in Mr. Schuman's opinion) doctrine that the primary threat of communism is military aggression, which isn't true.

In conclusion, Mr. Schuman proposed some points which he felt need to be considered in this situation. First, Russia in 1957 is a growing concern which cannot be ignored or defeated, therefore peace must be made with Russia. Secondly, the liberation of Hungary can only be accomplished by an agreement between the United States and Russia. Third and fourth, the welfare of the Arab states and the security of Israel can be promoted only by a similar agreement to work for the good of these states.

America has failed in the past. If we can't succeed in the future, we will indeed, as the Cheshire cat said, have a mad world. Mr. Schuman ended on a note of optimism by hoping that if better relations are established, the troubles of these days will be well rewarded.

Math Contest Held For H. S. Students

The 89 high school students representing the best of local high school mathematical talent were on the Maryville College campus yesterday to compete in the First Annual Tennessee Mathematics Contest. Tests given yesterday were to determine the best students in Algebra I and II, Plane Geometry, and Comprehensive classificatiops. Each high school in Blount and Sevier Counties was eligible to send its best two students in each field to participate in the competition.

A full day's program was arranged for the students competing in the contest. Many mathematics students at Maryville help ed greet, entertain, and test the students under the direction of Professor and Mrs. Tolar of the Department of Mathematics. The program is sponsored by the Tennessee Mathematics Association to encourage interest in mathematics and its applications among students able to do mathematical work.

The program began at 9:00 yesterday morning with registration and group pictures in the chapel lobby with Barbara Thomas and Fred Sanner in charge. Mr. Hugh Coulter, Superintendent of Blount County Schools, Dr. Frank McClelland, and Richard Henderson greeted the students on behalf of Maryville and Maryville College.

The contests began at 10:30 with Mrs. Tolar directing, assisted by Robert Baker, Joe McNeal, Bill Wilkie, and Bill Dent, all math majors. After the contests the students were guests of the college at a picnic luncheon on the lawn behind Thaw Hall. Kay Bugenhagen, Bob Davies, Armen Saginian, and Denver Childress were student assistants at the picnic.

At 1:00 the students met in the theater to hear a discussion by Mr. Hugh McDade, Public Relations Director of the Aluminum Company at Alcoa, assisted by a member of the Engineering staff, on utilizing mathematical ability After the discussion the students swam in the college pool until 3:30. The examinations were checked by the mathematics staff conducting the tests and the winners were announced at 3:30.

The students who score the highest five per cent on all tests given in East Tennessee will come here on April 26 for the East Tennessee finals. This test will consist of a series of problems requiring mathematical thinking at its best on the high school level. It will be an essay type test as opposed to a purely objective short answer examination. The final test was designed and will be graded by a board of professional mathematicians, including Mary Ville's Professor Tolar.

Exported Jazz Is Cold War Weapon

By Walt Thompson

Little need be said on our campus of the importance of a medium called jazz in relieving tension and anxiety which result from the pressures of modern American life. Certainly it's no surprise that this aid to relaxation is equally welcomed by less privileged peoples abroad, for the same reasons, and for even better ones.

"About eight years ago Charles Thayer, then head of the voice of America facilities in New York, worked with this writer and Benny Goodman to present a series of selected recordings on the Voice of America Russian transmissions.

"After a short time we received reports which indicated that Russian band leaders were copying the arrangements of American tunes heard on these programs." (Quote letter of Hal Davis toEditor, N. Y. Times, dated November 11, 1955.)

In 1954, the appearance of "stilyagi", Russian youth who emulated to a recognizable degree, the dress and social manner of our zoot-suiters, disturbed the approved behavior of the youth of Leningrad. Dancing in restaurants and similar gathering places was banned with success through vigilantes of the Young Communist League. By 1946, however, they were still to be seen in the large hotels of Leningrad and Moscow which are frequented by visitors from abroad.

Upon returning to Warsaw in November, 1955, from an observation trip to the United States, M. Putrament publically observed that athough there had been much ado in Poland about boogie-woogie in the U.S., he had discovered this phenomenon had originated among Negro musicians, and had not derived from U.S. financial circles, as Polish sources had charged.

"The popularity of jazz and the market for it is a phenomenon that strikes Americans returned to the continent after long absence. Men have actually risked their lives to smuggle recordings of it behind the iron curtain and for reasons the profit motive cannot explain." (Felix Belair, N. Y. Times correspondent, N. Y. T., Nov. 6, 1955)

Late in 1955, Louis Armstrong and his All-Stars toured Europe, including in the itinerary a concert in West Berlin. People from the East one, including some Russians, sneaked over the border to hear the band.

"Hardly any of them could speak English, but that didn't bother them or us. The music did the talking for both sides," remarked Louis afterward.

By the end of 1955, satelite countries of Eastern Europe had stopped trying to outlaw jazz. I' was only with the promise of rag time music to follow that listeners could be pursuaded to listen to the communist preachments.

"American jazz broadcast by the Voice of America, and Swedish and German short wave stations, can be heard every night in the dormitories of the Moscow University's thirty-seven story skyscraper building.

"The travelers' reports indicate a widespread hunger among Soviet youth for foreign music, tyles and modes — particularly anything and everything American.

"Whatever the reason, despite the years of anti-jazz propaganda, Erroll Garner, the George Shearing Quintet, Glen Miller, Sammy Kay, and Stan Kenton are now at the top of the Soviet hit parade.

"The Russians have a decided preference for 'sweet' over 'hot'. Frank Sinatra is the favorite male vocalist, Doris Day, Rosemary Clooney, and Patti Page are the favorites on the distaff side." (Harrison E. Salisbury for the N. Y. Times, April 3, 1957.)

Outside the iron curtain, as well as within it, jazz has been a tool of consistent pro-American influence in the cold war. Foreign exposure to this uniquely American art has served to dispell some natural misconceptions of America, to which ill-behaved tourists and service men, junketeering legislators, and economic aid have seemed to contribute. Concert tours abroad have produced more immediately visible good will, according to repeated accounts, than any other cultural genre exported by the State Department.

The evening of November 5, 1955, Geneva customers were willing to pay up to four dollars per seat to hear Louis Armstrong, and were turned away in droves. These were mature Europeans who enjoy speculating on American jazz as they would upon the folk music of any other country.

The Arab world witnessed American jazz in the flesh for the first time in April, 1956, during Dizzy Gillespie and his orchestra's ten week tour of the Near East sponsored jointly by the State Department, the President's Fund for International Cultural Exchange Programs, and the International Women's Clubs. In Karachi, Pakistan, a line as long as those at the premiers of Radio City Music Hall shows waited to sell out the movie theatre, one of Karachi's largest, at the equivalent of two or three dollars a seat. In Bierut, Lebanon, they played to three 1500 seat performances, all sellouts, and the reception was similar in Abadan, Damascus, and Aleppo.

Benny Goodman and his fifteen man orchestra had just arrived at Bangkok, Thailand, on December 12, 1956, in order to do several shows in the American Exhibit of Thailand's International Fair when he was called to give a command performance before the King at the royal Amphorn Palace on that very night. After the concert King Phumiphol Aduldet presented each of the musicians with a silver cigarette case. Goodman presented a clarinet to the King. Later in the evening His Majesty picked up his saxophone and improvised with Benny upon such traditional classics as "Honeysuckle Rose", "Muskrat Ramble", and "Sunny Side of the Street", in the presence of about 100 royal guests.

The King of Cambodia was pleased to make Mr. Goodman a member of an honorary order after the orchestra had completed a command performance for him at Pnnon Penh. Mr. Goodman presented the King and Queen with a special record album.

The Radio Station of every good sized European city has its jazz specialist. There were about 100 amateur jazz bands in Switzerland alone in November, 1955. Jazz International, a program of the armed forces network, and Night Train, another network feature, are as familiar through the continent as the Ed Sullivan show to American televiewers.

As Felix Belair noted in his November 6, 1955, article in the N. Y. T., "American jazz has now become a universal language. It knows no national boundaries, but everybody knows where it comes from and where to look for more."

Beard Watercolors Currently On Exhibit In FAC Gallery

by Sue Settle

Featured in the Fine Arts Center gallery is a collection of paintings by Richard E. Beard, head of the art department. The twenty-three paintings were recently displayed at Berea College, Kentucky, in a faculty art exchange program.

The exhibit of transparent and opaque watercolors includes abstraction, semi-abstraction, realism, and impressionism. Throughout many of the paintings Mr. Beard shows a gentle satire on life.

One example of this is the picture "Family", which depicts all the confusion, monotony, and variety of family living with the influence of the American social trends of sex and entertainment. Another satire is "Church of God Orphans," an impression of what Mr. Beard saw as he watched the truckload of girls pass him while he worked in Gatlinburg last summer. Behind the truck is the blind rush of passing light as probably seen by the girls themselves. In the truck are young girls showing varying degrees of facial expression and emotion ranging from the rough child on the left to the sweet child in the center and the sick child leaning over the side.

"Fantasy and Fun Time" is a happy abstraction of flippy lines and shapes using yellows, reds, and black. It is simply a playful composition which, though adult in its impression, would be suitable in a nursery.

A poetic concept of a visionary city is revealed in "And Suddenly There Was Civilization." The city is shown as it suddenly appears with all its passion and activity, a vision of civilization.

Strking in its black and white is "Vision." This painting was inspired by a chapel speaker who told of seeing visions while in prison in Red China. It portrays the prisoner and a white vision in the midst of darkness and confusion, composed into a stained glass window effect.

These and other paintings by Mr. Beard will be on display throughout next week for those interested in seeing his work and in studying the ideas of one of our contemporary artists.

Debaters Attend National Tour

From April 14 to 19, five members of Maryville's Pi Kappa Delta will be attending the National Pi Kappa Delta Convention at Brookings, South Dakota.

The contestants will defend, during eight rounds, both sides of the national debate question — Resolved: That the United States should discontinue direct economic aid to foreign countries. Racial integration in the United States is the topic for extemporaneous speaking. Participants in Discussion will discuss the question — "What is the role of the United States in the Middle East?" Contestants will also have an opportunity to enter oratory.

Corita Erwin, a Bibie major from Levittown, Pennsylvania, and Eleanore Koster, a political science major from Sevierville, Tennessee, will be entered in women's debate. Miss Koster will be entered in oratory and extemporaneous speaking.

Entered in men's debate are Bob Bogel, a history major from Oak Ridge, Tennessee, and Bob Goodlin, an English major from Clymer, Pennsylvania. Mr. Goodlin is entered in oratory and extemporaneous speaking.

Keith Ham, a political science major from Merrick, New York, is entered in discussion.

Mr. Rudolph To Speak At Vespers Sunday

The vesper speaker for April 14 will be Reverend L. C. Rudolph.

Mr. Rudolph went to DePaul University from 1946 to 1948. In 1948 he went to the University of Louisville. He then went to Louisville resbyterian Seminary until 1951 when he went to Yale.

Mr. Ruduolph is now instructor in church history and holds the position of assistant to the president at Louisville seminary.

Music Scholarship Awards Granted

The annual competitive tryouts for the music scholarship awards were held in the Music Hall of the Fine Arts Center, March 30, 1957. Two awards were given in the field of piano and one in the field of art.

Miss Judith Copeland of Fountain City, Tennessee, was awarded a $200 scholarship for one year in art. She attends Central High School.

Miss Jean Crowell of Washington, D. C., was chosen as first place winner in the field of piano. She was granted a one year scholarship of $300. Miss Crowell attends McKinley High School in Washington, D. C.

Miss Jacquelyn Oldham of Maryville, Tennessee, was chosen as the winner of the second place award of $200 in piano. Miss Oldham is attending Friendsville High School.

All the winners are high school seniors and will enter Maryville College this fall.

The only town night violation at this week's meeting was the case of a girl who was late after spraining her ankle on the way home. She was not penalized.

Some of the Student Council representatives spoke unofficially on the progress of cleaning up the ruins. Some improvement has been noted. Those working on the committee are trying to get the crescent just above the ruins within the proper and official bounds.

Several dating resolutions passed by the Student-Faculty Senate will be postponed until next semester because of the crowded schedule which is almost impossible to revise at this time.

The after-supper dances will continue, despite the rumor that they would not be held.

May 3 will be High School Day on the campus. At that time the Student Council members will show high school students from town around the college.

"Thanks"

As all of you know student council elections took place last Thursday and we the student body selected some new leaders to replace the old. But before the old bow out I think they are due a word of thanks from all of us. Under the leadership of President, Dick Henderson, and Vice-Preisdent, Shirley McNiel, this year's student council has done a great job for all the students on the campus.

To innumerate a few of the more noticeable things: (1) An examination of the social program and a revised dating set-up; (2) A working men's government for the dormitory men; (3) milk machines in the dormitories; (4) new washers and dryers in the dormitories.

And one of its best contributions has been a better insight by the students into why the administration thinks and acts as it does and a better insight by the administration into why the students think and act as they do.

It has been a year of progress, so here's a word of thanks to you Dick and your student council, may next year be just as fruitful.

Just A Passing Thought–

In the deep recesses of our minds there rings the memory of student discontent with various aspects of campus life. Yet, when an excellent opportunity for "student expression" is offered on election day, only 83 percent of the student body voted. (It is interesting to note 85% of the Senior class, 89% of the Junior class, 90% of the Sophomore class, and 68% of the Freshman class voted.) It would almost be amusing if it did not represent such a complete lack of student responsibility. We permit our tongues to criticize what we do not like, yet we refuse to place pen to paper and place a check beside the names of the people we feel can best represent and work for us. Also, we are constantly lamenting our opportunities to prepare for the "outside" world, but when offered an opportunity in the "inside" world to train ourselves in the making of decisions we just let it march merrily by.

Are we afraid to think and to make decisions?

Scots & Soda

This will be a conglomeration so Be Prepared. Ready? Go.

College humor never changes. . . mainly because college students never change. Since looking through parents' college annuals is always great sport, it was also informative in this case since my ideas for Scots and Soda were nil. English majors then were as desperate for creative subjects as they are now, and I found several that can't be beat. One is the ever popular SHORT SHORT. . .

He She Three.

Some of our cynics are never satisfied with a happy ending like the above, so for them, a TRAGEDY. . .

Two Lovers
A Quarrel
A Room
Some Gas
A Funeral
Some Flowers
A Hole
Some Grass

The Big Four changes as seldom as does the campus. The standard is still. . .

Freshman: Irresponsible
Sophomore: Irrepressible
Junior: Irresistible
Senior: Irreproachable

And I still like the old stand-by. . .

Senior—How many classes are you carrying?
Frosh—I'm carrying one and dragging four.

The following are STEPS OF SOPHISTICATION that I think are priceless. . .

Freshman: "I don't know."
Sophomore: "I'm not prepared."
Junior: "I do not remember."
Senior: "I do not believe I can add anything to what has already been said."

Old ECHO articles are good sources, too, for reporters with blank minds, and whether Springy will print it or not, here's a dandy. . .

"What have you done," St. Peter asked,
"That I should admit you here?"
"I ran the Echo," the editor said,
"For a long and terrible year."
St. Peter pitying shook his head
And gravely touched the bell.
"Come in, poor thing; select a harp. . .
"You've had your share of hell."

Since election is upon us, it might be well to say something about our friends, the politicians. One worthy vice-presidential candidate was heard saying she wouldn't dare use "What's the good word?" in her campaign speech for fear and mortal terror that one of her buddies would stand up and scream, "FREE BEER!". . . and then where would she be. . . three guesses. I suppose to be a successful politician, when one was asked his favorite color, he would reply, "Plaid."

Still in keeping with election-season is the one about, "Don't you get tired counting all those ballots?" An experienced and back-reader of the Echo is sure to cry, "Of course. . . we all have ballot fatigue." GOOD GRIEF, you know who! (Perhaps Charlie Brown or Mr. K.)

At this stage of the game, our worthy candidates' favorite definition is. . . An election is what, if you go to bed late and only get a few hours sleep, you wake up in the morning wishing there wasn't any such thing as.

So much for old Quips and Cranks and election bally-hoo. . . it has come to the attention of this Maryville College student that Scots and Soda this week should have been called Scots and Paragoric. I'll compromise and call it Mostly Soda for the Bicarb Kids!

Echo Forum–

WHO ARE YOU?

Every person is important in the sense that he is an individual separate and different from every other person. No one can take the place of anyone else in a spiritual sense. By this spiritual sense I mean that every person has a likeness of God in him which is often referred to as a soul. This likeness of God is what should make a person feel important.

A person also has a life all his own with which he can do as he pleases. Since this life is all his own, he should use it to the best of his ability in the way which he thinks best. This thinking on his part should not be egotistic, but rather a thinking derived from what his conscience seems to say, from what he has read, and from what he has heard others express as their personal opinions. This thinking should be an analysis which arrives at a positive solution as to the way in which he believes his life can be best carried out. Of course, this solution is never final, because no one person can in his lifetime hear, read, or see all there is, to say nothing of understanding or wisdom — that is "seeing into" and being able to explain.

My very personal opinion is that there should be a realization of the unity, harmony, and majestic greatness to be found in the universe. And all this wonder that we see "in the starry heavens above and the moral law within," as Kant says, should be attributed to a Cause, Maker, Creator, Harmonizer, and an all powerful Being who must indeed rule over all, but not control all. It seems to me that once we realize the existence of this Almighty Unmovable Mover, as Aristotle says, we can do no other than stand in awe. By awe I mean worship, and by worship I mean prayer and thanksgiving to Him who has been so kind to us.

Now I think we should try to produce a happy medium or as Aristotle called it a "golden mean." That is — moderation in all that we do. In working for this ideal we will realize the individualism of each person and the tremendous size and harmony of the universe along with it's Creator, who, by the way, must have created these individuals also — but the hard part seems to be in fitting the individuals, you and I, into this great universe, (unless we are very self-centered). I hold that we, as individuals, have a part in this great scheme, and I believe that we should seek to find and fulfil this place which is ours. In doing this, we will find happiness, peace, and contentment. By this I do not mean complacency, for we should be intellectually mature and religiously mature always — that is, listening to any new idea with an open mind, although we cannot be completely openminded because of our human limitations.

What does this plan accomplish? It is my belief that the universe is harmonized by the Great Harmonizer, who many call God. The universe is a part of His plan and is controlled by Him, but we are not. We are free! We have a choice of developing our inner likeness of God or of suppressing it until it moves farther and farther away from God, which is Hell. From the development of this soul within us comes as a by-product all the good that exists —such things as love, brotherhood, light, trust, life, beauty, fine arts, etc.

Once we enter into this plan and start developing our inner-likeness toward the appreciation of all the goods; we must, by necessity, impart this enjoyment to others. This is simply a psychological fact — when we are happy we like for those around us to be happy. Of course I am now speaking of happiness in the true sense. Therefore if our happiness came from developing our souls, we will want to help others to "see into" how they can develop their souls. (As a sidelight, I am thinking of mind and soul as synoomous.)

This is my philosophy of how I think we can make our lives richer. WHAT IS YOURS?

Dear Editor:

The following is a letter from Mr. Richard Irvine who took Mr. Fisher's place as principal of the Community School of Tehran in 1951.

"The Community School for English-speaking children was started approximately 30 years ago for the children of missionary families. It has now become a project in international educational evangelism, serving boys and girls from nursery through high school who come from about 30 nations around the world and who represent seven of the world's religions. As a foreign school for foreigners in Iran, this school provides full opportunity for effective school evangelism for sound American education, and for demonstrating Christian cooperation in spite of difference in race, religion, and cultural background."

—quoted from the Year Book of Prayer for Mission of the Presbyterian Church U.S.A.

Baseball

The major league clubs are making their way to their home grounds and sports writers around the country are picking their favorites. This reporter would like to take a hand at it himself. Here goes. . .

National League	American League
Milwaukee	New York
Brooklyn	Cleveland
Cincinnati	Boston
St. Louis	Detroit
Pittsburgh	Chicago
Philadelphia	Baltimore
New York	Kansas City

Basketball

The Boston Celtics and the St. Louis Hawks are currently squared away in their best-of-seven series for the N. B. A. crown at two games a piece.

Hockey

The Montreal Canadians led by Maurice Richard handed the Boston Bruins a 4-1 setback in the first game of the final round of the Stanley Cup Championship.

Boxing

Ralph Dupas defeated Vince Martinez at New Orleans after a heated dispute over whether or not Dupas was colored or not. (It was proved he wasn't.)

Tony Anthony scored a sensational knock out over Chuck Speiser, No. 1 contneder for light-heavy honors.

Anthony floored Speiser twice before the end came in the third round.

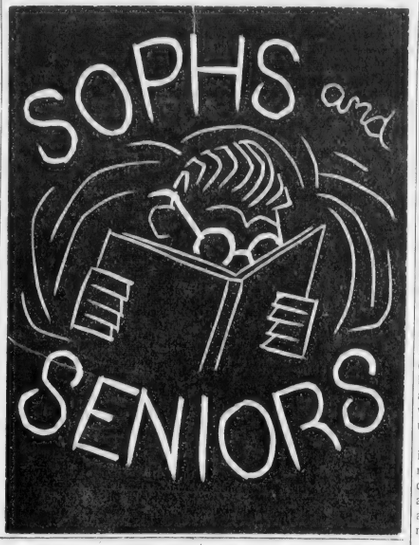
Anthony now meets ancient Archie Moore on June 7th.

In General

Maryville College has one win in the new diamond season and the team showed plenty of hustle.e This ball club with a couple of breaks could have a very good year. They deserve your support as do the tennis squad and the cindermen.

Let's all back our Spring Sports schedule and make it a winning one. With support it could be just that.

Clem Birkelback Elected YM Pres.



The Y.M.C.A. recently held its elections for next year's officers. The following were elected:

Clem Birkelback, President.

Scots Win Baseball Opener 6-5

The Maryville College Baseball team opened its 1957 season with a 6-5 victory over the Lincoln Memorial University Railsplitters. Don Hill paced the Maryville attack with a triple, double, and single in 4 times at bat. The Scots garnered 6 other hits for a total of 9. Winning pitcher Max Williamson gave up 6 hits in 7 innings and reliefer Fred Tepper threw blanks at the Railsplitters in his 2 inning stint. A fine throw by Earl Lawson and a great plate-blocking play by catcher Mike Talley saved the Scots from the tying run in the top of the ninth.

East Tennessee State College handed the Maryville College track squad a 78-53 defeat in the Scots opening meet of the season. The Highlanders couldn't match the depth of the squad from Johnson City. The Buccaneers big man was Ken Osborne who won the mile, two mile, and led their winning mile relay team. The Highlanders next meet is one week from today at Tusculum College. Intramurals....

The Intramural League has gotten under way with its spring sports lineup. Despite bad weather the softball league has opened.

Teams in the loop this year are as follows: Alpha Sig Hawks, Kappa Phi, Quakers, Holdouts, Outcasts, Alpha Sig Eagles and the Pre-Mins.

So far this week the Outcasts have defeated the Pre-Mins 11-9. Monday's game was postponed due to rain. The standings are incomplete just now due to the mixup in the schedule due to the weather.

The intramural track meet will be held in the near future.

All fellows not competing in varsity track are urged to come out. All events will be used as in regular meets.

A tennis tournament is also being talked about and further plans will be announced later.

There are plenty of chances for all fellows to get out and take a hand in something or other.

M.C. Film Series To Present Henry V.

Last night the stirring, religious film "Martin Luther" was shown in the theater and was the next to last film in the adult series.

The last film in the adult series will be shown on Tuesday night, April 30. The presentation will be Shakespeare's "Henry V" starring Laurence Olivier. The movie is in color and was made in England by Mr. Olivier during the war as a sort of morale builder for the English people. The story itself concerns a "low" period in English history and is climaxed by an English triumph. The movie was not shown in this country until after the war.

Many pepole believe that this is one of the finest films ever made. The acting is superb, especially Olivier's rendition of several of the Shakespearean speeches, and the filming is colorful and majestic.

There are also only two more films in the children's film series. The film this morning will be "Johnny on the Run", a J. Arthur Rank production. The last film is to be shown on April 20 but it has not yet been chosen.

At present there are six regularly appointed missionaries serving in Community School; Mr. and Mrs. Irvine were appointed and are supported by the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church U.S.A. The other four were appointed by the Board but are supported by the School. In addition to these permanent teachers there are six short term teachers who were appointed by the Board, but whose transportation and salaries are paid by the School. There are some six or seven teachers of various nationalities who have been appointed by the local Board of Directors of the School and whose salaries are paid by the School. So that you see there is a large staff of international and well qualified teachers. Since several of these teachers will be completing their three years of service this coming June new teachers are needed to take their places.

During the twelve years that Mr. Fisher was principal of the Community School and I was in charge of the Boarding for teachers and children of missionaries who were living in the provinces, there were 16 of these short term teachers who served from one to five years in the school. All of these young people count it one of the most enriching experiences of their lives. Some liked it so well that they returned to the States for seminary or other training and are now serving as regularly appointed missionaries in Iran or other countries. Others who have entered professional life in America or are "just plain housewives" often write us of how glad they are that they spent those years at Community School. I might say that at present most of the teachers live in a well-run "teacherage" though some prefer to live two or three together in an apartment of their own choosing.

Any one interested in going out to Community School may contact either Mr. Fisher or me for further information; or they may write directly to the Personnel Director of the Board for more detailed information or answers to their questions. Letters should be addressed to:

Mr. Theodore F. Romig
Personnel Secretary
Board of Foreign Missions
Presbyterian Church U.S.A.
156 Fifth Ave.
New York, New York

I so hope some one in Maryville College will feel the call to go out to Community School. Miss Joan Platt who graduated from Maryville College in 1952 and has been teaching for five years at Community School is a wonderful representative of Maryville.

Very sincerely yours,
Franke S. Fisher (Mrs. C. B.)

TALK OF THE WEEK By Sue Settle

There is a legend that at the time of the Crucifixion, the dogwood tree was as large as the oak and the other trees of the forest. And its wood was firm, and so strong that it was chosen as timber for the Cross. The dogwood tree felt greatly distressed that its wood should be used for such a cruel purpose, and Jesus, nailed there on the cross, in His pity for all sorrow and suffering said:

"Because of your regret and pity for My suffering never again shall the dogwood tree grow large enough to be used for a cross. Henceforth it shall be slender and bent and twisted and its blossoms shall be in the form of a cross, two long and two short petals. And in the center of the outer edge of each petal there will be nail prints, brown with rust, and stained with red, and in the center of the flower will be a crown, as of thorns, so that all who see it will remember."

Sunrise Service To Climax Holy Week Events

Student and faculty observance of the Easter season will climax tomorrow morning with the annual Easter Sunrise Service to be presented at 5:56 a.m. in the amphitheatre in the college woods. The service will begin a day of services ending with the special Easter Vespers at 7:00 p.m.

Observance of Holy Week by the college community has been carried forward since Palm Sunday in the chapel programs. Each day a member of the faculty read the section of the New Testament Record telling of the events of the corresponding day of Jesus' last week. This plan was followed on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Saturday, with a special service on Friday.

The Good Friday Service presented yesterday began with announcemnts, hymn, and the reading of the account of the crucifixion. Meditations upon the seven words from the cross were given by Miss Craven, Miss Cartledge, and Dr. Barker with responses from the choir. The choir presented two anthems and the account of the burial was read from the Bible.

The program tomorrow will begin at 4:30 a.m. The band will begin to play at various points on the campus and will be stationed in the woods to play as the students, faculty, and guests gather in the amphitheater. The service will begin at 5:56 a.m., the official time of the sunrise, according to the United States Weather Station at the airport. Dr. Lloyd will serve as minister of the service, and the choir will sing.

Services will, of course, be held downtown in the community churches later in the morning. Dinner will be at the usual time, and in the afternoon special dating privileges will be in order. The Vespers service at 7:00 p.m. will have a special Easter theme with Dr. Lloyd as speaker and special music by the choir.

Religious Upstart Put To Death

As a crowning feature of the Passover Week here in Jerusalem a carpenter and self-styled rabbi was tried, convicted, and crucified by Roman authority. There seems to be some question as to the legality of the trial, since there is no charge listed on the court records other than blasphemy, which is not punishable by death according to Roman law. It is also rumored that the Sanhedrin dispensed with customary procedure in meeting at night to issue the warrant for this man's arrest. If this is true, it represents an illegal action on the part of the Sanhedrin.

Having been convicted (on the basis of what appears to have been false testimony) the accused was taken by the leaders of the Sanhedrin to the Roman governor. It is here noted that the Sanhedrin lacks the power to pronounce the death sentence, therefore the Roman authority was called upon.

During the cross examination by governor Pilate, the accused man known as Jesus, was asked whether he was the son of God. He, evading the question, replied, "Thou has said." The crowd gathered in the court chamber was further surprized when he refused to make any further answer to the charges against him. Apparently the governor felt that this man was not deserving of the death penalty, but was forced to yield to the sentiments of mob, who responded with the cry "Crucify him!" Still trying to favor the crowd and also save the life of this Jesus, Pilate, referring to the custom of releasing one man from the prison at the Passover, asked if he should release Jesus or Barabbas, the infamous thief, who was the that time in the custody of the authorities. Their response was in favor of releasing Barabbas and crucifying Jesus.

The mob then took the prisoner to the hill locally known as Calvary, forcing him to carry his own cross. Here he was nailed to the cross and crucified between two thieves. Governor Pilate ordered a plaque reading "Jesus of Nazareth, King of the Jews" to be placed over his cross.

Unexplained is the darkness which covered the area from the sixth to the ninth hour. At the ninth hour Jesus cried out "My God, why has thou forsaken me?" This outburst caused no little commotion among the bystanders. Having said this, Jesus died. Another unexplained phenomenon is the earthquake which occurred at the moment of his death.

A centurion who witnessed this crucifixion and the unexplained events which accompanied it, was overheard to remark, 'Truly this man was the Son of God!" This is one individual's opinion. The question remains — Whas he the Son of God?

Lloyd To Address

Our president will address a meeting of the men of the Asheville, North Carolina, First Presbyterian Church on Wednesday, April 24.

At the present time there are over one hundred chapters with more than fifty thousand members. The official journal is Social Science, which is published quarterly.

The primary purpose of Pi Gamma Mu is "to improve scholarship in the social studies and to achieve synthesis therein." Therefore, any alumnus, faculty member, senior or junior of good moral character may be elected to membership who (1) possesses an overall average of 2.0 in his college work, (2) possesses an average of 2.0 in all social science courses taken in college, (3) has not failed any college course, (4) has taken at least twenty semester hours of social science in college.

Charter members of Tennessee Epsilon Chapter are Professors Ainsworth, Case, Cragan, Fisher, Witherspoon and Anita Cole, Edgar Drum, Isabel Easley, Elinore Koster, James Marsh, Philip Muir, Thomas Perry, William Schofield, Janie Wall, Earl Whaley and William Wheatley. It also entitles one to a two-year subscription to the journal and a key permit.

Alpha Sigma To Amend Constitutio

A committee headed by Will Roberts has been studying the society's constitution and will make its report this evening at the meeting. Discussion and voting on a revised concept of membership and on setting a deadline for payment of dues will take place. Other measures to be considered and voted upon at a later date will be: a clause regarding pin privileges, a change in pledging, rushing and initiation of new members, and revising the quorum clause. These changes, if accepted, will appear in a handbook to be issued early next semester.

Members may shortly look forward to the Manning's picnic, a hike, and the Mr. Mac day banquet. It is hoped that the officers and members will be present this evening to transact the current business and consider amendments.

"King Of Kings" To Be Shown

At 8:00 p.m. this evening in the Chapel Sheatre, the Y will present the full length motion picture "King of Kings", a Cecil B. DeMille production.

Regional Y Conference To Be Held At Berea, Kentucky

The Southern Regional conference of the YW and YMCA's will be held this year at Berea College, Berea, Kentucky, June 5-12.

A leadership team headed by Dr. Chandran Davanesen of the Madras Christian College in India will develop the theme of the Christian student and our revolutionary world.

The conference will seek to help the student understand the world in which he lives and encourage him to relate in practical ways his knowledge to his faith as he thinks and acts his responsibility in life.

By promoting a greater understanding of the function and purpose of the Y, the conference is to develop student leadership that will carry the program to the local associations.

Coming from a region of nine states, students will represent large universities and small junior colleges. Through dicussion and comparison these representatives will seek to find their place as part of a world wide movement.

"A Shame, Lady!"

"Missy, what a lady you are! Ain't you tired of this one square of earth and these funny glass fixin's? Dear Lady, why do you shake your head, No? Now I'm sorry, I didn't mean to make you all mad. Oh, so you ain't tired of this glass, steel, and brick deal! What do you do here? I'll bet you are a silent observer, eh? Yep, I guessed it! I've heard 'em say you shield the late ones who come to an early morning meeting. That's something I've never figured out, Lady. This meeting, because so many come and every one's in such a hurry to get there. But Missey, what about the few who sorta hover about you until you give them the signal that all is clear? Oh, so they call this a chapel service and those that are always behind and look so sheepish are just late for the works, huh?

"Yep, I can never figure you women out, always fussy if anyone's not on time, but then you'll wave your arms like crazy to help them that don't make it!

"Lady, I've watched you for quite a spell. Why, I can even remember when you first come. Boy, was you a sight—right at that long ganglin' age, so awkward that the ivy couldn't figure if it was safe to run along beside you or not. I guess your favorite color is green. I see you wear it a lot. No, wait, in this white dress you look like an angel! I guess you like lookin' that way. But Missey, you got brownish stains on your angel dress! That's too bad, ain't it? What did you say— — it was a shame? What was a shame, Missey? Oh yes, the stains, yes it is!

"Lady, why do you smile all the time? You have so little to say. You smile to kinda greet people,I guess. For you who never takes up roots and moves, you sure know lots of people. I here tell that you have more friends than anyone around here. How do you figure it? Oh, I see, everyone's bound to oversleep once in a while and then when that noisy fellow up there in that tower says his piece, they figure they need a friend on the outside of that morning meeting that'll smile as they go whizzen' in!

"Well, Miss pretty Lady, I'll be seein' you! Take care of all your buddies! —By the way, those stains on your angel dress looks to me like blood, and each spot is all bumpy! You're mumblin' something about a Lamb—yep, guess that material of your dress is soft and gentle as a Lamb You better have those stains taken out! Oh, you say they'se there to stay! —Well, it's a pity, Lady. A Shame!"

—B.L.C.

"Sigh"

This is that of year when all unsuspecting Maryvillians are caught day dreaming. The scientific name for it is SPRING FEVER. Beware of it—it is wonderfully dangerous.

Some traits accompaning this killer are wandering minds, following such subjects as new Easter outfits, new hats, baseball and spring dances. Other traits are laziness and a general all around feeling to ignore studies.

The final exams are closing in fast—don't be one of the victims of the above mentioned disease because if you fall to this plight you'll be greeted by the one writing this warning. Take heed—but enjoy the Spring it's a wonderful time of year.

Well I've done everything I can to warn you so the rest is up to you now. So long for the time being maybe we'll meet somewhere on campus—perhaps the woods or siting out in the shade of a big old tree.

Who knows where it will be but until then, "Tennis Anyone?"

—J.E.Q.

The Last Word

Tomorrow morning we will get up at 5:00 to go to the sunrise service. As we sit on the cold ground and shiver, we will probably begin to wonder just why on earth we climbed out of a nice warm bed just to see the sun rise and hear the choir sing, "Alleluia, He is risen!" Not that we don't believe that indeed He is risen, but what's so special about this particular Easter: Why should we go to hear repeated something we've been told and believed for most of our lives? We begin to wonder, can't somebody say something new about Easter? Every year we hear the same sermons, and sing the same hyns. Perhaps we're just a little tired of it. But isn't this missing the point completely? The resurrection of Christ is the biggest news story in history—the scoop of eternity. When we sing "Christ the Lord is risen today," maybe we should stop and think just why that "today" was put in that line. For the resurrection is not an isolated event in history, it is a news scoop as vital now as it was nineteen hundred years ago, and will be nineteen hundred years from now. We can let it become stale and unimportant just as we can ignore headlines on a murder case or a national election, but if this is the case, we can blame no one but oursleves if the wonder of the resurrection has become stale—on Eastr, or any other day of the year! To paraphrase the words of the hymn—what more can be said than to you has been said?

MY COUSIN

Scots & Soda

By Peter Rabbit

Well, I have a hard life, especially around this time of year, but this year just beats all. Last week-end two hundred of my children decided to revolt against the way I run the place, and so they refused to help me color eggs. How eggsperating! What was even worse, they wouldn't even take one little hop down the bunny trail. Happy Easter day, humph.

I tried to interest my three little friends, Chick, Chick, and Presto in dyeing. I guess I didn't state my case very well because before you could say one and one make at least four, they were gone. Oh well, say la vie.

There being no mail delivery on Saturday, I knew that I had to hurry. No time for the paws that refreshes. No time to wave hello, goodbye, no time to fix dessert. But I made it to chapel!

I hurried back to that hole in the ground that I call home. I thunk and thunk. . . till.

INSPIRATION!

I wrote a letter to the Echo. There is no better way to express your views, your suggestions for improvements, and your constructive criticism than through a letter to the editor. Let other know what you are thinking. Thimk. (This has been a paid political announcement).

That Maryville spirit came through again. A delegation from the YCAM and YCAW came to speak to my four hundred children. They came with a smile and an outstretched hand, but we didn't have anything to give to them.

You can imagine how busy we were preparing for our out of the state guests. It was homecoming and open house combined. I think you how eggsactly what I mean.

The delegation started their speeches. The first one told a yolk. Laugh, I thought I'd dye!

Then one who smiled a lot got up and made a lot of fancy promises, like campaign speeches. He promised high scholarship, low expenses, and positive Christian emphasis. I could tell that made quite an impression on my six hundred children.

The next promised them that they could hop in the woods on Easter, and go to town any night of the week, except Sunday, of course. His speech wasn't nearly as effective because he talked so long, etc., etc., etc. . .

The next one told a short tail, about the land of cotton.

Finally, a gentleman who had trouble with his glasses (he kept taking them off and on) stood up and said, "I have been asked to announce that we are on B schedule for the rest of the week." This so tickled my eight hundred children that, gee wiskers, they stood up and new blue cheered. I knew then that I had them in the palm of my paw. I whistled Here Comes Peter Cottontail happily. Oh joy (in the dishpan).

To Work!

The next morning after an excellent breakfast personally and lovingly supervised by the dietician, we began to work on the eggs. Art 331 designed the patterns, which we copied.

You should have seen how rabbitly they worked. Some of them worked so long and hard that they got pink-eye strain. And that is serious.

We had a basket brigade, too. The class in basket weaving 222 was at last coming into its own. What shapes, what forms. . . on the baskets.

We had the Echo staff in cutting up old Echoes to make grass for the baskets (hey, this one wasn't paid for).

We had fourteen leading students with very outstanding records of service to the school make a dandylion chain. O my, we really worked.

As I tucked in my one thousand children that night, I knew deep in my heart that they had really worked. Really.

So you can see my life has been frantic recently. Just hope that I get around to all the trusting little children, especially those at Maryville who helped us so much.

That's the end of my tail, Happy Easter.

'Ears to ya.

Voices, Masks, and Shadows

By Mary Turner

The new books that have just come into the library cover many interesting and different fields. These are just a few examples of the wide range of new books.

An Economic Survey of Communist China by Yuan-Li Wu is an exhaustive survey from original sources of communist China's economic resources pointing up China's industrial and military potential. The importance of this work is the fact that disclosure of "vital" economic information in Communist China is a capital crime today.

The Old Story of Salvation by Sophia Lyon Falls. This book draws the confusing scenes of the Bible together to make one magnificient complete drama. Here is an opportunity for readers to see and feel the impact of the story The narrative from beginning to end is in majestic style of King James version.

Another new book is Eleven Verse Plays — 1922-1939 by Maxwell Anderson. Mr. Anderson's plays need no introduction. These eleven are representative of a decade of Mr. Anderson's own creative growth. In this collection there are full-length, modern and historical dramas and two shorter plays.

Hypnosis and its Therapeutic Applications — edited by Roy M. Dorcus, PhD. This is a presentation of hypnosis theory, results of experiments and applications for therapy. The book was written by seven psychologists, who show how hypnosis can be useful in modern times.

Now to turn to the motion picture screens of Maryville.

At the Park starting today "Seven Men from Now" and also "The Dam Busters" (Warner). This movie illustrates the quality and style of Britain's individual achievements during World War II. The hero of this picture is a five-ton bomb; and though other nations might point with pride to their glories, few but the British could have developed such a compelling and incere drama. To a scientist engineer Barnes Wallis came the idea for a strange new bomb — capable of destroying dams at the gateway of the Ruhr Valley. When he finally licked the structural problem of the bomb, he had many other troubles to cope with. Finally in May, 1943, Wing Commander Gibson and his crew dropped bombs like bowling balls and rolled up one of Britain's highest scores of the war. This story stands up as good drama and shows well-rounded characterization of principals. Michael Redgrave is hard-working, yet human in playing the dedicated Barnes Wallis.

Sunday and Monday, "The Maverick Queen", starring Joan Crawford is playing at the Park.

Tuesday and Wednesday, "Animal World," (a Walt Disney Production) and "The Searchers" (Warner) starring John Wayne and Jeffrey Hunter. This picture features some of the finest technicolor photography ever seen. Each character has been well developed. The story is adapted from Alan LeMays novel of frontier life in the southwest. It tells of the quest of two men (Hunter and Wayne) for a lost relatives (a young girl captured by a Comanche in an Indian raid on the family homestead). The plot is nothing unusual, but their pursuits across the desert and snow country are what makes it so interesting. The girl is finally found living as a Comanche and has grown up with the tribe. The Red skins have all the malice, temperament and pride of outraged savages.

Thursday and Friday, "Birds and Bees" and "Desperate Hours" are playing at the Park.

"The Birds and The Bees" starring George Gobel (Paramount) is the story of a Simple-Simon Gobel, heir to a frankfurter for tune, bothered by fortune hunters, Niven and Gaynor. In the middle of the picture, George finds out that Mitzi wants his money, not him, so he renounces her. The story cunningly makes it's jokes as physical as possible. When George isn't taking falls on land, sea and abroad, he is either getting pie in the face, making love to a taller girl (Mitzi), or playing straight man to David Niven. The bright note in this light little comedy is the catchy title song.

"The Desperate Hours" is a story of an Indianapolis family held prisoners in their own home by three convicts who will stop at nothing. The convicts are played by Humphrey Bogart. Dewey Martin and Robert Middleton. The family consists of Fredrick March (father), Martha Scott (mother), Mary Murphey (daughter), and Richard Eyer (son). They find that there is no way out because if they call the police they would all die. They continue life in their normal way even though the convicts have a gun at their heads every second of the day. The story ends with a savage snapper. This story has been called an almost perfect melodrama by critics.

Saturday, at the Park, "The Lone Ranger" and "Ten Tall Men" are playing. "Ten Tall Men' (Columbia) is a tall, adventure tale of the French Foreign Legion. It stars Burt Lancaster as the devil-may-care sergeant who gets nine, rough, tough men from the Legion's brig for a dangerous mission. The regiment is away from the fort. The Riff tribes are going to attack. Lancaster's outnumbered men must hold them off until reinforcements come. It turns out to be fairly pleasant for them. Burt falls for a Riff chieftain's daughter (Jody Lawrence) and has his hands full with her problems and his competition Everything ends happily.

Starting Saturday and lasting until Wednesday is the "King and Four Queens" starring Clark Gable.

There is enthusiasm everywhere with the cast members as they begin practice on the graduation play "Medea."

Science Students Receive Awards

Two students in the Department of Science were recently awarded a copy of the current edition of the Handbook of Physics and Chemistry. Bob Muir, a sophomore enrolled in the beginning course in physics, and Jo Anne Patty, a Freshman enrolled in beginning chemistry, received the award in their respective departments.

The awards are made by the Chemical Rubber Publishing Company, publishers of the Handbook, which is recognized as one of the most valuable reference books in physical science and mathematics. The student receiving the book must be a student at the beginning level who plans to take further courses in chemistry or physics. The student's performance must show above average ability and a promise of success in his study of science. The award, in addition to the honor involved in receiving it, is designed to furnish the student with a valuable tool for later study.

The big story of course is the official opening of the Big League season. President Eisenhower thew out the first ball at Washington and watched the Baltimore Orioles edge the Washington Senators 7-6 in extra innings.

On the first full day of action, in the American League:

Boston 4—Baltimore 2—at Baltimore
New York 2—Washington 1—at New York
Kansas City 2—Detroit 1—At Kansas City
Chicago 3—Cleveland 2—at Cleveland (11 innings)

In the National League, the first day went as follows:

St. Louis 13—Cincinnati 4—at Cincinnati
Pittsburgh 9—New York 2—at Pittsburgh
Milwaukee 4—Chicago 1—at Chicago
Brooklyn 7—Phillies 6—at Philadelphia (12 innings)

One of the heroes of opening day action was Warren Spahn who twirled a 4-hiter at the Chicago Cubs.

Herb Scone and Billy Pierce, two great lefties of the American loop hurled against each other and both looked sharp in the new season opener.

Basketball

The Boston Celtics are new World Champs as they edged the St. Louis Hawks 125-123 in double overtime in the final of 7 games.

Bob Petit scored 39 points and rookie Tom Heinsohn hit for 37 markers to lead his mates to victory.

ECHO FORUM

Prof. Commodore Fisher
Maryville College
Maryville, Tennessee
Dear Folks:

We have been most happy to have your letters, even though we have been slow in answering them. It is good to hear what you folks are doing and to realize again that we have so much in common.

I am spending two days a week in Princeton, at both the seminary and the university, studying Christianity and other religions and Persian in the Department of Oriental Studies. All very enjoyable and worthwhile. We have spent a great deal of time visiting our churches, renewing old friendships, making new ones, and finding lots of interest in Iran, the mission and in our school. There is considerable interest in our teaching opportunities and we have several applications in the mail, but not enough, as usual. In addition, I am visiting schools here in Jersey, and finding much to improve our program in Tenran.

By all means do make a strong appeal for teachers. Joan has become one of our finest teachers. Parents think the world of her. Boys and girls all love her. Send us more like her.

Our needs:

A married couple for school "chaplaincy"

A teacher for Bible and school evangelism

Two elementary school teachers

Two high school English-history teachers

Two high school match-science teachers

Two teachers for health and physical education, one each for boys and for girls, to teach at all school levels.

These may be men or women as appropriate, married or single (married, of course, both teach), for special term of three years or for regular appointment for lifetime service. An individual or couple need not exactly "fit" one of the listed categories. If the people are the right people we can arrange teaching assignments, as you well know. So make a strong appeal. And it need not be limited to the Maryville area.

If possible I would very much like to come to the college personally, but I am not sure how this might work out. I will write Ted Romig, personnel secretary, about it, and suggest you write him also. Perhaps it can be arranged. I will be recruiting in about half a dozen colleges this winter and hope Maryville will be one. Of course, since you are there it might be well to cover another institution which might not be reached personally. We'll see.

We wish for you a blessed New Year, and we would at least like to see you folks before we go back in the summer. We are here through June, and leave the country for Iran in mid-July. Our best to you,

Dick Iwine

Let us transpose Maryville College to Rome sometime before Christ, where it becomes a similar institution of higher learning. We would be without Vespers, the choir, YMCA, YWCA, Parish, Chapel, sunrise service, February meeting, Messiah, a faculty with a Christian philosophy, which makes education meaningful instead of disputable, and Bible courses in which we learn the only true way to live,

What is left? We still have comps, special studies, blue books, quizzes; we can choose any philosophy we wish — and change it often, which of course is inevitable since it is man-inspired. Does this encourage the worship of God — which is the only reason we are in the world?

Socrates was possibly a student at this time. He did worship God and we remember him for this reason. He was criticized then; we approve of him now. But we are living after Christ, and there is a difference. What we have now are those things which benefit us most and which were made possible for us by the life, death, and resurrection of Christ.

Are we still in Rome? Do we live as though there is no Easter?

I Corinthians 2:14 "The unspiritual man does not receive the gifts of the Spirit of God, for they are folly to him, and he is not able to understand them because they are spiritually discerned."

SCOTS WIN THREE GAMES

The Maryville College Baseball team extended its winning streak to 4 games with wins over Milligan, Eastern Kentucky State, and Hiwassee.

In a deluge of errors the Scotties outscored the Milligan Bufs 11-7. Maryville was charged with 10 errors, Milligan with 8. Jack Woodhall with 3 hits and Jim Harris with 2 paced the Scottie attack. Bill Evans was successful in his first pitching assignment of the season.

A fine pitching performance by Fred Tepper and some alert base running led the Highlanders to an 8-5 victory over Eastern Kentucky. Tepper was in real trouble only in the last inning and Max Williamson put out the fire. Although outhit 11-9 by the Staters, the Scots took advantage of every State miscue to gain the win. Bill Evans, with 3 for 5, was the Scots big gun.

The Highlanders dumped Hiwassee 11-3 for the season's fourth straight triumph. Bill Dent with 4 hits was the big man for the Highlanders. Bill Evans won his 2nd game of the season. Earl Lawson homered for the Scots.

Laurel Lake Site Of Class Picnics

Laurel Lake will be the scene of the junior class picnic April 23. While the seniors and sophomores indulge in careful thinking, juniors will enjoy swimming, softball and volleyball, square dancing, and hiking, weather permitting. Busses leave the campus at 1:30, to return before 10:30.

Plans for the freshman picnic are indefinite.

Pilgrimages To Historical Sites In State Planned For Last Week Of April

NASHVILLE — History-conscious Tennesseans and their out-of-state guests will go on pilgrimage to scores of historic sites throughout the state during the last week of April.

The Sixth Annual Pilgrimage of the Association For the Preservation of Tennessee Antiquities, scheduled for the week of April 21-28, is expected to bring hundreds of native-born Tennesseans and visiting tourists into historic homes throughout the state.

Eight separate tours are planned, Mrs. Charles Schumacher, of Surgoinsville, Tenn., pilgrimage chairman, announced this week. Each will be sponsored and conducted by a local APTA chapter.

Local pilgrimages have been arranged as follows:

Chattanooga, April 21-28; Johnson City, April 24-25; Nashville, April 26-27; Knoxville, April 27-28; Jefferson County, April 26; Gallatin, April 27-28; Franklin, April 27-28; and Rogersville, April 27-28.

A proclamation by Gov. Frank Clement has designated the pilgrimage week as "Tennessee Week." The chief executive, in his proclamation, urged support of the APTA tours. Tennessee, he said, has "a unique culture"; and he pointed out that the state government he heads has "a steady interest' in the preservation of the state's historical heritage.

Local chapters and their presidents are as follows: Nashville, Mrs. Alston P. Rhett; Kingsport, Mrs. M. D. Massengill; Morristown, Miss Meta Goodson; New Market, Mrs. R. G. McGoldrick; Johnson City, Mrs. Milburn Divine; Surgoinsville, Mrs. Charles Schumacher; Elizabethton, Mrs. Frank Siler and Miss Carrie Hunter; Boyd's Creek, Mrs. Ben Brabson; Chattanooga, Mrs. Carter Patten; Sowanee, Mrs. Harold Rae Flintoff.

Shelbyville, Mrs. Knox Pitts; Lebanon, Mrs. M. S. Howard; Gallatin, Mrs. Will Wemyss; Mt. Pleasant, Mrs. Neal Swentzel; Pulaski, Mrs. James A. Blackburn; Memphis, Mrs. Thomas N. Coppedge; Jackson, Mrs. Clarence Lee Johnson; Brownsville, Mrs. Thomas D. Owen.

Rugby, Mrs. Will Walton; Knoxville, Mrs. William N. Garrett; Cookeville, Mrs. Robert W. Lowe; Murfreesboro, Mrs. R. F. Carney; Rutledge, Mrs. Lon Cantwell; Bolivier, Mrs. Hugh B. McClung; Sevierville, Mrs. E. W. Paine; Fayetteville, Mrs. Ernest Rees; Bristol, Mrs. Arthur King; and Franklin, Mrs. John H. Amos.

INTERMEZZO

Would you be singing?
I say the song is but discordent noise.
You prate of lovely lyric melodies.
Lines of music, swift and soaring,
Crash and fall — and who is he
With power to make them soar again?
I too would sing, had I the power,
My soul within me vibrates
In harmony, arranged by God,
At last best a triad, sounding true.
But here and now the harmony
Is gone. The soul-strings wildly
Shake and waver from the trueness of the pitch.
My song is discord,
understandable to none.
(Least of all to me.)
The harmonies of other souls I do not understand,
For with no inner clarity of pitch,
How may I discern the trueness of another's song?
I would sing, as I have sung,
A sweeping melody, in counterpoint with other songs,
A glorious fugue of life.
But the pitch is false, the notes untrue . . .
I dare not sing.

Fashions

By Bobbye Carson

A Sweater Survey has been taken by the 202 Textiles Home Economics Class. Their report is as follows:

For this survey, 67 girls were interviewed. Of this number, 18 were freshmen; 18, sophomores; 17, juniors; 14, seniors.

The 18 sophomores and the 18 freshmen had as an average, 11 sweaters per girl. The 17 juniors averaged 11.7 as an individual number. The 14 seniors have an average of 13 sweaters apiece.

This number of 67 chose the following sweater fiber as their favorites and have given reasons why:

cashmere: because it is soft, durable, easy to care for, however they are expensive.

lambswool: it is soft, durable and looks expensive but isn't.

fur-blends: they are very soft, and there is no pilling.

Banlon: it holds its shape, does not mat, is easily cared for, doesn't pile.

Orlon: it is easily cared for, holds its shape, and is inexpensive.

Least popular fabrics are:

100% wool: because some people are allergic to them, they need expensive care, and there is pilling.

100% nylon: because it stretches, clings, and shows signs of pilling.

100% Orlon: because it lacks body, is "flimsy", and clings.

Most girls interviewed launder their own synthetic fiber sweaters and approximately one-third of them send their wool sweaters to the dry-leaners and the rest wash their own in Woolite Cold water soap. Only approximately three girls out of the 67 interviewed were aware of a laundry preparation which cuts down static electricity in synthetic fiber garments.

The majority of girls interviewed had a very vague idea as to what full-fashioning means in sweater. When this term was better explained to them, it was learned that they highly favor full fashioned sweaters to the non full fashioned ones.

Some quotes from those approached on the subject describing the full-fashioned look are: "sleeve decorations", "funny little stitches at the shoulder", at represents a "better sweater," or it gives the garment a "more expensive" look. Actually, full-fashioning is a term which describes the way in which the sweater was constructed. Regular sweaters are cut out of knitted fabric and are sewn together—the sleeve is set in as it would be in a blouse. Full-fashioned sweaters are knitted to size and shape by decreaisng the number of stitches at the armhole—the "funny" little marks or the shoulders" are the places where there is a decrease in stitches.

Full-fashioned sweaters are much neater in fit through the shoulder-line, and are popular for that reason.

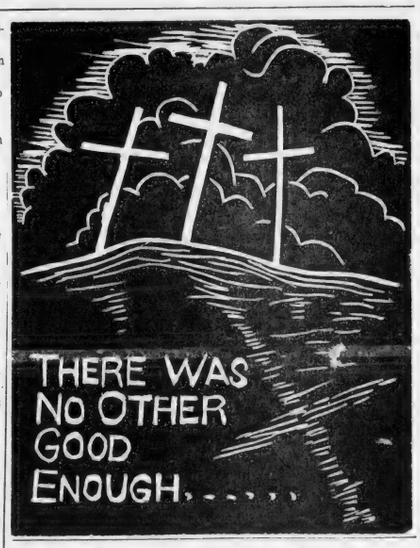
Isaiah Chapter 53



Who has believed what we have heard?
And to whom has the arm of the Lord been revealed?
For he grew up before him like a young plant, and like the root out of dry ground;
he had no form or comeliness that we should look at him,
and no beauty that we should desire him.
He was despised and rejected by men;
a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief;
and as one from whom men hide their faces
he was despised, and we esteemed him not.

Surely he has borne our griefs and carried our sorrows;
yet we esteemed him stricken,
smitten by God, and afflicted.
But he was wounded for our transgressions,
he was bruised for our iniquities;
upon him was the chastisement that made us whole,
and with his stripes we are healed.

All we like sheep have gone astray;
we have turned every one to his own way;
And the Lord has laid on him the iniquity of us all.
He was oppressed, and he was afflicted,
yet he opened not his mouth;
like a lamb that is led to the slaughter, and like a sheep that before its shearers is dumb
so he opened not his mouth.
By oppression and judgment he was taken away;
and as for his generation, who considered that he was cut off out of the land of the living, stricken for the transgression of my people?
And they made his grave with the wicked and with a rich man in his death, although he had done no violence,
and there was no deceit in his mouth.
Yet it was the will of the Lord to bruise him;
he has put him to grief,
when he makes himself an offering for sin,
he shall see his offspring,
he shall prolong his days;
the will of the Lord shall prosper in his hand;
he shall see the fruit of the travail of his soul and be satisfied;
by his knowledge shall the righteous one, my servant,
make many to be accounted right righteous;
therefore he shall bear their iniquities.
Therefore I will divide him a portion with the great,
because he poured out his soul to death,
and was numbered with the transgressors;
yet he bore the sin of many,
and made intercession for the transgressors.

Philippians, Chapter 2 Verses 5-11

Christ Jesus, who, though he was in the form of God, did not count equality with God any thing to be grasped,
but emptied himself,
taking the form of a servant,
being born in the likeness of men.
And being found in human form
he humbled himself and became obedient unto death even death on a cross.
Therefore God has highly exalted him and bestowed on him the name which is above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow,
in hoaven and on earth,
and every tongue confess that Jesus Christ is Lord,
To the glory of God the Father.

Three hermits lived in a cave. One day a white horse ran by outside. Two years later one hermit said, "Certainly was a pretty black horse that ran by a little while ago."

Three years later a second hermit said, "That wasn't black, 'twas grey."

Ten years later, the third hermit said, "If there's going to be this constant bickering, I'm going to leave."

Graduating Seniors Reveal Their Plans

by Margaret Longfellow and Mary Turner

Following the graduation exercises this coming May 22, many new Maryville alumni will be going separate ways — many to continue their education, others to enter the fields of industry and business, and some to settle down to the business of being married. Some of the members of the class are still undecided as to what their future plans will be, but all are looking forward to what the next year holds in store for them

David Anderson expects to be drafted in the near future.

Elinor Bass plans to be married in May and may enter the field of social work.

Mildred Beard will teach home economics in a Presbyterian National Missions school in Utah.

Virginia Beebout will work as a camp counselor this summer and will hold a teaching position in the Pittsburgh or Cleveland area this fall.

Alice Blackburn has no definite plans for next year.

Evelyn Blackburn plans to be married and teach in the Maryville area.

Elaine Bowman hopes to do social work.

Adlai Boyd will enter Union Theological Seminary in Rich-

Band Pop Concert Scheduled Tuesday

The band has tentatively scheduled another pop concert on Tuesday, April 30, at 6:45 in the Chapel court.

The program will consist of "Trumpet Voluntery" by Purcell. "Pomp and Circumstance" by Elgar, and "Espana Rhapsody" by Chabrier. Several marches will also be included.

M.C. Film Series To Give Henry V

At 8:00 p.m. Tuesday, April 30, the last moving picture of the current Film Series, the unusual J. Arthur Rank production of Shakespeare's "Henry V", directed by Lawrence Oliver, will be presented in the chapel theater.

Produced in England during Wrold War II to build British morale, the play was filmed in a manner affording some unique views of dramatic methods used in the Elizabethan Theatre. Some of the action, which follows the lines of the play, was shot in such a theatre, while other scenes are genuinely French, depicting Henry in such moments as the triumphant Battle of Agincourt and at his wedding with Catherine.

The play, supposed to be the eighteenth of Shakespeare's to be presented, was first performed about 1599. The first genuine version to be published appeared in the First Folio, which contained all 37 of Shakespeare's plays except "Perecles."

Recorded as a brilliant soldier and a firm and capable ruler, Henry V became king of England in 1413. Harsh by nature, merciless toward his enemies, Henry aroused among his subjects more enthusiasm for the war in France then had any of his predecessors.

He achieved a settlement of this conflict much to England's advantage, by virtue of which he married the daughter of the French monarch, Charles VI. Two years afterward Henry suffered a fatal illness which placed their offspring, Henry VI, on the English throne. A few years later, at the death of his grandfather, Henry also claimed the throne of France.

Robert Barr Stewart Will Lead Vespers

The Reverend Robert Barr Stewart, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church of Chattanooga, will be the speaker at Vespers tomorrow evening in the Chapel at 7:00.

Mr Stewart has recently come to Chattanooga from New Jersey.

LECTURE

Dr. C. J. Ruilmann will deliver the last lecture of the current series Monday at 8:15 in the Theater. The topic will be "Mental Health." Further details were not available at press time.

Student Art Exhibit Will Include "Fugitive," "What In Hell,"

by Sue Settle

Student art work by majors and non-majors will be on display in the Fine Arts gallery after the opening 7:30 p.m. April 30.

The exhibit will include oils, pastels, watercolors, sketches, sculpture, ceramics, and constructions. From the sophomores comes a graphic arts display including serigraphs, woodcuts, and etchings and aquatints, done in the department this year for the first time.

"What in Hell" portrays the frustration of a man caught in the confusion of hell. It is a construction in wire by Ted McDaniels. The serigraph "Fugitive," by Yeb Yun, will be officially displayed although many bright reproductions of it have already appeared in various dormitory rooms on campus. Street scenes from downtown Maryville are described in a series of ink sketches by Jan Johnston. The series shows groups of people gathered together on a Saturday afternoon when everybody comes to town. An array of different personalities and odd-looking characters comes from the sculpture class with heads molded in clay and covered with a finish of shellac and oil paint. Included in this group is a black glazed ceramic head by Gail Harrison.

Also included in the sculpture group is "Crucifixion", by Dough Stubblefield. This is a geometric type of sculpture chiseled from a mixture of vermiculite and cement. It shows Christ on the cross with the two thieves on either side. Oil paintings will include "Still Life," an abstraction by Natalie Richards. Two fighting chickens and a chick is the theme of a painting by Barbara Wilkie. The chickens are worked into a design in yellows, greens, browns, and blues.

Pottery from the ceramics class, and various types of art from the art education class will be included in the exhibit. A young look at life revealed through paintings and ceramic pieces is the contribution of pre-school children.

These and many other works by budding young artists will be on display throughout the rest of the semester.

It Might Not Be Leap Year But . . .

by Virginia Hine

Well, girls, this is the day! Have you asked that fellow yet? Asked him to what? Why, to the glee club jeans drag, of course. It's tonight, you know, at 8:00. Time is running short. Don't forget that the fellow has to have a corsage. They're even giving prizes, you know — for the prettiest, the funniest, and the most original.

Women of Maryville, arise! This is your one opportunity of the year to ask the fellows out. Learn how the other half lives. They say that the modern woman is on an equal social level with man. Well, here's your chance to prove it. For this occasion you do the asking, supply the corsages, call for your date at the dorm, and escort him home, all with the approval of society and college authorities. (By the way, if you would prefer not to wear jeans, it's perfectly acceptable to wear a skirt and blouse.)

Well, what are you waiting for? If Sadie Hawkins can do it, so can you. Ask that fellow and be at the Alumni Gym at 8:00 tonight for an evening of fun.

This Issue Edited By Carolyn Cones

This week's Echo was edited by Carolyn Cones, physics major from Herndon, Virginia. This concludes the series of tryouts for the position of Echo editor. The new editor, selected by next year's staff and representatives of the Highland Echo Committee, will be announced in the last issue, May 11.

Council Discusses Student Center

Five town night violations opened this week's meeting of the Student Council after Dick congratulated Joan Neckerman and Bob Goodlin for being elected to the top Student Council offices. The town night violators included a girl from Baldwin who put her slip in the wrong box, a girl from Pearsons who forgot to sign in, and three Memorial girls who were late because the clock in the theater was 15 minutes slow. The Baldwin and Pearsons girls were given one week penal-

Spring Formal To Be May 11

The great day is coming soon and that day is Saturday, May 11 . . . or more familiarly known as the day of the Spring Dance. Sponsored this year by Bainonian and Kappa Phi, Committees are hard at work to make this formal the best yet.

The committee in charge of the over-all planning and carrying-out includes Ann Newcomer, Jeanie McElroy, Ron Lind, and Dave Pierce. The other committees are as follows: Tickets: Chairman Judy Perov, Dan Gilmour, Ken Churchill, Karen Anderson; Invitations: Chairman Helen McDonald, Georgene Rohlander; Decorations: Co-Chairmen Nancy McGeorge and Joe Tropansky, Barbara Mueller, Barbara Coates, Jim Marsh, Lorraine Torres, Sue Tourtellotte, Dave McCahan, Donna Tourtellotte, Linda Messer; Refreshments: Chairman Judy Tranavsky, Phil Muir; Publicity: Chairman Don Buddle, Susie Miller; Lighting and Public Address System: Chairman Ray Sammons, John Eubanks, Larry Gibbs; Music: Chairman Bob Samples, Dave Ross, John Bridges; Programs: Chairman Sue Settle, Nancy Steere; Special Services: Co-Chairmen Katrina Wells and Sam Buffat, Carolyn Graham.

The theme of the dance is still a secret, but will be announced very soon on posters and advertisements.

May 4 Is Date For Style Show

On Saturday night, May 4, the annual style show sponsored by the home economics department will be held in the theater. The clothing to be shown was made by girls in the dressmaking courses of both the first and second semesters. The girls will be modeling their own clothing.

The theme of the show is "Fashions around the calender." Featured will be skirts, dresses, coats and formals. Of special interest will be the dresses made and modeled by the girls in the course in advance dressmaking. These dresses were made from basic patterns, with each girl altering the pattern to her own original ideas.

Special music will be provided during the intermissions by the music department.

The home economics department urges every one to come to this show. The men are especially invited to attend.

Honorary Society Elects Two Juniors

At a recent meeting of Alpha Gamma Sigma, Maryville College honorary scholarship society, Eleonore Koster and Ruth Morris were elected to membership. They are the first juniors ever to be elected, although there has always been provision in the constitution for such action. An amendment to the constitution this year provided that juniors elected would be counted against the quota of their own class and not on the graduating class of that year.

Eleonore Koster is president of Pi Kappa Delta and has been active in debate, receiving honors in several tournaments. She is also a member of German Club, YWCA, Writers' Workshop (Editor of Chips this year), Student Council, and Theta Epsilon. She is a political science major from Sevierville, Tenn.

Ruth Morris is co-chairman of the Community Service committee of YWCA this year, a member of Vesper Choir, Writers' Workshop (also Editor of Chips this year), Pre-Med Club, and Bainonian. She is a biology major from Wilmington, Deleware.

New Math Series To Be Offered; Bugenhagen To Teach Statistics

Professor Marion B. Tolar, head of the mathematics department at Maryville College, has announced a new series of mathematics courses aimed at satisfying an almost overwhelming demand for college graduates trained in working with statistics. The new series of courses will begin with the next fall semester and is a part of a general plan for upgrading the quality and usefulness of mathematical education at Maryville.

The new program features three entirely new courses, two of which are presented in cooperation with the economics and business administration departments. Mathematics 121 (basic math) has been designed as an introduction to mathematical computational methods and is required as a related course for majors in business administration, economics, and elementary education. Math 122 (introductory statistics) is also required for majors in business administration and economics and presents elementary statistical methods applied to problems in these fields. The third course, Math 306 (statistical methods and sampling theory) will offer an introduction to probability theory for students completing the other two courses and for students of mathematics and physical science who will find a knowledge of probability laws almost indispensable.

Bugenhagen

The new courses will be taught by Mr. Thomas Bugenhagen, a graduate of Maryville College in the class of 1956 and a student at

Accept Or Reject

An Echo reporter was glancing through the proofs for this issue and came across an item dealing with current events. The story was concerned with the Congressional investigation of labor leader, Dave Beck—a story that has figured prominently in the news recently. Somewhat curious as to how well-read her fellow students really, were the reported conducted a short informal poll to determine how many people were able to identify Dave Beck. The results were rather disillusioning.

The above case is fairly typical of the problem which faces many students today. All too frequently the tendency is to allow the years of college to be a period of partial isolation from the rest of the world. World news is swallowed up in a schedule crammed with required courses, campus functions and club activities. No one would deny that time is of the utmost importance to a college student because the type of study is so concentrated, and the student has many demands of his time. Yet a student's disinterest in what is going on in the rest of the world cannot be blamed entirely on lack of time. The very nature of the set-up of a college community renders a vague sense of remoteness to anything outside of its sphere of activity. Then, too, radio and television, two of the most popular means of communication with the "outside world," are not always accessible, perhaps not always desirable to a student.

If the college has difficulty in bringing itself to embrace those things that are outside its physical boundaries, why can't the world come to the college? This is already being done here through such activity as the International Relations Club and the newly initiated Lecture Series. And yet is their purpose being fulfilled? If the reception of the last of the lecture series is indicative of the general attitude of of the student body, the answer is a flat "no." Only a little over eighty people showed up for the evening lecture—and out of these at least thirty were faculty members and townspeople. Those who did attend found the lecture to be both interesting and informative. But what of the vast majority of students who could not or would not atend? Any kind of opportunity for broadening one's outlook cannot be spoon-fed to a person if it is to have any real value for him. It is up to the individual to accept or reject. A lecture on mental health will be given next week. Will anyone be there to hear it?

Concerning The Library

Some mention should be made concerning the use of the library. As is evident, the facilities are extensive, and ever expanding. The fault of inadequacy is not primarily due to lack of facilities, but lack of co-operation.

Faculty members are allowed to check out a book for an unspecified amount of time. Most faculty members use this privilege wisely, but, occasionally, a faculty member will take the best books in a certain field, and the students must suffer for it. This is an example of a lack of co-operation.

But generally it is the students, themselves, who are inconsiderate. When a large class has a research assignment in the reference books, it is unfair of one or two persons to take all of the books. We can't blame this sort of selfishness on the faculty—the students are to blame. It is equally unfair for one or two students to monopolize any research material which is in general demand.

Another act which is entirely selfish, and lazy is removing books or periodicals which have not been properly checked out.

Besides causing a great deal of extra work for those who work in the library, it is stealing! It not only keeps the book out of circulation while it is in the possession of the thief, but also while the librarians try to trace the card, after it has been returned, so that no one will be charged for an overdue book.

Remember, too, all who are afraid of the librarians, the library is for your use, and the librarians are there to help you. They won't bite!

Snap Out Of The Trance

How many people do you know? Good grief, you say—that's a silly question. . . but I'm serious. How many people do you know? All right, I'll make it easier. How many people who are enrolled at Maryville College do you know? Think about it, now. . . it's harder than it looks. I don't suppose anyone thinks about questions like this very much. Perhaps that's why we all run around in our own little worlds and make believe that we, ourselves, can do everything, without help from God or man. One of the few thinking people that it's my pleasure to know once asked me the same question that I asked in the first sentence, and by taking serious stock of myself and what I've been gaily doing all these years, I was obliged to answer that I didn't think I REALLY knew a lot of people. Does anyone ever like to think that someone else has as many and as varied problems as he has? Of course not. We take great pride in fancying ourselves THE-ALL-IMPORTANT-ONES and are nothing short of amazed to discover that we are not. . . because we aren't, you know!

How many people are you acquainted with? Oh, that's an easy one. How many times have you said of someone. . . "I know her when I see her". . . or "I know him to speak to him". . . Gee, that's really tremendous. At Maryville, that's like saying "It rains a lot, doesn't it" Once the problem is recognized, half the battle is won. Once a person wishes he really knew more people and wonders why he doesn't then he can, because he has stopped thinking about himself long enough to snap out of that fatal trance. Don't get me wrong. . . It isn't easy. . . and the trance is always there, just waiting for you to fall back into it.

How many people do you know? Will you know more tomorrow than you do today?

Scots & Soda

By Joanne Causey

Well, having always been interested in dogs and armadillos and great horned owls and things, a piece in the paper about this dog caught my attention.

Now this may be of more than just casual interest to certain parties, because just like Hitler and Ivan the Terrible and James Dean (cymbals, please—CLANGPOWSMASHBOON CLANG POW BANG! ! !—thank you' this dog has been dead for 62 years, and his name is Nipper. Sixty-two years, mind you. He's got James Dean beat all to smithereens. I understand that in a month or two there's going to be a great Nipper revival and the newstands will be cascaded with thousands of fan magazines containing such thought-provoking articles, as "Nipper: Dog or God?" and "Why Nipper was Contempuous of Conformity" and "The Life and Loves of Nipper Dog." There is also a movie in the making which is being made around Nipper's haunts in his home town. (Tommy "Hurricane" Jackson will take the starring role with Jane Mansfield providing the love interest.)

Which means you will naturally want to be all caught up on contemporary Nipper information so that when the great revival takes place and everybody is agog you can be casual and off-hand about the whole thing and people will think you were, in truth, an intimate friend of his.

Mesmerized

Nipper was the pet of an English artist, Francis Barraud, who noticed the dog's quizzical interest in his (Francis') talking machine, and put the scene on canvas. A few years later a representative of the Gramaphone Company of London saw the painting and became mesmerized (no cheap pulp mag. for uneducated readers, this) with it. In 1901 the Victor Talking Machine Company acquired the rights to the painting and in 1929, when Radio Corporation of America purchased the Victor Company, Nipper went with it and has been a widely publicized trademark ever since.

So there you have it. I said it and I'm glad. Incidentally, I am operating as an advance salesman for Black Leather Jackets with a Nipper on the back, and upon request will gladly send info-packed pamphlets to interested plebes. The jackets are made of oil-treated cockroach skin and are available in four solid and twenty-six irridescent two-tone colors—monogrammed initials, purple backup lights and chrome mudflaps optional at extra cost, as are initials that glow in the dark.

So, citizens, don't get left—join the Nipper revival. Upon written request, I can also supply the names of your nearest Nipper Fan Club.

Voices, Masks, and Shadows

by Joe McNeal

Nearly everybody seems to think that Americans are the busiest looking people in the world. A visitor from a foreign country where leisure is lord never ceases to be amazed at the hustle and bustle of New York or San Francisco. The speeding taxicabs, rushing trains, and hurrying pedestrians suggest a people who never quite get where they're going and whose every waking hour is spent in anxious search for an invaluable commodity referred to as the "dollar."

The only flaw in such a generalized picture of the American people is that it just isn't true. Of course we have our share of the world's ulcers, but the shorter work week has given the average American a tremendous amount of leisure time. But as we all know, the quickest way to go absolutely crazy is to do nothing and the busy-looking American is today putting much of his leisure time and hard-to-catch dollars into his beloved hobby.

Oh, almost all of us are hobbyists at heart. There's some interest wholly unconnected with our work which seems to exhibit a magnetic appeal on our personalities. The first thing we know we find ourselves pouring over journals on model airplane making, stamp and coin collecting, methods of shrinking heads, or some other such diversion which is soon making inroads on our busy time.

Let's take just one case in point of a hobby that has sprung to national favor above almost every other, and analyze the reasons for its popularity. I select this hobby because it is my own, and like every other hobbyist, mine is the best one.

Audiophiles

Take a stroll along any main street and before long you'll meet an audiophile or a "lover of sound." They're a strange breed of people, though you can't notice it immediately. They come in all shapes, breeds, and sizes, young and old; but they all have something in common — a love of music and an insatiable desire to hear it perfectly played. The creation of the audiophiles engaged in technical work is the phenomenon commonly referred to as "Hi-Fi" or "High Fidelity." This manifestation of the audiophiles drive for perfection has become tremendously popular, and the boom thus created has built a new industry and created thousands of "Hi-Fi Bugs."

The audiophile is nothing brand new under the sun; he's been around ever since the first records were made, struggling in the early years with pitiful equipment, and solemnly cursing the old scratchy, high-speed record which made quality reproduction impossible. Through the years the pioneer audiophiles' patience produced some new changes and in the late 1940's and early 1950's a long-needed, slow speed, long-playing record was developed and the modern "Hi-Fi" craze soon began.

"Hi-Fi"

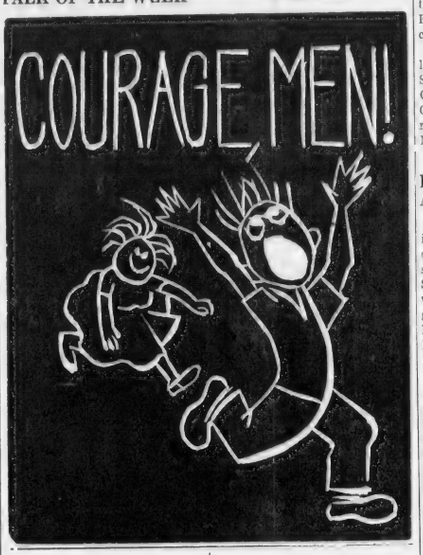
With the popularization of the audiophiles hobby has come a vast wave of "high-fidelity" advertising. Some manufacturers have tagged as "Hi-Fi" instruments and records which would make any audiophile shudder. Some people have come to think that the "Hi-Fi" tag is all that marks a good set.

But let's look under the advertising cloud and see just what "high-fidelity" really is. Actually it's nothing MORE or LESS than the recording and reproduction of sound with all possible faithfulness to the original sound. In the high-fidelity recording of a great symphony one finds a truly remarkable wedding of art and science, and the product speaks well for the union.

The good high-fidelity set consists of a phonograph, AM-FM radio turner, TV receiver, tape recorder, amplifying system, and speaker system. All of these components are engineered for best recording and reproduction and are carefully balanced to give a total unity to the whole. Often a phonograph system is present alone, but the true audiophile aims at expansion of the part into a whole unit.

In buying "Hi-Fi" equipment it's easier than you think to be taken for a sucker. Don't be carried away by promises of "high amplifier wattage" or any other spectacular looking phrase. Remember that the best sets are balanced compounds of good components. Remember too that you are aiming at good sound and not theoretical engineering terms. If you have a good ear let it be your guide; if not, don't try to be an audiophile.

Records



One word also about records. Truly magnificient things have been done in recordings. Often your own taste will be the sole judge between two recordings. Primary qualities of good records are complete frequency response (highs, lows, middles equally well and true), dynamic range (loud and soft), presence (listener should sense artist's presence), and clarity and definition of the individual instruments. Listen to all records before buying them to check for flaws where this is possible.

To the busy American who makes high-fidelity a hobby, a fabulous new world of sound opens up. You can have all kinds of fun at it, but take it easy. It takes experience to become really good in anything and caution in the initial investment will provide for more satisfaction. In the ever changing voices, masks and shadows of American civilization "Hi-Fi" is an effective way to relax. In the new sound age, I wish you happy listening!

TALK OF THE WEEK

By Sue Settle

Fashions

by Bobbye Carson

Fresh as the fragrance of spring! Every girl finds the warm weather an enemy to her fresh daintiness. Perfumes and colognes can be a girl's secret.

Flowers play a large part in spring fashions. Many of the summer cottons are of floral designs, and the majority of the hats for spring are laden with many artificial flowers. Also flowers are the inspiration for perfumes and colognes. Why not combine the two? If you are wearing a flowered print dress, wear a perfume or cologne with a flowery fragrance. If you are wearing a flower-laden hat, try making yourself as fragrant as the flowers look. Had you thought of matching your floral scent with a particular flower? Wear a rose scent with a dress of rose print or rose scent with rose colors. A nice fresh flower worn in your hair or on your dress can have its beauty augmented by your wearing a matching scent.

In choosing your perfume or cologne, choose the kind that best of all suits your personality and is right for the occasion. For your favorite tweed suit, choose perhaps a woody or spicy smell. Or for the more sophisticated look, you would prefer an oriental perfume to a spicy one. The modern trend is toward Chanel No. 5, as it seems to be fairly all-occasional. If you prefer a floral scent, you can find almost any kind you can imagine that will suit any occasion.

Spray on your perfume or cologne with an atomizer. It seems to be the best way of applying it rather than doing it by hand. A very subtle effect can be obtained if you spray your hair with your favorite scent. Never apply it directly to the fabric. Fragrance four or five hours.

Christian College Day To Be Observed Sunday

National Christian College Day will be observed on Sunday, April 27, in the majority of the 236 churches in the five-state area of the Synod of Mid-South, Presbyterian Church, U.S.A. The Synod includes churches in Tennessee, North Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, and Mississippi.

Many churches in the East Tennessee area will participate in the observance, which will coincide with a nation-wide program in Protestant churches throughout the nation. Speakers will be furnished by the colleges upon the request of individual churches. Material for special programs have been prepared by the Committee on Christian Education of the Synod of which the Rev. Paul Floyd Jones of Elizabethton is chairman.

There are 3 Presbyterian colleges within the bounds of the Synod of Mid-South: Maryville College, Tusculum College, Greenville, Tennessee; and Warren Wilson College, in Swannanoa, North Carolina.

Home Economists To Be At Luncheon Meeting

The Knox Area Home Economics Association will hold a luncheon meeting at 1:30 p.m. in Pearsons Hall at Maryville College on Saturday, April 27. The speaker will be Mrs. Marinell Ross Waggoner, who will discuss "The Home Economist as a Citizen — Her Business and Legal Problems."

It is estimated that approximately one hundred Home Economists in business, in education, in research, and in the home will be in attendance. At the conclusion of the luncheon meeting, the visitors will tour the Samuel Tyndale Wilson Chapel-Theatre and the Fine Arts Center at the College. A brief organ recital by James A. Bley, instructor in music at the College, will conclude the program.

Sports Spotlights

By Joe Quinn
Major League Ball

The big story of course, is Baseball in the major leagues.

The Milwaukee Braves and Chicago White Sox are leading in their respective loops. Some big surprises are the Redlegs. Minus their big first baseman Ted Klusewski, the Reds have had their problems. Lack of pitching has kept the Redlegs dead last in the standings.

Junior Gilliam is opening in fine fashion for the Dodgers with 14 base hits in only 29 trips to the plate.

The old pro, Ted Williams, has collected 10 for 23 in the American league.

This season should be real good with a dog race featured in the National League between Brooklyn and Milwaukee. This could be the Braves' year.

In the American League it should be New York, but you can never tell. Boston, Cleveland and Chicago could be trouble, and don't under-estimate these second division clubs either.

Local Events

Have you seen a Maryville game this year? If not you're missing something. These boys are good, and they'll give you a wonderful afternoon of baseball. The Scotties have a 6-won, 2-lost record.

We don't have many games left, so come on out and support this club. You won't regret a minute of it. See you at the next home game against Carson-Newman on Monday, April 29th.

Scotties Bow To Eagles, L.M.U., Whip East Tennessee State, 2-1

by Pete Nix

Lombe Honaker's diamond charges lost their winning formula dropping games to Carson-Newman 7-4 and LMU 2-0. Fred Tepper put them back in the winners circle with a well pitched 2-1 victory over East Tennessee State.

Carson-Newman

Leading 4-1 at the end of 7½ innings the Scotties lost all poise and gave up 6 runs in the bottom of the eighth at Carson-Newman. Costly errors plus some timely hits figured in the Eagle outburst. Fred Tepper, the starter, was relieved by Max Williamson in the eighth. Tepper was the loser. Mike Talley had two hits for the Scots, with Bill Dent, Jack Woodhall, Earl Lawson, and Bill Evans contributing one apiece.

LMU

The Scotties couldn't get their big bats going as Jack Hale twirled a neat 4 hitter to beat the Scots 2-0. Max Williamson's 6-hit performance wasn't quite good enough. It was the first time the Highlanders had been shutout this season. Bill Dent garnered two of the Scottie safeties and Mac Johnson and Williamson got 1.

East Tennessee State

After losing two in a row on the road, Maryville came back home to defeat East Tennessee State 2-1 behind the pitching of Fred Tepper. The Scots scored 2 runs in the first then played great defensive ball behind Teppers pitching to gain the victory. Jimmy Harris led the Highlander hitters with 4 for 5. Bill Dent was 2 for 3. Maddox was the State's big gun with 3 hits. The only State run came on a home run by Maddux in the eighth.

Another College Views M.C. Team

(Reprinted from Carson's "Orange and Blue,' April 5)

The netmen dropped a close 5-4 match to a tough Maryville team on the Maryville courts for their first defeat of the season. The margin of victory came in the doubles matches after the two teams had split the singles, 3-3. An enthusiastic crowd of Maryville rooters stayed on to the finish as their No. 1 doubles team, Mont and Engles, came from behind to defeat Spangler and Blazier 1-6, 7-5, 13-11, in a match that lasted three hours.

M Club Plans Initiation, Hike

by Sue Settle

Any strange looking creatures seen around campus Friday, May 3, will be "neophites" pledging women's M Club for membership next year. Saturday, May 4, pledges and old members will leave at 1:30 for the annual spring hike to Laurel Lake. Miss Heron, Mrs Largen, and Mrs. Queener will chaperone.

While old members lounge in the sun on two new air mattresses given them by Miss Heron, neophites will busy themselves doing all the chores and menial tasks asked of them by members. This may include catching live ducks in the water and bringing them out, as neophites did at last year's outing.

Food will sizzle over an outdoor fire. Between meals the girls will participate in swimming, hiking, and softball. And, as is the custom, the president of the club will be thrown into the lake. President this semester is Helen Franklin.

Highlighting the evening will be a formal initiation of new members by candlelight on the dock.

M Club events of the semester include a bicycle trip to Miss Heron's home in March, an activity meetings of aerial darts and square dancing. The club is currently at work on the May Day program.

Tennis Team Wins One, Drops Two

On successive days of a two-day road trip the Maryville College tennis team beat King College at Bristol 5-2 and lost to East Tennessee State 7-0.

Stan Mont, Ted Engle, Bill Bolger, and Jim McCall won singles matches at King with Mont and Engle taking their doubles encounter.

The State squad was too much for Scots with Jim McCall being the only man to take his opponent to three sets.

The Highlanders dropped their 4th match of the season to Carson-Newman 6-2. One doubles match was rained out. Ted Engle and Bill Bolger were the only Maryville winners.

Art Picnic Today

"Suntanned . . . windblown . . ."

Tonight these words will describe art majors and their friends after they return from their annual all-day spring picnic in the Smokies. Cars leaving at ten o'clock today will take them to a favorite spot in the mountains for a day of eating, swimming, and mostly loafing. A few ambitious students may even paint.

The tired crew will return to campus around six o'clock.

Board Of Directors

The Board of Directors will hold its annual spring meeting here May 6 and 7. Mr. Joe C. Gamble is chairman and Miss Clemmie J. Henry is recorder.

Intramurals....

by Joe Quinn

The intramural track meet is the big news on the local scene. The Alpha Sig team won team honors by compiling 66 points to 56 for the town squad. Kappa Phi was third with 23 points. The meet went very smoothly, and it is reported as being one of the best meets ever.

The softball league continues on its way, and the Sig Eagles still show the way. They played Kappa Phi this past week.

No games were played on Tuesday due to comp tests and the junior class picnic.

The Outcasts show a second place ranking behind some sound pitching by Ross McGill.

The Sig team, as we said, is still the team to beat. They have a well rounded squad that will prove tough for anyone in the league.

Plans are still being expressed in a intramural tennis tournament.

If you are interested see Coach Johnson as soon as possible.

Pearsonites Turn Bird-Watchers

Someone called Pearsons the other day and was answered by "Maternity Ward." This may have shocked the caller unless he knew the facts.

One day, two weeks ago, some of the girls who live on second floor Pearsons noticed that a robin was hovering about the fire escape outside the window at one end of the hall. Upon careful observation, a nest with two blue green eggs was discovered nestled on one of the steps of the fire escape. Soon everyone at that end of the hall was interested in the mother robin.

During the heavy storm with the violent wind, the mother never left the nest. Many were afraid that the nest would blow off the fire escape, but the next day, the nest and mother were still there.

Sometimes, the mother left to get food, and the girls were afraid that she had deserted the nest. But she always came back.

Wednesday, one of the girls found an egg lying on the golf course. Feeling that maybe the mother could hatch it too, she put it in the nest. Going to see about it just before supper, she noticed that one of the eggs had hatched, and lying in the bottom of the nest was a feeble little red speck, who every so often gathered enough strength to raise its head and open its beak.

The next day, the baby bird was somewhat stronger. The mother had knocked the egg which was not hers out of the nest, and only one egg and the baby bird remained in the nest.

The mother, unsure of the intentions of the girls who gaped out of the window, perched on a tree and eyed first the nest and then the girls. Deciding that the girls meant no harm, the mother fed her baby bird, and flew away. It is a thrill for the girls to be able to see the mother and baby so clearly, and all are awaiting the birth of the second baby bird.

Current Events

Hearing Scheduled For Labor Leader

Late in 1955, the rivalry and jealousy which had long impeded the effectiveness of the two largest organized labor combinations of this country was finally resolved in the historic merger of the Congress of Industrial Organization and the American Federation of Labor. At the merging convention, delegates from each member union of both merging organizations drafted and ratified a constitution for the new federation, among the provisions of which were certain standards of ethical practice established for the officers of each member union. The then President of the Teamsters Union and one of the delegates representing its 1.3 million members at this convention was Dave Beck.

Mr. Beck was recently called before the special Senate Select Committee on Improper Activities in the Labor and Management Field and asked whether he had applied to his personal use and to the court expenses of other Teamsters officials several thousand dollars of union money not allocated for this purpose. Mr. Beck cited the first, and pleaded the fifth amendments in his refusal to answer the question, and refused to surrender to the committee records pertaining to the funds in question.

Subsequently the AFL-CIO has suspended Mr. Beck from both his presidency of the Teamsters and his position on the AFL-CIO Executive Board as a vice president of the federation. May 20 has been set as the date for a hearing by the federation at which time Mr. Beck's testimony before the Senate Special Committee will be considered in the light of the ethical practices set down in the AFL-CIO Constitution. Said the federation's President, George Meany, "At that hearing the only accuser of Mr. Beck will be Mr. Beck, his own testimony — his lack of testimony, and the record."

Beck has challenged, in letters to George Meany which may indicate contemplated court action, the right of the federation to suspend him for offenses allegedly occurring before the entry of the Teamsters into the merger of AFL and CIO. Mr. Meany has said the suspension is based on Beck's invocation of the Fifth Amendment before the Senate committee and on certain of his public utterances, as well as upon the alleged misappropriations.

The Senate Select Committee has up to now received over 25,000 allegations of racketeering or improper practices by union leaders. These complaints have come from every large metropolitan area of the country, and most, according to a committee spokesman, involve the teamsters union whose present membership is around 1.5 million members. More than 50 investigators of labor corruption will be deployed by the committee in New York, Philadelphia, Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis, Omaha, Los Angeles, and Seattle. Similar probes of almost every other big American city are now, or soon will be under way.

F.T.A. Officers Chosen

The F.T.A. officers elected to serve next semester are Willa Jean Duvall, president; Anna Allcroft, vice president; Lena Laymen, secretary; Betsy Watson, treasurer; and Shirley Napier, historian.

Dr. Wright Spoke At Alpha Gamma Sigma Chapel

Dr. Nathalia Wright, Associate Professor of English at the University of Tennessee, was guest speaker at the annual Alpha Gamma Sigma recognition chapel Thursday. She discussed aspects of the life of Horatio Greenough, a nineteenth-century American sculptor noted for his statue of George Washington, which was patterned after Greek sculpture. Dr. Wright is currently at work on a biography of Greenough and told of some of her experiences in searching for materials in Italy and Switzerland. Dr. Wright has made several contributions to scholarship in the field of American literature, especially on Herman Melville.

Mrs. Stuart McNiell, president of Alpha Gamma Sigma, stated the requirements for membership, after which Dr. E. R. Hunter, secretary, read the list of names of those elected to membership this year. These included seniors — Wiliam Deerfield, Ann Fulton, Clara Gowans, Andrew Loven, Margaret McClure, Louise Ogden, Tom Perry, Natalie Richards, William Schofield, Barbara Wilkie, and two juniors — Eleonore Koster and Ruth Morris.

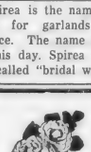
President Lloyd formally recognized these new members. Dr. Hunter then led in prayer. Mrs. McNiell announced that the scholarship fund had now reached a total of $1300, the interest from which would be given to the sophomore who has the highest scholastic average at the end of this year. The award will be announced in the fall. The choir sang an anthem to close the service.

At a recent meeting officers for next year were elected. Rev. Thomas Horst was elected president; Tom Bugenhagen, vice president; and Dr. E. R. Hunter, secretary.

Pre-Med Club Elects

The newly elected officers for the incoming semester for the Pre-Med Club include Liz Walton, president; Ruth Morris, vice president; and Merv Dixon, secretary-treasurer.

Senior Breakfast Held



The members of the graduating class of 1957 were honored at a breakfast given by President and Mrs. Ralph Waldo Lloyd at Morningside yesterday and today.

Sophomore girls assisted with the serving.

COUNCIL DISCUSSES . .

ties, and it was agreed the Memorial girls should not be penalized because they were late through no fault of their own.

The Town-Night Committee reported that the conduct at the ruins has improved since it was last noted.

Shirley McNeil reported that class meetings will be held next Tuesday to nominate new class officers.

The next council meeting will be held on Tuesday night because of a dance to be held the night of May Day.

The committee for the proposed student center has met and has drawn up a series of recommendations. They are: 1) That the new student center be placed on the administration's list of proposed buildings; 2) That student interest be created by means of, a) a letter concerning the student center to be sent to all students before the end of the semester, b) discussions on the student center to be held in the class meetings, c) and contests held between the classes to see which class can raise the most pledges; 3) That Student Council hold events next year, the proceeds of which will go toward the new center; 4) That all students look for prospective donors; 5) And, that a permanent committee be set up in the council to work with the administration on the plans for the center.

After Dan Ellis presented the recommendations, it was decided in the ensuing discussion that the student center could be a student unifying project, but would take a lot of work and a lot of student backing. It was moved and seconded that the recommendations of the committee be taken before the Student-Faculty Senate.

Dick reminded the council members that May 3 is to be High School Day and that they are asked to assist in touring the visiting students around the campus.

U-T working for a master's degree in mathematics. Mr. Bungenhagen achieved an outstanding record at Maryville and was active in many campus organizations. He will also share with Professor Tolar the responsibility for teaching upper division courses of the math major.

Professor Tolar has pointed out that the new series will provide an opportunity for Maryville's students to prepare themselves for a useful career in the field of statistics which will enable them to earn a living immediately upon graduation from college. The sequence of courses described above will also make a student eligible to work and study on a cooperative basis with firms needing people trained in statistics. Thus a practical, far reaching program has been designed which will enable students to earn while studying and enter useful positions upon graduation.

Along with the new courses will come rather sweeping changes in the mathematics program in general, all seeking to upgrade mathematics at Maryville and provide more graduates trained to fill the vast vacancies in the mathematical world.

Miss Katherine Crews will play the first violin part, while Margaret Jones and Sidney Tedford will play the I and II viola parts. Sue Burton plays the cello and Nancy Stere is the flute player. Lynn Mitchell and Louise Ogden play the harpsichord. Soloists for the Bach Cantata are John Ribble, James Laster, Richard Conway bass; Sidney Tedford, Perry Fuller, tenor; Bobbye Carson, Carol Lee Lacy, alto.

Part three will conclude the concert as the choir performs In The Beginning by the American composer, Aaron Copland. This is the story of the creation dramatically set in a contemporary idiom. Soloists are Bobbye Carson and Carol Lee Lacy.

Medea To Be Given At 3 Performances

by Walt Thompson

The 1957 Commencement Play, to be presented by the Maryville College Playhouse May 18, 20 and 21, "Medea", is the eighth of the plays of Euripides which we now possess, and a sequal to his first play, the "Daughters of Pelias'. The latter relates a patricide by the daughters, incited by Medea. "Medea" itself is an account of the love of a barbarian for her Greek husband, and of the devestation she wreaks upon his life when this love is thwarted by his ambition. The psychological realism of the characters makes them clasically universal, with concentrated passion lending the play great impact.

The version of the play to be presented is the adaption in verse by the noted American poet Robinson Jeffers. This does not, of course, approach a direct translation, but it nevertheless retains the spirit of the original, while discarding conventions of Greek drama which would impede the work's effectiveness in the modern theatre. The original extended single unit is divided into two acts, most of the long odes are absent, and the large unison-speaking chorus is reduced to three individuals who never speak in unison.

Euripides, (484-407 B.C.), was a part of the great intellectual awakening of fifth century Athens. His plays enjoyed nationwide fame during his lifetime, but also brought severe criticism from high circles for their austerity, romantic style, and rejection of social and religious concepts of the day. A merchant's son, a prize winning athlete, a painter and soldier, Euripedes reached his most productive period in a hermit-like life in a cave. With facial moles, and long, white beard, he disliked women, although married, and hated society and all things ordinary.

Cast

Mary Faye Bundy, sophomore Drama major, has been cast in the title role of "Medea". Charlotte Cathey, freshman from Arkansas, will portray the nurse and Jim Colquhoun, junior from Maryland, the tutor. First, Second and Third Women will be Ann Stuart Fulton, Margaret Wilkinson and Gail Cholminsky. Ronald Randon as Creon, Herchal Netherton as Jason, Tony Clark as Aegus, and David Ross as Jason's slave complete the major cast. Four soldiers also are included, Bill Deerfield, Ronald Morley, Don Jones and Newton Pike. These roles have been announced by Miss Kathleen Craven, director and head of the Drama department.

Committee heads have also been announced by Mr. John Cauble, Technical Director. Costumes — Randy Rosensteel; Lights — Elaine Bowman; Sets — Ronald Randon; Make-up—Carol Schade; Sound — Fred Kaye; Props — Libby Turner; and Tickets and Publicity — Ruth Wagner. Stage Manager will be Bill Deerfield and House manager Ruth Wilson.

Taking the two juvenile roles of the production will be Robert Callaway, son of Dr. and Mrs. Lee Callaway, and Jeffery Hampton, both aged five.

Three short operas will be given, all three of which are in English.

The Medium

The Medium is a tragedy. by Cian-Carlo Menotti. This opera is the story of Madam Flora, a spiritualist who, with the help of her daughter, Monica, and Toby, a mute servant, tries to cheat her clientele through fake seances only to be touched herself by a hand which she can not explain. This instance drives her into insanity and to murder.

The opera, first produced at Columbia University in 1946, has been an immediate success and has been made into a moving picture under the composer's direction. It has also been recorded by Columbia and Mercury.

The Cast are: Madam Flora, Bobbye Carson; Monica, Zona Gogel; Mrs. Gobineau, Lessie Ann Rhodes and Sally Kinsinger; Mr. Gobineau, Howard Bell; Mrs. Nolan, Norma Taubert and Joan Johnston.

Cast: Ben, John Ribble; Lucy, Mary Haydn McEver.

Down In The Valley

The finale will be the American folk opera, Down In The Valley by Kurk Weill. This opera makes its second appearance on Maryville campus having been performed by Opear Workshop in 1950.

Down In The Valley tells of an urdying love between Jeanny Parsons and her condemned sweetheart, Brack Weaver, who is to die at sunrise. He breaks jail and comes to Jenny. In the quiet of the night, the two recount to each other how their love began and the events which lead to Brack's killing Thomas Bouche. Near morning Brack leaves to meet his executioner and Jenny is left alone professing her love for him singing the ever popular folk ballad:

"Roses love sunshine,
Violets love dew,
Angels in heaven,
Know I love you."

Kurk Weill, who has written music for many Broadway successes, one of which is Lady In The Dark, has used the simple folk tunes of America, five of which form the body of the work to be performed here. Four of which are: Down In The Valley, The Lonesome Dove, Hop Up My Ladies, and Sourwood Mountain.

Singing leads are: Brack Weaver, Robert Davies; Jenny Parsons, Mary Pakosh and Nancy McGeorge; Thomas Bouche, Harold Kelly; The Leader, Howard Bell and Dick Conway; Preacher, Charles Stanbery.

Speaking parts have not been assigned as yet.

Singing roles and parts in the chorus are open to all students studying applied voice at the college. The various committees for production have not been selected yet As much help will be needed, if anyone is interested in helping, please contact Mr. Harry Harter.

The accompaniment will be done by Miss Gloria Mares of the music faculty. Jerry Overall is a student accompanist.

THE RIDGERUNNERS RAN

by Ann Wiley

If anyone had seen the gay, carefree little mob that left the campus Saturday afternoon on a nice civilized picnic, they never would have guessed that those same people would return four hours later looking like the wrath of the mountain king. Who were these people? Just the Echo staff, guests and chaperones. Not everyone was quite as fortunate as some members of that little group . . . some just sat on the sandy, rocky little beach and skipped stones in the water. One hardy soul went swimming . . . several more hardy souls climbed to a nice high summit . . . and then there were the MOST HARDY SOULS. These were the ones whose sense of adventure superceded their sense . . . and whose smiling faces came close to no longer being seen at Maryville College. We won't name these people . . . they know who they are and no one else deserves to know.

Fallacies

Being of simple minds and will full hearts, these persons decided to hike to a nearby waterfall, said to be about a half-mile away. Look carefully and you'll see several fallacies here. One, this was no hike, it was mass slaughter Two, the nearby waterfall was non-existent . . . that is to the members of this party since gone of them laid eyes on it. These are just the surface fallacies . . . there are many more. Instead of losing an English prof who happened to be along (Theory One: not just students have simple minds and willful hearts) so same wouldnt grade some 327B test papers, the English prof decided to lose two majors so he would have less papers to grade. One member decided that to carefully choose one's footholds down the mountain was much too difficult and by sliding on her face at least a part of the way down, this complication could be resolved. She did and it was. physics professor (further proving Theory One) who suggested this suicidal attempt and who had one strike against him to start with, saw no way to get back to the rest of the party without backtracking. This seemed silly to the rest, who pointed out that only several yards separated them from civilization. True . . . but oh, those several yards . . . containing no more than a little mountain stream. The first MOST HARDY SOUL waded carefully in, expecting the water to be knee deep. Twasn't. Just seeing her waist deep didn't dampen anyone else's spirits, so on they went. But this time the physics prof who still knew better but didn't want to be an old dry blanket, decided that he might as well try it, too. Poor thing . . . he was doomed from the start.

Well, we won't go into the gory details of what happened in the water except that it was quite a bit over waist deep in places and that some of the crew found those places and were almost lost forever. But we won't dwell on that. They made it. They were starved, frozen and maimed, but they made it. Thus ends this little epistle.

'Course that wasn't all. They were jeered, mocked, even pitied . . . but they proved one thing. Ridgerunners can run more than ridges.

Cones Is Elected New Echo Editor

As a result of the recent elections, Carolyn Cones was chosen editor-in-chief of the Highland Echo, and Mary Kirklin was elected business manager.

Miss Cones, a physics major from Herndon, Virginia, has worked on the Echo three years, serving this year as managing editor. Miss Kirklin, a sociology major from Wilmington, Delaware, has been active this year on the newly organized Echo business staff.

Voting for editor is done by the new staff, for next year, the faculty chairman of the Highland Echo Committee, and the chairman of the student council representatives on the Highland Echo Committee. The business manager is chosen by a joint faculty-student committee.

The new staff members elected by the Highland Echo Committee include rising seniors: Bobbye Carson, Carolyn Cones, Pete Nix, Betty Springstead, and Libby Turner; rising juniors: Joe McNeal and Walt Thompson; and rising sophomores: Margaret Longfellow and Mary Turner.

According to the Echo constitution only five seniors may be on the staff. This means that all staff positions on the senior level are filled, but students are welcome and encouraged to try out for positions on the junior, sophomore, and freshman levels.

Library Notice

The library has announced that a number of books are to be discarded. These books will be placed on a table in the lobby outside the library on Monday morning at 9:00 A.M. and will be available to whoever wants them. The books will cover a variety of subject fields.

New Cuts System Is Announced

The Personnel Office has announced, in the new edition of Standards and Requirements, a revised "cuts" system to go into effect next year. Under this new system students on the honor roll will be allowed to cut classes at their own discretion, although a record will be kept of their absences. Other students will be allowed as many absences per semester as there are meetings of the class per week (i.e., for a three hour class — 3 cuts). The usual allowance of five cuts in chapel and six in Sunday School and church will also be in effect for all students. The main change in this system is that those allowed cuts are to be the total of elected cuts and sick cuts combined. Therefore, says the Standards and Requirements statement "It is the student's reponsibility to use this allowance only for unavoidable absences, such as for serious illness or similar emergencies.'

ATTENTION!

ALL STUDENTS must have a clearance ticket from the bookstore, which they will receive when returning their textbooks and ALL STUDENTS must have a clearance ticket from the library which they will receive if they have returned all library books charged to them. Both tickets must be presented at the Treasurer's Office in order to receive refunds or transfers. Charges will be deducted after which the balance will be refunded. Then the new Advance Deposits must be made.

Everyone is urged to see notice posted outside the Treasurer's Office for further details.

3 Rank Highest In Sophomore Tests

Dr. Frank D. McClelland has released to the Echo the results of the recent National Cooperative Testing Service examinations for sophomores. The tests, which are a part of the sophomore year requirements are designed to measure the general cultural knowledge of a student after two years of college study.

According to Dr. McClelland the present sophomore class ranked unusually high on the national norm. The standing of the class is in the 64th percentile which means that it is in the upper 64 percent of sophomore classes across the nation, 63 groups being below it and only 36 above it.

On the individual sections of the test the class ranked unusually high. In social studies the ranking was the 64th percentile: in literature, the 65th; in mathematics, the 55th, in fine arts, the 70th; and in science, the 65th. The total highest standing of the last two classes was the 61st percentile.

Three Maryville students ranked in the 99th percentile on the entire test, which is the highest possible standing. Those in this percentile must have scored more than 202 out of a possible 280 points. She students in this high est percentile are as follows:

Garcia

Francisco Garcia of Havana, Cuba, who was educated in the private schools of Cuba and has had one year of college work at Central University in Santa Clara, Cuba. He is a member of Alpha Sigma and Playhouse. He is majoring in chemistry, preparing for professional work in chemical science.

Thirty

As the end of the semester nears, we all are preparing to say goodbye. But before we leave to forget, it is a good idea to evaluate what has happened this year. This applies to the Echo as well as to the other phases of college life. This year was marked by increased expression of student opinion, in student council, student forum, and in the Echo. We have been glad to see this, for an interested student body is necessary for growth and change. And changes have been made. The Men's Student Cooperative has been started, Dating proposals passed, and the Echo has changed, too. A new comic strip was added, some new columns were begun, but most important, the Echo became more the voice of the students, which was the aim and desire of the editor and staff. We were all working hard for a better newspaper, and we think it is better!

This took hard work, and couldn't have been done without the close cooperation of the staff. Theer is nothing to say but thanks to them, and we don't know what we would have done without them. There were some who helped the Echo by holding news back so the Echo could have the scoop. Again, all we can do is thank them and all the others who have helped the Echo this year.

We are looking toward the future confidently. This year was crucial, an dsurvival this year will lead to growth next year. We are working toward improvements such as joining a national group as the Associated Collegiate Press. We want more student opinion polls, more scoops, but mostly more interest. It is our aim to cover and express opinion about the things that students are most interested in. In that way, the Echo may be criticized, but it will be a true student newspaper.

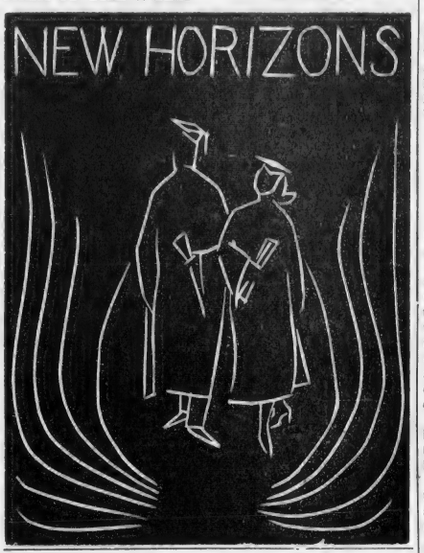
So our plans lok big, our aim high, but we can't do it without staff members and interested readers. This year is finished, its Echoes are history, let's look to next year. Good luck Carolyn.

Concerning Cuts

The first object of this editorial is to thank all of those people who have so abused the sick cuts system that it is now practically non-existent. Their continual cutting of classes and of major tests, on the slightest pretense of a sneeze has brought a hardship on to the entire student body.

That object accomplished, the second is to ask if perhaps the new system is not perhaps a little too stringent to those who are not on the Honor Roll. Naturally there is emphasis put upon good grades, partly for the good of the students and in the long run, for the upholding of the academic standards and rating of the school. But, to place such a vast amount of emphasis on what will end up to be one one-hundredth of a point in a semester average is a little unreasonable. Under this system a person having a 2.25 average has unlimited cuts while someone who didn't know what row Beatrice was in in Dante's Rose of Paradise, and therefore got a 2.24 average, has only three cuts in all this next semester courses. (This includes sick cuts.) This may sound very exaggerated but it is quite feasible in counting up points and averages.

To be perfectly serious about this matter, there is the very sobering thought that this system puts, in a number of cases, great merit on marks received unfairly. Everyone knows of someone who gets his marks in a "different" sort of way. Many people slide through all sorts of courses without any work to speak of, and practically nothing gained but eyestrain. This is not a thing to encourage, yet with such an emphasis on good grades it will, undoubtedly, be on the increase. This unfairness is not always the fault of the student only, but is due to negligence or laxness on the part of the teacher. It is perfectly well know that some teachers grade easier than others, some rarely give an "A". With a major professor who grades easily, naturally some people get "A's" and Honor Roll averages with very little effort. For people who take four courses, only one "A" and the rest "B's" is necessary for Honor Roll but when one is taking five or six three hour courses, he must have two or more "A's" and the rest "B's" to make the grade. This is unreasonable in a college which sets its standards so high. A "B" here is the equilivant to an "A" in many other schools, because the competition is harder here, due to the selectiveness of the student body is a good college grade anywhere, and especially here.



One more point of contention is the lack of difference between under and upper class privileges. That was one of the few in the past, that the upper classmen had a slight increase in responsibility, but under this new plan, no account is taken of the fact that upper classmen have learned how to discipline themselves better and therefore should have one or two extra privilages.

To the administration: Most of us agree that the sick cuts system was abused, that many students missed classes for little or no reason and that some have yet to take a major test at the scheduled time, but we also feel that this new idea perhaps does not take into consideration some of the facts mentioned in this editorial, not to mention the fact that some people are sick more than three times a semester. Perhaps a better remedy for the situation as it now stands would be enforcement of the old system of sick cuts rather than the introduction of this new one.

TALK OF THE WEEK

By Sue Settle

Scots & Soda

By Joanne Causey

I see where Jintaro Ishii, Jasaji Izumida, Juhei Nakano, and Shigeichi Yamamoto, members of the Japanese Imperial Marines, recently surrendered to the United States, which was real white of them.

In December, 1944, Lt. Yamaoto led a platoon of Japanese marines in an abortive attack on an American airfield on Mindoro Island in the Philippines. The Japanese force was decimated and nine survivors, after a year of fearful hide-and-seek with the U. S. troops in the fever-ridden Mindoro jungle, settled down to a stone age existence as neighbors of a remote aboriginal tribe, to await the "victory of Japan." For twelve years they evaded capture and ignored leaflets telling them the war had ended. Last November, the four survivors—weakened by disease and fantastically hungry—gave up and returned to civilization.

They were very surprised to learn that Japan had lost the war. After hearing about them, so was I.

I don't know you. I never met you. But I don't want to know you. You are an infinitesimal segment of that amorphous, twitching, vaguely sentiment collection of ambulant protoplasm known as The American Mass, than which nothing lower in the scheme of things ever has or ever will exist, and as such, I detest you. If I knew you, I would probably find myself interested, and that would complicate matters no end. So get lost! There, by George, now we'll find out if we have any readers, because if there is one that's bright enough to read anything more complicated than d-o-g; she, it, you will undoubtedly be mad enough to write a scatching letter in to the editor.

Fashions

by Bobbye Carson

Last Saturday night, May 4, the Home Economics department presented their annual fashion show, 'Calender of Fashions" in which was shown the various garments which the girls had made during the year. The narrator told something about each outfit as to material, color scheme, accessories, design and cost estimates. We, the audience, found this very enlightening as to what lovely things could be made for so little cost.

The various classes taking part in the fashion show and something of their projects are as follows:

Elementary Clothing Construction — The girls in this class made a blouse with set in sleeves and buttons and buttonholes, a wool garment, and a garment of a slippery material or a blend of some sort.

Tailoring — These made a very tailored garment such as a suit or coat, first made in muslin and then in the desired fabric, and a garment for someone else.

Costume Design — The girls designed and outfits in the style of a period of history of fashion, such as a Grecian style. Some of the girls in this class designed and made their evening gowns.

Advanced Dressmaking — The girls made dresses out of muslin by a basic pattern, from this they designed and made a pattern to be made in the material they had chosen for their finished product. Also a garment had to be made with handwork and they had to use a Vogue pattern for a garment because of the intricate design.

Baseball

The New York Yankees and the Milwaukee Braves head up their respective leagues as the season rolls on.

The Yanks won three straight from the White Sox to gain their position while Milwaukee stopped the Bums' to strengthen their already gained position.

Summing up the rest of the American loop, the Boston Red Sox are in third place followed by Cleveland, Detroit, Kansas City, Baltimore and Washington making up the rest of the league in that order.

In the national league, following the Braves and Dodgesr you have the Cincinnati Reds and the St. Louis Cardinals. The New York Giants 5th place followed by Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Chicago in order.

Don Honk and Ted Williams head up the league batters at present.

The best hitting ball clubs are Cincinnati and Chicago's White Sox.

The teams now realizing their needs for the season will probably be cooking up trades before too long.

Boxing

"Sugar" Ray Robinson regained the middleweight crown for the fourth time when he knocked out Gene Fullmer in the fifth round of their bout.

It was the first time that Fullmer has been put down by anyone. Another interesting fact about the fight was that Robinson was behind on all three of the judges score cards when he unleashed his savage left hook that ended the whole affair.

Robinson will take on Carmen Basilio next in the fall.

Racing

Iron liege won the coveted Kentucky Derby for Calumet Farm despite the fact that its top horse had to be scratched just before parade time.

General Duke was the heavy favorite but had to withdraw because of a leg ailment.

Gallant Man was second followed by Round Table in the classic.

M.C. Baseballers Win 3 Then Dropped Two

by Pete Nix

Maryville College brought its season's baseball record to 10 wins and 5 loses by defeating Carson-Newman Hiwassee and Tusculum while dropping two to Milligan and East Tennessee State.

C.N Eagles

In a climatic finale pitcher Earl Lawson singled in two runs in the bottom of the 9th to defeat the Carson-Newman Eagles 7-6. Lawson went all the way for the Scots to gain the victory. Carson-Newman got off to a quick start and lead 5-1 at the end of three. The Scots pushed across 2 to tie it up in the 7th only to see the Eagles grab a one run lead in the top of the eighth. In the bottom of the ninth singles by Bill Dent and Don Hill set the stage for Lawson's winning blow. Bill Dent with 4 hits in 5 trips and Jimmy Harris with 3 hits in 5 at bats were the leading Scot hitters. Hicks led the losers with 3 for 5.

Hiwassee

Scoring 13 runs on 13 hits the Highlanders pounded out a lopsided victory over Hiwassee College of Madisonville. Scoring in every inning but the second, the Highlanders used the substitutes freely in their 13-2 victory. Jack Woodhall and Bill Dent with 3 hits apiece led the Highlander attack. Mack Johnson was the winning pitcher.

Tusculum

In high scoring error studded melee, Maryville College won its 10th game of the season 18-13. A 10 run 6th inning was the big uprising of the game, but the Scots came back with 5 in their half of the sixth and 3 in the ninth to take the victory. Tusculum had 12 miscues, the Scots committed 5. Don Hill led the Highlanders with 3 out of their total of 12 hits. Bowers had three hits for the losers.

On a road trip Monday and Tuesday the Scots dropped decisions to Milligan 3-2 and East Tennessee 8-3. However the scoring book was not available on these games.

M.C. Tennis Team Loses Two

The Maryville College tennis team took defeats at the hands of Sewanee and Tennessee Wesleyan to give them a season's record of 4 wins against 5 defeats.

Sewanee

A powerful Sewanee squad shut out the netmen 7-0. Led by Thompson and Troy the military boys were taken to three sets only twice.

Tennessee Wesleyan

The Scots dropped their fifth match 4-2 to Tennessee Wesleyan in Athens. Bolger and Matthews in number 3 and number 5 singles were the only Maryville victors.

The Maryville College track team in its best performance of the season downed Tusculum College of Greeneville last Tuesday 100½ to 30½. The outstanding performance of the day was Joe Williams 2:00.6 sec. half mile which tied the Maryville College record for that event. The big surprise of the meet was the broad jump. Theta and Alpha Sig Made M.C. A Toyland

by Margaret Longfellow

"Babes in Toyland" — that's what the freshmen were this past week as Theta Epsilon and Alpha Sigma societies presented the first rush week of the season. On September 12 and 13 the Maryville College campus blossomed into a toyland overnight. A bowlegged cowboy arched the chapel walk, doll-sized favors appeared in front of dorm doors at early hours of the morning, toy soldiers guarded the entrance to Pearsons Palace, fashion models paraded in the amphitheater, and giant lollipops festooned the walks. A giant funny face "swallowed up" everyone entering Thaw. Freshmen minds drifted from studies to thoughts of the "Big Formal" Friday night. Raggedy Ann and Tiny Tears would have felt right at home.

Thursday afternoon the freshmen "dolls" were escorted to a fashion show in the Fine Arts Center amphitheater by their Theta big sisters. The array of college clothes was modeled by members of Theta Epsilon. Friday night the week was climaxed with a gala rush week show in the alumni gym — transformed into a palace complete with splashing fountain. The show, with the theme "The Night Was Made for Love," featured Siamese dolls, paper doll dukes, china dolls, and people.

This year's rush week chairmen responsible for the transformation were Susie Parkinson and Stan Mont. Gary Davis headed the Set and Campus Decorations, while George Stewart stage managed the climactic show. Cheryl Van Metre was in charge of choreography; Faye and Bob Edris and Joan and Ted Engle of lights; Bobbye Carson, Tom Eberhard, and Tom Evans of music; and Betty England of costumes. The refreshments were handled by Judy Cummings, and duties to the formal were arranged by Ralph Rodman. Other committee heads were: Dorm decorations — Carolyn Ingram; Dining hall favors — Rosalie Tipton; Dorm favors — Doris Watt; Ushers — Velma Hileman; and Fashion Show — Pat Dow.

Members of the cast of the rush week show included: Gail Shiffer, Jessie Ann Rhodes, Mary Murphy, Bill Hoffner, Bob Moses, Ted Fraumen, Don Hill, Bruce Lundberg, Reda Kay, Maryanne Braidwood, Gail Bradley, Curt Burger, JoAnn Antes, Rosemary Lee, Margie Merritt, and Mary Pakosh.

Many other members of the two societies put work into the miniature-themed show using talents of dancing, singing, creating in paper and paint, and writing scripts. The societies are endebted to these dolls and guys — and most especially to Anita Cole, president of Theta Epsilon, and Dan Wiley, president of Alpha Sigma.

Y Radio Program Is Every Sunday

Through the efforts of the Y.W.C.A., the Y.M.C.A. and the cooperation of radio station WGAP, "Y" radio will be presented every Sunday evening at 9:30 p.m. Although a project of the Y's many campus organizations will have an opporunity to participate. This will be done through organizations being responsible for a program; that is, they will plan it and provide the necessary talent.

Meditation programs will be presented through the work of the Christian Education Club. There will be religious dramas directed by the Y with tryouts for the personnel needed. Suggestions for programs or scripts may be presented to any member of the Y Cabinet. For anyone interested in writing, Y radio provides a means to exercise your initiative. To make Y radio worthwhile, suggestions and cooperation of the student body are needed.

It is essential that Y radio have a listening audience, so here we may all help by turning on our radio to station 1400 every Sunday evening at 9:30.

This Sunday evening Ann Murray, President of Y.W.C.A., Clem Birkleback, President of Y.M.C.A., Robert Goodlin, President of the Student Body, and Eleonore Koster, Student Council Secretary-Treasurer, will present the purposes, hopes, and aims of their respective organizations.

Margaret Paterson and Dave Krotchko are in charge of Y radio this year.

The Artist Series Will Feature Three Concerts For This Season

The Artist Series for the 1957-58 season will consist of three concerts featuring the Orfeou Choir, the Solisti di Zagreb, and Players Incorporated.

Orfeou Choir

The first concert, in early November, will be the Orfeou Choir of Portugal. This is a group of 80 young men ranging from 18 to 23 years of age. This is the choir's first North American tour. They are well known in Europe, Africa, and South America.

The group's program includes choral selections of all of the major periods in music history and also some of their native folksongs in which they accompany themselves with lutes and guitars.

Solisti di Zagreb

The second concert of our series will be the Solisit di Zagreb, an instrumental ensemble. This group from Yugoslavia will appear early in December. There are 14 instrumentalists and a baritone soloist in the Solisti. The conductor of the group, Antonio Janigro, is a world famous solo cellist. Janigro records for Westminster Records, while the ensemble has cut discs for the Vanguard label.

The Solisti di Zagreb is a familiar name in Europe and is rapidly becoming famous in the United States. The group has brought wonderful reactions from the critics all over the world.

Players Incorporated

The final performance of the 1957-58 Artist Series will be a dramatics group called Players Incorporated, from Washington, D. C. They will perform Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet." The troupe consists of 14 players who provide everything necessary for the play's production. They bring their own lights and scenery and are accustomed to performing in any kind of surroundings.

The members of the Players are all young aspiring actors and actresses. They are not individually famous yet, but the group as a whole has a fine reputation throughout the United States.

The Artist Series committee has tried in this year's series to please everyone's taste. In the poll taken early last semester the larger ensembles and groups proved to be the most popular with the students. Many of these groups could not be gotten because of scheduling difficulties, but the committee has attempted to get a series which contains similar groups and suits all tastes.

Last year's series was not supported well enough by the student body. This is an opportunity for college students to see different types of artists and to broaden their knowledge and tastes. Though the student may not attend, he is still paying for the series through his activities fee and is thus losing money.

Informal Dance To Be Tonight

The four societies are sponsoring an informal dance to be held in the Alumni Gymnasium immediately after tonight's football game. The dance will last until 11:45. No admission will be charged.

The decorations for the Theta Epsilon-Alpha Sigma rush week show will be left in the gym and be used for the dance. The function is stag or drag, so anyone without a date should feel free to attend.

Since the dance will be informal, appropriate attire will be the type of clothing worn to the game. Bermudas are not acceptable.

One of the society presidents stated that the dance, coming in between rush weeks and sponsored by the four societies, is an example of the spirit of cooperation existing among the societies.

IN SYMPATHY

Three of the faculty recently lost members of their immediate families. Mrs. Henry Balwin Lloyd, mother of Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd, died on September 11. William Meiselwitz, father of Miss Gertrude Meiselwitz, passed away on September 9. C. E. Massey, father of Miss Edith Frances Massey, died June 29. The student body extends sincere sympathy to these faculty members and their families.

Mrs. Henry Baldwin Lloyd, of Winnetka, Illinois, died unexpectedly on September 11, 1957, at the age of 84, at the Evanston Hospital, Evanston, Illinois. She had been in the hospital for ten days following a sudden attack diagnosed as pneumonia but seemed to be recovering satisfactorily.

Her body is being sent to Maryville, and the funeral service will be held at the home of her son, President Ralph W. Lloyd, on the Maryville College campus, at 2:00 p.m. Saturday, September 14. The ministers in charge will be Rev. Dr. Francis W. Pritchard, Pastor of New Providence Presbyterian Church, Maryville, and Rev. Dr. Horace E. Orr, Professor in Maryville College. Interment will follow in Woodlawn Cemetery, Knoxville.

William Meiselwitz died on September 9 after a brief illness. Burial was in Kiel, Wisconsin.

C. E. Massey died suddenly on June 29. Interment was in Alabama.

Playhouse Casts To Be Announced

Try-outs for two experimentals and the fall major production of Playhouse were held Wednesday and Thursday nights. Miss Craven has not yet announced casts.

After casts are announced, there will be a general meeting of Playhouse for all those interested in signing up for committees and crews so that work can start immediately. A chapel announcement will give the day and time of this meeting.

The two experimentals are the light comedies, "Suppressed Desires" and "Playgoers," and are scheduled to be given September 28. Jean O'Casey's "Juno and the Paycock," an Irish Tragedy, is the fall major production and is scheduled for November 1 and 2.

Debaters Needed

Would you like to be able to speak more effectively? An excellent extra-curricular activity which develops ability in speaking, encourages interest in national affairs, and teaches one to reason logically is debate. The squad needs anyone who is interested to help make debating this year outstanding. This year's question is: Resolved: That the requirement of membership in a labor organization as a condition of employment should be illegal.

Chapel Organ With 2,564 Pipes Is One Of Largest In South

In 1947 the Voorhees Chapel on the Maryville College Campus was destroyed by fire. The Samuel Tyndale Wilson Chapel, which stands on the site of the old building, was dedicated May 16, 1954.

Lost in the fire of '47 was a small chapel organ. When plans were drawn up for a new chapel it was decided that an organ worthy to be placed in the largest and most costly building on campus would be needed.

Now completed and installed the new organ includes 39 stops, 49 ranks, and 2,564 pipes. These include a trumpet rank of 61 pipes, and in addition to the 49 ranks there is a set of 22 chimes. The chapel organ and the one in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall were both built and installed by the Holtcamp Organ Company, Cleveland, Ohio, the oldest organ builders in America.

The new chapel organ is the largest pipe organ in this area. Unlike the smaller one in the Music Hall the chapel organ has most of the pipes enclosed by silver fiberglass fabric stretched by Knoxville Scenic Studios over wooden frames anchored to steel uprights.

There are 58 show pipes which stand in an artistic design on oak windchests. These pipes are "live"; they are not display pipes as are sometimes seen. There are no "dummy" show pipes in either the chapel or the Music Hall organ.

The three manual console is finished in oak to match the great screen at the back of the chapel platform. This console can be placed in various positions for accompaniment at all chapel events.

"There is reason to believe," said President Ralph Waldo Lloyd, "that this will prove to be one of the great organs of the South."

Ann To Be Presented During Pre-Game Show

The staff of the Maryville College Highlander Band announces that Miss Ann Wiley, a senior English major from Heiskell, Tennessee, will be presented as band sponsor this evening at the Maryville-Tennessee Wesleyan game.

Miss Wiley is president of Playhouse and is a master player in the organization. She also is a member of Theta Alpha Phi, the national honorary drama society, and a member of Writer's Work shop. Serving on the Echo staff for three years, Miss Wiley was associate editor in her junior year.

Among other activities she has acted as copy editor of the Chilhowean, editor of the M Book, treasurer of Bainonian, Nu Gamma leader, and junior representative of W.S.G.A. Miss Wiley was a member of the Daisy Chain, is serving on the Drama Board of Control and is counselor in Baldwin Hall.

According to tradition the band sponsor is a senior girl elected by the members of the band. Each of the four societies selects a girl to represent them as a candidate for this honor, and the band does the final voting.

Parade

Miss Wiley will lead the annual parade which opens the Maryville football season. The parade will form at 3:00 on the college campus.

Drum Major John Williams will present the new sponsor at the pre-game band show this evening.

Band Program

Attired in colorful kilts of the Hay tartan, the members of the Highlander band will perform today for the first time this season. Mr. Ralph Moore, band director, announces that the band will present the following program: In the pre-game show, at which time the colors will be saluted and Miss Wiley presented, the band will form a liberty bell and a revolving wheel. "The Star Spangled Banner" and "Round and Round" will be played.

At half time the band will form a TW, a sun, and a letter M.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR of campus-wide interest will be given consideration only if signed. Such letters should show thoughtful, representative criticism or appreciation on subjects of general interest. The editor reserves the right to edit letters because of space limiations. In certain cases, names may be withheld in publications.

We Need Each Other

In the first issue of the Echo it is customary for the new editor to make a statement concerning the purposes and policies of the paper. The M Book defines the Echo's purpose in this manner: "to present campus news as interestingly and as thoroughly as possible." This is and always has been one of our chief goals. Yet we have another goal, too, and it is equally as important. The staff wants the Highland Echo to be truly representative of the student body. We want it to reflect your tastes, your interests, your opinions—to be in actuality the "voice of the students."

What are the implications of this? It means that the Highland Echo is YOUR paper. It means that the staff has a very definite responsibility but that you have a responsibility, too. No paper, no matter how conscientious and hard-working the staff may be, can achieve its purpose without support. Last year gave an all-too vivid illustration of what can happen to a paper when a student body loses interest. We almost lost the Echo. The crisis woke students to their apathy, and the Echo began again wih renewed life. Let us hope that we have learned by our experience.

This paper is not the product of the handful of people who work on the staff. It is the product of the college. What is your place in this over-all picture? We need your co-operation in submitting news items and topics for features. We need your constructive criticism. We had gotten your adverse opinions in the past only in an indirect manner, and we never knew when we pleased you. Let us know what you think. If you have something which you think ought to be said on a matter on general interest, share your ideas in the Echo Forum. If you like to write or work on advertising, the Echo can use your talents. But most important of all, the Echo needs an interested reading audience. The Echo needs YOU, and YOU need the Echo.

—C.C.

Sacrificed To The System

Maybe you have noticed that something new has been added to the dining hall system. This new plan has been in operation long enough now for opinions, based on experience, to have been formed. How do the waiters and waitresses themselves feel about the new system?

One waiter,, who shall remain nameless remarked that this system is Maryville College's answer to slenderella. Tired and forlorn waiters and waitresses straggle out of the dining hall at all sorts of odd hours, just too late to make all sorts of important meetings. Surely, Church and chapel will not be sacrificed to this new system, will they? If things continue the way they have begun, the "afters" will either not be able to attend some religious functions or they will have to walk in late, disturbing the speaker and the other listeners.

An alternative presents itself, one which we shudder to contemplate. The day may be on its way when beauty sleep will be sacrificed for the spiritual well being of our dining hall friends. Who wants breakfast at 7 on Sunday morning? This is the one morning of the week when one can lie in bed and sleepily muse on the beauties of a silent alarm. It is a necessary relaxation for the poor tired student, burdened with the weight of studies and extra curricular activities.

Another waiter felt that the system would be much improved if only two tables at a time were assigned to a waiter, rather than four. Have you ever tried waiting four tables at one time? If you have noticed some half starved miserable looking people arriving in the dorm at about 10 at night, you will realize that rushing is not only bad for the figure (unless you weigh about 210) but also one can get out-and-out hungry while he is running back and forth to and from the dining hall for bread for each of his tables, composed solely of football players who must eat heartily to go out and win that game.

We realize that the system might not yet be in its final stage of perfection, and privately we think any change would be for the better. Maybe if each person had two tables for which he was responsible for the complete meal, before and after, (also during), there would be a lot of time and energy saved. It might be worth trying.

One final word. We had just become fond of the music last semester when it was time to leave. Has this too been sacrificed to the system? A least we could have it once a week, on Sundays, for the purpose of adding to the pleasure and relaxation of the Sunday dinner. Maybe Student Council would like to appoint some one to handle this. At any rate, we liked the dining hall music, and hope we'll be hearing it again really soon.

Statistics, Anyone?

In these days of higher costs for higher education, it is bit comforting to see how the rest of the nation's college students add up their expenses.

A survey by the U.S. Office of Education reveals that fees and living expenses are $1,500 for an average student at a state-supported college. The private college makes an even greater dent in the scholar's pocketbook with an average of about $2,000 per school year.. Students living at home average $1,000 for their school expenses.

Other interesting facts and figures were brought out in the survey. A break-down of the money spent for college education shows these sources: 41% from the students' families, 29% from the students' personal savings, 17% earned in part-time employment while attending college, 5% from scholarships, 5% from veterans' and vocational rehabilitation programs, 1% from loans, and the remaining 2% from miscellaneous sources.

About 10% of the men and 8% of the women college students are from homes where $3,000 or less is the annual income. A family in the lowest income group spends about one-fifth of its income to keep its son or daughter in college, while a family in the higher brackets averages less than 10 percent.

And how "average" are you?

Scots & Soda

By John Williams

HEY, FROSH! Boy o boy just looky here at what we got for you at this here college! Man or man o boy you'll never get over this! Just look, I say! A whole sloogobin' bagful of great big dandy TRADITIONS! ! Now how about that, huh, boy, huh, huh, huh? You been hearin' about these traditions all your life, and now you're gonna get 'em!

Whooh, just look at this list of juicy, quaint old customs that even sensible people recognize.

Lines

The first one of note is LINES! Man, we're really gung-ho on lines here—the registration line, the chow line, the treasurer's line, the soup line, the book store line, the bread line, the president's reception line, the breakfast, lunch, supper lines, the nightmare lines you dream about after bein' in all those lines!

FOOD!

Boy, here's one nobody will want to skip—FOOD! Yeah man, FOOD in capitals! Ummm, just wait until you really get to know about the food this place dishes out! Man, I'm tellin' you it's something really out of this world! Why, I bet even with your paltry, limited experience you have an idea about the food deal here—both through heresy and experience.

Classes

Besides all this extraneous stuff (and there's more comin') there is the universal collegiate tradition of questionable origin and value —classes. And one of dear M.C.'s special deals in this field, at no extra cost, is it's famed close personal contact between faculty and students. Get a load of this classroom quote: "Ivan, each morning you are to personally hand in to me three new chapters complete with footnotes and detailed reports of all the books you have read for the day's outside reading." — and this classic — "Now, if you were to put your hand there just like Janie is doing, and I were to throw this switch like this (ZzzzzaaaAPP!) you would be killed as dead as . . . Janie??!! . ."

Now, that's real sure-fire tradition!

Bell Ringing

And all you athletic types, here's one special for you. Bell ringing! Whooh-man, that's fun! Here's the deal. . . after every Maryville football victory the town is serenaded by the fabulous tower bell with millions of gleeful, victory-frenzied M.C. students hauling on the rope. Ah, what a memory! What a nostalgic moment—What glory! Years we've been waiting for that moment—and man are we gonna cash in when we finally do win a game!

SIB

And whoogolley ding dong how'll we ever keep from getting mydriatic cranitorii (huge brain cases) over this one. Yiokes, man, we got a brand new tradition—the chapel organ! Have no fear about a lack of knowledge about this amazing object. You can be fully assured that that information will drop upon your unsuspecting heads (if it hasn't already done so). Here at M.C. we have a widely felt organization called SIB (Special Info Bureau). By means of this fantastic Bureau we are constantly and at great length kept informed about vital statistics which are vital to this vital education we're receiving in this vital period of the most vital age of all vital—(whew, add a "t", subtract an "a" and tack on an "e". . . look at all the vittles you have! — — Don't say it—think it and get some valuable experience in a foreign field!)

L.W.C.U.S.W.

And finally here comes the big stinger, the killer, the master of them all—so widely known and familiar I simply used its initials—L.W.C.U.S.W.! ! This one has them all beat—it's really stupendous, it's. . . it's well, who cares anyway? I wrote down the initials, and now I can't remember what the dratted things stand for! ('s truth, so help me!) Ha! All you bright upperclassmen reading this letter to the freshmen (shame on you, they oughta have some privacy!) tell me what tradition I'm trying to think of. All you Silly Seniors, Jumpin' Juniors, and Simple Sophs get on a stick. Somebody is bound to know. Just think of all the traditions you know about that stand for L.W.C.U.S.W. and one of them is sure to be it!

Humph! Well, so long, Frosh, and L.W.C.U.S.W. to you, too!

Oblique Angles

or

Joys of College Life

By Libby Turner

Just to make a real impression on the freshmen, this writer absolutely refuses to welcome them.

How many of you are already madly thumbing through Lovejoy's College Guide for a better school just because you got lost on Anderson's second for two days in a row?

Just for fun why don't you take a walk over to the library and try checking out a book. Bet you have forgotten everything that was ever said on the tour you took.

Is your roommate the type who gets a box of candy and eats it all himself (or herself)? Does he lock himself in the room, and then can you hear him munching? Do you see tell-tale smudges of chocolate on his sleeve when he finally lets you in?

Do the kids on your hall laugh when you walk by in that new nightie that your grandma embroidered especially for college?

Do you have trouble fitting that washboard into the washer door?

Are you discouraged when you come to supper at six and it was at five-thirty?

Sometimes, do you feel left out, when no one at your table likes curried egg but you?

Do you find it frustrating to show up for choir tryouts the wrong day?

Is your room right next to the coke machine? telephone? intercom? milk machine? ironing board?

Do you have just enough money left for toothpaste?

Are you forced to join the Tuesday Morning Club because you tore the seat out of your suit-pants at the faculty reception?

Is your library fine 75c already?

Are you frustrated in trying to find your place in the adult world because your mother starts her letters to you "Dear Honey, I hope you are taking your vitamin pills and are getting enough sleep. Is your housemother nice?"

Has your best friend at Urp University been writing about her cute dates and late permissions until 2?

Isn't it annoying that your trunk isn't here yet?

Are you overcut in your music course already because you can't find the room in the FAC?

Did the housemother say "No" when you and your roomie asked to move into your closet because it is bigger than your room?

Did one of those green benches on campus dump you over backwards just as that SPECIAL person walked by?

Does it upset you to be caught in the rain while trotting up from The Ruins?

* * * * * *

Well, in that case just remember the words of H. L. Mencken, who said, "I don't think the boy of lively mind is hurt much by going to college. If he encounters mainly jackasses, then he learns the useless lesson that this a jackass world."

Voices, Masks, and Shadows

by Virginia Hine

This is the time of year when all the organizations and individuals on campus outdo each other in bidding both old and new students welcome. And just to make the picture complete, let me bid you welcome too — to this column.

This is "Voices Masks and Shadows," (otherwise known as VMS) and I will be here with you throughout the semester. The avowed purpose of this column is the discussion of "culture" — this is in fact the only limitation recognized by yours truly and by the editor. Since this limitation is in actuality no limitation at all, I propose a wide range of subjects for your enjoyment and information this semester. Among these I hope to include a progress report on IGY (International Geophysical Year), an article on the Byzantine Empire, and, if I get really ambitious, a look at contemporary music. In addition to these and other subjects, I hope to keep you informed on the various happenings here on campus in the fields of music, art and drama. I do hope you enjoy reading this column as much as I enjoy writing it.

There are, I am sure, some in my audience who will deny violently that Maryville has any "culture" at all (in the sense that this column defines it). For their benefit and for the general information of my readers, I would like to devote the rest of this first edition of VMS to a brief, and admittedly sketchy, look at some of the cultural events scheduled for this year here on Maryville campus.

In this connection, may I first call your attention to the collection of Korean art now on exhibit at FAC. This collection is the work of the students and faculty of the University of Seoul, and is sponsored by the University of Michigan. There are some very fine examples of Oriental art in this collection, and it is well worth your time. The collection will be on exhibit through the 29th of this month.

In the near future (October 4th and 5th) opera workshop, under the direction of Mr. Harry Harter, will present its first production in three years. Three one-act operas will be presented: "The Medium" and "The Telephone" both by Menotti, and "Down in the Valley," an American folk opera by Kurt Weill. This promises to be an excellent production and is a "must" on your entertainment calendar. (More about this next issue).

Included in the music recital schedule for this year will be the senior recitals of contralto Bobbye Carson, baritone Howard Bell, and pianist Lynn Mitchell. Also faculty recitals by Mr. James Bloy, organist, Mrs. Sallie Schoen, pianist, and Mr. Dan Kinsinger, tenor.

The UT Artist Series will offer a varied program for your enjoyment, including the hit play "No Time for Sergeants." The series opens November 19th with the Black Watch Band and includes Fred Waring, The Ballet Theatre, The Pittsburgh Symphony and the Roger Wagner Chorale. Ticket information will be available at FAC office.

Maryville's Artist Series opens on October 15 with the Pamplona Choir.

Maryville College Playhouse will offer dramatic entertainment, including major productions in the fall and spring, and various experimental theater productions throughout the year.

The highlight of the lecture series this year be the appearance of Mr. Carl Sandberg on November 7. (This is another "must.")

The film society will again present selections from the best foreign and American films.

I am aware that I have not by any means included all the events to take place this year, but I hope that I have succeeded in whetting your curiosity, and in proving the point that Maryville is not devoid of "culture." And (ulterior motive rears its head) maybe you're curious enough about what I'm going to say next to read this column to find out.

See you next issue.

Council Corner

The election of the new Student-Faculty Senate representatives was the first main item of business at the first student council meeting this fall semester. Elected to this position were Bill Heird, Gray Clarke, Bob Muir, Joan Neckerman, Eleanor Koster, Jack Emory, and Carol Williams. This is one of the most important student government offices.

A football dance will be held after the first game tonight, and will be sponsored by the four societies. Gray Clarke suggested that a dance be held after each of the four home games. A recommendation was made that the Student Council back the dance suggestion.

The committee members for the new council were appointed, along with an explanation of the committee duties. It was suggested also that the student council have a particular place in the Echo for its news and that it have a special, permanent heading.

The council agreed to ratify the student center agreement. This agreement gives the council power over the center activities.

Another job coming under the student council is providing dinner music in the dining hall. Ted Frauman will have charge of this as official record changer.

Fashions

by Bobbye Carson

Among other matters of confusion that are confronting the Freshman girls at this time is probably the question of what to wear to different activities on campus and off. Well, Freshman lassies, here's a column just for you, but also we hope it will be of interest to other campus misses. In view of the question, we will speak of such events as a tea, a football game and dance following, and accepted wear for church in this locality.

Teas

During the year, usually several teas are given by different persons or organizations. Emily Post suggests that a nice dress not particularly fancy, and a hat and gloves for accepted wear at teas. According to the locality in which you live, this request of Miss Post's may seem a bit strict. Many women enjoy wearing hats and do not feel properly dressed without one. Others do not care at all for them and reason that they do not look well in a hat. I believe that there is a style or type of hat for every woman and every personality. It is simply her job to find the style that is designed with her in mind.

However, remember you may not always live in a "hatless" vicinity, and that college is the ideal place to learn to feel well dressed and comfortable in a hat. In view of tea time dress, heels, a hat, perhaps a small one, a nice dress and gloves are the wisest suggestion. If you do not prefer an honest-to-goodness hat, try a little band effect adorned in flowers, veiling, or feathers.

Informal Dance

Immediately after the football game Saturday night, the four societies are sponsoring an informal dance. In many colleges the

Scots Battle Tonight On Maryville Gridiron

by Joe Quinn

The opening of the Highlander football season unfolds tonight on Honaker field at 8:00 p.m. You will see many new faces on our squad from the coaching staff on down.

The ball club lacks experience but has an abundance of spirit which has been a problem heretofore. We are stacked with freshmen who have looked good in practice. Some of these that will be noticed are Dub Henderson at center and W. M. Ellison at the tackle slot. Bob Cross is slated to see plenty of action at fullback for the Scotties this year. The Highlander backfield has been strengthened by the hard running of Ken Chambers, a standout of Hiwassee Junior College.

Of course, our team will have some familiar faces in the lineup including two of the toughest guards around in Buddy Beam and Jim Cates. Rufus Bowers and Ed Smith hold down the end positions backed up by Tom Morris and Bill Owenby.

Coach Davis stated that this year's freshman crop is the best looking yearlings he has seen here since 1946 when the Highlanders clipped 10 straight victories and went to the Tangerine Bowl.

Other boys worthy of note are John Hawkins, a 235 pound tackle back after a leg fracture, and Leonard Husky, Bob Wyman, Bill Woodsby and Jack Emory.

Flash Harris will be at blocking back, and Earl Smith will run at wingback for the third year.

This year's schedule is going to be a tough one. This reporter has been watching the practices and the boys are playing hard football. Each one is giving his utmost. The team does have the urge to win, and it seems as though the material for a good year is there.

The one thing that the student body can do is get out there and give them all the support we can supply. This plays a vital role in the success of any team.

Coaches Davis, Mitchell and Cragan have worked hard with these boys and they believe there is reason for optimism, so let's get out there tonight and cheer the Scotties on to a victorious start both for the new season and for the new coaching staff.

What's the good word for today?

BEAT TENN. WESLEYAN!

Faculty Reception Has Two Hundred

An estimated two hundred attended the faculty reception held last Monday night in the court of the Samuel Tyndale Wilson Chapel.

Although the reception is designed primarily for the freshmen to meet the faculty and the seniors to say good-bye, there were a number of representatives from the sophomore and junior classes at the reception. Refreshments were served.

Scottie Schedule Has Ten Games

The 1957 Maryville College football schedule features five long road trips, four games at home, and one open date.

The Scots travel to Morehead State, Jacksonville State, Emory and Henry, Howard, and Concord State. They meet Tennessee Wesleyan, Centre, East Tennessee State, and Carson Newman on the home green. The Highlanders open tonight on Honaker Field with the Tennessee Wesleyan Bulldogs from Athens.

Their first trip is to Morehead State in Kentucky on the 21st. The Centre College Praying Colonels visit the Scots in their second home encounter on September 28. Coach Davis' charges invade Alabama twice during the season; first on Oct. 5 at Jacksonville State, and second on Oct. 19 when they meet Howard College of Birmingham.

Between the two Alabama visits the Scots travel to Emory and Henry then celebrate Homecoming with East Tennessee State. October 12 is Homecoming day. Following an open date the Highlanders wind up the season with a trip to Concord State on Nov. 9 and a meeting with the Carson Newman Eagles in the season's finale Nov. 16.

M.C. Welcomes Coach Mitchell

by Joe Quinn

Although he may be new to the student body, Marvin Mitchell is not a newcomer to Maryville College. After attending Everett High School and playing under then Head Coach J. D. Davis, Mitch came to Maryville College with his head mentor. He played three years at tackle before entering the armed forces and World War II. He returned to the Hill in 1946 and captained the undefeated Maryville College team of that year. He is considered one of the finest tackles ever to put on the Orange and Garnet uniform.

Mitch, as he was called when he played here, weighs a good 245 lbs. He is a very likeable man, a man that you would naturally respect and admire. The fellows on the squad say that he's a hard worker and that they are in condition — an important aspect in football. Mitch is found right in the middle of things pointing out mistakes by showing the players and not by merely telling them.

Mitch has coaching experience from Rule High School where he was head mentor in football. He comes to us not only as assistant football coach but also as head track and wrestling coach.

We are happy to have him with us and from the student body we extend a hearty welcome and best wishes in the years to come.

Peggy Packard Holds Nutrition Internship

Peggy Packard, who graduated from Maryville last May, is one of eight young women who began on July 22 a one-year administrative internship in industrial nutrition in Eastman Kodak Company's plants in Rochester, N. Y.

Miss Packard is receiving instruction from Kodak staff dietitians in all phases of food administration. All of the new interns are recent graduates from colleges where they majored in institutional management or foods and nutrition.

The interns study food preparation, food service, business aspects of cafeteria operation, and handle certain supervisory and management duties. The interns also study nutrition problems in the medical departments of the various Kodak plants in Rochester.

The nutrition internship, the first such program in American industry, is approved by the American Dietetic Association. Upon graduation, interns become members of the association and receive certificates from Kodak.

The internship was begun by Kodak in 1943 to help alleviate the shortage of dietitians in its own cafeterias. Under the present plan, however, graduates are free to accept positions wherever they choose, including openings in the Kodak cafeterias.

TALK OF THE WEEK

By Susie Miller

Marine Officers To Visit Campus

The Marine Officer Procurement Team will visit Maryville College 30 September 1957 and 1 October 1957. While on the campus they will talk with students who are interested in earning a Marine commission.

Qualified students may enroll in one of three courses: The Platoon Leaders Class, Officer Candidate Course, and the Aviation Officer Candidate Course.

The Platoon Leaders Class is designed for the college undergraduate. Students in the program attend training during two summer vacations from college. The classes are of six week duration. The training will be conducted at the Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, Va. It is designed to provide the initial leadership development and necessary military introduction to prepare college men for appointment to the rank of second lieutenant in the Marine Corps Reserve. Commissions are awarded on graduation from college.

The Officer Candidate Course is designed for college seniors. Candidates selected are enrolled during their senior year or after graduation. The Officer Candidate Course is a ten-week training period conducted at Quantico, Va., after graduation. Commissions are awarded on successful completion of the ten week course.

The Aviation Officer Candidate Course is designed for the college student interested in earning a commission in the field of aviation. Applicants for this course must be seniors or recent graduates. On completion of ten weeks pre-commission training they will receive their appointments to the rank of second lieuing as a Marine aviation officer.

In This Corner

by Pete Nix

Noticed in passing: some old things gone; some new things added . . .

Biggest absence is that of Coach Honaker from the football wars Time waits for no man, but he kinda made you think he was the exception to the rule. Poor health drove him from the football field into the Athletic Director's office. It's a little empty out there without him . . .

Gone also is Dr. K. P. Johnson, as the song goes "to a better land I know." He takes over football, basketball, and baseball at a Georgia Junior College. A big opportunity for a nice guy . . .

Missing also is a goodly group of footballers who could help. Coach Davis will agree.

And everybody's gone, but the New York Yankees and the Milwaukee Braves. It's Series time again.

Lots of new things . . .

Freshmen girls, boys too . . .

A new Dean of Men . . .

An organ in the Chapel . . .

Water coolers everywhere . . .

And speed breaks!

All this and a new title for Coach J. D. Davis: head football coach of the Scotties. He's got a lot of freshmen on his hands. A rough road ahead, but a good man for the job . . .

More yet — Marvin Mitchell is the new assistant football coach. An old Scottie who knows his stuff. He'll help a lot. He brought the "bull ring" with him too.

New jobs for Dr. Case and Commodore Fisher: Dr. Case takes over Coach Johnson's tennis duties and Mr. Fisher will direct intramurals.

And to top them all, a new football season — it starts tonight against the Tennessee Wesleyan Bulldogs. As Dizzy Dean would say, "See ya at the ol' ball game."

'Sail, Sail Thy best, Ship of Democracy"

"Sail, sail thy best, Ship of Democracy!"—go the lines from Walt Whitman which composer Howard Hanson has set to music in honor of the National Education Association for its Centennial this year. The poem refers to the American school as the "Ship of Democracy" and is in recognition of the "crew," the American teachers who, as an organized profession, welcome aboard for the 100th time this fall all the children of all the people.

word informal means different things. It seems to take in anything from bermudas to semi-formal evening wear. The campus social committee suggests for you gals, a nice sport dress, perhaps your favorite school dress, or a nice skirt and blouse combination. All are to be worn with flats, convenient for climbing to that last seat on the back row at the game and comfortable for dancing also. The dance begins immediately after the game, so in order not to lose a minute going back to change clothes, plan to wear to the game something appropriate for both events.

Church

For church going, it is believed that all women should wear hats and gloves. In some places I'm sure this is very true, but after having talked with several students, I believe that perhaps the practice of wearing hats in this area is more or less regulated by which church you attend, so in that case it might be well to inquire of other students as to what the accepted practice is for the church of your choice. However, in the eyes of the authorities of etiquette, the practice of wearing a hat and gloves should never be regarded as "out of place" in any church. According to your church and its practices, one can select a hat accordingly as to its size, shape, and degree of simplicity. A nice dress for Sunday does not have to be very fancy, but yet a little more outstanding than your everyday school wear. Put on your Sunday dress, your heels, hat, gloves and grab up that handbag and you're off for church.

TREES

I think that I shall never see
The tree that's lovelier than me.
No tree has got my gawky height
No tree needs glasses for its sight.

A tree is nature in the raw
No lips or eyebrows can it draw.
Modern makeup, with your key,
You hide my resemblence to a tree.

Mary Walker Graduates From New WAC Prog.

Cadet Corporal Mary Elizabeth Walker, senior Spanish major from Dunwoody, Georgia, was one of the 19 college women to be graduated Aug. 9th from the first College Junior Training Program conducted by the WAC School at the U.S. Women's Army Crops Center, Fort McClellan, Ala.

The new training program was designed by Department of the Army to give young women a preview of life in the Women's Army Corps with a view toward their selecting the Army as a career. Representing colleges and universities throughout the United States, the distaff juniors wore the WAC uniform with distinctive gold epaulet trim and trained for four weeks with the more than 1000 Regular Army Wacs stationed at Fort McClellan.

Corporal Walker sampled a full slate of military subjects, incuding chemical-radiological-biological warfare, military justice, map reading, intelligence and Army administration. She participated in parades and ceremonies and learned the techniques of close order drill. Corporal Walker may remain in the US Army Reserve throughout her senior year and if she chooses, may apply for a commission in the Women's Army Corps following her graduation.

In a survey during her training, Cadet Corporal Walker said, "The program offered much and seemed interesting. I think it will give us an insight into the Army and will aid in the decision of a career."

Guest speaker at the Cadet graduation ceremonies was Colonel William T. Moore, Fort McClellan Post Commander. Cadet Corporal Walker received a Certificate of Completion of the junior course from Lt. Colonel Frances M. Lathrope, Commanding Officer of the US Women's Army Corps Center.

Council Corner

Near the end of last semester, the Student Council Committee on Evaluation felt that a better way of discovering student opinion, views, and ideas was needed. This is, of course, consistent with one objective of Student Council as stated in our constitution. To meet this problem we conceived the idea of publishing in the Echo the committees of Student Council, their chairmen, members, and functions. By so doing, we hope to accomplish several things. It should acquaint the student body with those representing it; show the many areas in which Student Council works; and most important, provide a channel through which you, as a student, may direct your suggestions and criticisms. Concerning the last point, I would like to state that this is your opportunity to improve campus life. An idea, no matter how loud, in the privacy of your dorm room will result in little action. It is imperative, unless we wish to remain stagnant, for us to take an active interest in methods for improving our school through our student government. Each committee will have a report of its functions in this column. Here is your chance --if you have a way to better our college, direct your suggestions to the chairman of the proper committee. Don't belabor your roommate; pester those who can do something about it.

JYA'er Sue Nelson Tells Reporter Of Year Of Study In Philippines

By Margaret Longfellow

Perhaps you've seen this smiling young lady on campus, her blond pony tail bobbing; or maybe you saw her at the faculty reception in her lovely orange Philipino gown. Whatever the association you will know that she is Sue Nelson, a senior elementary education major from McRae, Georgia. Born twenty years ago, the daughter of a Presbyterian minister, she is the oldest of three sisters and two brothers.

Sue attended Maryville College her freshman and sophomore years, and then she heard about Silliman University and the Junior Year Abroad program. She was attending the World Missions Conference at Montreat at the time she heard about the university and the JYA program from Margaret Flory.

The year Sue decided to be a JYA'er was the fourth year of the program, which is part of the Foreign Missions program of the U.S.A. Presbyterian Church. There were ten countries—Switzerland, Spain, France, Hong Kong, India, Japan, Lebanon, Pakistan, the Philippines, and Scotland—that she had to choose from, and twenty-eight schools to attend. She decided on Silliman University in the Philippines.

Sue applied to the Board of Foreign Missions, of which Dr. Pritchard is a member; and, when she was accepted, she financed her schooling herself. In order to attend the university she had to be Presbyterian or attending a Presbyterian college.

She left home June 3, 1956, and went to San Francisco where all the JYA'ers going to Silliman were to have a three day orientation period with Margaret Flory. After this period the whole group went to Honolulu with a six hour stop, to Tokyo with a three day stop, to Manilla for three days, and then to Silliman.

Silliman University is a Protestant school about 500 miles below Manilla. The university is located on Negros Island in the city of Dumaguete. Looking to the front is the sea and back beyond the church are mountains. The climate is warm all year round. The school was started by Presbyterian missionaries and has an enrollment of about 3,000 students. Last year there were ten American students, five of whom were JYA'ers. Only 45 percent of the student body is Protestant—some of the students being Buddhists, Moslems, and Catholics.

The school is on the semester system—the first semester from June to September and the sec-

Concerning The Echo

Try-outs are still in process for positions on the Highland Echo staff. Interested persons should attend the next regular staff meeting, which will be held this Thursday at 4:30 in the Echo office.

Try-outs for this issue include juniors Carol Morgan and Bill Pennock, sophomore Nancy Seeger, and freshmen Bonnie Birch, Marilynn Lundy, Pat Penland, Lewis Plate, Kris Ramsey, and George Roselli.

Bowman Receives Scholastic Honor

Bob Bowman, Junior English major, has been announced this year's winner of the Alpha Gamma Sigma award. This award, which is the income from a fund established by members of Alpha Gamma Sigma, Maryville College's honor fraternity, amounted to $45.00 this year. This is the second year that this award has been given — Ruth Morris, senior biology major, being last year's winner.

Winners of the award must have a good record at the end of their sophomore year and must intend to further their study at Maryville College. An outstanding Sophomore is chosen annually for this honor.

ECHO FORUM

Dear Editor:

I am writing in answer to the editorial "Sacrificed to the System," which appeared in last week's Echo.

Although some of the statements were not entirely unjustified, I feel such harsh treatment of the issues was a bit pre-mature. It is true that the dining hall job does require more time per day than in previous years, but each person who requested a job through the Student Help Office agreed to work only if his class schedule allowed. The argument that waiters and waitresses will be unable to attend certain religious functions was presented. However, with a bit of cooperation from the persons seated at the dining tables, it has been proven that dining hall workers can arrive at chapel in time. The Sunday problem has been remedied by a special system which allows the two working groups to help one another and thus be out of Pearsons in time to attend the religious services of the day. With this special system, breakfast can be served at eight for those who like to "be in bed and sleepily muse on the beauties of a silent alarm."

The fact that one waiter (or waitress, the term more generally used) sets up four tables, and another clears four, means that each is responsible for two only during the meal. This may still seem like quite a job, but if diners will help by pouring their own second glass of water and serving their own desserts, the job will be lightened greatly to say nothing of the better etation of the waiter's nerves!

I have discussed several facts of the new system, but why, you ask, wasn't the old system good enough?

For one thing the old means of dish-washing was not sanitary. Now the dishes are all sterilized by an automatic dishwasher. This in itself is reason enough for the change.

Also the staff has been divided in half. This means there is less congestion in the kitchen and a more orderly atmosphere prevails.

As to the question of music, this has already been answered. Records of music for dining would be appreciated I am sure, if one were but to present them to a Student Council representative.

Finally, we have seen how many of the problems have been solved already, and I'm sure that any remaining ones will be ironed out soon. October 10 (student-help pay day) should hush all complaints, for with the new system has come a new amount of pay for workers!!

Opera Workshop To Give "3 In 1"

The Opera Workshop of Maryville College, Division of Fine Arts, will present a "Three in One" night of short operas — "Down in the Valley," a folk opera by Kurt Weill; "The Telephone," a farce by Gian-Carlo Menotti; and "The Medium," a tragedy, also by Menotti. The performances will be Friday and Saturday evenings, October 4 and 5, in the Music Hall of the Fine Arts Center at 8:00 p.m. Tickets for students, faculty and staff of Maryville College are $.75; $1.00 for those off campus.

(Editor's note: See "Voices, Masks, and Shadows," page two, for further details.)

Experimentals To Give Two Plays

Experimental Theater will open the fall season on Friday, September 27, at 7:30 p.m. with two one-act comedies.

The first of these will be "Playgoers" written by Arthur Wing Pinero. Members of this cast are Ronald Lind, the master; Susan Parkinson, the mistress; Kay Buchanon, the cook; Judy Perov, the kitchen maid; May Collier, the parlor maid; Ruth Wagner, the house maid; Betsy Lonsinger, the useful maid; and Gene Fieg, the odd man.

The second play of the evening is to be "Suppressed Desires" by Susan Glaspell. Cast includes Jane Pianitzer as Henrietta; Ronald Randon as Stephen; and Carol Schade as Mabel.

Assisting Miss Craven with the direction of the two plays are Ann Wiley, Ruth Wagner and Susan Parkinson.

In accordance usual experimental procedure there will be no scenery other than curtain sets, properties and costumes.

There is no admission fee for experimental productions.

Deadline For Fulbright Applications Is Soon

The deadline for applications for the Fulbright Scholarship Program is November 1. Scholars and specialists in the entire range of academic or professional fields may apply for awards for research, advanced study, or lecturing in educational institutions abroad.

Some of the countries which take part in this program are Italy, Austria, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Japan, Argentina, Chile Colombia, Paraguay and the Philippines.

As for the eligibility requirements, a person must be a citizen of the United States and be able to speak the language of the host country. Another important requirement is that the applicant be working for his master's or Ph.D. degree or doing research work in a certain field.

Awards given by this program do not cover the entire cost of the recipient. They are viewed as a very substantive grant-in-aid, but not as complete in itself.

Applicaton forms and further information may be obtained from Dean McClelland.

Cheerleaders Elected

Cheerleading try-outs were held last Tuesday evening in front of the chapel. Those elected were Charlotte Blanchard, Cathy Dees, Nancy Yaney, Diane Wades, Bob Emmert, Bob Hassell, Bob Higard and George Kaiser.

The new cheerleaders will perform for the first time at the Centre College vs. Maryville game on September 28.

Current Exhibit Has Korean Art

by Marilynn Lundy

An opportunity to see the exhibition of Korean art by students and faculty of Seoul University is offered to the students and faculty of Maryville. The Art Department is displaying this exhibit, under the sponsorship of the University of Minnesota, until September 29.

Included in this exhibit are various mediums of materials and definite, distinct types of work. Basically, the various groups can be divided into four sections, although some are intermingled.

The first group consists of the traditional landscapes, figures, and flower scrolls These are similar to the former oriental art techniques.

The second of the four divisions includes both oil paintings in the western idiom using techniques employed during the latter part of the nineteenth century and abstract paintings that could be called Western Orientals.

Applied designs could be the title of the next set of Korean art work. This group has cards in the modern trend, designs for pottery, and various designs for general use.

The last section of Korean works gives us an insight concerning the students and studio itself. Photographs taken by the students relate these details and also show pottery made at Seoul University

Persons attending this showing may observe the Western influence on the East and see how the East has influenced the West.

Persons interested in extra subscriptions to the Highland Echo please see either the editor or the business manager.

YMCA Conducts Membership Drive

The YMCA is planning a meeting at 1:30, on Sunday, September 22, in Bartlett Hall. At this time the various committees will present their program for the year and explain their purposes.

During this week the YMCA has had representatives contacting individually the men on campus. They are extending a personal invitation to all those who are interested to attend this meeting and to join actively in the work of the YMCA.

They also gave each man a pamphlet which explains the purpose of the YMCA and lists the different committees, their chairmen, and their purpose in being a part of the YMCA program.

Already the YMCA has played an important part in this year's program. The Big-Brother Program under the direction of Gerry Platz, the vice-president of the YMCA, and the Watermelon Pow-wow helped to start he year for the men in "fun, fellowship, and worship together."

The YMCA is already looking ahead to the Y-hikes (October 5) and the Thanksgiving benefit show. The talent for this show is made up from the Y members and the student body.

Details Given On New Cut System

This is a brief explanation of the provisions made for necessary absences from class. For a more detailed account it is recommended that the reader check with the "M" Book and/or Standards and Requirements.

Students not on the Dean's List are reminded that allowances for absence from class are for emergency situations such as serious illness. The number of absences one may have in any one class during a semester equals the number of times the class meets per week. (Note that the number of permitted absences is not regulated by semester credit.)

If an absence from class is necessitated by the student being engaged in an authorized college activity, that absence will count as half.

When a student is forced by illness requiring hospitalization or by any required college service to be absent more than the authorized number of times, appeal may be made within two days after the absence at the Personnel Office. These appeals will be acted on by a faculty committee at the end of the semester or earlier in some special cases.

Returning students are reminded that under the new absence system there are no excused absences. Although there are not excused absences students should report illnesses to the house mother concerned. The use of the allowed absences is the students' responsibility. If a student uses his allowed absences for other than emergency need and then becomes ill, the extra absences will not be excused.

It is strongly urged that students keep a personal list of when they miss a class and the reason for the absence. Those students who are on the Dean's List should do likewise, since absences totaling 25 per cent of the class time result in a grade no higher than a D for the course. Unlimited cuts do not apply to required attendance at chapel, Sunday School and Church.

Craven Announces Fall Play Cast

The Maryville College Playhouse will present "Juno and the Peacock" on the first and second of November. The play is a tragedy written by Sean O'Casey.

Miss Craven has announced the cast as Charlotte Cathy as Juno and David Ross as Captain Jack Boyle in the two leading roles. Others are Ralph Ayers as Johnny, Ouida White as Mary, Bob Bowman as Joxer, Judith Farrow as Mrs. Madrigan, Ronald Randon as "Needle" Augent, and Randy Rosentell as Charlie Bentham

Also there will be Lois Nelson and Judith Menard as the two neighbors and Alice Curd as Mrs Tancred. Four of the men's parts have not been cast. Furniture removal men are Gene Fieg and Ronnie Lind. Ronnie will also serve as coal block vendor.

A list of committee assignments was not available.

"Ralph" Retires

Mr. E. W. (Slim) Taylor of Union Grove School Road, Blount County, succeeds Mr. Ralph W. Irwin at Maryville College as night watchman. Mr. Irwin, who was forced to retire in August because of health, became night watchman at the college on October 1, 1917, thus he was acquainted with ten college generations of students.

Art Of Community Living

Going to college, whether as a senior or a freshman, means confronting learning experiences in many fields. It means learning to study and comprehend, to react favorably to minor crisis, to adjust well in a social situation, and most especially to practice the fine art of community living. Many students come from homes in which they do just about as they please. Blaring radios while studying, lengthy phone calls to friends, visitation between rooms at almost any hour are not uncommon or particularly bothersome in the small family unit. However, when this smaller division is multiplied many times and grouped under the same roof, a completely new situation arises.

This new situation demands a greater understanding and considerateness in relations with other people. Remember the golden rule when you are tempted to violate a "Do Not Disturb" sign or to hold an all night talkathon while a friend is trying to sleep in the next room. Be reminded that the rule works both ways! A few persons cannot breathe life into the project and struggle alone for its existence. Community living, for the best interests and happiness of all, must be a community project.

Will YOU Be There?

The Artists Series Committee and the college administration work together to place before us a chance to widen our cultural interests by attending the various performances arranged for the Series.

It is a disappointing fact, but true, that the majority of the students do not attend these programs. Those who do attend, readily realize the value of such a cultural aspect to the whole of their college life.

The performances given in the past for the Artists Series have been of excellent quality, and the scheduled appearances for this season are highly promising. The first performance is to be given by The Pamplona Choir of Spain on October 15. This choir has recently won first place in an all-European choir festival.

Nowhere else could you ever find such interesting programs given for such a small admission fee charged. Season tickets will go on sale in the very near future. Please note that a considerable sum will be saved by your purchasing a season ticket.

We sincerely hope that more students will take interest and openly support the Artists Series this year.

Why Join A Society?

Two Society Presidents Answer

The importance of the four societies in the proper functioning of the college social program is often unrecognized and taken for granted. Many of one's closest friends are made and certainly some of the best times of one's college life are had through society relationships. Each of the four societies here at Maryville has much to offer to anyone no matter what his or her interests may be. Of course, which society one joins is an important decision, but what to me is more important is that he or she join with the idea in mind that the society will be more worthwhile for having had them as a member.

As everyone knows, one characteristic of our societies here is that the student chooses it instead of its choosing him. In most aspects this is a fine point, but unfortunately it is also one that has its drawbacks. Each year in every society there are those who join up, perhaps pay their dues, attend the better functions and sometimes even attend a meeting or two. Believe me, these are the ones that no one wants.

So if you join—and I certainly think you should—don't be what we call "deadwood". Be active, participate and you will be surprised at the fun you have and the friends you make.

—D.W.

* * * * *

As everyone knows by now, there are four societies on Maryville campus. These societies are the only purely social organizations available to us. Each society has its own special characteristics and functions, but basically they are all alike. Each provides opportunities for students with various kinds of ability or for those just seeking fellowship.

Some of the functions that all the societies are involved in are the sponsoring of the formal dances, rush week, skit night, and homecoming floats. The groups also hold weekly meetings during which there is usually some sort of entertainment besides the business at hand.

Maryville's four societies offer opportunities for leadership to many who might never have a chance to stand out in the other phases of college life. They offer persons with any kind of talent whether it be sticking wet paper to chicken wire or singing an operatic aria, the opportunity to use and exhibit that talent. But the most important thing these societies have to offer is fun and fellowship with your own best friends. That is why it is important to get acquainted with the members of the societies and to choose the one that offers you—personally—the most!

Joining a society is the best way to get away from the toil and drudgery of college life and to enjoy relaxation and fellowship. Each year the societies look forward to receiving "new blood" from the freshmen and transfers. It is essential to their growth and usefulness. So actually, the societies need the members as well as the members need the societies. To help YOU get the most out of Maryville—join a society!

Scots & Soda

By Maryanne Braidwood and Reda Kay

Welcome little freshman to M.C. We, the members of the Freshman Counseling Service, are her to help you. From past experiences of other freshmen we will solve your problems.

You say that as you arrived your taxi hit the speed break and overturned, and you broke your ankles?

You say that your trunk you sent three weeks ago got sent overseas as a CARE package?

You say that your room-mate can't speak English, and she's not making any attempt to learn; and when you unpacked your suitcase you discovered that your $25.00 bottle of French perfume smashed and leaked all over your shoes?

You say that out of 420 freshmen girls you were the only one without a big sister?

You say that you have one hour to wash, and for three weeks straight someone has taken your washer, and your sheet looks like a shroud?

And when you went to pay your bill you discovered your $400 check had been blurred in the rain?

You say that you went to breakfast every morning for three weeks and choked down shredded wheat, and today you didn't go, and they had donuts?

You say that the only boy who will date you got kicked out of school for running a smoker in the basement of Carnegie?

And that the night before your first big test you ran out of light cuts?

You say that it rained every day for a week, and yesterday you bought an umbrella, and it hasn't rained since?

And the morning after you got pinned you came down with mononucleosis and had to be sent home for a semester?

You say that you were stranded in the middle of the dining hall holding a loaded tray when they opened the doors?

You say that you had a test in every subject the next day, and the whole floor moved in your room for a party?

And after you found out you had advanced Greek, it was too late to change your schedule?

Is that what's bothering you, friend?

Then hold your head up high, look into the sun and never give up, never give up, never give up that ship!

Voices, Masks, and Shadows

by Virginia Hine

Last week, in my survey of the events coming up here on campus, I mentioned, in passing, the Opera Workshop production on October 4th and 5th. This week I would like to give you some more detailed information about this production.

"A Lot of Fun"

If any of you have been in the vicinity of FAC recently, you have probably heard various groups of people singing at the tops of their voices and running around madly, mumbling about telephones, looking for a score for "Down in the Valley", worrying about growing sideburns and playing guitars, and whether or not the pulpit is in the right place for the church sequence. But nobody is running faster or working harder than the director of the production, Mr. Harry Harter. With three separate operas to work on, including a double cast for "Down in the Valley," and a chorus for the same, and individual work with the leads, Mr. Harter is probably the busiest man on campus right now.

When I asked Mr. Harter for a statement for this column, he replied with a smile, "It's a lot of fun." I think this applies for all the other members of the production as well. I have seen at rehearsals a group of very tired students and faculty members staggering from sheer exhaustion. But there is a spirit of accomplishment here. People are working hard and giving up a lot of time to this production — and it's going to be a good one, maybe one of the best productions this campus has seen in a long time. So I think we all can agree with Mr. Harter and say "It's a lot of fun."

The performance will be on October 4th and 5th as I mentioned, in the Music Hall of the Fine Arts Center at 8:00 p.m.

"The Medium"

Three one-act operas will be produced. The order of performance will be "Down in the Valley," "The Telephone," and "The Medium." The last of these, "The Medium," by Gian-Carlo Menotti, may be termed a tragedy. It is the story of Madame Flora, (Bobbye Carson) who, with the help of her daughter Monica (Zona Gogel) and Toby, a mute servant (Harold Mays), tries to cheat her clients through faked seances only to be touched herself during one of them by a hand which she cannot explain and which drives her into insanity and murder. Others in the cast are Madame Flora's clients Mr. and Mrs. Gobineau (Lessie Ann Rhodes and Howard Bell), and Mrs. Nolan (Joan Johnson and Norma Taubert).

This opera was first produced by the Brander-Matthews Theater of Columbia University in New York City in 1946. Since then it has become an international success and has also been made into a movie under the composer's direction.

"The Telephone"

The second opera "The Telephone," also by Menotti, is an opera buffa (comic) with two characters. Ben (John Ribble) tries in vain to propose to his telephone - addicted sweetheart, Lucy (Mary Haydn McEver) until at last he makes his proposal by telephone.

This two Menotti operas are very interesting as examples of contemporary American music. This is a little off the subject but I would like to note in passing that Soviet Russia keeps strict control over her serious composers, and forbids them to use any of the techniques which characterize contemporary western music. Russia also keeps a list of "forbidden composers", mostly western, who use these techniques. I think it is of interest that the name of Gian-Carlo Menoti stands very high on this list.

"Down In The Valley"

"Down in the Valley" by Kurt Weill was mainly conceived for production by non-professional groups consisting of a chorus with a few solo singers and actors. It is the love story of Brack Weaver (Bob Davies) and Jennie Parsons (Mary Pakosh and Nancy McGeorge). The plot is complicated by a villian, Thomas Bouche (Harold Kelley), who is an admirer of Jennie's. The story follows the pattern of a traditional tragic folk ballad. Brack and Bouche clash over Jennie and Bouche is killed. Brack is sentenced to die. The story picks up at this point and relates, by a series of flash-backs the events leading up to the tragic climax. The story is told by the leader (Dick Conway and Howard Bell) to the chorus, which also takes an active part in the events of the story.

"Down in the Valley" is a folk tragedy, but there is a real sense of fulfillment as the lovers, Brack and Jennis, spent a last hour together and vow their love for each other. Then Brack goes off to die, but peacefully, as he says to Jennie, "Knowin' you'll always love me."

The score of this opera is rich in folk melodies. The title song is used as a theme throughout. It is used for the opening chorus and unifies the whole plot by constantly re-appearing in the Leader's part as he relates the story, and in the closing chorus.

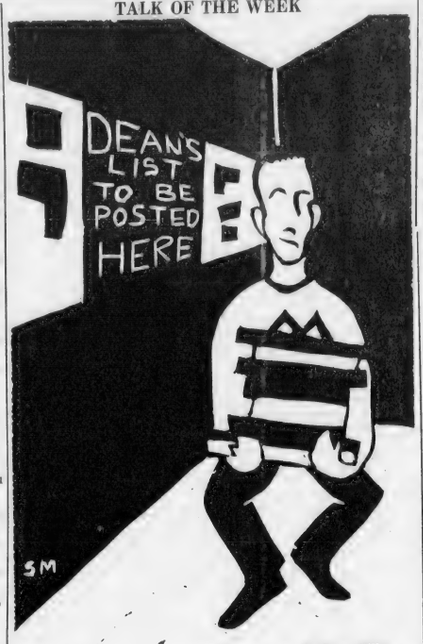
The love theme may be said to be the melody "The Lonesome Dove," which Jennie sings to Brack, and which re-occurs throughout the story. This is one of the loveliest and most haunting melodies I have heard — and one which is not easy to forget.

In addition there is a gay bouncy tune used in the dance sequence and a sort of spiritual, "The Little Black Train," which is used in the prayer meeting episode. (But I still like "The Lonesome Dove.)

The chorus includes Lela Aliff, Margaret Davis, Lee Gageby, Donna Laubach, Norma Taubert, Hilis McKamey, Virginia Hine, and Sandra MacNeill. Also James Colquhoun and Bryant Cureton.

Assisting Mr. Harter, director of Opera Workshop, are Miss Gloria Mares, accompanist and choreographer; Mr. Dan Kinsinger, who is assisting in coaching; and Mr. Victor Schoen, Ronaid Randon, and William Lonsinger, who are doing the lighting for the productions. Simple yet effective set designs have been created by Ralph Ayres under the direction of Mr. Richard Beard of the Art Department. Janice Peterson will assist in the creation of these sets.

Student accompanist is Jerry Overall who will accompany the performances of "The Telephone", assisted by Nancy Stere, flautist. David Gilliland will provide the tympany effect in the accompaniment of "The Medium."



Elva Leonhardt and Ruth Terhune are in charge of properties David Morris and Norma Taubert are in charge of make-up. Tom Evans will act as house manager, and Jeanne Berger and Mary Pakosh are in charge of publicity.

Joe Quinn and Bill Hoffner are in charge of tickets, which go on sale Tuesday morning, September 24. Tickets for students, faculty and staff of Maryville College are $.75, $1.00 for those off campus.

As I said, this will be a production well worth your time, and I hope that the goal of the publicity will be reached (sell-outs for both nights).

See you next issue.

TALK OF THE WEEK

By Susie Miller

Writer's Workshop Has Two Openings

Writer's Workshop has two openings for membership at the present time. If any juniors or seniors are interested in this program of literary creativeness and constructive criticism, they are invited to submit a sample of their work in any literary form desired, prose or poetry, to Stan Mont, Ann Wiley, or Eleanore Koster.

Students participating in Writer's Workshop held the first regular meeting last Monday afternoon in Dr. Hunter's classroom. Gary Davis read his "Essay on Contemporary American Taste," which was criticized by Ruth Morris.

The returning members welcomed new participants: Bob Bowman, Bill Boyd, Gary Davis, Ruth Dean, Bob Goodlin, Virginia Hine, Fred Kay, Mary Ellen Lee, Bill Lynch, Bev Tillman, and Joe Williams. The facuty members include Miss Johnson, Dr. Hunter, Mr. Bushing, and Mr. Durant.

The world has been heavily endowed with many, many types of walks. Why? Every person is basically an individual. As we each have our individual ways of doing a million other things, we have our own way of walking. But even our "own" walk can be greatly improved and still be ours.

Clothes of the most up-to-date fashions can not bring out your charms if you do not walk correctly. A model can always look more stunning in your dress than you do because she knows how to walk and display the garment correctly.

Some of these many categories that we and our walks fit into are the clopper's gait, the shuffle step, the twister's waltz, the bouncer's hop, the waddler's wiggle, and the professor's plod. Since these sound a little undesirable, let's hold high as our standard for a pleasant, graceful motion — the gliding walk.

To practice this gliding walk, first line yourself up against the wall with head, shoulders, hips, and heels touching the wall with only a very narrow space between the wall and the lower part of your back. Now that you are ready to walk, here are a few pointers that will help you achieve this gliding movement.

1. Keep your body erect at all times.

2. Walk in a fluid movement from the hips with knees bending easily.

3. Both feet should travel in two parallel tracks about two inches apart, and remember that the toes point in a straight line forward.

4. Practice these suggestions until they are easily done.

5. Be careful not to let the bookworm's bend get you when carrying heavy books.

Reflections After A Winner. . .

The Maryville College Highlanders, 1957 variety, have a new look. A new defense that saw the Scots jumping from a 5 to a 6 and sometimes what amounted to a 7-man line.

An improved pass defense. Although caught twice for pass interference, the pass defense looked much improved over last season. Wesleyan completed 5 throws in 15 attempts, and two of the completions came as a result of the afore-mentioned interference.

And they're not afraid to throw the ball. With the running attack bogged down, the Scots took to the air and made it pay off. Once for a T.D. and again for a big play in the second touchdown drive. The Scots threw eight times, completed five.

Captain Buddy Beam may have been the big reason the new defense looked so effective. Beam, playing one of the finest games of his career, was responsible, by this reporter's count, for 12 individual tackles, and helped out on numerous others. Also noteworthy was the work of Jim Cates at guard and Ed Smith at end. Wingback Earl Smith turned in a fine performance in the defensive backfield.

The biggest Scottie weakness in evidence against the Bulldogs was the lack of a consistent running attack. The soggy turf could have been partly responsible. None the less, if the Scotties can improve their ground game, they will be tough for any of their remaining eight opponents.

Another disturbing thing was the fact that Maryville was still letting them make the big play. Twice, late in the game, the Bulldogs had 4th down and 8 to 9-yard-to-go. situations, and the Highlanders let them pull it off. It really put the pressure on the Scots and almost cost them a tie ball game.

Less you forget, Tennessee Wesleyan was also there. And they brought with them a slick, hard-running quarterback who had the Scottie linemen guessing all night. One of the best QB's the Scots will face all season.

A few other things. . . .

The Maryville squad was much deeper than we had at first believed. A good sign. . . .

Those bright orange jerseys made one think of the Volunteers, for a moment anyway.

And tonight it's Morehead. . . They will be tougher than last year (Morehead 18, Maryville 13, but if the running attack jells, the year (Morehead 18, Maryville 13), but if the running attack jells, the

Maryville Eleven Meets Morehead

by Pete Nix

Tonight the Maryville College Highlanders meet Morehead, Kentucky, State Teachers College on the Teachers home field. Last year Morehead broke a 28-game losing streak as they defeated Maryville 18-13. Last season's Morehead lineup contained a number of sophomores and juniors, and they should be stronger.

The Scots will be looking for their second victory under the head tutorship of J. D. Davis. No serious injuries were reported after the Wesleyan contest, so the Scots should be at full strength when they face the Kentucky boys.

Game time is at 8 p.m., and the contest will be carried over the local radio station WGAP.

Intramurals....

by Joe Quinn

There isn't much to report on this scene, as the rain has dampened a number of openings. However, sign up sheets for the annual fall tennis tourney have been posted for men interested.

On the touch-football scene, after a postponement, the Alpha Sig Sledgehammers whipped the Pre-Min Y team by a score of 18-0. Dan Wiley sparked the Sig attack with some fine passing and running.

All freshmen are urged to sign up and play for a team as soon as possible.

Commodore Fisher is in charge of this year's program and would be glad to explain the new point system to anyone interested. Details of this new system have been posted on the bulletin boards.

For anyone interested in both watching or playing, touch football is played every afternoon on Wilson Field at 3:45 p.m.

Teams entered in competition this year are as follows:

Alpha Sig — Sledgehammers
Kappa Phi
Pre-Min-Y.M.C.A. combined
Killers—town team
Alpha Sig — Hammers

Sports Spotlights

By Joe Quinn

Baseball

The Milwaukee Braves and St. Louis Cardinals head down the home stretch of the '57 season in a battle for the National League flag. The Braves have a 3-game edge now, but anything can happen. The Dodgers have faded to a poor third followed by Cincinnati, Philadelphia, New York, Pittsburgh and Chicago, in order.

In the American loop, the Yankees are waltzing home again as the White Sox begin to fade. The only interesting note here is the battle between Ted Williams and Mickey Mantle for the batting crown. Ted has a 9-point lead at this stage. Both of these men have been taken over in the home-run race by slugging Roy Sievers of the lowly Washington Senators. Roy has clouted 39 round trippers this year and is setting a torrid pace at present.

Football

The opening of big college football officially gets under-way this week; Oklahoma tackles a strong Pittsburgh squad. This will be a stern test for the two powers at a very early date in the season. Oklahoma will be favored, but look for a possible upset—Pitt is very strong.

West Virginia, another strong squad, tackles traditional rival Virginia in another big opener.

Other games as follows:

Villanova at Baylor	Oregon State at South California
Missouri at Vanderbilt	S.M.U. at California
Texas at Georgia	Navy at Boston College
Texas A&M at Maryland	N. Carolina at N.C. State
South Carolina at Duke	Rice at Louisiana State
Kentucky at Georgia Tech	T.C.U. at Kansas

One of the big games scheduled for this week was cancelled because of the flu outbreak, and that was the U.C.L.A. vs. Florida game.

Football enthusiasts in these parts will be looking at Tennessee on September 28 when the Vols take on the rough Plainsmen of Auburn. The big orange from Knoxville are predicted for first place thsi year again in the tough S.E.C. race. Other favorites are Auburn, Kentucky and Georgia Tech.

Boxing

In another championship bout, Ray "Sugar" Robinson defends the middleweight crown against tough Carmen Basilio. This should be a good scrap all the way.

Scotties Take Opener; Defeat Wesleyan 14-7

by Pete Nix

The Maryville College Highlanders successfully opened their 1957 football campaign with a 14-7 victory over the Tennessee Wesleyan Bulldogs. Time ran out on the Bulldogs with the ball in their possession on the Scottie four.

Maryville reached pay dirt first early in the second quarter. A 30-yard pass from tailback Ken Chambers to Earl Smith gave the Scotties a 6-0 lead. Capt. Buddy Beam, a defensive standout all night long, converted to make it 7-0.

The Scots missed a chance to score earlier, when the Bulldogs held them at the 12, after Rufus Bowers had grabbed off a Wesleyan aerial. The Bulldogs threatened, but a fourth down pass attempt failed. The Scotties punted out and on the first Methodist play, Jim Harris accounted for Maryville's second pass interception.

From their own 30, the Highlanders, led by Chambers and Allen and aided by a Chambers-to-Smith aerial, drove to the Wesleyan 27. From there Chambers again pitched to Smith for the first tally.

The Bulldogs first and only tally of the night came near the end of the first half. Led by their hard-running quarterback, James Lamb, Wesleyan drove to the Highlander 20, where the first of two pass interference penalties against the Scots put the ball on the Maryville five. The Bulldogs employed a seldom-used tackle eligibility play for the T.D., and Jim Acker bulled over to add the extra point.

A downpour during half-time and throughout the 2nd half made ball handling difficult, and the Highlanders pounced on a Wesleyan fumble early in the third period to set up what proved to be the clincher. Earl Smith grabbed the fumble on the Bulldogs 35. Chambers, Smith, and Bob Cross all made important gains as the Scots moved to the 2. Chambers drove off tackle for the T.D., and Beam again converted to give the Highlanders a 14-7 margin.

Neither team made any headway until late in the 4th quarter when Wesleyan took over after a Maryville

ECHO FORUM . . .

To The Editor:

The key note of the election for the president of the student body last spring was cooperation. Every one of the candidates promised cooperation as a means of progress. The only way cooperation can be achieved among so large a group as this student body is through the proper use of parliamentary procedure. The principles of parliamentary practice are not magic formulas or ritual; they are tried and tested methods of fair play to insure democratic results. The first and most important ingredient in parliamentary procedure is a neutral and unbiased presiding officer. The president presides; he cannot express views on an issue under controversy because his opinion is unduly influential. Much less can he present an issue to the floor. When he desires to do either, he must promptly leave the chair and participate on equal grounds with the rest of the participants to the debate.

The way in which the Town-Night agreement was presented to the student body for ratification without even the forms of a motion or second or a call for debate was the work of a tyrannous demagogue. I find it hard to believe that, at a Christian college where the emphasis is supposed to be on respect for other people's personalities, such a deed, trampling on the self-respect of all the students, could take place. Maybe the motion, second, and call for discussion do seem perfunctory, but they must be continued to insure fair play. I even doubt whether the town night agreement is valid under the circumstances.

Democratic procedures are needed to insure voluntary obligation. The Town Night agreement, or any other agreement, cannot be enforced except that the students willingly comply with it. Whether any one feels obligated to the agreement depends a great deal on his having the opportunity to dissent, even if he does not wish to make use of the opportunity. The opportunity is more than perfunctory. One further point — what about publication in the ECHO of all items to be presented to the student body before action is taken on them?

VHMC Program Aids Home Finance Needs

Through the offices of the Voluntary Home Mortgage Credit Program, Room 604 U.S. Courthouse, Nashville, Tennessee, private lending institutions are pprepared and ready to make FHA-insured home loans to qualified persons in need of financing in order to have a home of their choice. This help is restricted to the remote areas and smaller communities where local funds have always been in short supply even under the best of circumstances.

Services of VHMCP are available to all qualified borrowers in the small communities and remote areas. These services — a facility of the U.S. Government— are free. Since its inception, the Voluntary Home Mortgage Credit Program nationally has provided over 30,000 qualified borrowers with home loans valued at more than 270 million. In Region VII, Kentucky and Tennessee, the program has placed more than 2,600 home loans valued at omre than $25 million.

VHMCP is established just and only to be of service to those who are qualified to get, but cannot obtain, an FHA-insured home loan in their own town. They must first seek financing locally. If unable to get a loan, then they may apply to VHMCP for assistance in obtaining a government-insured loan to buy or build the home desired in the community of their choice. The application set them from VHMCP must be completed and returned to the Agency. It will then be circulated among national and local investors in an effort to locate a company willing to make the loan.

In spite of the disrupted and tight mortgage money market the interest rate on FHA-insured home loans — 5¼% — is still attractive enough to retain the participation of the many private home financing organizations supporting the program.

For further information on VHMCP or application forms, write Benjamin H. Ernst, Executive Secretary, VOLUNTARY HOME MORTGAGE CREDIT PROGRAM, Room 604 U.S. Courthouse, Nashville 3, Tennessee.

A pleasant tone from this small transistor radio receiver may someday let telephone customers "on the move" know they have a phone call.

POCKET RADIO CALLS YOU TO TELEPHONE

A personal signalling service has been introduced on an experimental basis in some areas of the country by the Bell Telephone System.

Clipped to one's belt or on the inside of a pocket, the device informs a person that there is an important message waiting for him at his office or home. Expected to appeal particularly to doctors, repairmen, deliverymen, lawyers, salesmen and others who want to keep in touch with their offices, the new service works like this:

A secretary may wish to get an important message to her boss. She calls a special telephone operator and gives her the number of his receiver. The operator "dials" the number which activates the tone signal in the boss's receiver set. Alerted that he has a call, he goes to the nearest telephone booth and calls his office or a predetermined telephone number.

Telephone officials say the new service may be placed in operation here after experiments are completed.

COUNCIL CORNER . . .

Student Body and Student Council meetings to the student body. The Council bulletin board in Anderson is also to be maintained by this committee with all pertinent information receiving just publicity. Any suggestion for improving this committee in any way will be appreciated.

III. Record Committee — Ted Frauman, Carnegie; Frances Matthews, Pearsons; Ann Newcomer, Memorial; Evelyn Crane, Baldwin

It is the function of the Record Committee to provide dinner music in the dining hall. If you have soft dinner music, please contact one of the persons on the Record Committee.

IV. Social Committee — Gray Clark, chairman; Eleanor Koster, Carol Williams, Pete Bailey, Jim Conklin, Miss Massey, Miss Strick, Dr. McClelland, Mr. Bushing

The Social Committee of the Student Council is perhaps the committee which most affects the life of the student body, for its duty is to plan the schedule of events for the entire college. The committee itself is made up of an equal number of students and faculty and meets bimonthly to schedule events and discuss plans and procedures for the social program.

Perhaps the most important job is that this group must pass all pending functions and then give the event a date on the calendar. Many of the annual dates are planned for during the preceding year, and then the following term all other dates are added as they are brought before the committee.

Another function, not quite so well known, is the Social Committee's relationship to the student center. It is charged with establishing and maintaining general policies governing the student center, with the selection of all personnel, and with the supervision of the funds spent on the center. The actual store is handled by the YW and YM, although it is still officially under the jurisdiction of the Social Board.

As is obvious, the committee is a vital part of our campus life, and as such should be the concern of the whole student body. If there are any suggestions for improvements of the social life of Maryville College, give them to any member of this committee or of Student Council. Your recommendation will be discussed and, if warranted, suitable action taken to correct the situation. This is your responsibility and we can act only through you.

V. Student Organizations Committee — Eleanor Koster, chairman; Bev Tillman, Katrina Wells, Chris Ward, Margaret Keitt

The purpose of this committee lies in the coordination of the organizational activities of Maryville College. One of its duties is to work "for improving and unifying the many social activities." Along this line, and in accord with recommendations by the Committee on Social Re-Evaluation which Dr. Lloyd appointed last spring, we would like to see a revival of the tradition of "dressing for dinner" before Artist Series and opening nights of the major playhouse productions. Perhaps the societies could have a reception between dinner and the performance to add even more to the occasion.

These are only some of the suggestions we have received. Do you have any?

In addition, we would like to remind all organizations on campus that their rules of initiation must be approved by this committee before initiations begin.

VI. Student Programs Committee — Ted Fraumen, chairman; Bill Lynch, Mary Newton

It is the function of the Student Programs Committee to approve plans and scripts for all campus student programs, such as Rush Week, Barnwarming, Skit Night, Freshman Talent Show, Senior Send-Off, and Senior Day.

Council Meeting

President Bob Goodlin has set up office hours on Thursdays, Fridays, Mondays, and Tuesdays for committee chairmen and students.

The council received a letter from the American Korean Society inviting us to help destitute Korean students as a dorm or society charity project. The project will be suggested to the Y's and to the Barnwarming Committee.

A pep rally was suggested by Bob Muir for Friday morning as a team send-off.

A question was raised about the Men's Student Co-op being a legal election. It was legal, and copies of the constitution will be posted in the rorm.

Eleanor Koster suggested that there be more dressing for dinner before formal events, such as Artists Series, Thanksgiving and Christmas meals, and opening night of playhouse performances in response to student requests and past customs. Jack Emory asked if it would be possible to hold a really formal dance, in accordance with the idea that our students be prepared for the adult social world.

SUE NELSON . . .

ond semester from October to March. All of Sue's classes were taught in English although Visayan is the language spoken at Silliman and that area. (The national language is Tagalog.) The classes were more of the discussion type rather than lectures.

Sue lived in a dorm where there were no screens or windows, but where mosquito netting was used at night. Bamboo shades were used when it rained. Boys cleaned the dorm everyday, washing the floors with coconut husks.

The food was very good — most especially the fresh fruits. Sue was particularly fond of mangoes and papayas. Rice and fish were the staple food, and the students had them in some form at every meal.

Western clothes were worn on the campus although there is a national costume. All clothes were made to order by a tailor. The American students seemed taller, for the average Filipino girl is about 5'1" and the Filipino boy 5'6". Special-occasion clothes are made from coconut fiber, a fabric looking like dacron. Shoes are also made to order and are the only articles of clothing that cost more than ready-made articles here.

The students didn't wash their own clothes but sent them out to be washed. The washing cost approximately $4.00 for 100 pieces. The clothing was stored in lockers along the wall rather than in closets.

Everyone was transported in the tartanilla, a horse drawn buggy that holds about four people. One could ride anyplace in town for ten centavos, or one nickel.

American movies, the cha-cha, and jitterbug are quite popular. The Filipinos judge Americans largely by their movies. Dancing is not allowed on campus, but many dances are held off the campus for the students.

The dating situation is quite different and is viewed with more seriousness than here. A chaperone would come, pick up all the girls going to a particular dance, and would take them to the dance to meet their dates. The chaperone then told the girls when to leave. The girls left their dates at the dance and went back with her.

On a movie or dinner date the chaperone also went along, and the boy paid for her movie or dinner as well. On a beach party a chaperone went along for every five girls.

The people who engage in manual labor on the islands are considered the lower class. The Philippines needs engineers; but, because it is considered a manual labor job, more students major in medicine or law. The parents have a great deal to do with their children's choice of courses, and even press those ones that their children could not hope to pass.

There was an active foreign students' club at the university with five countries represented — Marshall Islands, Hong Kong, Korean, Thailand, and the U.S.

On Founder's Day the theme was Internationalism. Sue was chosen "Miss Student Government" and was escorted by the only American boy in the school. There were also three queens from the Philippines and one from Thailand.

The church at Silliman is very active. There is not a Sunday School for college students, but Sue's particular dorm required church attendance. On Sunday nights there were Christian Fellowship meetings which studied such topics as dramatics, local social problems, and "Our Asiatic Neighbors."

Similar to our February meetings is the Galilean Fellowship. It is held in faculty homes twice a year — October and February — for two week periods. The meetings are climaxed with a Decision Sunday.

Sue Nelson, now an ex-JYA'er, arrived home April 22, 1957, after a week-end stop-over in Hong Kong and a two week stay in Honolulu. She says that she would like to return to the Philippines someday and adds, "Although their methods of education are quite different, the trip was education. Living in the dorm and associating closely with the students of other countries made it a very worthwhile experience. I will ever be endebted to the church and the Christian friends who made this year a reality."

M.C. Girls Teach Foreign Language At Fort Craig Elementary School

Six Maryville College girls are experimenting with foreign language programs in the local Fort Craig elementary school as part of their work on their special studies. Each girl will teach a twenty-minute class in Spanish, German, or French three times a week to third or fifth grades.

Nancy Peters and Mary Walker each began Spanish sessions October 2 with fifth-grade pupils. Irma Birkelbach, aided by Doris Engle, will begin German classes for one third grade. Beginning October 7, Esther Balph and her assistant Zela Burgreen will instruct other third grade pupils in French.

The lessons will last until December 6, and, resuming January 13, will last through April. Then these college students, their faculty advisors, and representatives from the Maryville school, will evaluate the results of this program to determine whether the program has enough merit to warrant its continuance.

The classes are to be presented in a completely oral manner with no one speaking English during the twenty-minute sessions. The material to be presented will be gathered by the Maryville College students under the supervision of their major advisors.

With audio-visual aids, games and songs, motions and repetition, the girls plan to gradually present a simple vocabulary to the children. They will not teach grammar or writing in the third grade sessions, but in the fifth grade they will introduce the children to grammar and composition as the children become more proficient. By the end of the year the girls predict that the children will have an average vocabulary of 400 words in the language covered.

These language students point out that knowledge of other languages and other cultures helps promote better relations with our international neighbors. They feel that the children will be quick to pick up the vocabulary of a new language, and that the children will enjoy mastering another language.

The Red Shoes Is Opening Film Of Movie Series

The Maryville College Playhouse Film Series will open on October 11 with "The Red Shoes."

Season tickets for the series will be on sale in the lobby of the theater on Monday, October 7, from 3:30 to 5:00. Season tickets are $1.00; individual tickets are thirty cents. Students are asked to get their season tickets if at all possible at this time so that it will not hold up the ticket line at the showings.

Following the film "The Red Shoes" on Oct. 11, "Symphonic Pastorale" will be shown on Nov. 15, "Miracle on 34th Street" on Dec. 14, "Tillie's Punctured Romance" on Feb. 15, "Blackboard Jungle" on March 21, and "San Francisco" on April 26. All shows will begin at 7:30 p.m.

The children's film series will open on Saturday, October 12. The price for these shows will be twenty-five cents. No season tickets will be sold for the children's series.

Writer's Workshop Has 3 Openings

There are three openings for membership in the Writer's Workshop at the present time. Any junior or senior is invited to apply for membership. Try-outs are to submit an original literary selection to a member of the governing board, which is composed of Ann Wiley, Eleanor Koster, Stan Mont and Dean Bushing.

Applications will be considered by the membership committee, consisting of the governing board plus three appointed Workshop members — Libby Turner, Bob Bowman, and Mr. Jack Durant. The committee will notify those accepted by written invitation.

The membership committee is a new part of Writer's Workshop. It will be official after the new constitution is ratified next week.

Writer's Workshop is made up of twenty-five juniors and seniors plus faculty members who are interested in creative writing. Each member presents an original manuscript during the semester and serves as critic for another reader.

Writer's Workshop meets on Monday afternoons at 4:30. Those wishing to attend should have permission of the governing board. Readers for this semester are: Libby Turner, Bev Tillman, Virginia Hine, Mary Ellen Lee, Ann Wiley, Bob Bowman, Betty Springstead, Stan Mont, Clark Eldridge, Paula Kronenberg, Carolyn Cones, Bob Goodlin, Eleanor Koster, Bill Lynch, Bill Boyd, Fred Kay, Ruth Dean, Ruth Morris, Joe Williams Gary Davis, Mr. Jack Durant, Miss Judy Johnson and Dr. E. R. Hunter.

I.R.C. Outlines Future Programs

by Carl Boyer

George Podgorny, president of the International Relations Club, opened the first meeting on September 23 with the remark that I.R.C. is for people interested in international relations and culture, and Mr. Fisher, associate professor of history, the evening's speaker, pointed out that the world is ours — we should take it. Junior-year-abroad programs and post-graduate scholarships encourage an increasing number of students to spend a year of study overseas, while others of us will travel in foreign countries as tourists or members of the military services.

The semester's program will include talks and films on Asia, Latin America, and the Russian Revolution. A professor who was in the Soviet Union in 1918 will discuss the latter topic. Another meeting, to be held in the Fine Arts Center, will be devoted to the music of various foreign lands.

The social highlight of the year's first meeting was provided by the Iranian students, who dressed in their tribal costumes and served Persian refreshments. Other members shed their shoes squatted on the floor, and sipped tea from a saucer through sugar cubes held between the teeth, according to Persian custom.

This Monday evening at 6:45 in the Y-rooms a member who has returned from a year at the University of Edinburgh (Scotland) will discuss how any student can do the same on the minimum amount of funds. A number of interesting slides on Europe will also be shown.

Opera Workshop To Be Tonight

The Opera Workshop of Maryville College, Division of Fine Arts, presented last night and will present again tonight a "Three in One" evening of short operas — "Down in the Valley," a folk opera by Kurt Weill; "The Telephone," a farce by Gian-Carlo Menotti; and "The Medium," a tragedy, also by Menotti. The performances are held in the Music Hall of the Fine Arts Center at 8:00 p.m. Tickets for students, faculty, and staff of Maryville College are $.75; $1.00 for those off campus.

Job As Director Of Public Relations Involves Many Duties For "Scottie"

by Bill Pennock

At the entrance to an office in Anderson Hall is a sign which reads "Director of Public Relations." This formal title belongs to Mr. James Webb Hampton, known to alumni simply as "Scottie." Mr. Hampton has been with Maryville College since 1954; he calls this his senior year. He describes his duties as depending upon the person holding the job. It can be seen that Mr. Hampton has given the widest possible interpretation to these duties, for the work he does covers a great deal of territory.

Coming directly from Mr. Hampton's desk are college ads which appear in such publications as Forward and Presbyterian Life. Many who are now students of Maryville College first heard of the school through just such advertising. Mr. Hampton contacts all who apply for admission to Maryville College by letter, and he frequently addresses church and high school groups on such occasions as class night or National Christian College Sunday.

The Public Relations Office works with the Maryville community in inviting town's folk to attend college concerts, dramatic presentations, Artists' Series and football games. A number of local persons take advantage of evening courses in music and art which the college offers. In addition to these, local businessmen are frequently entertained in the faculty tea room, and the local press and radio stations work hand-in-hand with the college through the Public Relations Office.

In addition to his duties as Director of Public Relations, Mr Hampton is also Executive Secretary of the Maryville College Alumni Association. Several years ago this association introduced the Buck-of-the-Month Club through which $10,000 was received for the college each of the first two years. Total contributions through the Alumni Association for the last fiscal year amounted to approximately $20,000. The association is quite active with eight or ten clubs scattered across the country.

Mr. Hampton, in a recent letter to alumni, said of Homecoming "Last year we had nearly six hundred people in attendance. We want to top that." This in itself is proof of the job he and his staff are doing along these lines. On the form which asked this year's freshmen where they learned of Maryville, more students mentioned alumni than any other source.

Author and Editor

The two duties mentioned which Mr. Hampton performs are but a part of his varied career.

Curriculum Committee Representatives Elected

For the purpose of electing representatives to the curriculum committee, sophomores, juniors, and seniors assembled according to their major field, after the chapel service Tuesday, September 24. Students majoring in language and literature selected Bob Bowman, junior, while Bible, philosophy, and psychology majors chose Bob Wyman, junior. Bob Muir, junior, will represent the science department, and Ted Engle, senior, will serve as committeeman for the physical education majors. Pupils in the field of fine arts picked Lynn Mitchell, senior. Social science majors elected Jim Barber, senior.

The functions of the curriculum committee include investigating the Maryville College curriculum, examining both strong and weak points, and making a report to the Student-Faculty-Senate. With Frank McClellan, Dean of the College, as present chairman, six faculty members, one from each field, serve on the committee for two years. Each department will have at the beginning of the year a newly selected member and a carry-over from the preceding year.

E. N. Witherspoon Writes Chapter In New Textbook

Edward Newell Witherspoon, assistant professor of economics and business administration at Maryville College, is a contributor to a new textbook, Money and Banking, a unique volume which is the product of fifty-nine professors of money and banking who have pooled the fruits of their scholarship and teaching experience in the development of the text.

Mr. Witherspoon's specific responsibility in the book was in the preparation of material for a chapter on consumer, urban housing, and agricultural credit and credit institutions.

A graduate of Maryville College in the class of 1952, Mr Witherspoon has been on the faculty since 1953. He received his Master's degree in Business Administration from Vanderbilt University the following year.

ECHO FORUM

Dear Editor,

For several weeks the freshmen have been welcomed to Maryville campus. But no one has set aside time from this merry-go-round to tell the faculty and upper-classmen "Thanks!" I would like to take this opportunity to say thank you from all the freshmen for helping us in innumberable ways. It is a wonderful feeling to know that everyone is trying to help you adjust to college life. More than this, we are thankful that they make us feel so much a part of Maryville that it is like a new home. "Merci!"

Montvale Is Site Of Y.W.C.A. Hike

This afternoon at 1:30 the Y.W.C.A. will sponsor the "Y" Hike to Montvale. Plans for the hike include mountain climbing, out-door cooking, and a campfire program. The group will return this evening.

There will be no Y.W.C.A. program on October 6 and 13, but on October 20 the program will feature news about the Fred Hope Fund and the Francis Newton Hospital. Later on in the semester Y.W. will present two films "Children of the A Bomb" and "Religion & Jazz," a harvest walk, and a joint meeting led by the Inter-racial Committee.

Plans are underway for the joint Y.M. and Y.W. homecoming float. Jan Peterson is head of the Y.W. committee, and any one interested in helping should contact her.

Y.M.C.A. To Hike In The Smokies

Today is the day scheduled for the annual Y.W.C.A. hike in the Smoky Mountains. Cars will leave the campus immediately after lunch and return in time for supper on Sunday. The registration fee is $1.50.

Events Previewed

Several new features are being planned for the annual Alumni Homecoming celebration at Maryville College on Saturday, October 12, according to James W. Hampton, executive secretary of the Alumni Association.

Traditionally the first event of the day-long program will be the Founder's Day convocation, which will be held in the Samuel Tyndale Wilson Chapel. Alumni will register throughout the morning and will meet informally for luncheon at nearby restaurants.

After the Homecoming parade, there will be an Alumni Open House in the court of the Chapel-Theatre. An organ recital at 4:15 will enable alumni to hear and see the new organ in the Wilson Chapel.

The swimming pool will be open for inspection at 5:15, and an informal exhibition under the direction of Mrs. William Largen, instructor in physical education, is scheduled at the pool, where extensive improvements were made during the summer. The traditional alumni barbecue on the athletic field at six o'clock will conclude the formal alumni program. The football team will meet the East Tennessee State squad under the lights in the climax event of the day.

All alumni in Blount County and in the Knoxville area will be contacted by telephone in the novel Operation Tel-Alumni campaign which made possible last year a record-breaking attendance.

The Four Scotsmen Now Have Cards As Further Proof Of Their Merit

by A Music Lover

Try to find the Scotsmen if you can! It isn't that they are hard to find, it's just that they are so busy that you sign up weeks in advance to speak with them. They are all handsome, too.

Everyone knows the Scotsmen — Dave Gilliland, Dick Preston, Joe Quinn and John Ribble. They sang for the Kappa Phi and Chi Beta formal and for the watermelon pow-wow for the freshmen who hadn't had a chance to know them previously. And the old-timers have seen them sing at many functions, such as Senior Send-off. For the very old-timers, there is a vivid memory of "Thoity Thoid and Thoid" done at a dining hall Christmas party. We all know that they are wonderful.

Now they have cards to prove that they are wonderful. And jackets, too. The cards are issued by the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America, Knoxville chapter. This is an international organization and represents some of the finest barbershop quartet singing all over the world. As John Ribble said, "They all like to sing the kind of things we do."

New Jackets

Those who have seen the Scotsmen this year have seen the jackets which are a lovely plaid. But not many people know that they were made by Nancy Stere, who has done a really great job on them. And even fewer people know that the night of the pow-wow, one of the jackets was still only basted, according to one of the Scotsmen.

The group appeared on television a week ago Monday on a show called "Meet Mrs. Moore." They will be singing next Friday evening and Saturday noon at the official opening of the Capri Restaurant. They also have been invited to sing for Barnwarming. But their appearances have not been confined to the campus. They have sung at a tri-state meeting of the JC's in Gatlinburg, and at a sorority (yes, sorority) banquet at Tennessee Wesleyan, which is in Athens, Tennessee. They have also sung at all the local service organizations, such as Rotary, and many of the local churches.

Dave

Dave Gilliland, who sings baritone, is a senior political science major from Harriman, Tennessee. He is a member of the Vesper Choir, Kappa Phi, Playhouse, and Disc Club in addition to singing with the Scotsmen.

Dick

Dick Preston, who is a senior philosophy major, is from East Marion, New York. Besides singing lead with the Scotsmen, he is a member of Vesper Choir and a Kappa Phi.

Attendants To Be Keeney And Rise

Miss Mary Ellen Lee, senior English major from Fayetteville, Arkansas, will reign as queen over the 1957 Homecoming. Miss Lee will ride in the Homecoming parade next Saturday afternoon and will be presented at the half-time of the football game against East Tennessee Teachers College that night. Her attendants which she selected will be Miss June Keeney, music education major from Clinton, Tennessee, and Miss Sharon Rise, English major from Sioux City, Iowa.

Miss Lee is a member of Writer's Workshop and a senior counselor in Memorial Hall. She was freshman class sponsor and an Alpha Sigma Cupid in her sophomore year. She has also served as a Nu Gamma leader, chairman of Barnwarming, and a junior representative on W.S.G.A.

Miss Keeney is head majorette of the Highlander Marching Band. Her college activities have included orchestra, band, W.A.A., and Playhouse. She was also vice chairman of Baldwin.

Miss Rise is vice president of YWCA and a senior counselor in Memorial. Her activities have been membership in B.G., Student Council, and cheerleading. She was vice president of her freshman class.

Poetry Association Holds College Poetry Contest

The National Poetry Association announces its Eleventh Annual Contest. The closing date for the submission of manuscripts by college students is November 5.

Any student attending college is eligible to submit his verse. There is no limitation as to form or theme, however; because o fspace limitations, the board of judges prefers shorter works.

Each poem must be typed or printed on a separate sheet which must include name, home address and college of the student. All work submitted will be judged on the basis of merit alone.

Manuscripts are to be sent to the Offices of the Association, National Poetry Association, 3210 Selby Avenue, Los Angeles 34, California.

To The Sophomores And Juniors

A glance at the Echo credit box shows that half of the students who write for the paper are seniors. As far as this year's staff is concerned, this high proportion means writers with a number of years of journalistic experience and thus a paper with a tremendous amount of potential. This situation might seem a desirable one, but what will happen to the Echo after these seniors graduate? Will the new editor be faced with the problem of almost completely rebuilding the staff?

This year's staff has potential. The senior staff members have a solid back-ground in newspaper work, and a number of seniors, most of whom have been connected with journalism, are regular contributors. The Echo also has potential in regard to try-outs, for we have a good group of try-outs this year. But the number of sophomores and juniors interested in writing falls far below the maximum set by the Highland Echo Constiution. It will be to this year's sophomores and juniors that next year's staff will look to for leadership. This places a responsibility on these two classes, and it places it on them now.

No one will deny that it takes time to work on the Echo. Anything worthwhile does take time, but that does not mean that it cannot be rewarding. The Echo has much to offer the student body, but have you something to offer, too?

Too High A Penalty?

No doubt all of you are vaguely familiar with the new cut system. The major changes which were incorporated in this system no doubt were justified, but there is one part of the revision that seems unfair to a large number of people. There is one section of the system which states that members of athletic teams, and supposedly debate and musical groups as well, shall receive one-half a cut when absent from class on college sanctioned trips.

The boy who participates in inter-collegiate athletics at Maryville spends a great deal of time and energy and gets little in return. The intercollegiate activities are a vital part of the college, and no one should be penalized for participating in them. It is conceivable that a boy who plays both football and basketball or basketball and baseball could use all his cuts on road trips alone. This is a big sacrifice to make when the boy is actually doing a service to the college.

By abusing the old system, the students made the new rules about class cutting necessary, but the aspect of the new rule mentioned above could act as a hindrance to the college program.

—P.N.

Concerning "Corner"

As you have probably noticed by now, the Echo has been including some new columns—one of which being "Council Corner." Last issue this "Corner" explained the functions of a number of Student Council committees. This week several more committees are discussed, and next week will conclude the seris. It is a rather imposing list of areas of Council activity, and it is a rather surprising list, too, for not many students actually realize what the functions of Council are and how they affect them as students of Maryville College.

A thorough understanding of the functions of a student government is a necessary step in the satisfactory operation of that government. The Student Council may best represent you, the student, when you understand it, appreciate it, and support it. Know who the committeemen are so you may channel complaints and suggestions and thus work toward constructive action.

Scots & Soda

By Margaret Longfellow

Our scene takes place in a southern college—not too big and not too small, but just right. Perhaps the time and the incidents will sound familiar to you, but, of course, it is purely coincidental. We find the heroine of our table curled up by a roaring (literally) fire (the radiator in her room that defies being regulated). She is starting to read a folk story that she has heard about in school—an epic the teacher called it. What a strange name for a murder mystery!

Beowulf is read with great eagerness and expectation. Our heroine is just losing consciousness with the rest of the world and is deep in an epic trance. Oh, a knock. A bubbling friend bursts in to announce that Bill, "You remember the one who wears the purple socks!", has asked her to get her flu shot with him. The rhapsodies continue until friend is run down, and by the time she goes bubbling on down the hall, Beowulf and Bill and the Danes and the date are one confused muddle.

"Wonderful"

In peace once more our heroine tries to retrieve her Beowulf trance. Soon Grendal is devouring the sleeping Geats, and all is back to normal. Through her semi-conscious state our heroine hears the strains, "Wonderful, Wonderful" filling the air. A man has just been gobbled like a raisin, and someone has the irreverence to say "Wonderful". It takes a while for our somewhat mesmerized co-ed to realize that the sadistic sentiment comes from a wailing radio down the hall. A ladylike holler of "Cut out the poise, ya'll" puts a stop to epic-disturber no. 2, and once more silence is golden.

Steeling herself with ear plugs, a latched door, and a double dose of will power, heroine once more braves the elements. Happily lulled by the deceptive prevailing calm, she returns to her tale. All goes well with the hero for a while but not so with our unsuspecting heroine.

Disturbance is a subtle worker this time—no music or chatter for him. The gentle splashing of falling water accompanied by noises like the merry sounds of children at play, and the insistent tatoo of some close-at-hand sounds snap our reader from her reveries. Her Beowulf trance once more broken, she solemnly rues the day that she ever chose the room next to the showers and the hall buzzer.

Before long a rumbling sound, like the hum of a hive of busy bees, begins on the other side of the room. It rises and falls like a motor trying to start. Every now and then a shriek shrills out or a foot stamps. Just when our reader thinks that it has ebbed for a while, it rises gain to the calm pitch of a fire whistle. She soon discovers her stage-struck room-mate rehearsing her lines with a vengence. Burrowing under a pillow, our heroine tries again.

Scarcely has a paragraph ticked by or has a mead glass been drunk when the sound of running feet and the shrieking of voices fills the hall. The beating of feet on the floor like native drums and the protesting of the unfortunate victim are drowned out by the war-whoop singing of "Let me call you sweetheart, I'm in love with you." The ancient "pinning" ritual of shower sloshing is under way.

Heroine tries the ancient scholarly ritual of study, but this is not to win out yet. In the next room a phonograph reaches an all-time high. The crumbling of cookies and the shuffling of feet resounds through the wall as though through a monstrous megaphone. The party-goers are real "gone", but so is the patience of our heroine.

But several dragon's hands and hot gore soon fill the delicate co-ed's imaginings, as Beowulf is again eagerly read. Anxious kings and vengeful mothers swirl about in her mind, and she is reading undisturbed! She is suddenly and rudely brought back to earth. Is there a circus going on in the hall? Or a stampede of elephants? She pokes her head out the door to see. To her despair, closed study hours are over, and the student center crowd is on its way. Our heroine is swept away, not unwillingly, with the throng and Beowulf is left alone to fight his own battles until another "quiet" hour.

Voices, Masks, and Shadows

by Virginia Hine

This column this week is more-or-less a collection of odd fragments. I apologize for this lack of unity, but I hope my readers will understand (especially those who are working on special studies and/or Opera Workshop).

I'm sure those of you who were at Vespers last Sunday night noticed the choir's new anthem, "Cum By Yah." But were you aware this this is another of Mr. Harter's arrangements? I must admit that I wasn't. I rather suspected it, but I had to ask a choir member to be sure. Of all the arrangements by Mr. Harter that the choir has sung, I was most deeply moved by this one. I do not pretend to be a judge of choral music, and any kind of a critical statement is not mine to make, but I did feel that Mr. Harter had succeeded in capturing the deepest mood of this African spiritual. I hope to hear it again soon.

Speaking of music, and of choir singing in particular, I ran across an interesting bit of information last week in a book entitled "Medieval People" by Eileen Power.

Madame Eglentyne

Miss Power discusses, in one chapter of this interesting little book, the character of Madame Eglentyne — the prioress from Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales." In the course of a description of the daily life of a medieval nun she includes a passage concerning the singing of the mass.

"They left out the syllables at the beginning and end of words, they omitted the dipsalma or pause between two verses, so that one side of the choir was beginning the second half before the other side had finished the first; they skipped sentences; they mumbled and slurred what should have been "entuned in their nose ful semely," and altogether they made a terrible mess of the stately plainsong."

(It sounds as if the problems of choral singing haven't changed much in four hundred years). Anyway:

"So prevalent was the fault of gabbing that the Father of Evil was obliged to charter a special Devil called Tittivillus, whose sole business it was to collect all these dropped syllables and carry them back to his master in a big bag."

Madame Eglentyne probably gave him no help with her refined enunciation, but Titivillus certainly had no trouble making his quota from the singing of the other nuns and monks. His quota was "a thousand pokes full of failings and of negligences and syllables and words, that are done . . . in reading and singing." If he failed to make this daily quota, he would be "sorely beaten" by his master.

But if by chance a thousand pokes of mistakes should not be available from the nuns and monks, there were other sources.

"In his spare moments, when he was not engaged in picking up those unconsidered trifles which the monks let fall from the psalms, Tittivillus used to fill up odd corners of his sack with the idle talk of people who gossiped in church; and he also sat up aloft and collected all the high notes of vain tenors, who sang to their own glory, instead of to the glory of God, and pitched the chants three notes higher than the cracked voices of their elders could rise." (Tenors haven't changed much in four hundred years, have they?)

Miss Power doesn't say so, but I'll wager that Tittivillus is just as busy today as he ever was, and I'll also wager that he has no trouble collecting his thousands pokes a day. So all you members of Vesper Choir, Women's Chorus, and Men's Chorus better be careful, or Tittivillus will get you if you don't watch out!

Sibelius

Still speaking of music — on the more serious side — we note the death of Jean Sibelius in Finland at the age of 91. Without a doubt Sibelius was one of the greatest composers of this century. Although he stood apart from many of the musical revolutions of the 20th century (Scheonbergand Berg's atonality, Stravinsky's complex rhythmical patterns), Sibelius has been the most popular serious composer of this century with a secure place in the current symphonic repertoire.

It gives me a funny feeling to realize that the life of this man spans almost a century and that as a young man he personally knew Brahms and Bruckner. I guess that the 19th century isn't as far away as some of us like to think it is. (I wonder if Sibelius finished his eighth symphony.)

Apologes To Eliot

Speaking of odd fragments, I can't resist putting in this little item. As I guess everybody knows, Maryville is famous for its rainy weather. Somebody told me that it's rained every day, except one, since about the eighth of September. I must admit that I don't really remember that one day, but it could be so. Anyway, T. S. Eliot wrote a little poem called the "Hollow Men" which I should like to paraphrase (with all due apologies to Mr. Eliot, to my friends on the English faculty, and to my fellow English majors)

This is the way the world ends
This is the way the world ends
This is the way the world ends
Not with a bang, but a splash.

And with that I had better stop. Don't forget Opera Workshop tonight (if you didn't see it last night).

See you next issue.

TALK OF THE WEEK

By Susie Miller

Fashions

by Eloise

What is the big news in fashions this season? LEOPARD!!! Department stores and garment shops have turned into something that remotely resembles a jungle or a zoo, and one is afraid to pass the counters for fear of being bitten. Just where this fad will lead is impossible to predict, but it is interesting to speculate. Perhaps it will spell the return of the safari hat, the movie vamp, or the return-to-nature movement. It might even cause the down-fall of rock-and-roll and bring about the revival of jungle chants and voodoo drums. In any event the fad is here, and you can get your leopard spots in an almost limitless number of ways.

A few of the articles of clothing which have been exposed to the spotted fever include dresses, slacks, weskits, pajamas, skirts, blouses, and jumpers. Leopard is used as both a trim or, if you prefer, the predominating cloth of the garment. The range of fabrics from which you may chose is also varied. Included are corduroy, gabardine, cotton pile (which even feels somewhat like the real thing probably feels like), percale, plain rayon weave, and many, many others.

If this still isn't enough leopard for you, you can buy your accessories in the pattern. Here, too, the list is long — scarves, belts, hats, collars, ear rings, necklaces, scatter pins, and on and on and on.

Are you seeing spots yet? Rub your eyes, and try again. After all, the season is still young, and you will have to get used to seeing spots before your eyes.

While here on campus, Miss Burton was the over-night guest of Miss Shirley Mayfield, '57, who lives in Knoxville. Miss Marvelyne Rise, '57, was visiting on campus on her way to McGill University in Canada where she will do graduate work in psychology.

Mr. Morgan Biggs, '56, who has been on campus several times since school started, left last week to begin his theological studies at Louisville Seminary in Louisville, Kentucky. Mr. Don Ford. '55, who is attending medical school, was a visitor to our campus last week. Miss Helen Frank-

The Scotties have come of age.. Two quick halfbacks from Morehead State momentarily set them back on their heels with a 12-0 defeat, but they were tried and proven under fire as they downed Centre College of Danville, Kentucky by a score of 19-6.

Against the Praying Colonels the Highlanders copied not only Tennessee's Orange jerseys but their style of play as well. On this day they out-Tennesseed Tennessee. While across the river the Vols were fumbling and stumbling their way right out of the national football picture, Maryville was once again proving that old football adage of Tennessee's famed Gen. Bob Neyland that there are more ways to score on defense than on offense.

And on a slippery, rain-drenched field, the Scotties proved it beyond a shadow of a doubt. A third-down punt by Maryville early in the first quarter was followed quickly by a Scottie recovery of a Colonel fumble. The Highlanders lost no time in scoring. Midway of the third quarter Ed Smith got in front of a Centre punt, and Bob Beam grabbed up the loose ball and hustled into the end zone. Late in the closing period the Scots nabbed another Colonel bobble, and the result was Maryville's third T.D.

It was a fine display of a team making their own breaks and then cashing in on them. And after the Vol debacle on Shields-Watkins last Saturday, Gen. Neyland would have been glad to see it.

And after all those words of praise, that kind of play just might not be enough tonight. Maryville invades that league of collegiate football that borders on the big time. Jacksonville State (4,000 students) with the flunk-outs from Alabama and Auburn wearing their jerseys may have too much manpower for the Scots. But as it has been said before "that ball do take funny bounces!! And if you are there to grab it, who knows? Goliath was sure he had a winner too.

Intramurals....

by Pete Nix

Intramural football is moving along at a fast clip with the end of the first round scheduled for Wednesday. The results of last week's games and those played earlier this week are as follows: Alpha Sig Hammers 12, Kappa Phi 0; Alpha Sig Sledgehammers 28, Y Pre-Min B's 6; Killers 21, Hammers 6; Killers 19, Kappa Phi 0; Y Pre-Min A's 21, Alpha Sig Hammers 0.

The Alpha Sig Sledgehammers led the league with no defeats, followed closely by the Killers and Y Pre-Min A's who have lost one apiece. The second round of play is scheduled to begin October 14.

Under the leadership of the Y.M.C.A. and Commodore Fisher, Intramurals have gotten off to a fine start. Volleyball and soccer will begin soon after the close of the football season. Any men who are not engaged in any intramural activity are urged to sign up with a team and take part.

Highlanders Bow To Morehead, 12-0

by Joe Quinn

A heavier Morehead (Ky.) football team eased by a game Maryville squad on September 21 by the score of 12-0. The two teams battled to a scoreless tie in the first half, but the Morehead quarterback Tom Simms took the ball on the keeper play and scampered 30 yards to pay dirt early in the third period. The extra point was blocked.

In the final period Morehead scored on a pitch-out from Simms to sophomore halfback Curt Cassell. Again the Scots blocked the extra point.

The deepest penetration the home team made came in the final period when we got inside Morehead's 5-yard line. We ran out of downs at this point, however, and the threat ended.

Standouts on defense for Maryville were Buddy Beam and Jim Cates along with John Hawkins. Bob Cross and Ken Chambers did some nice pieces of running on the offensive side for the Scots.

Morehead had a much heavier team man-for-man than did the Highlanders, but our boys gave them quite a battle before that final whistle.

The scoring was as follows:

Morehead	0	0	6	6	—12

RIM SHOTS

by Lottie Jerkins

If you should hear girls running around chanting, "Exercise, exercise we must get our exercise," don't be alarmed; they're probably members of the Women's Athletic Association. Rumor has it that they have discovered a cure for book fever and other weighty problems. They're taken to running softly and carrying a big stick as softball takes the field. Four teams compose the league, and they battle twice a week for an hour each time.

If you have the urge to dodge pop-bottles, they will even teach you how to officiate.

If tennis is your sport, there is a tournament going on now.

The W.A.A. program has been expanded this year so look for your favorite sport.

By the way girls, spectators are always welcome at games so bring along your favorite spectator.

In the interest of exercise (?) the Women's M-Club is sponsoring a dance after the Homecoming game. This seems to be a favorite sport of many colleges.

Team To Meet Teachers Tonight

by Pete Nix

Tonight the Maryville College Scotties try to run their record to 3-1 as they meet Jacksonville State Teachers College in Jacksonville, Alabama. Fresh from their 19-6 conquest of Centre, the Highlanders should be in top form when they take on the teachers. Jacksonville's only loss of the season came at the hands of the powerful University of Chattanooga.

Jacksonville operates from the split-T and will be led by the same quarterback that directed their 7-0 conquest of the Scotties last year.

The boys from Alabama will provide the toughest test for Maryville thus far in the season. The weather has hampered all Highlander practices this week, but with alternate captain Harris back at the blocking back post the Scots should be ready. Game time is 8 p.m. C.S.T.

Library Announces Two New Displays

Two new features of interest to Maryville students are being displayed in Lamar Library.

In order to acquaint students with the various articles in the museum cases, a small collection of related objects will be shown apart from the regular cases. Each of these groups of museum pieces will be shown for two weeks, and then another will take its place. The current display is entitled Glimpses of Syria and Egypt. It includes fabrics, shoes, beads, and various other relics from these ancient lands.

Another item to note is the bulletin board on the right as you enter. It is entitled News of the Week. At a glance you find out the outstanding articles of interest for the week. The reports are taken from Newsweek, U. S. News and World Report, and other news weeklies that are up to date on each topic.

It is the hope of Miss Turrentine, head librarian, that students may become better acquainted with the vast wealth of material in the library through these projects, which are under the direction of Miss Wiley, assistant librarian.

Scots Play Colonels In Rain; Triumph 19-7

by Joe Quinn

The Maryville College Highlander football team turned in an impressive 19-7 victory over the famed Praying Colonels of Centre College last Saturday in a steady down-pour of rain.

The Scots were sparked on their initial drive by freshman halfback Bob Cross. In the first period he crashed over after leading a steady Maryville drive. The try for extra point missed, and the Scots led 6-0. This lead was short-lived, however, as Centre put together their only score on a 30-yard gallop by Harold Craig. The extra point was added, and we trailed 7-6.

The hard-charging Maryville forward wall mended this situation in a hurry when Ed Smith, the left end, broke in and blocked a Centre punt. Capt. Buddy Beam scooped up the pigskin and went in standing up for what was to be the clinching TD. This time Beam made the extra point and we led 13-7 at the half.

In the waning moments of the game, Centre was forced into another punting situation, and again it was thwarted by the Highlander forward wall. Two plays later Dan Greaser hit Earl Lawson in the end zone and the scoring ended.

Both the team spirit and the spirit of the student body was high despite the rain. Maryville didn't have one standout in the game. They were a well-coordinated unit.

Tonight the Scots are in Jacksonville, Alabama, to battle the Jacksonville State Teachers College. The Teachers always supply rough competition for the Orange and Garnet.

Scoring for last week's game was:

Maryville	6	7	0	6	—19
Centre	0	7	0	0	— 7

French Club Elects

The first meeting of the French Club was held September 26. The plans for the semester's program were announced as complete. The main discussion concerned the new members to enter the club this year. The number of members in the club was set for 40 instead of the previous 30. New members were then voted in.

Council Corner

by Margaret Longfellow

There are several more Student Council committees which duties have yet to be explained in the Echo. It is to be remembered by the student body that each of these committees is a vital part of the council program and must be supported by the students.

I. Athletic Committee — Jack Emory, chairman; Dean McClelland, Coach Honaker, Helen Franklin, president of WAA; Bob Beam, captain of the football team; Harry Crane.

The main function of this committee is to represent the student and faculty's point of view in both intramural and intercollegiate affairs. Another function of the committee is to approve all nominations for letters on the basis of recommendation of the athletic director. It is through this committee that the students may have an opportunity to make those suggestions which will be of value to the athletic program.

II. National Student Association Committee — Dan Ellis, chairman; Peggy Longfellow, Ted Frauman.

The N.S.A. committee on Maryville College campus has the job of co-ordinating the work of the Student Council with that of the United States National Student Association. The committee does this by working with the Student Government Legislative Reference Service of the N.S.A. and by seeing to it that material and guidance are provided for the observance of such occasions as United Nations Week, Brotherhood Week, and Academic Freedom Week.

III. Town Night Committee — Joann Antes, chairman; Memorial Hall: Anna Keitt, Linda Messer; Baldwin Hall: Mary Hubbard, Mary Turner; Pearsons Hall: Carol Morgan, Barbara Coates.

The Town Night Committee is composed of one Student Council member and two girls elected from each dorm. The committee meets once a week to review the town night violations of the previous week and to decide on an appropriate penalty, which is then presented to the Student Council.

Student Council meeting of September 25:

The meeting opened with two town night violations — a sophomore and a freshman who both forgot to sign in. They were each penalized one week.

Bruce Lundberg was welcomed as a new Student Council member. His membership was as a result of his election as chairman of Men's Student Cooperative.

A letter from last year's council president, Dick Henderson, was read to the members. Dick wished luck to all the council members as they start on the year's work.

Gray Clark reported that dances may not be held after every game. Suggestions are being reviewed in regard to sponsoring after-game activities. She also stated that two new faculty advisors have been appointed to the Social Committee: Miss Johnson and Mrs. Cummings. The council recommended again that more dances be held.

Bob Muir reported that there will be no away game that the students will be able to attend by chartered bus. He announced that the Pep Committee will start work on the Homecoming theme and that the decorations awards would be made clear to the dorms. Bob also state dthat the Junior Chamber of Commerce will be asked to help decorate the town.

It was suggested that the rental of Playhouse lights be rearranged. Two ideas have been proposed: that the lights be purchased by the council and handled by it, or that a reasonably large deposit fee be charged and a lowered rental fee as well. If the equipment is at all damaged, the repair will be paid from the deposit fee. A committee has been set up to investigate this further.

Gray Clark suggested that something be said about WGAP not broadcasting our game. It was hoped that better college-community relations could be promoted using this incident as a stimulus.

Student Council meeting of October 2:

Bob Goodlin welcomed the new freshmen council members — Dick Mayer, Sue Tathwell, Karl Diller, Larry Stearns, and Bryson Struse. Appointment to committees was made later.

There were two town night violations — one a senior girl who was one minute late, and the other a senior girl who was off-limits. The first violation received one week penalty and the second a three week penalty.

The percentages for the two recently held elections were as follows: 52 freshmen, 78 sophomores, 76 juniors, and 77 seniors. All of these figures can be improved and should be brought up during the next all-campus election.

Bob Muir announced that the float plans should be turned in right away, and that an expenditure limit will be set for materials. The plans for Homecoming are progressing.

It was suggested that the United Nations Day program be given over to the International Relations Club. Dan Ellis will take care of this.

Monday and Thursday afternoons from 2:30 to 4:30 will be Bob Goodlin's permanent office hours. These hours are for the council members and the student body.

It was recommended that the Pearsons house mothers be able to write a Knoxville town night "call-in" on the town night slip. Action on this will be taken in Student-Faculty Senate.

The Projects Committee was voted to be a permanent committee and will be stated as such in the by-laws by the S. C. Constitution Revision Committee.

It was suggested that cheerleaders be able to keep their letter after their first year of service. It was further suggested that sports such as wrestling and track receive the same size letter as football.

The Asiatic Flu Symtoms Given

Just what sort of disease is this Asiatic influenza which has affected hundreds of thousands of persons?

The definition of influenza states that it is an acute infectious disease caused by a virus. Asiatic influenza differs from the type known in this country in that it is caused by a different virus strain which is a variant of one of the three basic types.

A typical case begins abruptly with chills, fever, loss of appetite, headache, muscular aches, and a feeling of tiredness. The head will probably feel stuffy; the voice may become hoarse; and a throat irritation may cause frequent coughing. Temperature may rise to 103 or 104 degrees, thus skin will be flushed and eyes red. In more severe cases nausea and vomiting may occur. However, these symptoms do not necessarily mean influenza; they may only indicate a bad cold.

Usually running its course in a few days to two weeks, the disease leaves the patient weak, exhausted, and subject to colds for several weeks. Complications, when they occur, do not generally result from virus influenza but from secondary invaders, such as pneumonia or meningitis. These germs find the weakened body an ideal breeding place.

Doctors know no specific treatment; therefore, they can only attempt to cure the symptoms — fever, headaches, etc. Yet, complications, often more serious than the influenza, itself, can be controlled efficiently by antibiotics.

Present situation afford virtually no opportunity for a gigantic epidemic. The new vaccine, as any vaccine, prevents the disease's spread.

When a person suspects he has Asiatic influenza, he should call a physician promptly and go to bed. The sooner the disease can be diagnosed and precautionary meaures taken, the less danger is involved for the patient and others.

Singers Initiated

by Mary Turner

October I was grand initiation day for all the singing organizations on campus. The Vesper Choir, the Women's Choir, and the Men's Glee Club were attired somewhat differently than their usual mode of dress.

The signs "I dreamed I joined the Women's Glee Club" and "to look sharp, be sharp join the Men's Glee Club" were seen all over campus as pajama-clad boys and girls were being initiated into the glee clubs. Teddy bears, dogs (scottie, of course), cats, and ducks were carried by the pale, pin-curled girls and the unshaven boys; and candles were jumped over to the tune of "Jack Be Nimble" and "Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star".

The formal club initiation was held in the woods around a blazing bon-fire. A charge was given to all new members, as everyone held lighted candles.

The new Vesper Choir members were also put through the annual initiation. All the new songsters had to wear their blue and white outfits inside out, decorated with a huge blue clef sign strung down their back. To add contrast to the outfits they wore a big blue bow-tie and a musical instrument around their neck. They had to use the instrument whenever an old member desired a song.

That night the pale,uncombed girls and unshaven boys were led to the college woods for their final initiation. They seemed to enjoy themselves immensely, as the gentian violet (or vice-versa) showed.

AS I SEE IT

By Mr. Commodore Fisher

Stinking Shoe, Hammers, Killers, Sledgehammers! These are becoming part of the Maryville tradition. If you don't know what they mean just stick around, ask some upper classman, or join the crowd at Wilson Field just back of the recreation hall any afternoon, and you will soon find out.

The Intramural program has always been a large part of the recreational program for non-varsity students at Maryville College. This year the Y.M.C.A. is sponsor of the program and, and Charles Garrison is the cabinet member for athletics. The men were so eager to begin playing that he posted a schedule two weeks ago, and the first Round Robin Tournament of tag football has been almost completed.

Teams have been chosen by the pre-ministerial students, Alpha Sigma, Kappa Phi, and by the town boys. Other men wishing to play may form a team and join in the fun. Later in the season soccer, basketball, volleyball, wrestling, badminton, tennis, track, horseshoes, shuffleboard, and swimming will be scheduled.

The Intramural program is set up so that everybody wins. Besides recreation, fun and skill, each player earns points for each game played. Extra points are awarded for winning. Individuals as such may participate in many of the activities and are needed as managers, time keepers, and referees. Points are earned for each activity. A record of these points is kept and becomes a part of each man's permanent record. The complete point system is posted at Carnegie and on the Intramural bulletin board. At the end of the year the Y.M.C.A. Cabinet will give public recognition to the ten men who have the highest number of points and have shown the best sportsmanship.

If you are not playing Varsity or participating in the Intramural program, are you getting all you should from your college experience?

Freshman Class Elects Officers

The officers for the 1957-1958 freshman class are: president, Richard Mayer; vice president, Linda Dobson; and secretary-treasurer, Harold Battle.

Student council representatives are: Bryson Struse, Sue Tathwell, Larry Stearns, and Karl Diller.

Last Tuesday the freshman class voted by secret ballot for their choices from the list of nominees chosen at a meeting of the class held earlier in the week.

Maryville Theatre Cited In Magazine

The August, 1957, issue of "Theatre Arts" gave special notice to the Maryville College drama department. Mentioned were only two of Tennessee's theatres --Maryville College and Carousel. The publication stated that Maryville College Theatre is one of the newest and best equipped in the country.

Applications Due For Marshall Scholarships

U. S. college students can now apply for next year's Marshall Scholarship awards enabling them to study at a British University for two years. Applications must be in by October 31, 1957.

The Marshall Scholarship scheme was started in 1953 as a token of Britain's thanks for Marshall Aid.

Twelve scholarships are awarded every year. Any American student of either sex, married or single, may apply, but they must be under 28 on October 1, 1958, and have graduated from an American university.

Each award is worth £550 ($1,540) a year. Passage is paid to and from the United Kingdom. Married men get an extra allowance.

Successful candidates are chosen for their character as well as scholastic attainments.

Four Regional Committees — the Eastern, Southern, Middle Western and Pacific — consider the applications first and would-be winners should apply to the British Consul-General in one of the following cities: Chicago (Mid-Western Region), New York (Eastern Region), New Orleans (Southern Region), San Francisco (Pacific Region).

Each Regional Committee includes the Consul-General and four Americans distinguished in educational or public life. It selects six names from the applications and forwards them to the British Embassy in Washington.

At the Embassy the names are re-examined by a 7-member Advisory Council headed by the British Anibassador. Twelve names are elected — three from each Region — and sent to the United Kingdom for review and approval by a commission of leading British educators and businessmen set up to administer the Trust. Lord Coleraine is chairman of the commission.

THE FOUR

Joe

The bass is Joe Quinn, who is from Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. A senior history major, he is a member of Vesper Choir, Pre-Mins, Highland Echo staff, and plays intramurals. He also is secretary of Kappa Phi.

John

The fourth member of the quartet is John Ribble, a music major from Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He belongs to Vesper Choir, Madrigals, Playhouse, directs the Kappa Phi chorus as well as serving as the president of Kappa Phi, and sings tenor with the Scotsmen.

This is probably the last year together for the group, which organized in their freshman year, October 1954, to sing at the Freshman party. Dick and Joe will be going on to seminary; Dave will be going to law school, and John will be, in his words "going to pot." So, as one of the quartet said, "We are going to live it up this year."

And I bet they will!

Hampton To Take Ten-Day Trip

Beginning October 20, Mr. ames Hampton, Director of Public Relations for Maryville College, will take a ten-day trip. Mr. Hampton will visit high schools in the Miami, Florida, area and will address the Rotary Club there. On November 2, he will attend a meeting of Maryville College Alumni at Lake Wales, Florida, which will be held at the dude ranch of a Maryville graduate. Mr. Hampton will leave Florida on Sunday, November 3, and will be present at College Week in Atlanta, Georgia. He will return to the campus by November 8.

JOB AS

This past week he acted as host to a group of high school students visiting our campus; on October 1, he attended College Day in Bristol, Tennessee, and he plans a Florida trip in the near future. He has written a number of magazine articles including a series which appeared in Good Housekeeping from 1949 to 1953. An outgrowth of these articles is the Small College Annual of which he is editor. "Is Your Child College Material?" by Mr. Hampton is to appear in a forthcoming issue of The Rotarian.

Mr. Hampton, as has been seen, is a busy person. This does not keep him from knowing Maryville from the inside out. It is a familar sight to see him driving from his office to his home in the college woods, and often he can be seen stopping to chat with students or to survey the football team or Highlander Band in practice.

His office is an interesting place. The walls and shelves are cluttered with literature and pictures of campus scenes. As further proof of a busy schedule he arrived fifteen minutes late for a twenty-minute interview and then was interrupted by three phone calls and two messages.

What type of person does it take to help keep a small college running? Someone like "The Scottie" — ask anyone in Anderson.

Homecoming Celebration Now In Progress

Dr. Anderson, Founder Of College, Was A Remarkable, Dynamic Person

College Founder Died One Hundred Years Ago

by Lewis Plate

Maryville College's chief heritage is its character which has been retained from its founder down through the ages.

On March 26, 1780, in a farmhouse near New Providence Church, and about twenty miles north of Lexington, Virginia, Isaac Anderson was born, the oldest of the seven children of William Anderson and his wife Nancy McCampbell Anderson.

The Anderson home was a Christian home; and morning and evening they sang a hymn, read a passage of scripture, and offered a prayer to God. This was the atmosphere that young Isaac Anderson grew up in, and, although his father gave him the best education money could by at that time, the education that Isaac received at home was his greatest asset.

Choosing A Career

After graduating from what is now Washington and Lee University in Lexington, Virginia, Isaac was faced with the problem of choosing a profession. At the end of a two-year period of thought and study, he decided fully and confidently to study for the ministry. Isaac at once went to work studying theology under his pastor, Rev. Samuel Brown.

The westward migration soon caught the Andersons, though, for they traveled bag and baggage to Knox County, Tennessee, in 1801. The transplanting of Isaac Anderson brought to him a new and greater purpose. As he saw more of the world and of its crying needs he became more and more eager to minister to those needs.

For a few months he continued his theological studies under Dr. Samuel Carrick, the president of Blount College, at Knoxville, receiving some help also from Dr Blackburn, of Maryville. These two men greatly inflenced the burning desires inside of Isaac Anderson.

On Saturday, May 28, 1802, Union Presbytery licensed their first man to the gospel ministry; and on Thursday, November 26, of the same year, he was ordained to the ministry. This man was none other than Isaac Anderson. This proved to be the beginning of one of the most brilliant careers in history.

"Log College"

Isaac Anderson lost no time in an attempt to do his part in helping people. Just after his ordination, he instituted the "Log College" which he called Union Academy. The academy was, in a sense, the first theological school, for he had some students in theology who found the log building

Scottie-of-The-Week

Bob Muir, Pep Committee Chairman, Rates As Echo Scottie-Of-The-Week

by Margaret Longfellow

Bob Muir, known around campus for his slow smile, casual manner, and southern drawl, is "top banana" on campus this week as Homecoming festivities get under way. As chairman of the Pep Committee for Student Council it was his job to handle all the arrangements for the parade that will start to roll at three this afternoon. Bob and his committee began by approving the designs for the floats and also by obtaining judges for the float competition. Evenings were spent in searching neighboring farms for trailers on which to build the floats and tractors with which to pull them.

The purpose of Bob's committee is to stimulate enthusiasm and support for all campus activities. The committee is responsible for decorating the athletic fields, conducting the elections of cheerleaders, conducting pep rallies, and as this week proves, managing the Homecoming Parade.

Bob, the son of a Presbyterian minister, hails from New Market, Alabama — "and there ain't many people from there either." He worked near his home this summer at the Redstone Arsenal in Huntsville, Alabama, as a student trainee (junior scientist). He was working with professional physicists and engineers in this Army program building Redstone guided missiles.

This week's Scottie is a junior physics major. He was recently elected as the representative from the science division to the Curriculum Committee. This came as somewhat of a surprise to him, as at the time he was conducting the elections in the physical education division and didn't know of his honor until later. In his sophomore year Bob was winner of the physics achievement award given every two years by the Chemical Rubber Engineering Company.

Besides being head of the Pep Committee, Bob also holds vital offices in other campus activities. He was recently elected to Student-Faculty Senate, one of the college's highest political offices. He is also president of his junior class and vice-president of Kappa Phi.

The Scotties salute Bob Muir and his hard-working committee for their wonderful job.

What Was Our Maryville College Like One Hundred Long, Long Years Ago!

by Pat Penland

On this Founder's Day we are observing the one-hundredth anniversary of the death of Dr. Isaac Anderson, founder of Maryville College. Have you ever stopped to wonder just what this college was like one hundred years ago? Then wonder no more. Let your mind wonder back to another period of history, and let us see what Maryville College, 1857 style, was like.

The class of 1857 was small — seven freshmen, two juniors, and no sophomores or seniors — but judging from the list of courses they had to take, what they lacked in number they made up in industry. Philosophy, Bible, and Greek and Roman language and literature constituted the main part of the curriculum, and the list of the courses offered in these fields makes a modern scholar wonder how our ancestors could possibly learn so much.

Freshmen courses included Greek and Latin prose composition, Grecian and Roman antiquities, Horace and Homer, Greek history, algebra, Bible, and English composition.

The seniors would take courses in Plato, Lucretius, mental philosophy, political economy, European civilization, history of philosophy, moral science, natural theology, philosophy of history, international law, and the United States Constitution.

The college grounds at that time consisted of 250 acres. Anderson Hall occupied the central position on the campus and contained a chapel, six recitation

Record On Sale Of Choir Anthems

Looking around for an idea for a Christmas gift for your roommate? Here's a suggestion for you. The Vesper Choir has a new 12 inch, 33⅓ r.p.m., unbreakable record coming out early in December. The tapes were made at the end of last semester and will include most of last year's repertoire. Aaron Copland's choral work, "In the Beginning", occupies one side of the disc. The reverse side includes the "Alma Mater," "Ascendit Deus," "Let Not Your Hearts" (arranged by Mr. Harter), "Nunc Dimittis" and a few more anthems sung by the choir at various services.

The price of the recording is $5.00 or $5.45 if you want it packaged and mailed for you. Ruth Morris, Richard Preston, Zella Durgreen, or Jan Peterson can take your order anytime. There will be tables set up again on November 10 to receive money-orders, but November 11 is the deadline.

Theta Alpha Phi To Hold Contest For Short Plays

Theta Alpha Phi, national honorary drama fraternity, is sponsoring a one-act play contest. Any student attending Maryville College is eligible to submit a manuscript. There will be a cash award of ten dollars for the best play, and the winning play and two others judged worthy of production will be presented in April, 1958, by Experimental Theater.

Production of the plays will be arena style, so any play submitted should not be dependent on scenery for effectiveness. The play should be between twenty and forty minutes in length. All manuscripts should be typed and should be given in person to Ann Wiley, president of Theta Alpha Phi, by February 1, 1958.

Plays will be judged by a committee chosen by members of Theta Alpha Phi. Theta Alpha Phi reserves the right to ask the winning authors to make slight revisions in the script, where, from the artistic and theatrical point of view, it seems desirable.

Organ Recital To Be Tomorrow

A short and informal recital will be given in the chapel Sunday, October 13, at 4:30 p.m. with Mr. James Bloy performing at the organ. The purpose of the recital is to enable the visitors present for Homecoming to hear our significant new addition to the campus.

The program will include Fantasia in G minor by Bach; Nun bitten wir, Buxtehude; Chorale, Jongen; Prelude on Rhosymedre, Vaughn Williams; Herrlich tut mich verlange, Brahms; and Toccata (Fifth Organ Symphony), by Widor.

Band To Perform At Game Tonight

The Maryville College Band's halftime performance for the Homecoming game will consist of precision marching maneuvers devised by Dan Ellis, Bill Roberts, and Bill Murphy. As the ETSC band is unable to come, the Maryville band can allow more time for its performance.

Mr. Moore, the band director, hinted that the band would execute an unrevealed maneuver at half-time after performing several intricate formations.

Before the game begins, Mary Ellen Lee, the homecoming queen, will be crowned in the center of a heart formed by the members of the band.

At the half-time the band will begin in one long line across the goal line and march to the middle of the field. This long line will then pivot 180 degrees. Next, after splitting into two sections, the sections will go to opposite ends of the field, pivot, and divide again, forming the letter E and T.

Then, once more forming one long line, the band will carry out the "secret" maneuver. After this, the bagpipes will perform, followed again by the band, which will form the letter M and play the Maryville Alma Mater..

Copeland Speaks On Founders Day

The twenty-fifth annual Founder's Day Convocation was held this morning at 9:45. Speaker for the convocation was Rev. Dr. Joseph J. Copeland, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church in Knoxville.

Dr. Copeland is a native of Texas. He is a graduate of Trinity University, Texas, and McCormick Theological Seminary in Chicago, and holds the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity from Trinity University.

Before coming to Knoxville in 1952, Dr. Copeland was pastor of a Presbyterian Church in Denton, Texas. In 1954 he was leader of the February meetings here and is now a member of the Board of Directors of Maryville College. He is also a member of the Board of Christian Education of the Presbyterian Church U.S.A.

The Second Presbyterian Church of Knoxville has a special relationship to Maryville College since the founder and first President of Maryville College, Dr. Isaac Anderson, also served as the first pastor of this church for ten years of the time he was President of the College. This year, 1957, marks the one-hundredth anniversary of Dr. Anderson's death. Dr Copeland's address for the Founder's Day Convocation was entitled "After 100 Years — Isaac Anderson."

In addition to the speaker, those participating in the service were President Ralph W. Lloyd, Dean Frank McClelland, Rev. Dr. Francis W. Pritchard, pastor of the New Providence Presbyterian Church; the Honorable Joe C. Gamble, Chairman of the Board of Directors of Maryville College; Mr. Donald W. Briggs, President of the Alumni Association, and the Vesper Choir.

Johnson And Williams To Read At Workshop

Readers in Writer's Workshop on October 14 will be Miss Johnson and Joe Williams. Their respective critics will be Paula Kronenberg and Ruth Dean. Last week's readers were Carolyn Cones and Ruth Dean.

There have been several applicants for the three available positions in Workshop, but there has been no action taken on them as yet.

The members of Workshop have ratified the constitution for this year.

Floats Previewed

All the floats in the Homecoming Parade this afternoon will be based on the general theme of advertising. As a sneak preview the titles and themes of the individual floats have been released.

The Memorial Hall float is "Maryville, Queen of Scots." The girls of Pearsons have worked out the theme "Maryville plays good, like a football team should." "Blue Bell Overalls" is the advertisement Baldwin Hall has used as a basis for their float.

The Pre-Mins have taken their slogan from U. S. Steel—"Only the Scotties can do so many jobs so well", and The Ford Company inspired the Glee Clubs in their selection of a slogan. The YM and YWCA have a float based on Scottie Tissues.

Kappa Phi and Chi Beta are presenting "Scotch Brand Tape" and "When It Rains It Pours" respectively. Alpha Sigma and Theta Epsilon joined forces in planning and working on "L.S.M. F.T."

Pamplona Choir To Sing Tuesday At Artist Series

The first number in the 1957 52 Maryville College-Community Artists Series will be the appearance on Tuesday evening, October 15, of the world-famous Pamplona Choir from Spain. The first Spanish choral group of its kind to appear in North America, this ensemble of sixteen blended voices is under the direction of Luis Morondo, who founded the choir ten years ago.

The Pamplona Choir quickly achieved international fame and toured nearly all European countries, crowning its successes by winning the Grand Prize of Honor at the International Contest for Music in Lille, France, two years ago. This competition involved nearly two hundred choruses from seventeen different nations. Most recently two South American tours have successfully established the Choir south of the border. Currently, the Choir is engaged upon its first North American tour. The concert at Maryville will be one of the first appearances on this continent.

Included in the varied repertoire of the Pamplona Choir are half-forgotten Spanish legends set to music by anonymous composers of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, madrigals from all ages, music of the classical Spanish theatre, contemporary works created especially for this Choir by leading Spanish composers, and, of course, the standard classical and contemporary masterpieces of the choral repertoire: Palestrina, Liszt, Brahms, Mozart, Sibelius, Rimsky-Korsakoff, and others.

Day's Events Told

Alumni from all over the United States are returning this week to the campus of Maryville College for the annual Homecoming celebration today.

Member of 1907 Team Visits

Donald W. Briggs, of Freeport, N. Y., a member of the Class of 1933 and President of the Maryville College Alumni Association, was present to bring greetings from the alumni at the Founder's Day service and to preside at the fall meeting of the Executive Board of the Alumni Association. Of particular interest is the news that Roger S. Boardman, '96, of Bloomfield, N. J., the son of the fourth President of Maryville College, is here. He is accompanied by his sister, Miss Martha Boardman, who was in college in 1904-1905. John L. Graves of Boston, Mass., a member of the football team of 1907, has returned for Homecoming.

The principal address at the Founder's Day service was delivered by Dr. Joseph J. Copeland, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church in Knoxville, and a member of the Maryville College Board of Directors.

Luncheon

Registration of alumni took place this morning in the lobby of the Samuel Tyndale Wilson hall-Theatre. An alumni luncheon is scheduled at Spike's Restaurant at 12:30. The meeting of the Executive Board of the Alumni Association will be held immediately after the luncheon.

Parade

The annual Homecoming Parade at three o'clock will be one of the highlights of the afternoon and will feature the Highlanders Marching Band and numerous colorful floats. Miss Mary Ellen Lee of Fayetteville, Arkansas, will reign as Homecoming Queen. Her attendants are Miss June Keeney, of Clinton, Tennessee, and Miss Sharon Rise, of Sioux City, Iowa.

Organ Recital

There will be an alumni Open House in the Court of the Chapel-Theatre following the parade. At 4:15 Mr. James Bloy of the Maryville College Music Department will give an organ recital, giving alumni an opportunity to see and hear the new organ which was installed last summer in the Chapel. The swimming pool will be open for inspection at 5:15, and there will be an informal exhibition of swimming and diving under the direction of Mrs. William Largen, physical education instructor. Extensive improvements were made in the facilities of the pool last summer.

Barbecue

Plans are complete for the annual barbecue at six o'clock. This is the traditional wind-up of the alumni-sponsored portion of the Homecoming celebration. One of the largest crowds in years is expected as a result of the efforts of a committee of fifty alumni who have been busy all week telephoning alumni in the Maryville-Knoxville area to urge attendance at the barbecue.

Game

The four campus societies are planning Open House at 7:00 for the alumni who may wish to visit the various society headquarters during the intermission between the barbecue and the football game with East Tennessee State. The Homecoming dance will follow the game and conclude the day's events.

Educational Association To Meet In Knoxville

The East Tennessee Educational Association will meet in Knoxville on October 24 and 25. The college section of the Association will hold a special meeting at 2:30 p.m. October 25 on the campus of the University of Tennessee. Usually several thousand teachers from all levels of schools in East Tennessee attend.

Homecoming, 1957

The rain has finally cleared, and the trees are putting forth an effort toward beauty. The air is crisper and expectant, full of surprise and suspense. Meetings and whispers and trips to town testify that work is progressing on floats. Band members practice faithfully in the mud perfecting "the best band show ever". For some it is the best time of the year—Homecoming, 1957.

What if the show will go wrong, and the floats won't be finished until parade time? The spirit of unity that is aroused by working together to perfect something to give to someone else, that is the important part that the rain and the flu won't kill. The new friendships, the cooperation, the reaching outside of yourself is the lesson more valuable than the name of William the Conqueror's first wife. It's' part of an education, too.

Alumni, you who return, you can probably remember this feeling, for it is the type of student who has had this experience who returns. You can remember stuffing chicken wire for floats, racing against time, even if you weren't going to wear an evening gown and sit on the float. And when the pictures of the floats were taken, you could be proud even if you weren't in them. Selflessness is like that.

Tonight, everyone will be out at the game, cheering for Maryville, even if they don't have a date for the dance or "can't stand the college". Relatives, sweethearts, old friends and strange faces from the years that we can't even remember will be on campus, remembering all the wonderful times, forgetting the trying and unpleasant times. And exclamations of surprise at changes will be heard, while the spirit of homecoming is recognized as never changing.

There is something infectious about happiness and laughter in the crisp fall air. It catches and spreads, until the campus isn't so bad after all. And excitement and eagerness well up and overflow bubbingly. And this is good for the campus and good for the student. Homecoming, 1957.

Concerning Detours

In this time of crisp, clear, invigorating weather it seems wise that we brush the cob-webs from our minds and rethink the pursuits of our motives as college students. We all have come to college in search of individual ideals—perhaps to gain knowledge for the gratification of our ego, perhaps for training for our future life work, or perhaps for preliminary work to concentrated study in our chosen field. Whatever our motives were—or are—their pursuit is often blurred by a shower of various "detours".

Many of us find that we spend half of the time that we should be using for study or creative out-lets in complaining. We complain about classes and clubs, studies and students, food and friends. Many of our complaints, however, are well-founded and the improving of the situation would better conditions for all. If such is the case it is our responsibility as citizens of a college community to do what we can to initiate reform. If we would cease paying lip service to our complaints and would put real service into improving the situation, the results would be more pleasing to all.

Others of us find that the keenness of our minds at present is dulled by daydreams of the future. This is a detour that subtly sidetracks some. We are impatient about pursuing our motives, and we try to learn without study and read without comprehension, thinking that we are accomplishing something. Actually we are just marking time instead of marching toward what we dream of.

A third detour is one in which there are ideals and motives present, but no map to follow. The student is in college now and is on his way—to where? There is still great indecision in his life and the pursuit of his motives is difficult, if not impossible, until he has formulated more of a plan by which to move.

We as students must recognize these detours that attempt to derail us in our school life. We must try to overcome them or channel them into useful lines.

—M.L.

A Dress Affair

After the beaning of the chapel, it was impractical to dress up just to go to the gym. In other words, dressy affairs on Maryville campus became rare things. Now that we have such a beautiful place to have our plays, etc., why not take advantage of it and make these events real dress affairs?

We all need to break the monotony of campus life and lift our spirits by dressing up. Christmas and Thanksgiving dinners only come once a year and are too often put into the category of everyday living. We probably all agree that donning our special outfits will certainly break the monotony.

Scots & Soda

By A. Flu

Hi scotties, my name is Asian Flu. My sister Asiastic Flu is here, too. I know you are glad. We have a cousin who lives here part of the time, Common Flu. He told us what a friendly place Maryville is, so we just had to come for Homecoming.

Oh, my, we are just in a terrible rush—I mean with so many places to go and visit, it won't be possible for us to stay longer than, well, about a week. That should be plenty of time (heh, heh). But we dashed in just for Homecoming to see all the festivities, especially the dear football players. We've had quite a nice visit with them. Asiatic didn't much want to come here, she said we'd be killed with kindness. But we decided that the climate would be good for us—you know nestled in the foothills of the smokies. And we do love rain so much, that, well, it just seemed right for us to come down here and see Common and all of our friends.

We've had some trouble getting rooms. I mean, people must have the wrong idea about us, because we usually stay in the infirmary, but there didn't seem to be any room. It must be a very popular place.

We've been attending all sorts of classes (we had to, because we didn't want to take our three cuts), and are they interesting. There are all sorts of things to be learned. We're making a comparison of many, many schools, and believe you me, Maryville really rates in high scholarship, low expenses, and positive Christian emphasis. Where else did we get so broad a smile, so warm a welcome? And so quishy wet a campus? Nowhere, that is where.

We decided to eat in the dining hall, just for fun (well, really, it was on a dare from Common.) Boy, oh boy did we have a meal. Eggs, rolls, coffee and sweet rolls. What a breakfast. Only it was supper.

Asiatic is just dying to go to the dance tonight. She thinks it would give us a wonderful opportunity to meet lots of people that we haven't yet met. Well, buddy, I'm sure not going to take her. Imagine a fellow taking his sister to the Homecoming dance! Ha! She doesn't seem to have made many friends, though, so I guess she will just have to sit in her bush and sulk. (The only place we could find to stay, the ones in front of Memorial. They haven't been as occupied this year since the parlors are open). I guess I'll go, and tell her about it. Well, not all. . . .

We had a swell trip down. We met a lot of people who seemed to know our relatives. I will say they weren't very friendly. I guess it just seemed that way because of the warm welcome we got when we arrived here.

I brought some new clothes down with me. Plaid, of course. Common told us that this place was gung ho scotch. And water. That's for me, boy.

On the way down we passed the oddest looking woman. She was running as hard as she could, and yelling at the top of her lungs. She wore red knee socks and a kerchief on her head. "Here I come, I'm Agnes Zilch". I guss she was going to Homecoming.

We decided to see what everyone was so excited about the new moon for, so we flew up to it. Really, it's a fake. Was I burned! I mean the Russians have pulled some pretty mean tricks on us, but this takes the cake. It's not even made of green cheese. (blue?)

Boy, do I miss home. And Mom. We live in the Orient but came over on our Junior-Year-Abroad plan. We were going to try for a Fulbright scholarship to do graduate work, but I'm afraid that we might be needed at home. To take care of the chickens. We sell eggs.

Well, there goes the chopplebell. I guess I'll see you-all there. And, by the way I'll see you at the game. What are you doing afterwards? ? ? ?

Voices, Masks, and Shadows

by Virginia Hine

The main event for this week will be the presentation of the Pamplona Choir from Spain, on Tuesday night at 8:00 in the chapel. I hope that there will be a large attendance at this first program in the current Artist Series. The support of the student body is needed if the Series is to be successful. Further information will be found on the front page of this issue.

Sputnik

I guess that the biggest news this week is that the Russians have launched their artificial satellite. "Sputnik" (short for Iskustvenryi Sputnik Zemli, or "Artificial Fellow Traveler Around the Earth"). This name reminds me of the early United States plans for a satellite known as the "MOUSE" (Minimum Orbital Unmanned Satellite of the Earth), which has since been superceded by Project Vanguard. Only now, Vanguard won't be a vanguard, because the Russians got there first. In the next issue I will discuss this more fully with some of the implication of the fact that the Russians "Beat us to the punch," so to speak.

Libel Suits

Overheard in passing from two English majors who ought to know better and who shall remain nameless for fear of libel suits.

"I always get Paul Bunyon and John Bunyan mixed up."

"Oh, that's easy, John Bunyan had the blue cow."

Suggestions

Perhaps while you're getting over your flu would be a good time to do some reading from the libraries stock of new books. Here are a few suggestions.

"The Reformation" by Will Durant which is volume VI in Durant's Story of Civilization. Time says of this book that it is "painstaking, broadminded and fluent . . . a triumph for . . . Durant, who combines an encyclopedist's passion for detail with philosopher's ability to generalize and good storyteller's sense of anecdote." This is a very readable book which impartially lampoons both the Catholic and the Protestant factions of the Reformation period. Durant has a talent for "quoting Catholic historians when he has something anti-Catholic to say, Protestant historians when he is anti-Protestant" (Time).

For anyone who is concerned with the Middle East and its role in current world affairs. "Syria and Lebanon," by N. A. Ziadeh is recommended.

In this book Ziadeh makes a systematic study of these two countries beginning with their early history. He includes a discussion of contemporary problems of international significance such as the Arab League, the Baghdad Pact.

Ziadeh is a member of the faculty of the American University at Beirut and is the author of a number of books in Arabic concerning the history and culture of Arab lands.

Don't forget Homecoming tonight, the parade this afternoon or the dance after the game.

See you next issue.

TALK OF THE WEEK

by Susie Miller

Fashions

by Bobbye Carson

Hold your breath and hope for beautiful weather for this Homecoming week-end! We will make no promises that perhaps raincoats, boots and umbrellas will not be on the list of accepted apparel for Homecoming. You know how quickly M.C. weather can change!

So here are some other suggestions of what to wear for the big events of the week-end: knitted dresses or suits, wool sheaths, suits, and jumpers.

Two-pieced knitted suits are very popular, and we predict that many girls will choose one of the many colors and styles in this type dress. In fact, the attendants of the Homecoming Queen have chosen knitted suits to wear for the pre-game ceremony.

Of course, one could never go wrong wearing a sheath dress. They are very appropriate for every occasion, and their beautiful lines can be very stunning for dancing.

Suits of either the box jacket or the fitted type are just the thig for Homecoming festivities. Our Homecoming Queen, Miss Mary Ellen Lee, has chosen to wear a suit for her coronation. If you want to give your old suit a different touch, decide to wear a different blouse or drape a new scarf in the neckline.

Many M. C. lassies have reported that they plan to wear jumpers and blouses to the game and dance. This is an excellent suggestion, and I'm sure we'll notice many such outfits of wool and corduroy.

It is hoped that many of the girls will definitely plan to wear heels. If you are taking the time and patience to dress up extra-special, heels will go with your outfit far better than flats. Particularly in skirts of straight lines, a girl walks more correctly and displays her figure better when wearing heels. Sometimes the problem of heights can make the decision for you. But if the occasion deserves a corsage from your date, one is rather obligated to look her best. So plan what you will wear and take special pains to look your best! See you there!

For the Artist Series performance of Tuesday night, October 15, it has been suggested by various members of authority that we follow an unwritten custom of the past and plan to dress for dinner the night of this performance. Plan to wear to dinner what you will wear to the concert. The accepted dress for this occasion is your Sunday best or something of the party-dress type. With these, heels definitely should be worn. And most everyone wears gloves and carries a small purse. Often we howl because there are few occasions to really dress up, but I fear we do not take advantage of them. The Artist Series is definitely such an occasion, so dress for it!

Student Recital To Be Tuesday

There will be a student recital Tuesday, October 15, at 4:30 p.m. in the Music Hall of the F.A.C.

Tonight The Scotties Meet East Tennessee State Bucs

by Pete Nix

With Queen Mary Ellen Lee reigning over all the festivities, the Maryville College Highlanders take on the Bucaneers from East Tennessee State in the highlight of the day's Homecoming activities.

Fresh from a victory over Western Carolina and loser by only 6 points to a strong Furman eleven the Bucaneers will provide a stern test for the flu-bitten Scotties. Last year the Highlanders dropped a 29-14 decision to the Staters in Johnson City.

Riddled with flu, the Scots will not be in top condition for the Homecoming tilt with only twenty to thirty players reporting for daily practices. Coach Davis may have to field a patched-up line against the Bucs.

The Scots will be trying for their third home victory in a row. Thus far on Honaker Field this season they have defeated Morehead 13-7 and Centre 19-6. Game time tonight is 8 p.m.

Intramurals....

by Pete Nix

At approximately the half-way point in Intramural football the standings look like this:

	W	L	T
Alpha Sigma Sledgehammers	4	0	1
Y Pre-Min A's	3	1	0
Killers	3	2	0
Alpha Sigma Hammers	1	2	1
Y Pre-Min B's	0	2	0
Kappa Phi	0	4	0

The action from October 2 through October 8 saw the Sledgehammers defeating the Killers 7-0; the inspired Hammers playing the Sledgehammers to a scoreless tie; the Killers romping over the Y Pre-Min B's 40-6; and a much-improved Y Pre-Min A team taking Kappa Phi 12-2.

An intramural wrestling tournament is being set up. Tom Bugenhagen will be in charge. All those interested should contact Mr. Bugenhagen.

Following the second round of football, play in volleyball and maybe soccer will begin.

IN THIS CORNER

By Pete Nix

Somewhere along the line the Scotties have developed an aversion to dry fields. They take to water like the proverbial duck, but when the footing is good, the Highlanders are not. Twice the Scotties have met opponents under clear skies and twice they have come home on the short end of the score.

But just let a providential shower wing its way to Honaker Field, and the Scots find themselves. Both Maryville victims have succumbed as the winds blew, and the rains came pouring down.

Coach Davis' flu-bitten charges dropped their second fair-weather encounter last week as the Teachers from Jacksonville State up-ended them, 20-0. Mistakes were the order of the night. If the Teachers 20-yard stripe had been the goal line, the Scots would have won going away; but it wasn't, so they didn't. Late in the game, trailing 14-0, the Scots blew their best scoring chance of the night with a fourth-down fumble at the Jacksonville six-inch line.

The loss to the Teachers may turn out to be costly in more ways than one. The flu caught up with them on the Alabama trip and put 22 boys out of commission as of this Monday. Only a handful of men reported for the week's first two practice sessions. And as if this weren't enough, the Scots will meet the year's toughest opposition tonight.

East Tennessee State has lost once, that to Furman by a one touchdown margin. They operate from the split T and possess a fleet of swift halfbacks that promise much trouble for the Scots.

The flu may be the least of the Highlanders' worries.

Although beset with many troubles, you can be sure that the Scots are game all the way, and who knows, maybe it will rain.

Highlanders Bow To Jacksonville

by Joe Quinn

Jacksonville State gave the Maryville College football team a rough road to haul last Saturday night, as they white-washed the Scots, 20-0.

The Alabamans scored in the first and second period as well as in the fourth period. A crowd of more than 8,000 witnessed the battle at Alabama.

In the opening period Harold Shinkles sparked a 75-yeard drive with a thrilling 33-year gallop to pay dirt. Harold Smith added the extra point, and the score read 7-0.

Before the half ended, the Jax were on the scoreboard again as Wayne Kahee hit over from the one, capping off an 81-yard march. Again Smith converted, and the score at the half was 14-0.

Jerry McBee was credited with the third TD as he intercepted a Dan Greaser pass and raced 81 yards for the score. Smith missed his conversion, and the scoring ended.

Maryville got within striking dis- but never got the ball over that tance on three different occasions final white stripe. The closest we came was in the third period when we hit to the nine-yard line.

The top offensive move made by the Scots came when Ken Chambers sprinted 36 yards, but this particular threat ended a few plays later.

The Scots have a record now of two wins and two losses. Jacksonville has lost only one game this year and that was to the powerful Chattanooga Mocs who employ such teams as Auburn and Tennessee on their schedule.

This week the Scots will again have their hands full when they take on the East Tennessee State Bucs from Johnson City. This will be our Homecoming game and we're looking for an upset over the highly touted Buccaneers. They won their last time out by edging West Carolina by a 7-6 score.

Last year we were a part of East Tenn. homecoming, and we lost 29-14. This year we'll be out to avenge that count with the Isues. What's the good word?

BEAT THE BUCCANEERS!

Any students that wish to try for solo parts in the Messiah should do so on October 22 and 25. The bulletin board in the Fine Arts Center has a list of solos.

Sports Spotlights

By Joe Quinn

Football

The college football round-up for the week showed many surprises to ardent football followers. One of the big surprises was North Carolina's upset of Navy.

Army surprised many Eastern enthusiasts with its conquest of Penn State, 27-13. Other games of interest in this section were as follows:

Penn 3	Dartmouth 6
Yale 20	Brown 21
Florida State 7	Villanova 21
Columbia 6	Prjnceton 47
Harvard 6	Cornell 20

In the mid-west, mighty Michigan overpowered Georgia by a 26-0 count. Wisconsin manhandled a surprisingly weak West Virginia team, 45-13.

Illinois ripped Colgate 40-0. In the thriller-of-the-day as far as the Mid-West is concerned, Minnesota edged the Boilermakers of Purdue 21-17.

Other games were

Washington State 13	Iowa 20
Indiana 0	Notre Dame 26
Northwestern 13	Oregon State 22
Missouri 0	Texas A&M 28

In the Southwest, Miami supplied the surprise by upsetting the Baylor Bears, 13-7. Oklahoma, despite a flu attack, scored number 44 in a row by whipping Iowa State, 40-14.

Others were

Utah State 19	Wyoming 19
Cincinnati 0	Houston 7
Wichita 0	Oklahoma State 26
Texas 21	South Carolina 27

Down Dixie way, there were thrills of aplenty. Just 15 miles from here, the U.T. Vols, sparked by a last minute 55-yard punt return, nipped the upset-minded Mississippi State Maroons, 14-9. Bobby Gordon supplied this last-ditch thrill for some 30,000 fans at Shields

BCE Committee To Meet Here

A committee of the Board of Christian Education in Philadelphia will meet on the Maryville College campus on October 17 to make plans for the annual Presbyterian Leadership School of the South. This committee will consist of thirty to thirty-five members who will meet in the Fine Arts Center lounge and will eat lunch later in the college dining hall.

This next summer the school will be held on the Maryville College campus, as it has been for several years.

rooms, a music room, three literary halls ,an apparatus room, a bell-ringers room, a stationary room, and a chemical laboratory. Memorial Hall, then a men's dormitory, had 36 rooms, Balwin, the girls' dormitory, had 26 rooms, a spacious dining room, a music room, and a parlor. Rooms in these dorms cost six dollars a school year.

And how old are some of our traditions? The college yell way back-when was "Howie, Howie, Chilhowie, Maryville, Maryville, Tennessee . . . " You know the rest. Chapel attendance was here then, too. The students had a somewhat easier set-up in one respect, though — chapel wasn't until 8:45 in the morning.

And what about all those rules you hear so much about? The college used a modification of the familiar pledge that students now sign when they register. The pledge read, "We, whose names are underwritten, having read and approved the laws of this institution, do hereby declare that we acquiesce in them and acknowledge our obligation to obey them."

The college had a cut system then, too. Absence from recitation, from prayers, Church, or any prescribed college duty had to be "accounted for as soon as possible." Over-cutting (twelve or more cuts) "forfeited the standing of the student and rendered him liable to any minor punishment unless he offered a satisfactory excuse."

The college was also concerned with religious duty and moral deportment, as the following rules and policies testify:

"It shall be the duty of the faculty diligently to inspect and watch over the manner and behavior of the students and in all proper methods, by example and precept, to recommend to them a virtuous and blameless life and a diligent attention to the public and private duties of religion.

"Every student is required to attend morning and evening prayer in the college chapel.

"Any irreverent or disorderly conduct, such as whispering shuffling of the feet, or any disturbance whatever shall subject the offender to such punishment as the offense deserves.

"Every student is required to observe the Lord's Day as holy and sacred to the duties of religion, to abstain from all noise, and to attend a public worship and whaever religious exercise may be appointed by the faculty.

"If any student assault, wound, or strike any professor or tutor, or maliciously inflict injury on his property, he may be expelled.

"If any student shall be guilty of fighting, striking, quarreling, challenging to a duell, wearing women's apparel, fraud, lying, or drunkenness he shall be punishfished." (Young ladies qualified to join any of the classes were allowed to do so, but the student body was mainly men.)

"If a student should play at billiards, cards, or any unlawful game or wager or shall keep in his chambers or anywhere else implements of gaming, he shall be suspended on the first offense and thereafter expelled.

"No student, on any occasion, associate with persons of notoriously bad character."

And how does your M Book compare to this?

DR. ANDERSON

convenient to meet in.

On Sundays Dr. Anderson conducted divine worship twice. People came from all over the county to hear his well-thought through and inspirational messages. During the week he worked through the daily toil of the academy and of the students of divinity besides taking care of his own farm which supplimented the income that in those days could not be expected to come from teaching.

There were no days of rest for Isaac Anderson, no limited number of working hours. "Perpetual Motion" is the way that Dr. Wilson describes it, and the words fit Isaac Anderson like a glove. His tireless efforts led him on and on. In his desire to supply in his own person the lack of religious training of the mountain people of central East Tennessee, he marked out a circuit of about one hundred and fifty miles which he covered during one week of every month on horseback. This is only one of many tasks that Isaac Anderson accomplished.

To Maryville

After nine years of hard, successful work in Knox County, Isaac Anderson accepted a call from the New Providence Church of Maryville. In 1811 he began his work in the New Providence Church, and in 1812 he moved to Maryville, bringing his academy along with him since the entire faculty consisted of himself. Here he pitched into the same fevered work that he had been accustomed to in Knox County. The church that Dr. Blackburn had developed so successfully continued to grow and expand under the work of Isaac Anderson.

Through the work that Dr. Anderson was doing, he became distinctly aware of the fact that the southwest needed more able leaders. After several attempts to get trained men to come to East Tennessee through some missionary societies and friends, he attempted to inspire some volunteers at the General Assembly meeting in Philadelphia in 1819. Failing here to arouse anything more than sympathy, he attempted to generate interest in the new seminary in Princeton. Here again he failed

Seminary In Maryville

Isaac Anderson, on his way home, decided that the only way to aid the people of the southwest was to educate the people there so that they would be able to help their own kind. On his arrival at home, he set to work with the Union Presbytery to adopt an overture to the Synod of Tennessee, asking them to set up a seminary. After some revisions by the synod, the plan of Isaac Anderson was adopted, and the southwest now had its own seminary. Although there were many years of work left to do, the work of Dr. Anderson in establishing the Southern and Western Seminary in Maryville was his immortal achievement.

This institution, in the need for a more liberal education for the youth of Tennessee and the surrounding country, became a liberal arts college under the name of Maryville College.

On this anniversary of the passing of Dr. Isaac Anderson, we commemorate the fantastic work he did, and we thank God that Isaac Anderson was able to help so many through the long years by offering education as their escape from the suffering of illiteracy and for establishing a school with high morals that radiates the life of Christ.

Board Of Cut Appeals Explained By McClelland

It has been discovered that many students do not fully understand the appeals board that has been set up as a vital part of the new cut system. The appeals board is a faculty committee that acts upon appeals submitted by students absent from class. The board will judge the appeals at the end of each semester, and each appeal will be judged in the light of the student's over-all semester record.

According to Dean McClelland, an appeal must be turned in to the Personnel Office within two days after the absence. The reasons for the absence being appealed must be listed in order for it to be valid and worthy of consideration. For this reason it is very important that each student keep an accurate record of his absences, recording both the reason and the date.

The appeals board will act on each appeal as an individual case. Cases involving overcuts for serious illness requiring hospitalization, required service for the College, and the like will be considered as exceptions. The board will act earlier than the end of the semester in special cases.

The appeals will be judged on the basis of a student's scholarship and not on his class standing, ie—freshman or senior. This is done primarily because a poor student who is absent from class many times tends to slow down the rate of progression of the class as a whole.

The allowed cuts, which total per semester the number of times the class meets each week, are to cover only necessary absences such as serious illness or other emergencies. When the cuts are used as such there should be no problem in having to submit an appeal. However, when the student's absences exceed the allowance and an appeal is not made an "unearned credit" of one-fifth semester hour is entered on the student's record. Nevertheless, an appeal can be made when cuts have been used for other than what is specified.

Dr. Louis Evans Spoke This Week

The Maryville College-Community has been fortunate in having Dr. Louis Evans here conducting a fall preaching mission at the New Providence Presbyterian Church. He began the mission on Sunday morning, October 27, and has preached services nightly at 7:30 from Sunday through Friday nights.

Dr. Evans was nominated by Life Magazine as one of the ten great preachers of our day. He was chosen by Cecil B. DeMille as Clergy of the Year and was elected Religious Speaker of the Year by the Tau Kappa Phi fraternity. He has spoken to the members of the armed services stationed in Alaska, and he recently returned from speaking to the Terrior guided missile scientists at China Lake.

During his college years Dr. Evans was an outstanding football and basketball player and was a member of the United States championship basketball team. He was pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Hollywood, California, which is the largest Presbyterian church in the world. He has spoken at many conferences and church groups, and on the campuses of over 250 of the colleges and universities in our country. He is now an itinerant preacher for the Board of National Missions, and it is part of his work to speak to representatives in such fields as labor, industry, education, politics, and religion.

He spoke at our chapel service on Tuesday morning presenting a challenge to us who are mixing "God and geography" while the state schools keep a careful watch to see the results of such a combination.

Scotties-Of-The-Week—

Five In Dreamland Make Mood Music

by Lewis Plate

Last year a dance combo was organized to play for the May Day dance. From this developed the oranization we now know as "Five In Dreamland."

Tom Eberhard returned to school this year and got the band together for the purpose of providing entertainment for the student body and for providing enjoyment for those playing in the band.

The bands first appearance this year was at the Alpha Sigma rush week program, for which they provided the background music.

As the football season came into full swing, the band entertained at the after-game dances. After two hours of thrills and excitement, the soft music offered pleasant relaxation to the students. The soft sigh of a clarinet backed by the solid hush-hush beat of the drum, the deep, full bass, and the moving background of the piano can create a warm, friendly atmosphere in "Dreamland."

Dave McCahan provides an occasional solo and the background music on the piano. Bob Crosby provides the soft rhythm on drums, while Fred Tepper performs on the deep bass. Tom Eberhard plays the sweet clarinet.

A new member was added to the band this year from the freshman class. His name is Gerry Hall, and Gerry has added the sound of a smooth trombone to the group.

The band encourages the student body to offer criticism and encouragement. They are happy to accept any suggestions on the music or the band itself. The band is having a rather difficult time right now due to certain inconveniences imposed upon them, so the expressed like or dislike of the band from the student body would greatly help the bands future ideas.

Tom Eberhard has stated that the band will definitely continue through thick and thin. Plans are being made now for a bigger and better band next semester. The group is thinking about using as many as twelve members in the future orchestra.

Library Offers Many Services

by Pat Penland

Despite the contrasting impression you may get while searching through stacks of seventeen-year-old volumes of periodicals for information on a subject not even listed in Reader's Guide, your college library offers students a great variety of services. It is a center of reading materials selected and organized just for students, supplementing the curriculum and cultivating interest in reading.

The Maryville College library holds 60,850 books on its shelves. Of this vast number approximately 6,125 are bound volumes of publications, and there are 390 current magazine titles available in the Periodical Alcove. Nine newspapers, not just Southern journals, but The New York Times, Washington Post and Times Herald, and the Philadelphia Inquirer are subscribed. A file of The New York Times dating from 1950 appears on microfilm.

Shelves on either side of the main desk are set apart for a collection of fiction and non-fiction books for recreational reading.

In addition to reading facilities, the library installed this year a listening table where beginning scholars of modern foreign languages may listen to recordings. Even students not having courses in languages may use the table to enjoy records when the language pupils are not taking advantage of it.

Colorful bulletin boards focus attention on outstanding books, current news, pamphlets and art reproduction. The foyer of the library on a table displays the latest books.

For expanding collections of books, more book stack area has been added in the Reading Room next to the museum. Students have direct access to these stacks.

A student may ask that a book in circulation be reserved for him. Upon its return the library notifies the student in chapel. Inter-library loan service is available to special studies students.

As a matter of courtesy, the library gets in touch with the forgetful borrower by sending a card reminding him that his book is overdue.

Carolyn Graham To Lead Y Meeting

Last Sunday's Y program was led by three Maryville Graduates now in Assembly Training School at Richmond. Tomorrow it will be led by Carolyn Graham from the Inter-racial Committee.

Work on Barnwarming has already started and those who would like to work on it should see Joanne Antes or Bob Wyman as soon as possible.

The study groups which are sponsored by the two Y's and Vols are getting along well now. The groups are:

1. Christian Personality Growth —Harold Kelley with Dr. Elwood as resource person.

2. What Christians Believe — Jay Bowman with Mrs. Cartledge as resource person.

3. World Problems and Christian Answers — Janie Wall and Dr. Case as resource person.

These groups have been meeting about a month now and are helpful in answering questions of the students.

ECHO FORUM

Dear Editor:

We must agree that the cut system of past years had been taken advantage of. This shows a need for a change, but is the present cut system the answer?

It is my opinion that if one is old enough and advanced enough to meet qualifications for entrance into a college, he is old enough to realize the necessity of his attending classes regularly. If he does not, he must reason that he is only hurting himself in many ways. If one attends class with a negative attitude, how much good is obtained from the time spent? Not only should the responsibility to oneself, but the power of interest should be a motivation for attending classes regularly. In any college or university, it is a known fact that there are some classes which the student could learn more by spending the number of class hours in the library studying on his own than sitting in class.

If the motivation of interest were fully realized, would it not be an incentive and a challenge for the instructor to feel that his class attendance depended upon his ability to present the worthwhile material in such a way as to appeal to the interests of his students.

It remains to be seen if the present cut system will be satisfactory to both the students and the faculty. When we have foregone our college years, will there always be a taskmaster to save us from ourselves?

'Juno And The Paycock' To Be Given Tonight

Council Corner

by Margaret Longfellow

This student council column is to make known to the student body the workings, recommendations, and decisions of the student council. It is hoped that each student will make note of the facts pertinent to him.

Student Council meeting of October 9

There were no town night violations to be taken care of at this meeting.

Dan Ellis stated that a NSA representative is available for a visit to help the council with its problems. The council voted to arrange for such a visit.

The Homecoming expenditure limit was discussed. No set limit was found in any rules, but one will be set for future reference.

Dave Morris asked that all members decorating the field meet after lunch on Saturday. The decorating will not take long if everyone is prompt.

Bob Goodlin asked if there was any more business besides the new constitution amendments to bring before the Student-Faculty Senate. It was suggested that the matter of the new cut system, especially in reference to the students sick with the flu and the students on football and debate trips, be brought up.

Bob announced that WGAP carried a "live" broadcast of our game last week. We are very grateful to the station for the time and service that they have donated to us this year.

The council voted in favor of the idea of sending a representative to an NSA de-segregation conference to be held in this area one day this winter. The council also moved to investigate campus plotters in school colors.

The voting for this year's members of Who's Who then took place. Each council member voted for ten outstanding seniors.

Student Council Meeting of October 23:

There were three town night violations to open this week's meeting. One freshman and two senior girls were all five minutes late in returning from town nights. All three of them were penalized two weeks.

Gray Clarke reported in the Social Committee report that the movie "Little Men" would be shown on Saturday night. It will probably be shown at the Fine Arts Center theater.

Jack Emory reported that a meeting of the athletics committee will be held to go over the new letter proposals.

The subject of town night was discussed, and it was decided that a town night could begin as early as 5:30. Girls may stay in town until 7:15 without taking a town night if they sign out leaving a note to that effect.

The new student council budget, that has been posted on the council bulletin board for the past week, was approved by the council.

Topics to be brought up for discussion in the Student-Faculty Senate were suggested. Some of the subjects suggested were the cutting of the required number of days for chapel attendance, the improving of the quality of the chapel services, and voluntary participation in the morning services.

Student Council Meeting of October 30:

Four town night violations were brought up at this meeting. A freshman girl put her town night slip into the wrong box but was not penalized. A junior and a senior girl were each two minutes late. They were both penalized two weeks. A freshman girl was four minuates late and the Town Night Committee recommended two weeks, but the council referred the case back to the committee for further consideration.

Jack Emory reported on the question of a senior cheerleader receiving a letter after one year of service. An exception is made for a senior cheerleader so that he will be able to receive his letter. It was also suggested for the consideration of his committee that the wrestling team receive letters and the track team receive sweaters and letters.

Gray Clarke reported for the Social Committee. Getting more ping-pong balls for the student center and suggesting inter-class basketball games were items in her report.

At this date the N.S.A. has had no report on the visitors that we are to entertain. However, the committee did receive a letter asking if we would let a visitor come to the campus concerning inter-nationalism in school. He would be concerned with our foreign students, their worth, our program involving them, and would give suggestions along this line. This suggestion was approved and referred to the N.S.A. coordinator.

Schaefer To Give Organ Recital At Dedication

The new organ installed in the Maryville College Chapel will be dedicated on the evening of Tuesday, November 26.

One of the country's leading organists, Dr. Theodore C. Schaefer of Washington, D. C., will give a dedicatory concert on the organ. Dr. Schaefer is active in music circles throughout America. He is known not only because of his concert tours but also because of workshops conducted and lectures given by him throughout the country under the auspices of the American Guild of Organists. Among his regular responsibilities is that of organist of the National Presbyterian Church, Washington, D. C., the church of which President Eisenhower is a member.

The chapel organ was built and installed by the Holtkamp Organ Company, Cleveland, Ohio, the oldest organ builders in America, and is one of the largest in this part of the South. Its specifications include 49 ranks and 2,564 pipes. Dr. Schaefer's concert will be designed to demonstrate the various possibilities of this notable organ.

Shirley Harris Is New Parish D.C.E.

by Carol Morgan

Miss Shirley Harris is the new Director of Christian Education in connection with the Faith Cooperative Parish. She works with the "Y" Parish Workers both on campus and at their missions. She previously held this same position at Millington, Tennessee which is the location of the Naval Air Station near Memphis. Her work there was in a new church serving the Navy people.

Miss Harris' home is in Arlington, Virginia, and her home church is Western Presbyterian Church in Washington, D. C. She attended Wilson Teachers College in Washington and Princeton Seminary.

Parish work divides Miss Harris' time between the campus and the parish churches. She can usually be found on campus talking, and working with student workers in the mornings and visiting the places of work in the afternoons evenings, and on weekends.

At the present Miss Harris is quite "taken" with her beautiful beagle pup, who has recently established residence in a made-to-order house with a detachable roof and a fenced-in yard.

The playhouse presented the first performance of "Juno and the Paycock" last night in the college theatre. The final production will occur tonight.

The historically-based drama, "Juno and the Paycock", concerns an Irish family caught up in the Revolution of the Irish Free State.

Juno, played by Charlotte Cathy, proves the strong personality of the drama, the mother. Her shiftless husband, as portrayed by David Ross, is aided by a drinking associate, Joxer Dailey, acted by Ralph Ayres. As their son in the play, Fred Kay sustains serious injuries in street brawls in his earlier years and finally dies a traitor's death. A young suitor portrayed by Randy Rosenstell betrays and deserts the daughter, who is acted by Ouida White. Numbers of others appear on stage as neighbors, friends, and persons involved in the plot.

Although the barest details may sound somewhat grim and unpleasant, which it is in instances, the play contains a tremendous amount of very hardy humor.

Good News Department

Flu Subsiding

Reports from the infirmary show that the college's recent siege of the "flu" has definitely let up. There were only two patients in the infirmary this week, as compared to sixteen patients the week before.

Last week representatives from the Health Center took some smears at the college infirmary to determine which of the five types of influenza is the one spreading throughout the campus. There have been no reports yet of the results of these tests.

The nurse in charge at the infirmary urges all who have not yet had the flu shots to have them as soon as possible in order to guard against future attacks of the flu. These shots have been proven to be very effective in easing the severity of the illness. Those who are not now sick or who have not had one of the flu shots in the last ten days may get a shot at the infirmary for $1.00.

Some symptoms of the flu on campus are headaches, fever, aching muscles, and nausea. The patient should wait from 24 to 48 hours after the fever breaks before reporting to classes, and it takes four or five days for one to completely get his strength back after the illness.

Meanwhile, the nurse urges all to ward off this illness by getting ample rest, drinking fruit juices, and guarding against getting chilled or over-heated.

Playhouse Tells Cinderella Cast

Several players of the College Playhouse will perform the familiar fantasy, Cinderella, on November 29 and 30.

Playing the lead part of Cinderella will be Alice Cind. Sara Smith will portray the stepmother with Louise Pratt as the eldest sister. To be Fairy Godmother is Mary Fay Bundy, and Betty England is to be Queen. Acting the role of Felicia will be Susan Parkinson with Kay Buchanon as page Curtis Burger will be in character as Galafron. Gene Fieg acts the part of Curdhan, as Allen Russell plays Roland. Ronald Randon is to be prince. The role of the second sister is yet unassigned.

The American Association of University Women will sponsor the performance of November 29. On the 30th, however, it will be a regular experimental production.

The cast will travel to Oak Ridge on December 7 to do two performances, also under the sponsorship of the A.A.U.W.

Not "As You Like It"

The social life at Maryville College of necessity does not compare to the social life of most other colleges and universities. And although many of us do not like to admit it, this is sometimes a blessing in disguise. And yet when on successive Saturday nights we are offered "As You Like It", which consisted of certain activities at the Student Center that normally go on all week, and then "Little Men", it is evident that something is lacking in the social program.

Last year a committee of students and faculty met, made recommendations, and on the whole aided the college's social program a great deal. But when the aforementioned activities are the student's entertainment fare for the week, then something is wrong.

We think it is safe to say that during the week the average Maryville College student carries on a program of fairly concentrated study. Thus it is not only enjoyable but beneficial that this program include something to break the monotony. Saturday evenings offer the best time for this break, and when there is no ball game, play, or the like on campus, some other means should be provided. And it is evident from the attendance at "As You Like It" and "Little Men", that they are not enough.

We are leaving ourselves open for criticism by admitting that we don't know what the answer is. But we do know that there is a need for action there. Whether that action should come from students or administration or both is also questionable, but something should be done.

Reflections On The Bug

Now that the current flu epidemic gives every indications of being in its last stages, we can look back and take stock of the situation. No one here apparently has bothered to take statistics concerning the total number of pills consumed, glasses of fruit juice drunk, or class hours missed, but these numbers would definitely be large ones. It hasn't been easy on anyone, and thanks are certainly due to all those who worked over-time too help us through the cough and fever——the room-mates who faithfully toted our meals back from the dining hall, the house-mothers who roamed the halls with a thermometer and a bottle of Bufferin, the staff at the infirmary that had to handle a capacity crowd, the teachers who kept post-poning tests so that there might be a class to take them, Miss Ware who kept by the job in spite of a reduced staff, and all our friends who tried to cheer us when we felt so depressed. We are all glad that things are going back to normal, and to those who helped make it so, a simple "Thank you" is most appropriate.

Recently the editor received two poems in the mail which were submitted for publication in the Echo. They were good poems, and chances were that a place could be found for them in the paper. But they will never be seen in print. Why? The author initialed his work rather than signing it, and the editor was unable to find a name to which the work could be attributed. The policy of the paper in accepting contributions such as poems, letters to the editor, news articles, and the like, is that all articles must be signed. In certain cases the editor, if requested, may with-hold names from publication, but in all cases, she must know the author of the submitted work. It is preferable to make all contributions in person, if possible, either to the editor or any member of the Echo editorial staff.

November Thought

Through the purple haze of the crisp, cool days
My soul returns to God,
As I scuff through the rainbow of fallen leaves
And kneel in the damp, dark sod.
And I marvel, God, that this world is ours
To do with as we please—
This world of streams and mountains, and animals and trees.
But a sudden fear binds round my heart
That man may use his mind
To destroy this God-created world
And vanquish all mankind.
I can only pray that other folk
Will feel this tie to God,
As they too view the changing leaves
And kneel upon the sod.

Maryville, Tenn., March 25, 2085——Last week at the ground-breaking ceremonies for the new girl's dormitory which will stand on the site of Old Anderson Hall at Maryville University, which is under the control of the United Presbyterian Church U.S.—U.S.A., an amazing discovery was made. When the college president turned over the first spadeful of dirt he struck an object which proved to be an old filing cabinet. Inside the cabinet were numerous English examinations and other papers of that particular department. Among the papers was discovered an account written sometime between 1950 and 1960—before the Great War. Below is a fragment which was probably an introduction to the general prologue to the work. The originality of form is striking, and the content tells us a great deal about life in the twentieth century. When the remainder of the work is ready for publication, it should tell us a great deal about the past—

Introduction to the General Prologue:

When October with his Autumn blast
Showed with force September's balmy days were past,
And crackling leaves fell to the earth below
In promise of the coming days of snow;
When Libra also had, by balanced scale,
Shown Scorpio or taking Venus tooth and nail,
And Nature's little birds on swiftest wing
Had flown far South—there to live and sing—
Then did the students all so weak and sick
Lie feverish in their beds with heads quite thick,
And mothers of the house (glass sticks in hand)
Surveyed the damage flu had wrought upon their band;
Then cuts were taken, work was left undone,
(But not as in the past—for days of fun!)
Doctors called, and pills were fast dispensed.
In taxies some went home (for lack of ambulance)
—Befell that soon thereafter, on a day
When sickness passed and they no longer lay
Upon their beds in rooms of blank walls four
They passed again through chapel's open door.
There, full of reverence and with spirit new
They learned what in thanksgiving they must do.
To college holy wood their way must wend
To seek out him whom health did surely send.
The founder of the institution great
Who now, closed in by cemetery gate—
Lay neigh one hundred years, they say, or so
Through spring, and summer, fall, and winter's snow.
There left at nightfall from the chapel wall
Eight hundred students—Christians one and all,
And two by two began their journey in,
But were all stopped upon their way by Slim!
Yes, each one tells his story well I'm sure,
You see my introduction's reached a trickle,
For all upon the campus was "full tickel"
A freshman will the first tale now begin
But fear it not—for freshmen know no sin!

(Here ends the introduction to the General Prologue.)

Voices. Masks. and Shadows

I said last issue that I was going to talk more about the Russian Sputnik. But I think rather than talk about Sputnik itself, I would like to discuss some of the implications of the fact that it is there.

First of all, exactly what have the Russians achieved by getting their satellite up first? Basically three things: 1) they have beaten the United States in the race to launch an information gathering satellite. I don't think, however, that anyone, in this country at least, was aware that there was a race going on — except the scientists and politicians. 2) The Russians have shown that they surpass the United States in both theoretical scientific knowledge and practical know-how. 3) The Russians have shown that they have a working ICBM, since this is the only missile capable of launching such a satellite with any amount of power and accuracy at all. 4) Corellitive to these, they have, from a more prestige standpoint, greatly increased their standing among the other nations of the world, especially among those nations which are undecided between Communism and Capitalism — that is, between Russia and the Western powers.

Individualists

As far as practical know-how and theoretical science go, the Russians have left us far behind. No matter what else may be said about the Communistic way of government, it must be admitted that they get things done. While we Americans are a race of individualists, who have to be pushed and pampered, in many cases, into working as a team. The satellite race, is an excellent example of this. While we Americans were squabbling over who should launch the satellite — Army, Navy, or Air Force — and over whose missle should be used as a launcher, and where the money was coming from — while all this was going on, the Russians moved quietly ahead and got their satellite up first. Under different conditions, we might possibly have launched Vanguard late in 1956.

For Show Only?

Sputnik weighs 183 pounds to Vanguard's 23, its orbit is 300 miles higher than Vanguard's and twice as difficult to launch a satellite into. Then there is the fact that in order to get Sputnik up there they must have a working ICBM and hair-trigger control. Perhaps, as some observers say, Sputnik is mainly for show and lacks the information gathering equipment that Vanguard has, but the point is that Sputnik is up there and Vanguard isn't.

We are working frantically to get our Vanguard up, and optimistic observers tell us that we are way ahead of schedule, but I note that Dr. Werner Von Braun, the German scientist most publicized in connection with space travel, and one of the leading figures among Army missile engineers at Redstone Arsenal, was not available for comment, and also, that certain other missile scientists were told not to say anything concerning the United States Vanguard project.

The Russians are rumored to be going to try a shot at the moon on November 7, and if they try, there's little doubt in anyone's mind that they can do it.

To Bomb The Moon

Vanguard (waggishly now termed Offguardand Rearguard) will be at best a "me too" anti-climax. If we want our prestige back, we'll have to do something even more spectacular, such as hitting the moon with a hydrogen bomb and making a man-made crator to go with the meteor pocks — as was suggested by Dr. Fred Singer of the University of Maryland, one of the early designers of the unmanned satellite.

Well, that's one side of the coin The Russians got there first, but because they're first, does that mean they're right? We western ers believe that we have the form of government best for the individual man — a heritage from our Christian-Democratic background. But if we want to retain our heritage and pass it on to other nations in the world, we have to wake up and realize that we're losing our strength to other nations because of this very individualism. We may be right, but since when has that been the only historical criterion for determining victorious ideologies?

Sputnik And Columbus

Already, the Russian satellite has dropped from the front pages of our newspapers. I imagine that it was much the same way when Columbus discovered America — it didn't make very much difference in the everyday life of the common man. People forget everything except their concerns with other people. It has always been this way throughout man's history, and it will always be so. It will be so whether man is bounded by the finite limits of the atmosphere of Earth, or whether his strength, his power, and his empire extend into the universe and are bounded only by the limits of his mind.

Thomas Hardy expressed this idea well in the poem, "In The Time of 'The Breaking Of Nations' ".

Only a man harrowing colds
In a slow silent walk
With an old horse that stumbles and nods
Only thin smoke without flame
From the heaps of couch-grass;
Yet this will go onward the same
Though Dynasties pass.
Yonder a maid and her wight
Come whispering by;
War's annals will fade into night
Ere their story die.

Vols Retreat Held Last Saturday

The Student Vols Retreat was held on Saturday afternoon, October 25, at the Peck's Memorial Chapel. The group left campus at 3:30 and returned by 7:30.

After an opening devotional, a discussion period was on the program. The two discussion groups were: Prayer, led by Miss Cartledge, and Missions, led by Mr. Fisher. A delicious supper was served to the group by the ladies of the church. The highlight of the evening's program was the closing inspirational talk by Mr. Hurst, concerning mission work.

Student Vols is a very active campus organization and besides special activities such as the retreat they have an interesting meeting every Sunday night following Vespers.

There's one thing for certain, the Scots won't get beat tonight. After four straight defeats the Highlanders have an open date before meeting Concord and Carson-Newman.

It was a quick and magnanimous tailspin that Maryville went into following their well-deserved victory over Centre. The flu caught them on the Jacksonville State trip, and they dropped a 20-0 decision to the Alabamians. Except for an error of judgment the score might have been 14-7, which would have been about par for the course against the strong Staters.

Then the Shan had a fit, with captain Pig Nolen leading their pirate band, the East Tennessee State Buccaneers swooped down on Maryville College's Homecoming treasure, quickly locked it securely behind two first-quarter touchdowns, and then proceeded to celebrate with four more scoring jaunts. The flu-bitten Scotties were powerless against the big, fast Buccaneers from Johnson City. The Scots attempted a second quarter comeback, but they couldn't quite make the grade, and the Buc reserves wore them down. There was one bright spot in the 40-0 debacle, however; we did save the Queen.

The Emory and Henry Wasps then added insult to injury. With their long-range guns zeroed on the Scottie end zone, the Wasps proceeded to shellac the Highlanders, 48-13. Scoring four times from far out, twice on a double reverse and twice on long heaves, the Wasps ran up the highest score of the year against Maryville. It was a night when everything went wrong.

After giving up 40 points twice in a row, the Scots no doubt were a bit gun-shy. And in a cloud burst of red and white handkerchiefs, the Highlanders dropped their fifth of the season, their fourth in a row, to a weak Howard eleven. Two Maryville t.d.'s were called back, and it seemed that every Scots crossing of the Howard 20 triggered an outburst of penalties. They should have won, but the score, 20-7, says they didn't.

The obvious question is "what's next?" And the answer seems to be more of same. Unless the Highlanders can find some means to regain their confidence and tighten up on defense, the future looks as bleak as the past. But crazy things have happened. Upsets crop up every Saturday, and maybe one of these coolish nights the Scotties might find themselves and pull one off. They have just two more chances, and the odds are all against them.

I Alone Am The Light

At the end of day, there is gloroious sun-set,
Over the eastern hills stars are wakening from a day-dream
The wings of evening calmness rest in the valley.
But I know not
When it began,
Yet I cannot say
That I am not living.

The mighty is a lion in African wildness,
The wisdom is an elephant in India's plain,
The pride is in an eagle in his matchless wings.
But I know not
Why it is.
Yet I cannot say
That I am not a man.

The blue awning stretches over me
And the turning earth hangs on nothing.
The shapeless ocean blue forms waves.
But I know not
What it is.
Yet I cannot say
That I am not in it.

In the heart, warmness I felt,
Into my mind a thought came to be
And with the hand beauty is drawn.
But I know not
How it is.
Yet I cannot say
That I didn't do it.

Some one says that's from heaven
The other says that's from the earth,
Still another says that's all nothing.
But I know not
Whence it came.
Yet I cannot say
That I am not here.

From land to oland I wandered
Far to the stars reached I
And deep into the ocean I sought.
But I still know not
Who it is.
Yet I cannot say
That I am not.

Waked I from all—
And found
That I am.
Surely, I alone am the light
And one
Yet I cannot say
That is in me.

Flu-Weakened Scotties Make It Four Straight

by Joe Quinn

Today is an open date for the Highlanders, and next week they'll travel to West Virginia to take on Concord State College.

The following week the Scots will complete their '57 campaign by entertaining arch-rival Carson-Newman here on Honaker Field.

The Eagles have a good squad, but this is the type of ball game you dare not predict. Anything may happen, and usually does when Maryville takes on Carson-Newman.

Howard

The traveling Scots took a frustrating 20-7 set-back at the hands of Howard College in a game played at Birmingham.

Frustrating is the only word for this game. Maryville had numerous good gains called back for one kind of penalty or other Jimmy Harris is a good example of this. The fleet-footed back scampered 85 yards to pay dirt only to have it called back for a roughness penalty. Ken Chambers made sizeable gains, but it just seemed we couldn't get a sustained drive going without having it stalled by an infraction.

Emory and Henry

Following a bout with the flu, the Scots traveled to Bristol, Va., to take part in Emory & Henry's Homecoming celebration. We were given a thorough going-over by the Wasps 48-13.

The Wasps took advantage of Scot mistakes and rolled to the impressive victory. The Highlanders definitely did not play a good game. They were noticeably weakened by the flu which had knocked out almost everyone on the team.

Emory-Henry took every possible advantage of this situation as many of their scores came on breaks supplied by a game, but handicapped, Maryville squad.

East Tennessee State

A flu-stricken Maryville College football team took a 40-0 shellacking from the highly-touted Bucs of East Tennessee State College at our Homecoming three weeks ago. The game was completely one-sided as most of our players were still nursing the effects of the bug.

The Bucs scored in every period on steady drives on the ground Maryville had a lone threat toward the end of the game, but it fell through, and the game ended.

The previous week we had as little as 17 men out to practice. A number of the boys who played against the Bucs were up for the first time in a week. The game would have been a lot more interesting if it were not for this factor.

Intramurals....

by Pete Nix

The intramural football season is fast coming to a close with a three-way race for the title shaping up between the Killers, Y-A's, and the Sledgehammers. The deciding games will be played next week when the Y-A's meet the Killers and Sledgehammers. The Sledgehammers lead the race as of this writing with only a tie to mar their record, while the Y-A's have lost one and the Killers two. If plans can be arranged, there will be an all-star game following the close of regular season play.

Volleyball will begin about the second week in November and continue until near the end of the semester. All those wishing to enter teams in volleyball play should acquire a sign-up sheet in the intramural office.

The intramural wrestling tournament will be held Thursday and Friday, November 21 and 22. Sign-up sheets are posted in Carnegie and Bartlett.

There will be no league basketball play until the second semester, but the gymns will be reserved later this semester for the teams to practice. All those who plan entries in intramural basketball should be getting their teams lined up soon.

Mademoiselle Sponsors College Board Contest

"Mademoiselle" is now accepting applications from undergraduate women for membership in its 1957-58 College Board.

The magazine's College Board Contest offers a chance at winning one of the twenty Guest Editorships — a month on the staff of "Mademoiselle." Those who are accepted on the College Board do two assignments during the college year. Assignments give College Board Members a chance to write features about life on their campus, to submit art work and fashion as well as feature, fiction or promotion ideas for possible use in "Mademoiselle", to develop their critical and creative talents, to discover their own abilities and job interests, and to win cash prizes and possibly publication for outstanding work submitted during the contest.

The top twenty Guest Editors will be brought to New York next June to help write, edit and illustrate the August COLLEGE issue. They will be paid a regular salary for their month's work, plus round trip transportation to New York City.

While in New York each Guest Editor takes part in a full calendar of activities. She interviews a celebrity in her chosen field, visits newspaper offices, fashion workrooms, stores and advertising agencies, besides working daily with the "Mademoiselle" editor to whom she is assigned. The twenty Guest Editors get help in finding positions in their special fields, and each year several join "Mademoiselle's" own staff.

November 30 is the deadline for applying for College Board Membership. The tryout assignment this year gives more latitude than ever before for indicating your particular talent in writing on art, fashion or advertising, promotion or merchandising, or publicity.

Successful candidates will be notified of acceptance on the College Board before Christmas; the first College Board assignment will appear in "Mademoiselle's" January issue.

For further information see the Dean of Women or the August, September, October or November issue of "Mademoiselle."

Fashions

by Bobbye Carson

Now that winter weather is really here, we can discuss sweaters with more enthusiasm.

There are some new styles in sweaters this season, but as always most any style is quite acceptable on a college campus.

Ban-lon and acralain fabrics are very good in the latest sweater materials. They are very easy to keep clean, simply wash them. The texture of the sweater does not roll up as in nylon or orlon. For this little problem, many girls shave all the little shags off with a razor when the sweater is damp.

The fashionable crew neck sweater has shown great prominence for gals and fellows here on M.C. campus. These sweaters are of different prices and are of different blends of wool, partly shetland. The charcoal grey seems to be the outstanding color of the season in crew necks. I believe it is the policy if wearing a shirt under a crew neck to wear the collar in the inside of the neckline.

The boat neck is very stylish this year also. The girls' sweaters with the long waist effect with the draw string is of latest style.

The girls wearing buns and ponytails certainly do appreciate the sweater with the v-neckline or the ones with a few little buttons at the neck.

Pre-Med Club Plans Programs On Cancer

by H. Gail Wathen

Scheduled for the November meetings of the Pre-Med Club is a series of two programs on cancer which promise to be very interesting. The meetings are to be held, as usual, in Professor Howell's lecture room, second floor of Fairweather Science Hall on the first and third Thursdays of the month.

Jeanne Greaves, who will be in charge of these meetings, plans to have for the first meeting an informal lecture on what cancer is, what causes it, what has been done in the way of research and other points of concern to the average person.

At the second meeting demonstrations are to be made and vocational "tie-ins" such as nursing and dietetics as connected with cancer patients will be discussed. A film on cancer is also to be shown at each of the two meetings.

The first meeting in December, which will probably be the last meeting of the year, will be a trip to the research center of the University of Tennessee hospital. It is hoped that the group may observe demonstrations on heart transplanting and other points of research in which this center is involved.

Anyone interested is cordially invited to attend any or all of the coming meetings whether or not they are "dues-paying" members of the club. Watch for further announcements concerning individual meetings.

Spanish Club Meetings Told For Semester

The Spanish Club met for its first meeting of the semester on September 19 in Senor Schwam's classroom. The officers for this semester were introduced and the new members were welcomed. These officers are president, Howard McCuen; vice president, Chris Ward; secretary, Nancy Peters; and treasurer, George Verwer.

On October 3, the meeting was held at the home of Senor Schwam where a picnic supper was enjoyed. The picnic was followed by a business meeting and by games and singing.

On October 17, the meeting was held in Senor Schwam's classroom, and a program was presented under the leadership of Chris Ward.

The Spanish Club has a limited number of students who are interested in the culture and customs of Spanish-speaking peoples. Audio-visual equipment is used in the meetings. Several meetings are held at the home of the sponsor each year with an annual Christmas party held in the Spanish classroom. The club also takes trips off campus to attend movies and lectures, usually at the University of Tennessee. All those who are interested in Spanish and the customs and culture of Spain and the Spanish-speaking world are invited to attend one of the Spanish Club meetings, which are held on the first and third Thursdays of each month.

Glee Clubs Plan Annual Fall Sing

The Men's and Women's Glee Clubs will present their annual fall sing on November. The sing will be held in the Fine Arts Center Theatre, but no time has yet been set for the performance. The concert will include pop favorites, duets, trios, quartets, and special numbers.

Three Places Still Open In Writer's Workshop

The governing board of the Writers' Workshop has announced that there are three openings in the membership of this organization. Talented juniors or seniors who would like to have an opportunity to join this literary group may submit an original sample of their writings to one of the members of the governing board. The membership is limited to twenty five members.

This group, founded in 1927, meets every Monday afternoon, and various manuscripts written by the members are read and criticized. The Workshop also annually publishes Chips, a collection of selected works of the members. The purpose of the group is to improve the style, form, and content of the members' writings. There are no restrictions concerning the types of literature that may be produced. Prose, poetry, and criticisms are a few examples of the many fields that are covered by these writers.

The governing board, which handles the business of the organization, includes Dean Bushing, Eleanore Koster, Ann Wiley, and Stanley Mont. The board also combines with the membership committee of the group, which is made up of Mr. Durant, Bob Bowman, and Libby Turner.

Drivers who ignore pavement markings are violating the law and jeopardizing their own lives, says E. R. Klamm, accident prevention director of Allstate Insurance Company. Passing to the left of the yellow line, encroaching on crosswalks and zigzagging across lanes frequently lead to serious smashups.

'57 Barnwarming To Visit Egypt, Cleopatra's Court

by Lewis Plate

If you attend Barnwarming this year, you will be walking into "Two Different Worlds." This is the theme for this year's Barnwarming spectacular.

Your ticket will give you the special privilege to travel back through the centuries to the time of the Roman Empire. The lush green Nile Valley in Egypt is our specific destination. Here we are invited to a "Fansical" visit to the court of Cleopatra. Lela Aliff portrays the charmingly beautiful queen of the Nile. Lee Bird plays the chief slave of Cleopatra and her most recent suitor.

Can you imagine a modern day Romeo suddenly finding himself in the court of the beautiful and exotic Cleopatra? Don't try too hard. The plot is thickened by the antics of former suitors (known to you as the Scotsmen) and secret lovers. You will be caught and swept away in the enchanting atmosphere of the Nile Valley. Slave traders and alluring harem girls (under the direction of Ron Linn and Rosemary Lee) add "interest" and beauty.

The program is under the direction of Joann Antes. The technical director is Ron Randon, and the co-ordinator is Bob Wyman. The music is under the direction of Bryant Cureton.

Barnwarming is a traditional show done for charity. This year the proceeds go to the children's home in Maryville for the purchasing of new playground equipment.

Barnwarming committee chairmen are: set, Maryann Braindwood; lights, Dave Ross; costume, Gray Clarke, and Betty England; booths, Paul Bergmuller, Jerry Platz, and Hillis McKamey; business manager, Tom Dolch; programs, Bill Lynch; publicity, Gary Davis. Dave McCahan is the piano accompianist.

Library Features Displays On Asia

UNESCO has designated November as a special month to promote better understanding of the Asian people, so the library is displaying particular exhibits in observance of this occasion. The display includes a media of information in books, periodicals, pamphlets, maps, pictures, and items from two of the Asiatic countires —China and India. The figurines and other articles were gathered from the museum collection. The news bulletin board points out the latest news-worthy occurances in these Asian countries.

The library will feature other regions of Asia in the latter part of the month.

December Graduates To Take Comps Soon

Comprehensive examinations will be held on November 19th and 20th for those who plan to graduate in December. These are required of all seniors and are administered by the head of the department in the student's major field. These tests are, as the name indicates, to be comprehensive, testing the student on the four years of work which has been completed in the major. The design of these examinations is, as stated in the Bulletin: 1. To develop and encourage retentiveness throughout the student's college course, and 2. to test the ability of the student to integrate the subject matter of his field.

Any student who makes a grade of F on a comprehensive examination must be retested at one of the regular times for such testing. No student may take "comps" more than twice, and a second testing must be done within two years of the first failure. A grade received on "comps" carries with it a certain number of points, which, when totaled with grade points, must yield a grade equivalent to C for graduation.

Playhouse Meeting To Feature West

Mrs. Clyde West, who served as head of Maryville College Drama Department for approximately forty-five years, will speak at the meeting of the Playhouse on Monday, November 11. Mrs. West holds the only honorary membership of the playhouse. The performance of Beggar on Horseback was given in her honor last year at which time she received the honorary membership.

Cinderella Committees Announced By Playhouse

The committees to work on set, properties, costumes, and publicity for the production, Cinderella, have been announced. Tom Eberhard serves as chairman of the set committee with Mary Faye Bundy, Ouida White, Ruth Wagner, Karen Rust, Judy Farrow, Jane Planitzer, Charlene Weed, Susan Fagan, Kay Buchanan, and Jim Barber.

Chairman of props will be Judy Eldridge, assisted by Judy Farrow, Jane Planitzer, Leah Mucario, and Mary Mottola. Charlotte Cathy working with Ouida White, Karen Rust, and Kay Buchanan will be in charge of publicity. Chairman Carol Schade, Helen Rankin, Tom Dolch, Randy Rosensteel and William A. Laugesen will operate lights.

Costume committee, headed by Mary Faye Bundy, includes Eugenia Miller, Judy Godfrey, Kathryn Smith, Carolyn Dees, and Deanna Owenby. The make-up committee is to be posted later.

A Word Of Thanks

The Highland Echo Business Staff would like to thank the seniors and juniors for folding the last two issues of the paper. This issue was folded by the sophomores. Freshmen, you're next! Remember if the Echo isn't handed out folded it's probably because you didn't help your class fold it! The more people that help out the less time it takes!

Seventeen Picked For Solo Parts In The Messiah

Seventeen students were selected to sing solo passages in the twenty-fifth annual presentation of Handel's Messiah. They were chosen through rigorous auditions in which thirty-two singers participated this past week. The panel of judges consisted of Harry H. Harter, director of the oratorio; Mr. Dan H. Kinsinger, instructor in voice; and Mr. Victor Schoen, instructor in theory.

Of the seventeen soloists eight are from East Tennessee. They are soprano Mary Haydn McEver also Hillis McKaney, tenors Robert Samples and Harold Mays, all of Knoxville. Alto Bobbye Carson is from Madisonville; baritone Howard Bell and tenor Charles Justice, of Maryville; and trumpet soloist Thaddeus Jablonski of Washington College, Tennessee. Mr. Jablonski will play the trumpet solo in the air "The trumpet shall sound," which will be sung by Mr. Bell.

The remaining soloists represent seven states. Soprano Elva Yohe, baritone John Ribble, and bass Harold Kelley of Pennsylvania; alto Norma Taubert of New Jersey; soprano Zona Gogel and alto Joan Johnson of Florida; tenor Robert Moses of New York; and bass Robert Gwaltney, of California.

Also named were soprano Lessie Ann Rhodes of Kentucky and soprano Gloria Evans of Connecticut.

Special letters are being sent out to all former soloists and principals in the accompanying orchestra of the Messiah for the past twenty-five years. They will be guests of honor at this year's performance, which marks the twenty-fifth anniversary of its continued presentation at Maryville College. At this performance special recognition will be made of Miss Garnet Manges who first played as pianist for the performance in 1936 and continued as accompanist for the next twenty consecutive years.

The 200 voice chorus has been rehearsing weekly since October 14 with Gloria Mares Collins as pianist for her second year. Mr. Ralph Moore has been rehearsing the orchestra made up of thirty five town and college instrumentalists.

Perils Of Speedbreak, Frozen Fingers Told By Frustrated Band Member

by Eugenia Miller

Brump . . . brump . . . brump, brump, brump. As I march along circle drive something in my mind clicks, left . . . left . . . left, right, left, and yet my mind is not completely on whether I am in step or not, nor if my rank and file are straight. Some days I would be dreaming of a far-off subject, but today my mind is focused on the band. Today we are practicing the show for the last game of the season, the climax of many hours of practice and memorizing music. Yet there have been times filled with laughter, like the time that John almost tripped backwards over a speed break as the band was heading for the football field, or the good time we had on the trip to Bristol.

Suddenly it is brought to my mind that I am out of rank by the piccolo player on my right who is yelling, "Guide to the right." Then my attention is drawn to the drum major's whistle signaling that we are going to play; but just at that moment my music lyre decides to flop in my face, and "On Highlanders" goes flying through the air.

Finally we reach the field ready to go through our maneuvers. Marching down the field I hear, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, hit 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6. 7, hit as we try to gauge the length of steps by yard lines. Two short blasts on the whistle, slight confusion, and we are in a formation. But what is it? Oh yes, it is a tringle. Two more blasts and we are back in rank, marching down the field, doing a countermarch, and proceding with the rest of our formations. We then march off the field only to learn that at five o'clock we still have time to run through the show twice more. In the meantime we are freezing. We diligently go through the show again, and then we are more than happy to learn that due to time and icy fingers we are to be dismissed.

Several more days of practice are over, and it is Saturday night, time for the game. I now have the pleasant job of putting on my glamorous uniform. First I climb into a pair of bermuda shorts, a jersey shirt, a blouse, and a sweater, all to help keep me warm. I procede to put on my kilt; I fasten the buckles, but it is so big that it almost falls off. My roommate comes to my rescue by fastening my purple suspenders. Next I kneel on the floor to see if my kilt is the right length and even. All is well, so on go my knee socks, shoes, and spats. At last I am ready to put on my jacket button all the millions of buttons, and hook my belt. After a last minute inspection, I throw on my hat and head for Fine Arts Center. Oops, I almost forgot my instrument — and music.

From the fine Arts Center we head for the field, the night of reckoning here. Before the game we march on the field, play the "Star Spangled Banner," and march off the field to our seats at the very end of the stadium where we feel left out, and gather our coats and blankets around us. We are now ready to watch the game, to a certain extent, between marches.

With only two minutes remaining in the half, we climb down off our nice cozy seats and fall in to rank for the half time show. We go onto the field, perform our feat, and it is over just like that. A show that has taken many hours of practices is over in seven minutes. A success!

German Club Sees Film

The first regularly scheduled meeting for this month of the German Club was held Monday, November 11, at 6:45 p.m. in Herr Keber's classroom.

Miss Irma Birklebach, vice president of the club, presided and conducted all business in German.

Following the business meeting, a round of "Ist Das Nicht Ein Schnitzelbank?" was sung, after which a film was shown of the cultural and scenic attractions of Deutschland.

Library Receives Memorial Books

Patrons of Maryville College donated two books as memorials. The first book, Menon's Transfer of Power in India was presented in memory of Mr. John W. Cox, brother of Mrs. E. E. McCurry. The second, Switzerland by Hurlimann was given in memory of Mr. Ernest Koella Sr., who served on the Board of Directors of the college.

The new book table will display both of the books concerning foreign countries.

Glee Clubs Plan Autumn Serenade

The annual autumn sing presented by the combined Men's and Women's Glee Clubs will be given on November 23. The program will begin at 8:00 p.m. and will be held in the Fine Arts Center Theater.

The "Harvest Serenade" will include numbers by combined chorus, selections by the men's and women's clubs individually, solos, duets, quartets, and special numbers.

Soloists on the program are Gail Shiffer, Lou Lewis, and Sherry Martin. Duets will be sung by Mary Hope Stewart and Bob Connors, and Helen Marie Haynie and Gary Hall. A men's quartet is composed of Tom Fairman, Bob Connors, Gene Mildon, and Gary Hall. Lou Brininger, Peggy Longfellow, Charles Crissman, and George Stewart will sing in a mixed quartet.

CORRECTION

The last four lines of the poem, "I Alone Am The Light", which appeared in the last issue of the Echo should have read

Surely, I alone am the light
And one
Who shows the way
That is in me.

The "I" in the poem is, of course, the universal "I".

Mobiles, Stabiles At Art Exhibit

by Marilynn Lundy

The Fine Arts Gallery presents a very unusual and fascinating exhibition for November which consists of mobiles and stabiles by George W. Owen.

Mr. Owen is a former engineer and business man turned self-taught artist. He retired from business in 1952, and he now resides in Mexico where he devotes his time to creating mobiles and stabiles.

Mr. Owen's collection that is being shown at Maryville College, consists of various mobiles constructed in plastic and metal. They are suspended from brass or iron wires. The stabiles include various sizes and themes made from brass or copper. Some have a natural finish, while others are treated to develop a black or green patina.

In December a display of our own art students' work will be in the F.A.C. Gallery.

Scottie-Of-The-Week

Chairman Of National Student YWCA Is Maryville College Sr., Janie Wall

by Kris Ramsey

One of the cutest and most active senior girls on campus is Janie Wall, known and liked for her friendly personality and never-ending enthusiasm. She is a sociology major from Burlington, North Carolina. Perhaps she is best known around campus for her work in YWCA.

Janie first became interested in Regional and National YWCA while serving as a Nu Gamma leader and attending Regional Conferences. At a meeting of the YWCA and YMCA National Student Council in Oxford, Ohio, this summer, Janie was elected chairman of the National Student YWCA, which determines the policy of the national program and plans national meetings, such as the National Student Assembly which is to be held at the University of Illinois in December of 1958.

Janie will travel to New York today to attend a meeting of National Student YWCA, and in March she will attend a national convention of YW in St. Louis. At this meeting she will be chairman of student sessions with over three thousand young women present.

Not only is she a leader in "Y", but Janie participates actively in many other campus organizations such as Theta Epsilon, Phi Gamma Nu and the International Relations Club.

Janie is a Presbyterian and is interested in Christian service. This summer she worked for the Home Mission Board of the Presbyterian Church, U. S., in the Grerrant Presbytery, Kentucky.

Judging from her various activities and fine leadership, it is easy to see the valuable contribution Janie has made to Maryville College and just what a fine person she is. The Echo salutes you, Janie.

Seniors Organized Into Secret Club, Hold Meetings And See Den Mother

by Betty Springstead

Did you say that you don't know what all the fuss is about special studies? 1. You are out of your head, or 2. you don't know what they are. If the latter is your problem, let me hasten to enlighten you. Special studies is a secret club with meetings once a week. When you first joint the club, a big party is given in your honor by those about to graduate from the club. Requirements are easy— you have to be majoring in something, you have to know how to hold a pencil, and you have to be a second semester junior, or a reasonable facsimile. If you can't type you also must have some money, which may be earned through Maryville College's extensive student program. This money is to bribe some more proficient member of the student body to type your secret document for you.

You may have noticed some harrassed looking members of the club, male and female both, emerging from the little room at the far left of the library. They have just been in to see the den mother, Sally McNiell, who interprets the rules of the club for anyone who might not happen to understand them. It is essential that every member get the rules straight, so the written documents will all be uniform. And you may have noticed a secret conference between a club member and his senior advisor-counsellor taking place every week, same time, same place. That's for transacting secret business.

You can always tell a member of this club, even if you do not recognize him as such. He will hand in papers for other classes late, mumbling incoherently about special studies. He will get vicious if anyone attempts to wrest from him the little yellow pad which he carries with him always (it's his secret symbol, so he is recognized by the other members), and he will go stark raving mad when the day finally arrives that he can finally hand in a mysterious looking little black book, which he treats as tenderly as if it were a relatives.

To the uninitiated, this will seem mysterious. To those who know what I am talking about, good luck, hope you make it by December 2, at 12, and oh you poor juniors!

(If you are still confused, wait a while, or read the bulletin.)

Percentage—Wise And Otherwise

The recent Barnwarming elections revealed a pathetically low set of voting percentages. The freshman class votes totaled 58 per cent of the class and the sophomore votes were no better with the same percentage. The junior class was represented by 65 per cent of its members, and the senior class by 83 per cent. These numbers are tragic.

College students, not excepting those at Maryville, seem to believe that self-government is a right which they are entitled to and which they feel they can handle sufficiently well. They are perfectly right in believing this. However, self-government carries with it not only a right and a great privilege, but greater responsibility. A class, or any organization for that matter, cannot expect to function judicially or efficiently with only the votes, opinions, and support of a few of its members. Inevitably, when unwise decisions are made, it will be those who want the privilege and not the responsibility that will complain the loudest.

Also concerning student government is the fact that the low attendance at class meetings and student body meetings shows a great lack of responsibility on the part of students on this campus. Greater support of student body meetings and other student council activities would undoubtedly show improvement in campus life and faculty relations.

Perhaps there will be those students who will say that the class meetings are not important enough to attend or that they do interest them. The only way that a class meeting can be vital and helpful to the students is for them to paritcipate by attending and bringing up such matters that pertain to the welfare of the class and the school as a whole. There are undoubtedly many points of campus life that need the attention of the Student Counceil, but will never come within the council's action because they are never brought into the open in such gatherings as class meetings. Respect for an organization and reform within that organization must come from its members. A good way to begin is by attending class meetings and doing your part to make them meaningful.

Just Another Word?

Consideration is a word that is in the vocabulary of most of us, but it is not always in the actions of the same folk. Consideration involves the rights and opportunities of others, and especially now as the semester draws to a close—the right and privilege of others to study. "Book-learning," as it is commonly referred to, is not gained by a casual glance at the subject matter in passing, nor is it able to be gained in an atmosphere riddled with outside noises in a time set aside for quiet and study.

Many students may not study in the afternoons or the evenings after the study period is officially over, but there are those who do. The act of consideration would be wisely and thoughtfully put to use at these times. A step that is softened, a voice that is lowered, or a door that is gently shut in consideration for another could mean better study habits, better grades, and better human relations.

Flip, Flop, Sputnik

A Tale Of Two Space Rabbits

By John Williams

Flip and Flop are really quite extraordinary rabbits. They have extremely high IQ's and can read, write and understand upon hearing any of the major Earth languages. Being rabbits, however, they find it quite difficult to speak any of them (though some of the extraterrestrial tongues are somewhat easier for rabbits than humans). Therefore, they talk almost exclusively in Rabbit, which really has as extensive a vocabulary as English combined with the Classical languages and several others.

Their knowledge of mathematics and engineering is phenominal and after 15 years of space travel and contact with "other" beings their present knowledge can be described in no other terms than as being astounding and quite beyond anything Earth has ever known.

And a thing that is all the more surprising is that Flip and Flop outwardly resemble ordinary rabbits. They wear glasses in deference to their near-sightedness, but this is their only visible distinctive feature. They are surprising results of the centuries of prolific evolution of the Rabbit race.

Their space ship is about twenty feet long and four feet in diameter at the base section (where the engine is located) and bulges out in the center (the location of the living quarters and instruments) and tapers off to the conventional point at the top. In their original ship the engine compartment contained a fairly conventional rocket engine with highly concentrated fuel and the most ordinary appearing exhaust tubes. Their present ship, however, incorporates a new drive system which does not have an exhaust in any sense of the word. The drive principles are too complicated to describe here.

This ship can be considered a new one since it is barely 5 years old. It is constructed of a special black metal, which before a final treatment is very easy to manipulate. After a ship is built with it, the metal is treated and acquires an extreme hardness and tensile strnegth and will automotilcally repel small meteors.

Sometime between January, 1940, and December, 1941, Flip and Flop made their first successful flight to the moon. Upon their return to their laboratories in the Western Badlands they immediately made plans to set up a base operations post in the twilight zone of that noble satellite. About this time the world plunged headlong into the War, and the ensuing confusion resulted in a perfect cover for their operations. By mid '42 they had sent several cargo rockets to a certain crater and had themselves followed directly in their wake.

They set about building the post and after a month and a half of hard work finished that project and began building a star ship from the minerals they had discovered on their first trip. By the end of the year the ship was ready to go. The only rest they took during this time was for sleeping and eating and an occasional scoping Earthwards to notice ho wthe war was going. If you recall, the U.S. was still in quite a tight spot, what with the Germans and Italians in Europe and the Japanese in the Pacific making things hot all over, and our friends agreed that they had indeed left Earth at an advantageous time, though they felt the Allies must surely win out eventually.

They blasted off for Mars on Christmas Day, 1942, and for the past 14 years they have been roaming to the farthest reaches of the Universe.

Now on their way back to the Solar System from the planet Glnnarth in the Spiral Nebulae, they can hardly wait to see what sort of scientific achievement Earth has acquired in 15 years.

After stopping off on Mars to renew old acquaintances and note with satisfaction the tremendous progress of the Martian peoples during the years, they sped on towards their old moon-base. They still feel that the most desirable place one can live is on a tiny planet in Galaxy 132 beyond the Milky Way where they plan to establish permanent residence. The level of pure science there is far above anything they have seen elsewhere, and war is virtually unknown.) Once they had cleaned up the accumulation of 14 years' star dust, they unpacked their powerful telescopes, set them up, and trained them on Earth.

On Earth they saw many signs of unrest and preparation for war. They also noted with interest the various nuclear bomb tests being made in all sections of the globe. It wans't long before they began to concentrate their attention upon the tests of various missiles and rocket-propelled devices. The Russians appeared to be firing more of these than any other country.

Flip told Flop that one of his Martian buddies had filled him in on the situation on Earth. He said that the Allies had indeed won the great war, but that practically ever since the armistice opposing sociological orders had kept things in an up-roar and that tension between the great powers, helped along by Korea, Indo-China, and lesser wars, had now reached a state near the breaking point. At the moment, however, things appeared to be in a stalemate,as neither side fancied an all-out nuclear war. It would probably remain that way unless the Russians could secretly develop something so far ahead of the U.S. that it would rule out all chances of retaliation.

One day not long ago, Flop excitedly called Flip to the observation room. The Russians had just fired a multiple-stage rocket and thrown a small object into an orbit about the earth. They intently observed the object's progress for a few days, during which time they learned quite a bit about it. It was covered with an opaque metallic substance and was a perfect sphere. There were two short antennae extending from it along an axis of rotation, and there appeared to be some writing on it.

About three days after the satellite had been sent up, one of the Martain ships stopped by their post to visit, and the pilot pointed out that although the Americans in particular were upset by the Russian achievement, they couldn't help making jokes about it after it had been dubbed "Sputnik" by the Russians themselves. And basing his opinion on years of observation of the U.S., he foretold that before long some enterprising American would think of a way to make some money off Sputnik.

Flip and Flop decided that they should take a closer look at Sputnik. After a little remodeling of one of their original rockets so as to allow complete control in space, including stopping and starting, they visited the satellite.

Making observations from their ship, they saw that Sputnik was covered with a dark olive steel and indeed did have some writing on the outside. Printed in both Russian and English was the legend, "MADE IN U.S.S.R." Using the test instruments in the ship, they concluded that the ball contained two radio transmitters and some rather bulky batteries and nothing else. It sent out two unmodulated tones every three seconds, each tone lasting about one half a second. All the evidence indicated that the transmitters' sole purpose was to prove the existence of Sputnik to people on Earth.

Sputnik was witnessed from Earth during this time, if you recall, and our travelers' space ship was mistakenly identified as the last stage of the launching rocket, traveling along for the ride.

They followed Sputnik for more than a week, collecting data of various types. Eventually, they donned their space-pacs and visited the satellite in person, whereupon they began to clown around a bit. And, really they made several rather amusing pictures of each other riding Sputnik. (Imagine, if you can, a staid, sophisticated rabbit-scientist, glasses and all, wearing a brilliant red space-pac and sprawled out on Sputnik with one ear up and the other hanging over his nose—and the both of them merrily spinning about the earth at 18,000 miles an hour!)

Earth scientists couldn't know it of course, but it was such antics that caused Sputnik to lose altitude.

Their observations completed and their fun-making exhausted, Flip and Flop returned to the moon to decipher the data and make certain calculations based upon Earth's progress thus far. After a few days' work they decided that (1) Earthmen are indeed an arrogant, backward, but steadily improving race, (2) it will be at least 10 years before an Earthman sets foot on the moon and lives to tell about it at times, (3) it will take another 5 to 10 years for them to reach Mars, where the secret of interstellar travel lies, (4) it will be centuries before they will have developed enough socially and ethically for the Martains to entrust them with star drives.

This leaves plenty of time for Flip and Flop to warn the Universe of the coming of Man to the Stars and to brief the peoples on the best of treatment to aid His social development toward perfection. (A policy of gentleness and firmness, always keeping the upper hand and gradually releasing new developments to Man's care as He proves able to correctly handle them). The heaviest burden falls on Mars, who must decide when Man is ready to see the stars firsthand.

So our most amazing friends, rabbit-scientists extraordinaire, Flip and Flop will atomize their base on the moon and set out for Galaxy 132 beyond the Milky Way, reaching the farthest corners of this Universe and partly into the next to spread their warning on the way home.

TALK OF THE WEEK

by Susie Miller

Fashions

by Bobbye Carson

Since M.C. has been endowed with its share of engagement rings, it is only fitting that wedding plans should be discussed. What is to be said will be very general but nevertheless nice to know.

When planning for a wedding, the question often arises of what is proper for the various members of the wedding party to wear.

It is impossible to discuss the entire plans for highly formal weddings on down to the informal wedding, so as to possibly benefit more readers, I would like to talk about the informal wedding.

Often what the bridal party will wear is determined by the budgets of those involved and the vicinity in which one lives. Therefore the informal wedding often appeals to couples just out of college or those still in college.

So what to wear for the informal wedding:

Bride

The bride should wear a baliet length dress of either of white or a pale color. She should carry a small bouquet or prayer book and wear a short veil or a veil-less bridal hat. She should wear matching shoes, and gloves are optional

Attendants

The bride's attendants should wear moderately simple ballet length dresses the same length as the bride's dress. If anyone is thinking of a Christmas wedding, dark green velveteen dresses are a suggestion. The attendants should carry small bouquets, or in the suggestion of the Christmas wedding, the green velveteen would look nice with small white fur muffs with a very small spray of red poinsettias on them.

Mothers

Mothers of both the bride and groom should wear street length dresses with appropriate hats, gloves, and shoes, and corsage.

Groom

The girls' fashions for the informal wedding have been fairly conducive to either winter or summer season. However, the men's wear is a little different. For the winter season it is suggested that the groom and his attendants wear dark blue or Oxford gray suits with white shirts, conservative ties, and boutonnieres. For summer, the men can either wear conservative suits, all white suits, or white dinner jackets with the dark trousers.

All the above suggestions are for daytime or evening (after 6) wear.

Guests

Women who come to the wedding as guests should wear simple but smart dresses with hats and gloves. In the evening women should wear day length dresses with small hats and gloves.

Men who come as guests should wear business suits, white shirts, and conservative ties.

Dr. Lloyd In New York

President Lloyd has been in New York this past week on several important trips. One occasion for his journey was a semi-annual committee meeting of the Permanent Commission of the Presbyterian Church.

Dr. Lloyd also attended a meeting of the National Commission on Colleges and Industry as the representative of the Affiliate Independent Colleges of Tennessee.

He also expects to be in New York next week.

Scots Host Eagles In Season's Last Game

Sizeable Turnout Is Anticipated

by Pete Nix

Tonight brings down the curtain on another season of football as Maryville hosts the powerful Eagles from Carson-Newman. The battle is expected to attract a sizeable crowd to Honaker Field at 8 p.m.

The Scots will definitely be the underdog as the Jefferson City boys boast one of the strongest teams in years. The single-wingers with the unbalanced line have lost but two games this year while downing six opponents. Maryville has upended three foes while losing five games. One of our conquerors (Howard 7-20) proved easy prey for the Eagles, 72-13.

The game has aroused a great deal of interest as the radio has given it considerable attention. It is expected along with their band, that a huge delegation will follow the Eagles as they tackle their arch-rival. Many fans will be present from this area, and, of course, there is no reason not to expect a good turn-out from our own student body. We haven't seen a game on this campus since Homecoming, Oct. 12.

The Scots will be in top shape for the contest as will their opponents. A win in this one would make a successful campaign regardless of past results.

In the past three years, the Scots have dropped two to Carson Newman and tied one. Last year we lost at Jefferson City, 26-14. The year before we lost a squeaker, 13-7. The third tilt resulted in a 7-7 deadlock. This seems like the ideal time to win one. A victory would give us a respectable 4-5 record for the '57 campaign.

To make a prediction on this game is sticking one's neck in a noose. Many writers have us as many as thirty points under the Eagles. You take it from there.

One thing is sure, and that is there'll be plenty of action on Honaker Field come 8 p.m. tonight. You'll be hurting yourselves by missing this one regardless of the outcome.

Let's all get out there and help the Scots score an upset by dealing Carson Newman a solid defeat.

See you at the game.

RIM SHOTS

by Lottie Jerkins

Rim Shots has really been running in circles lately. It has taken quite a bonfire to keep all the W.A.A. irons. Aerial darts has ended with Helen Franklin as champion of the tournament. The spectators at the swim meet saw events ranging from diving to a pajama race. The latter looked more like a fashion of old-time bathing suits. By-the-way, a forum is being formed to discuss the pros and cons of ping pong balls in gutters. Your opinion will be welcomed. Many swimmers won individual honors, and the Chillies splashed away with the team honors.

Now that the mermaids have had their day, the volley ball enthusiasts surge onto the floor. If you are tall and reachy or short and bouncy, volley ball needs you! Instead of hitting your roommate come work off your frustrations by hitting the ball. Before coming, however, be sure to know the definition of duck. You'll need it when standing in front of the over-hand serves. Don't worry though; members of the advanced first-aid course would welcome a chance to try their newly-acquired skills.

Recently a meeting was called to order in this fashion: "Will the (crunch) meeting (crunch) please come to order (crunch)." It isn't a new type of parliamentary procedure — just the popcorn party of the Women's M-Club. After the business meeting Miss Heron was proclaimed "Indian-Rhythm player of the night." On this thought the party ended, and the members went home full and confused.

I see by the tentative schedule that the women's physical education department is adding both golf and synchronized swimming classes to the list of courses. This should be welcome news to sports fans. Bye now, see you on the court.

SCOTS WIN

Scored Every Quarter To Down Concord 25-6

by Pete Nix

Abandoning the single-wing for the first time in many years, the Maryville College Highlanders used a ragged but effective T-formation to down Concord State Teachers College 25-6. On a cold and windswept gridiron, the Scots scored once in each quarter to pound out their victory.

In the first quarter Earl Smith climaxed a 40-year drive by scooting over from the six. Beam booted the extra point to give Maryville a 7-0 lead. A short kick into a strong wind set up the TD.

Midway of the second canto Ken Chambers galloped 25 yards to the Concord 15. Earl Lawson, operating at the quarterback slot, sneaked across from six yards out. Beam missed and the Highlanders held a 13-0 halftime advantage.

In the third quarter big John Hawkins blocked a State kick and Jack Woodhall grabbed it in the end zone. The alert Scottie line had the State kickers under pressure all afternoon.

Earl Lawson added the last Scot talley as he drove over from the one midway in the fourth period.

The Staters finally got a drive going late in the final period, against the Highlander substitutes. Their six point tally came with three minutes remaining.

The Maryville defense, playing perhaps its best game of the year, contained the Concorder's all afternoon. And with Ken Chambers and Earl Smith supplying the main punch, the Scots found the formula for getting into the opponents end zone.

The Highlanders meet Carson-Newman in the season's finale tonight on Honaker Field.

Gift-Giving

by Nancy Seeger

The whole question of gift-giving to Government officials, last raised during the Truman administration, is back in the news again. However, while the scandal during Truman's presidency flared up over the giving of gifts of freezers and mink coats to a number of officials, gifts from visiting royalty are creating headaches now for the Eisenhower administration.

King Saud of Saudi Arabia, noted for his generosity to people who catch his fancy, in June presented a 1957 Oldsmobile to the wife of Victor Purse as a means of expressing his appreciation for the way Mr. Purse handled the the King's visit to the United States last January. Purse explained his acceptance of the car by the fact that he did not wish to appear unfriendly to King Saud.

Last January Saud presented a sword in a jeweled scabbard to President Eisenhower, as well as watches, robes, suitcases, and cash gifts to Government officials and other American citizens. The President turned his sword over to the Eisenhower museum in Abilene, and the other gifts were turned into the State Department. Saud's cash gifts, totaling $6,700 which he gave to his American State Department bodyguards, have not been pocketed by the officers, either.

Another current problem involving government gifts stems from the fact that Mrs. Eisenhower had a beaver-fur coat made at her expense from pelts given to her by the Fur Trappers of Maine and the Beaver Fur Trappers Association. Equipment donated for the President's farm has caused further comments.

In 1951 Congress examined the problems concerning mink coat and freezer gifts during the Truman Administration but never took any action. The Congressmen seem to feel that the judgment and integrity of the officials can be relied upon.

IN THIS CORNER

By Pete Nix

Tonight's game against Carson-Newman will mark the end of the first football season in thirty-six years that Lombe Honaker has not directed the football fates of Maryville College.

A weak heart, in particular, and poor health, in general, necessitated the change which placed Honaker's assistant for a number of years, J. D. Davis, in the head coaching slot and brought "Mitch" Mitchell to M.C. as assistant coach. Coach Honaker still occupies the post of Athletic Director and Chairman of the Division of Physical Education and Athletics.

Coach Honaker came to Maryville College in 1921. He has been head coach of football, basketball, and baseball since that time. At the time of his retirement he was, in point of length of service, the "Dean" of football coaches in America.

Probably his greatest squad was his 1946 aggregation which represented Maryville College in the Tangerine Bowl. Assistant Coach Mitchell was a tackle on that squad.

A new football field was completed and was later named in honor of Coach Honaker. In this same year he received a new car from his former players at a testimonial dinner given in his honor.

Coach Honaker's ability as a story-teller has made him a sought after speaker throughout the East Tennessee area. This ability is well known to those who have heard him lead chapel or speak at a pep rally.

Through his long years of faithful service Coach Honaker has became one of the "traditions" of Maryville College. Only on doctor's orders did he slow down from the strenous pace he had set for himself. He made you think that he was the exception to the rule that time waits for no man. Because of his influence in the past and because of the course he has charted for the future, Coach Lombe S. Honaker will be remembered as long as there is a Maryville College.

Sports Spotlights

By Joe Quinn

The bowl picture is no more certain than it was when the season's first began. Oklahoma is the only definite bet for a New Year's day engagement. The Sooners cinched it last week despite the rumor they would lose. They trounced a highly regarded Missouri eleven, 39-14. The Sooners will soon be in Florida.

Cotton Bowl

Looking at other conferences, Texas A.&M. can gain a berth in the Cotton Bowl by knocking off Rice this Saturday. Duke and Navy, trying for the Orange and Cotton Bowl, respectively, dealt each other a mean blow last week when they fought to a 6-6 tie.

Tennessee Vols

Close to home in the S. E. C., the Tennessee Vols still figure very much in the Bowl picture. Although Auburn, lone conqueror of the Vols, is on top, they are barred from competition under penalty of the N.C.A.A. Should the Vols down Ole Miss this week, they'll be in the driver's seat. The Tennessee club has been steadily improving and will be expected to be high for the Rebels at Memphis on Saturday.

Rose Bowl

The Rose Bowl doesn't have a sure team, but it looks as though Ohio State will be favored. Iowa and Michigan are its remaining obstacles. The Pacific Coast race is a complete mess as far as a contender is concerned. Washington State and Oregon State seem to have the better chances here.

Sugar Bowl

The Gator Bowl will probably wait for the other Bowl committees to make their choice before announcing their rivals.

Alpha Sigma Downs Kappa Phi, 31-0, In Annual Stinkin' Shoe Classic

by Pete Nix

Following an exciting first half which saw Sig protect a 6-0 lead, the Kappa Phi defense fell apart as Alpha Sigma scored four times in the third and fourth quarters to take a 31-0 win in the annual Stinkin' Shoe classic.

Midway in the second period Will Roberts juggled a Wiley pass in the end zone then latched on to it for keeps to give Sig a 6-0 lead. The first period had been a battle of the defenses with neither tea mmaking a deep penetration. A Williams-to-Muir pass came very near to tying it up near the end of the first half, but the ball fell just out of Muir's reach.

Early in the third period Charles Garrison grabbed off a Williams' aerial and raced 15 yards to pay dirt. Don Hill passed to Dave Lay for the extra point. Kappa Phi came roaring back only to have their drive stopped deep in Sig territory by an intercepted pass.

The third Sig score was set up when Will Roberts grabbed off a pass and scooted 50 yards to the Kappa Phi 25. The other Sig scores came as the result of bad snaps from center when Kappa Phi was in punting situations.

Kappa Phi made a last ditch attempt to get back into the ball game late in the third period, as Joe Williams threw a standing pass on the kick-off to Bob Muir which was good for 40 yards. But the attack faltered before reaching pay dirt.

Joe Williams and Bob Muir were offensive standouts for Kappa Phi. Bob Krogh, Bob Wyman, and Joe Tropansky did a great job of keeping Alpha Sigma from turning their ends.

Dan Wiley-to-Tom Morris was the combination that did the most damage to Phi and Charles Garrison was outstanding both as a blocker and defensive linebacker.

A crowd of two hundred students was on hand for the classic.

Sophs Down Frosh In Class Tourney

by Joe Quinn

The sophomores held on to defeat a spirited freshman squad 12-8 in the opening round of the touch-football tourney.

The sophs scored quickly on an unorganized frosh squad. Paul Burger fell on a fumble in the end zone for the initial talley. Minutes later Bob Davies intercepted a pass deep in frosh territory for the second score. The score read at the half 12-0, sophomores.

The second half was a completely different story. The frosh collected themselves and turned on the steam. George Poland led the spirited yearlings as he hit Danny Johnson with a TD pass.

The sophomores couldn't get any kind of a drive going and were caught in their own end zone for a safety.

The frosh tried a desperate pass at the game's end, but it failed, and the sophs advanced to the finals on Saturday.

The junior class meets the senior class with the winner taking on the sophomores at Wilson Field today.

Council Corner

by Margaret Longfellow

Council meeting of November 6:

There were two town night violations to start the meeting off. A junior girl who was off-limits was penalized two weeks. There was much discussion concerning a freshman girl who was considered for her second violation but with a good excuse The council decided not to give the second penalty.

It was announced that Barnwarming nominations would be held tomorrow. The elections will be held on Tuesday.

Gray reported that the Kappa Phi dinner will be held on Saturday night, but no complementary function will be held by Alpha Sigma. The social committee report included a discussion concerning the social program as a whole. A committee was formed to investigate the student and faculty opinion on dancing in order to make clear such feelings.

Harold Crane reported that the new sign for Bob's office is ready to hang. The bannisters for the chapel steps have not been put up because the architects do not want to destroy the modern effect of the building.

Bob stated that the objective of the council is to improve student government. Two ways to do this would be to increase the student government responsibility and to increase the responsibility of the student body. Two specific ideas along this line were (a) a freshman seminar which would be a voluntary program whereby small groups of students would discuss problems of study and the academic program. It would run all year and would be led by a faculty member and an upperclassman; (b) and leadership training sessions. These would be to present the philosophy of student government, the techniques of leading a group, and the problems involving leaders in campus organizations. It is designed to increase leadership and would probably be held once a year for two or three days.

Dean McClelland reports that books, several of them valuable have been missing from the library. It is important that the students do not abuse the privilege of the open stacks.

Bob Hassall was elected to Student-Faculty Senate following the resignation due to sports commitments of Jack Emory. The social aspect of the program is still in the developing stage.

Student Council meeting of November 13:

Dean McClelland spoke to the council concerning the new cut system. The system was heightened by the flu, which was not anticipated at its formation. For several years the old system had not proved satisfactory. The crux of the matter was that there were many reasons, good reasons, why students were absent from class. The system was not meeting a degree of success, as the classes were hampered by the mass of absences. A faculty committee worked out the new system which was in turn approved.

The more or less indefinite element of the system lies in the interpretation of the appeals. The difficulty comes in deciding on things that are good or things that are better, when it means taking a student from class.

In a small college the work is based not only on the quality of work but also on the quantity of participation. Attendance, therefore, should have a bearing on the credit for the course.

The new system is both easier and harder. It is easier because the added graduation requirement for over-cuts is only one-fifth of a semester hour instead of one half. This was arranged to compensate for the more limited number of cuts, which is the element of the system that is harder. The system is also more lenient in that it does not apply to those students that are on the honor roll.

The only place of flexibility in the system is in the court of appeals. Whether absences are chronic or once in a while for an emergency are facts that will be taken into consideration. The penalty is such that class attendance should be regular.

Trips that are for college activities will also be considered. It is hard to decide how to be fair in such a case, since the student is absent from the class no matter what the reason. The system simply states that there are no cuts as such.

We seem to have the philosophy that to give an absence from class is to do a student a favor. This is essentially a wrong idea. There is also something wrong with the idea that we take an athlete who is not a good student out of class for sports activities and then give him low grades.

The system is such that a student does not need to appeal until he feels that he will exceed his limit of cuts. The whole point of the system is that absences from class be only from sickness.

Bob thanked Dean McClelland for coming to council. The business of two night violations was taken up. This week there were six violations. Three freshmen and one sophomore carelessly signed out on the day sign-out sheet instead of town night slips. They were each penalized one week. A sophomore was four minutes late and a freshman was one minute late. It was discovered that the clock used in Baldwin by the town-night checkers was incorrect. For this reason the council recommended a one-week penalty for the girl who was four minutes late and no penalty for the girl who was one minute late.

Dan Ellis reported that the N.S.C.A. representative would be on campus Friday to help the council with its problems and to appraise its work.

ECHO FORUM

Dear Editor:

I note that since the new organ has been installed in the chapel, only music faculty members have been playing for the morning chapel services.

There are at present several organ majors, including two upperclassmen, who would be entirely capable and willing to play in morning chapel, not to mention other capable organ students not majoring in that field. Not only would these students appreciate the opportunity for more experience, but they would also feel that they were helping to contribute something to the chapel service.

With more people assuming this responsibility it would lighten the load for the three faculty members who now play for chapel. With more people playing, there would also be a wider variety of music played before and after the devotional part of the service.

Students are frequently called upon to lead the devotional aspect of the service. Why shouldn't music students be called upon to participate in the musical aspect of the service? With students participating in the service, I think that the student body would feel more as if it were their own service, rather than another cut-and-dried required attendance.

I have heard many students asking about this matter, and none have been able to understand why only faculty members are permitted to play the organ for morning chapel. Can anything be done about this?

Sincerely,
Bob Davies

Dear Editor:

The cynical joke of the Communist youth is: The difference between Communism and Capitalism is that capitalism is the exploitation of man by man and Communism is just the opposite.

As American youth let us examine this idea.

The world we live in today is divided by two opposing forces, the U.S.A. and U.S.S.R.; it is largely a division of two opposing political powers. A great battery of people are challenging us to support "the Great American Way," "Free enterprise" and "Christianity against godless material ism."

The great democratic principles of self-determination, natural rights and freedom, I do not challenge. But let's look at our political philosophy in action. Consistently we have measured our help to other countries not by their need nor by their right to self-determination but by their possible value to the United States. Our aid "with strings" is being increasingly objected to by the countries we aid.

Let us remember that America was very upset over the persecution in Hungary — how much was real sympathy and how much of it was a hope that the frightening iron curtain was cracking? We were not nearly as sympathetic with the revolution in Guatemala. What about our high tariff laws, which keep needy countries from trading with us? What about our discrimatory quota system?

What about the freedom in our own country? The loyalty oaths, the smear campaign, the witch hunt, the discriminations against Negroes, Mexicans, Indians and Jews?

A democracy is a democracy only as long as its people believe in and work for the democracy. If we believe in the system we live under, it must be because we believe that the democratic system—imperfect though it is — has the possibility within itself of continued reformation.

What about the other claim? Save the world for Christianity? A careful look at the American culture shows that materialism and success are the most esteemed values of our culture. If these are the factors around which our culture is orientated, how much better is this from Communism? Can a high record of church membership and an easy morality qualify a nation (or a college) as Christian?

Let us not confuse a political struggle or the East-West tension with a battle between Communism and Christianity. The Christian faith was born under totalitarianism and can exist under any form of government.

Christianity is that revolutionary way of life centered in God so He is understood through His Son. Awareness of the love of God for all people leads the Christian into a fellowship which transcends the barriers of politics, nationalism, economics, and self-interest which has long separated men from man.

As students free, and dedicated to the truth, let us challenge and oppose propaganda, half truth, and lies wherever they appear. Let us seek the facts about our political system and its activities. Let us then correct and improve it.

As Christian students, let us reexamine the Christian faith and find again its revelence to our lives and to our relations with other people and nations.

Janie Wall

Dear Editor:

As you know, there has been much talk among students as to the disadvantages of the new cut system. Some students seem to know so much about how terrible it is without giving it a chance to operate.

Last Wednesday night, Dr. McClelland accepted the Student Council's invitation to come to the council meeting to explain the background and principles involved in the cut system and to answer any questions concerning the system. That same morning an announcement was made in chapel inviting all interested to the council meeting. Now here was an opportunity for the students to find out what they wanted to know insofar as Dr. McClelland was at liberty to answer for the committee. Less than ten of our whole student body were present besides the council members. If we know all about the system what are be complaining about?

Dr. McClelland explained the reasons back of the system and how it was intended to operate. He also explained that because of the fact that Maryville College is not a large university but is a small, Christian college, many of the objections to the cut system are not justifiable. For example, classes are not based solely on covering a certain amount of work by having the teacher pour out what he has to say — the material going from the notebook of the professor to the notebook of the student without passing through the mind of either. Instead our classes are based on a cooperative basis of mutual preparation and participation which makes class attendance imperative for a successful class.

The new system also places on the student the responsibility of choosing between many worth while activities. Is going to a valuable convention important enough to warrent the consequences of not being in class? The student now has the choice of which he feels is the best for him. In other words — why am I at college?

Despite the pros and cons of the question, Dr. McClelland brought out the very important fact that we cannot begin to evaluate the cut system until after the appeal board has met and made its decisions. This is what will determine the effectiveness or ineffectiveness of the new system.

If we cannot take advantage of the opportunities given us to become more familiar with the ideas behind the cut system, I feel that we should at least withhold our judgment until the new system has been given a complete chance to prove itself.

Airbase Closing Tn End Dances

During recent weeks, groups of women students, mostly upperclassmen, have been going to the Service Club at the Airbase on Tuesday and Wednesday nights. A dance instruction class is conducted by a competent instructor who teaches all the current steps on Wednesday nights; and a weekly dance for enlisted men stationed at the Base is held at the Service Club Tuesday nights. These participating are sophomores, juniors and seniors who have expressed the wish to take part in this program of service.

In general, the plan is for a group of fourteen girls to go Wednesday night for the dance instruction. These girls are then invited to the weekly dance at the Service Club on the following Tuesday night. There are some times conflicts with the plan, since many girls find it necessary to refuse the Tuesday night invitation due to tests, term papers, play rehearsals, and other interfering college obligations. Because of the rather large number of girls participating, it has been possible to rotate so that no one goes more than once a week. The average number of trips has been three times during the semester.

This program was brought to the attention of Miss Massey by the director of the Service Club, Mrs. Staib, formerly a teacher in the local school system. Mrs. Staib came to the College in the early weeks of the semester and asked permission for any of the women students who were interested to come to the Base for these dances.

All the girls who have gone to these dances enjoy the opportunity to forget studies for an evening and speak highly of the program as run by Mrs. Staib.

However, the closing of the Airbase will soon bring an end to these trips. Although final word has not been received, it is understood that this week may close this phase of the social program at the Service Club.

Campus Capers

by Mary Turner

Well, looks like the old flu bug has finally decided to try some where else and it seems like he's been doing a pretty good job of it. Here's just a sampling of how our friend has been doing on other college campuses . . . At Carson Newman 400 were stricken. One night the nurse heard coughing and got up to hear who it was and found it was herself . . . At Trinity it hit the huge sum of 50 and jammed their infirmary full . . . At Warren Wilson it struck 123 students and 10 faculty members . . . At Morehead it mostly attacked the faculty. Hey, you know what they call Chimneys in China? "Asiatic flues." (Well, I thought it was funny.)

Oh, by the way (just in case you are wondering) this is a new column to show you what's going on at other institutions of higher learning.

. . . At Middle Tennessee State they have fun night every Tuesday from 7:30 to 10:30 with dancing, ping pong, cards, TV, and a chance to relax and meet people.

. . . At Morehead it was Human Relations Day on November 8. This was the first one of its kind and the purpose was to discuss the desirable relations there should be among humans today.

. . . Trinity's mascot tiger, "Lee Roy," has to retire because of illness.

. . . At University of Chattanooga the phantom frat men buried their losing streak in front of the chapel Written on the cardboard replica for a tombstone was "Here lies the Mocs losing streak, 3 in a row, let's not repeat."

. . . A $4.4 million expansion program has been recommended by the advisory board for Carson Newman.

. . . At Middle State Teacher's College dancer student Jo Hyde won a mink coat and trip to Rome on the Big Payoff this summer. Her knight in shining armor happened to be Sammy Kaye. Must be some gal — she even had a chance to work with Fred Astaire.

. . . Trinity's operation moonwatch has gotten to be quite a big college activity. They have 12 telescopes now and just the other day they got a glimpse of the rocket that has been tailing Sputnik.

. . . Tennessee Tech's next assembly is going to be led by the "Four Freshman." (Pretty neat, huh?)

. . . At Morehead they have high school band day with three states participating (Kentucky, Ohio and West Virginia). The bands put on an all day show with pretty girls.

. . . At Trinity they now have a cactus garden which is worked and plowed by the poor, defenseless freshmen.

. . . As a regular feature, the Chattanooga Echo spotlights a staff member each week so the readers can familiarize themselves with the paper staff.

. . . The library is open from 1 to 2 p.m. Sunday at Warren Wilson.

. . . At University of Chattanooga, the Union of American Federation donated a 15-piece band for them to use at their Halloween dance.

. . . Tennessee Tech won't have social fraternities this year.

. . . The expansion program for M.T.S.C. has now reached the sum of $7,900,000.

And this I will just have to quote, "Trinity will be watching the fall TV series on a new TV set that is to be purchased by the student council. This set will replace the old warn-out set now for the Student Union lounge."

Well, that's just to give you all a taste of what's happening around the college map. Before I go, though, I'd like to leave a little thought behind me, "Many things are opened by mistake, but none so frequently as the mouth." S'long for now.

New Dorm Ready For September

The college hopes to erect a new women's dormitory in time for occupancy in September, 1958. Preliminary drawings have been approved and working drawings are now underway. Dates for letting contract and breaking ground have not yet been definitely set.

The Associated Architects of the building are Schweikher and Elting of Pittsburgh and Chicago, and Barber and McMurry of Knoxville. They were also the architects for the Samuel Tyndale Wilson Chapel, completed in 1954. Schweikher and Elting were the architects of the Fine Arts Center, erected in 1950.

It is expected that the cost of the building and furnishings will total more than $400,000. The New Woman's Dormitory Fund was started by the allocation of $25,000 received in 1941 through a bequest from Miss Augusta J. Boone, of Meriden, Connecticut.

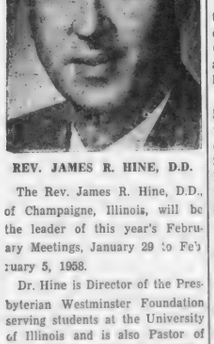
Vesper Service To Feature Music By Gabrieli

Note 400th Anniversary

Maryville College Choir under the direction of Harry H. Harter, a brass sextette under the training of Mr. Ralph H. Moore, and organist Mr. James Bloy will combine to present choral and instrumental music by Giovanni Gabrieli, noted Italian church musician of the fifteenth century in the four-hundredth anniversary observance of the composer's birth. The music will be incorporated into the regular Vesper Service on Sunday evening, November 24 at 7:00 p.m. in the Samuel Tyndale Wilson Chapel.

The service will open with an organ prelude, "Fantasia on the Sixth Tone." The first anthem by the choir will be an unaccompanied choral work scored for twelve voices divided into three choirs singing in an antiphonal style, "Benedictus." The closing anthem, "In ecclesiis" (In the Congregation) is a choral number accompanied by organ, three trumpets, and three trombones.



Members of the brass ensemble are trumpeters: Thaddeus Jablonski, John Williams, Ralph H. Moore; trombones: Jane Bohannon, William Roberts, and Richard G. Hall.

Loan Applications Due This Semester

Every student who expects to arrange payment of second semester expenses in whole or in part by a loan from the Maryville College Rotating Loan Fund is asked to come to the Student-Help Office and make application for the loan before the end of this semester. Those who need to consult with parents or others about the matter should do so at once. Alterations could be made, if necessary, at the opening of the second semester when the notes will be made and signed.

This is a new procedure which we hope will prove to be advantageous to all concerned. The Student-Help Office will appreciate your cooperation.

Leader Of Annual February Meetings To Be Dr. James R. Hine Of Illinois

REV. JAMES R. HINE, D.D.

The Rev. James R. Hine, D.D., of Champaigne, Illinois, will be the leader of this year's February Meetings, January 29 to February 5, 1958.

Dr. Hine is Director of the Presbyterian Westminster Foundation serving students at the University of Illinois and is also Pastor of the McKinley Memorial Presbyterian Church just off the campus of the University. He speaks regularly to capacity audiences of college students. Dr. Hine is married and has three children.

He graduated from Purdue University with a degree of B.S., in Mechanical Engineering, and began his career in the field of engineering. However, in time he became convinced that his call was to be a minister. He spent three more years in study, this time at McCormick Theological Seminary where he graduated in 1936.

For six years he was pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Hanover, Indiana, as Advisor to the Christian Student organizations and as a lecturer at Hanover College.

For the past fifteen years he has been in his present work at the University of Illinois, which on its various campuses enrolls 25,000 students. The McKinley Foundation, of which Dr. Hine is director, is one of the largest and most active Christian university student centers in the world.

For the past nine years Dr Hine has been a member of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions with personnel and programs in thirty-six countries. Three years ago, he made a world tour in behalf of the work of the Church, visiting youth and student centers in eighteen countries of Europe and Asia, and during the past summer he conducted a travel seminar of college students in Europe.

Famous I Solisti di Zagreb To Appear At MC Artist Series On December 3

One of the most outstanding musical groups ever to appear in the Maryville College-Community Artists Series will be the world-famous ensemble I Solisti di Zagreb, scheduled for Tuesday, December 3, in the Samuel Tyndale Wilson Chapel.

I Solisti de Zagreb was formed, with members hand-picked to represent the finest in Yugoslavia string playing, by Radio Zagreb early in 1954. Selected to lead the Solisti was Antonio Janigro, known throughout the world as cellist, conductor and teacher.

The Solisti began a series of radio and concert hall performances in Yugoslavia and earned immediate recognition. Venturing outside Yugoslavia for the first time early in 1955 with performances in Vienna and Graz the ensemble was enthusiastically received, and in 1956, the group repeatedly toured Western European countries. Their numerous festival appearances included several in Salzburg. European reviewers hailed the Solisti as superior to similar, longer established chamber orchestra such as the Virtuosi di Ooma and I Musici. Special acclaim was accorded the unique cello solos of Maestro Janigro.

The first recordings of I Solisti De Zagreb and Janigro were made in Vienna by Vanguard. Mozart, Rossni, Bach and Vivaldi recordings are currently available. Other discs will soon be released. Soloist Janigro has made some 30 recordings on the Westminister Label.

ANTONIO JANIGRO, leader of the I Solisti de Zagreb, to appear here on Dec. 3.

Pearsons Hall now has a table at the far corner of the dining hall at which German is spoken entirely during each meal. Dr. Shannon, professor of German, organized this group a month ago in order for interested students to have an opportunity to practice speaking German to supplement their classroom work. It is not a classroom exercise, however, as Dr. Shannon points out. Emphasis is placed more upon learning how to understand by "filling in" the meaning of words, rather than upon the technical points of grammar.

Surprisingly, four of the eight members of this group had not studied German until this semester. This opportunity to practice the classroom grammar and diff-

MC Thanksgiving To Be Both Holiday, Holy Day

by Margaret Longfellow

Thanksgiving Day at Maryville College may be said to have two facets—one outweighing and producing the other. The more minor of the two is the fact that classes are not held on this day, and the students are given a chance to relax from concentrated study. But the reason for this holiday is the major facet. It is a day when we are all to stop and thank God for all the blessings and benefits he bestows upon us. It is what its name means — a day for giving thanks.

The Pilgrims, who initially set aside a formal day for this purpose, spent in worship in their churches, in eating of the plenty that was theirs from God, and in sharing food and fellowship with the Indians who were their neighbors. Their expressions of thanks were not unlike the ones that we offer now in Maryville.

On Thanksgiving morning a service of worship and thanksgiving is held in the chapel, and is led jointly by the pastors of the Presbyterian churches. This is a time of worship and fellowship for the college and the community.

A time for eating of the plenty that is ours is also set aside. The noon meal in the dining hall is complete with whole, glazed turkeys — carved by somewhat harried waitresses — cranberry sauce and chess pie. Everyone emerges from the meal full and thankful, and with a bag supper in hand.

Afternoon Activities

The afternoon is spent in sundry activities. The weather may be inviting for walks and picnics. A big attraction of the afternoon last year was the soccer games played with Temple University. A small crowd of Maryvillites braved the bitter November weather to huddle in the stands wrapped in blankets and ear-muffs to watch the surprisingly energetic players.

Perhaps, the biggest thrill for some, especially the Floridians, was the almost indiscernible snowfall. A light coating of white blanketed the frozen ground, but lasted hardly long enough to see.

Barnwarming

Thanksgiving evening is heightened by the traditional Barnwarming Show given in the alumni gym. At this time the Barnwarming queen and the class sponsors are presented by their escorts. The show, sparked with unusual sets and campus talent, will make its one night stand.

Meanwhile, over in the chapel theater, the dress rehearsal for "Cinderella" will be in motion. The play, to be presented the next night, will be "trying its wings" for its polished performance and the players will be trying on costumes for last minute fitting.

As the activities come along and as we think of Thanksgiving — of America the land of plenty, "of amber waves of grain", of vineyards heavy with fruit, of storehouses bursting with supply, of schools, of churches, and democracy — let us not lose sight of the purpose of this holy day and let us never cease to give thanks.

Barnwarming Cast To Be In Two Different Worlds

Plans Underway For Fall Formal

"Emerald Fanta Sea" is the theme for the Kappa-Phi, Chi Besta Fall Formal. The dance will be held Saturday, December 7, at 8:00 p.m. in the Alumni Gynmasium. Tickets are $1.25 and will go on sale after Thanksgiving. Profits from the ticket sales will be divided among the four societies.

Plans are well underway now with Ron Lind, Bob Samples, Lou Brininger, and Dona Sarver in charge. Committee chairmen are: Decorations—Tom Dolch, Jan Peterson, and Betty Boone; Publicity, Carol Schade and Jnm Sandborne; Refreshments, Judy Ossman; Program and Tickets, Mary McEver and Don Buddle; Lights and Specila Effects, Dan Ellis. The committees will be composed of Kappa Phi and Chi Beta members.

Dance Regulations At MC Reviewed

Since the Fall Dance will soon be held, it would be of value to review the regulations for dancing at Maryville College and the background of these regulations.

In 1948 when dancing was permitted at Maryville, a joint student-faculty committee thought through the arrangements and set up a list of recommendations and regulations which were approved by the Executive Council. (Sponsorship of dances was given to the social societies a few years later. Profits made on each formal dance are divided equally among the four societies).

In 1953 a joint student-faculty committee working through the senate restudied the original agreement and made revisions which included more informal dances after games and additional formal dances each year. Last fall two further amendments were added. The time limits were extended to 11:45 for informal after-game dances and to 11:30 for formal dances.

The complete set of revised regulations for dancing is as follows:

In making these recommendations we have retained the following principles which we believe should govern the arrangements for dancing at Maryville College.

1. Since experience has shown that a considerable number of

King And Queen To Be Presented

Next Thursday night, climaxing Thanksgiving holiday, the annual Barnwarming show will be held at the Alumni Gym at 8:00. The theme for this year's show will be "Two Different Worlds". The production is under the auspicicies of YM and YWCA.

The "other world" is the Court of Cleopatra on the banks of the Nile river. Lela Aliff will play the part of the beautiful queen; Lee Bird will play the suitor of the moment. The Scotsmen also figure prominently as rejected suitors. Harem girls and slave traders will add interest.

Each year the proceeds from this show go to some worthy group. Last year the money was sent to the International University in Japan. This year the proceeds will go to the children's home in Maryville to purchase new equipment.

Directors and Chairmen

Joann Antes is directing this year's show. Ron Randon is technical director, and co-ordinator is Bob Wyman. Chairmen of committees are: lights, David Ross; set, Maryanne Braidwood; costumes, Gray Clarke, and Betty England; booths, Paul Bermuller, Gerry Platz, and Hillis McKamey; business manager, Tom Dolch; programs, Bill Lynch; publicity, Gary Davis, and David McCahan is piano accompanist.

Before the show the king and queen, with their attendants, will be presented. Their identity remains secret until they are introduced at the show over which they will reign.

Byung Koo Pak Attempts Transition From Classics To Jazz Via Hawaii

by Bill Pennock

Among the students from other countries who are part of the Maryville family, there appeared a new face this semester—Byung Koo Pak of Seoul, Korea. Byung is twenty years of age, a member of the freshman class, and a political science major.

Byung finished high school at the age of 18, served in the Army for a year, and afterwards entered Chung Ang University where he completed three terms. He then decided to study in the United States, for he said, "I have been interested in my country's relationship with the U.S., and I also wanted to learn of the individualism of America."

Byung finds his courses challenging. He feels that, although he had learned to read English before leaving his own country, the biggest challenge to him here is learning to understand and be understood. He speaks Korean, Japanese and German.

When asked what was the most startling thing he encountered when he arrived here, he answered that there were two things which amazed him.

"I took a bus to Knoxville the other week," he said, "and saw in front of me a boy of about 9 years smoking. This would never happen in Korea. The other shocking thing was this: I went into a restaurant and saw some-pay money to hear music. At home at least that is free!"

Byung dislikes American jazz. He is very fond of classical music, however. On his way to the States, his plane stopped over in Hawaii. There he heard Hawaiian music, and this softened the blow a bit—classics, Haiwiian music, then jazz!

Among Byung's hobbies are dancing, reading, listening to music, and judo. (You may have seen him giving free instructions in judo in the halls of Carnegie). He enjoys flying—his first flight brought him to America—and he plans to fly again when the opportunity presents itself.

"American food is OK," Byung says, "but it's good to get to my brother's house in Knoxville for some home cooking once in a while." Byung's brother is a graduate assistant in sociology at U. T. Another brother attends the University of Illinois, while a sister, three other brothers, and his parents remain in Korea.

After his studies at Maryville are completed, Byung plans to enter graduate school with diplomatic service as his ultimate goal.

His word to us in Maryville is this: "I like America, but 10,000 miles seems like a long way from home. Think of us Korean students the next time that you feel homesick."

The Meaning Of Spirit

"The principle of conscious life," that is a dictionary meaning for spirit. Other words that might be associated with it are action, encourage, vigor, urge, and lively. A list twice as long could be made.

Another that can cover all of these is participation, something that is lacking on this campus. Many of us moan and groan about the social life of the campus but few do very much about it.

Last Saturday there was a dance at the Alumni Gym in place of the football game. The Gym was half empty.

There are other activities coming up shortly that, in order to be a success, will have support, the Fall Dance in particular.

I wonder how many "wall flowers" we'll have that night. These events are planned for your enjoyment. A lot of work goes into them so let's show a little active participation and liven this campus up a little.

Relax, Perhaps?

The semesters at M.C. all seem to end the same each time. Toward the end of November everyone begins to get on each other's nerves, sharp words are spoken, gossip is exchanged, faces grow long, and the whole college atmosphere is that of one filled with tension, fear, and a sprinkling of anxiety for the days of trial that are ahead.

For most of us the biggest trouble is that of lack of preparation. We are all trying to cram four months of work into a too short, three week period.

What's the answer to the problem? Perhaps the keyword is "relax"—not too much, but enough so that there are no more strained relations. The results will probably be better for all in the long run.

Tick, Tock

Now that Thanksgiving is fast approaching, we will soon be reminded that we should be thankful. And we should be. We will be told that we should be thankful that we have an abundance of food, plenty of clothes, and, in general, that we have a reasonably high standard of living as compared with other peoples of the world. Always we will be reminded of our wealth of material possessions. And yet this is not all that we should be thankful for. Take the present time, for instance. That is a favorite topic for sermons and a hope near and dear to the hearts of folk in this ultra-busy world we live in. To be even more specific, it is of considerable concern to the college student. The reason is painfully obvious. The student is forever complains of not having enough time.

This much is still fairly general. To bring the point closer home, it is true that many worthwhile activities of Maryville campus suffer because people are convinced that they just don't have the time to participate in them? And yet isn't it true that if we really want to do something, we can usually find enough time to do it? Time is one of the most wasted gifts that we possess. Need I say more?

Turkey Large

By Margaret Longfellow

Perhaps you may have heard the children's tale of "Chicken Little." Any similarity to this and that delightful story are purely coincidental.

Turkey Large was really a bird. Nary a tail feather was ever out of place, and he was really proud of their color scheme. Turk was quite a turkey-lady's man. He enjoyed pussy-footing (or is it turkey footing) around the barnyard to show off for them, and he loved to preen his feathers.

Turk was not of the opinion that birds of a feather should flock together. In his opinion the turkey house was "just an old barn" (which it was), so he preferred to sleep out in the open.

He chose the vineyard as his hangout. He used to lie awake at night and smell the future's grape juice above him. One night as he lay asleep beneath the tendrils a thump on his head woke him up.

"The sky", he gobbled, "has fallen on my head." He waddled into the barnyard and ran into Henny-Penny. Now Henny-Penny was the slickest chick in the yard. "Hello," she crowed. "What makes you think so?"

"Something hit me on the head and woke me up. The world is coming to an end!"

"Perhaps it is for you Turk. It's almost Thanksgiving and to tell you the truth, chicken's really aren't in season right now."

Not very encouraged by Henn's report he hurried by. He almost fell over Tortoise who was plodding along. "Tortoise", he gobbled, "Hurry! The sky is falling in!"

"Well, son", drawled the turtle, "I couldn't hurry much faster if they set my tail on fire. But I'd sure git amoving if I were you. It's almost the 28. I'm sure that the critters in these parts don't take much to turtle soup."

Turk hurried by again to announce his catastrophic news. "You'd better run," screamed Mockingbird from the rail fence, "It's almost Thanskgiving, and you'll get the axe then."

Poor Turk was getting qquite confused. No one seemed to be interested in hearing that the sky was falling. They always seemed to change the subject and tell him to run.

"Come on", cried Henny-Penny. "We'll hide you."

Poor Turk was quite embarrassed when he found that they had hidden him in the laying house in a binful of straw. He almost went crazy hearing the biddies cackling and the peeping of the eggs that the farmer had missed. Pretty soon he could stand it no longer. Axe or no axe he couldn't take any more of this hen party. He jumped from the bin and ran for the vineyard. "Maybe they didn't think that the sky was falling either, but they'd see!"

By now the graps were very big and round and juicy. During the night after his return another piece of sky fell and hit him on the head, sending him to a juicy death. He could not escape the fate of the gods and came to a tragic end, though he never lost his head through all of it.

Perhaps you will find Turkey Large on your Thanksgiving dinner table adorned with the sky that killed him.

Fashion note: It is quite fashionable nowadays for turkeys to pass away nestled in white grapes!

Voices, Masks, and Shadows

by Virginia Hine

The time is England in the year 1035. Cannute, ruler of England, has just died. Cannute, who was king of Sweden and Norway and conqueror of England, has died leaving three sons. Cannute's rule marked the zenith of the Viking power in England, and his empire dies with him.

The next 34 years are highly significant in English history, for it was during this period that Modern England was built — on the foundation of the Anglo-Saxon institutions.

After Cannute's death, his sons in Norway and Harold barefoot ruled in England. Shortly afterwards Harold died, leaving the English throne to the third brother Hardicannute. Neither Harold nor Hardicannute was the strong ruler that Cannute had been. Neither had left an heir; so that with the death of Hardicanute in 1043, the English throne became vacant.

Godwin

The man who had the power to fill the throne at this time was Godwin, Earl of Wessex, the leader of the Danish party in England and politically the most powerful man in England. This was a time of anarchy in England, and the stability in government was to be found only in monarchy. Of all the royal houses of Europe at this time, the house of Alfred the Great was the most illustrious and the oldest. Godwin saw that he might consolidate his own by gaining the support of both the Danish and the English factions of the kingdom. In order to accomplish this, he offered the throne to the only living descendant of Alfred — Edward the Confessor. Edward was the son of Ethelred (the Unready) and Emma of Normandy, and was at that time living in the court of Normandy, where he had been brought up. However, Godwin set up certain conditions which Edward must agree to abide by as king, before Godwin would support him as ruler.

Alfred

There had been another son of Ethelred and Emma, Alfred. Alfred had proved himself too ambitious and too strong for his own good back in the days of Hardicanute. Godwin had arrested Alfred and ordered him blinded. The young prince was then allowed to die quietly in the monastery of Ely. Alfred had shown great abilities and potential as a leader of men.

Edward

Edward was altogether different. He was a quiet person, wholly disinterested in war, and without much ability at administration. He accepted Godwin's terms and was welcomed back and crowned as king of England. For the next 24 years England was ruled by Godwin — and his sons.

As stated before, Edward was brought up in the court of Normandy, and it was natural that when he came to England he should bring his Norman friends and retainers with him; although one of Godwin's conditions had been a restriction of Norman influence. This Norman influence paved the way for the coming of William of Normandy.

There was only one break in the power of Godwin and his family. This came about in the year 1051 when Godwin's enemies—the Norman party—succeeded in driving him and his sons into exile. During this year, William of Normandy is said to have visited Edward and obtained from him the promise that the crown of England should be William's when Edward died. But in the following year Godwin raised an army with the help of his son, Harold, and forced Edward to take them back into power again.

Harold

Seven months after his restoration, in 1053, Godwin died. His oldest son, Harold, succeeded to his father's estates and position and was, for the next 13 years, the virtual ruler of England. A brother of Harold's became Earl of Mercia, and another brother became Earl of Northumbria. A bitter rivalry soon sprang up between Harold and Tostig. This rivalry was to play an important part in the later conquest by William of Normandy.

In 1066 the saintly Edward died, leaving no heirs. On his deathbed, however, he supposedly indicated to his advisors that Harold would be the logical choice for the next king (this in spite of his alleged promise to William). In any case, Harold was accepted as king by the Witan, and was crowned with all due solemnity. The stage was set for the main act of this drama.

William

In the meantime William, over in Normandy, was gathering his forces for invasion. He claimed the English throne by three facts. First, he claimed a somewhat cloudy inheritance on his father's side; second, he claimed that Edward had promised the English crown to him; and third, he claimed that Harold had a pact with him that if he (Harold) give it to William and, in return, would become Earl of Wessex and would receive the hand of William's daughter.

So William sailed, prepared to conquer England if Harold would not give the crown to him, which Harold had no intention of do-

Fashions

by Bobbye Carson

For those who plan a moderately formal wedding, here are suggestions as to what is considered proper to wear. Different authorities vary slightly, thus this information is not to be considered as rigid examples for those who might be interested.

Bride

For the moderately formal wedding the bride often wears a floor-length dress — with or without a train. Her headdress may be a fingertip or shorter veil. As her accessories she may choose matching shoes and gloves, optional, and carry a bouquet or prayer book. However, she should wear a minimum of jewelry.

Attendants

Her attendant's dresses may be either floor-length or ballet-length of colors suitable to the season. Their head dresses may be of simple cups, circlets or nose veils, They may or may not wear gloves, but should wear a minimum of jewelry and carry small bouquets.

Mothers

Mothers: They should wear dresses that are more formal in feeling at least. Cock-tail type or floor-length dresses are recommended, but often many people do not hold fast to her role for mothers' wear.. Their hats should be small and should match with the dress as well as with other accessories. She doesn't necessarily need a hat for a home wedding and should not wear gloves for the home occasion.

Groom and Male Attendants

Groom and Male Attendants: The men in the wedding party should also dress formally. Their apparel seems to vary greatly as to how formal, moderately formal is. Often white dinner jackets with the dark trousers and or tuxedos are worn.

The vicinity in which you live and are to be married and its customs often greatly influence your plans of what the wedding party will wear, thus it is often better to secure bridal magazines and books and find suggested plans that fit your particular situation.

Those who took the time to be on hand last Tuesday night when East Tennessee's oldest football rivalry was again resumed, saw a Maryville College squad play one of the finest games any Maryville team has ever played on Honaker field. A Scottie defense which had before given up 80 points in two successive ball games, suddenly became a thing to be dealt with. An offense which was new, and relatively untried, struck two lightning blows before the Eagles had even flapped their wings. And a team spirit which had at times seemed dormant suddenly came to life as it overflowed the field into the stands.

They speak of moral victories, but no one can really describe one. In reality the phrase has become rather trite for a win is a win, a loss a loss, and a tie a tie. But what a wonderful tie this was. Although they were three touchdown underdogs the Highlanders pushed the Eagles around pretty much at will in the first half and only fell in the waning moments to a devastating ground attack.

And the individual performances were almost on a par with the team effort. Earl Lawson with his beautiful punting and ball handling kept constant pressure on the Eagle defenders. Lawson also was sparkling at the safety spot, making many t.d. saving stops.

Bob Beam and Jim Cates were outstanding on defense as time and again they came up from the bottom of the pile. Jack Woodhall played his defensive end like a seasoned veteran. Jim Harris and Earl Smith drove for good yardage time and again on their quick smashes off tackle. Ken Chambers made a number of fine runs as well as playing a fine defensive game.

The list could go on for they all had a job to do and they all did it well. It was a fine note to end a football season on and considering flu, injuries, etc. it was a pretty successful season

Final Game

Five of the Highlanders were playing their final game for the Orange and Garnet. Jim Harris, Bob Beam, Jim Cates, Earl Lawson, and John West wound up their college football careers against the Carson-Newman Eagles Tuesday night. These five will be sorely missed, but with so few graduating the nucleus for a good football team remains. So brighter things are in prospect for the 1958 football season and football at Maryville College may well be on the upswing.

Campus Capers

by Mary Turner

Seems like not much is happening around the college map this week. I guess everybody's got their nose in a book (comic), and no one has time for anything but studies. As someone once said, "it's a shame to let studies interfere with your education."

John Bridges, who went to N C., last year, has his face splattered all over the front of The Tennessee Tech Oracle as a member of the drama group there.

Down in Texas at Trinity they're having their fifty-fourth Tigerland royalty coronation. I guess it's something like our own Barnwarming.

Every Saturday night Carson-Newman has their "Cornando" which is a nonsense party where you come as you are. That'll be the day when we have a "come as you are party" here. (What a panic.)

Tenn. Wesleyan is having its second attack of flu now. Trinity is right in there too this time it's worst than before.

Tenn. Tech's Annual won All-American Honor Rating, and paper won a first class rank.

Football Terms

Everyone seemed to enjoy the game the other night, but it seemed like some of the girls needed to know more about the football terms. Since I happen to be an authority on that subject I thought I'd just try to help you out a little so you'll be ready for the next season. Here goes:

Interference: Cheering so loud it prevents me from hearing Tennessee on my portable radio.

Quarterback: What I don't get from the program salesman, who never had change.

Sustained Drive: The thirty-minute crawl out of the stadium

Mighty forward Wall: People around the refreshment stand during half time.

Substitution: Whatever they sell for coffee.

First Down: the people who find it necessary to leave early, all of whom step on my third toe, right foot.

Touchback: What the sharp knees of the man behind me does all during the gamel.

Delayed buck: payoff the $1 bet won from my date.

—T. W.

I do hope these definitions will help you to find a clearer understanding of football.

And with that I sign off but leave this little reminder. "Don't let your pride get inflated, cause you may have to swallow it some someday."

College Football

College football is the big story here this week as the winningest team in football today suffered its first setback. Oklahoma, after going 47 games without a loss and 123 games without being shutout, was nosed out by Notre Dame 7-0.

Other favorites bit the dust also as Texas A&M, the number one team in the nation, lost to Rice 7-6. Another undefeated team lost last week and that was Iowa. The Hawkeyes were edged by the Buckeyes of Ohio State 17-13. The victory earned the Bucks a trip to the Tournament of Roses on New Year's day.

Nearer to home, the Vols had their winning streak stopped by a fine Ole Miss Team 14-7 The Rebs will host the Sugar Bowl against the runner-up in the Southwest Conference which could be Texas or Rice.

Out on the coast, the Oregon Webfoots gained the right to tackle Ohio State in the Rose Bowl as they downed Southern Cal. 16-7. Their cousins Oregon State helped out by defeating their only threat to the crown. They dealt the Stanford Indians a stunning 24-14 defeat.

Thus the Bowl picture at a glance:

Pro Football

In the pro ranks, the Cleveland Browns are on top in the eastern division followed by the N.Y. Giants, Pitt Steelers, Chicago Cards, Wash. Redskins and the Phila. Eagles.

In the West there is a three way deadlock between the Baltimore Colts, Det. Lions and San Francisco 49ers. These are followed by the L.A. Rams, Green Bay Packers and the Chicago Bears in that order.

Basketball

The pro loop has just started and already the Boston Celtics are away up there. They've won 11 straight. Their closest rival is Philadelphia. In the Western division it's a mad scramble between St. Louis, Detroit and Cincinnati.

Thus is the Spotlight on Sports for this week.

Tournament Held Here Thursday

Last Thursday, November 21, the Maryville College chapter of Pi Kappa Delta held a novice debate tournament here on campus. The schools that participated in the Tournament were Lincoln Memorial University, Tennessee Polytechnic Institute, Carson-Newman College and the Univresity of Tennessee. Those debating for the first time in intercollegiate forensics for Maryville were Betty Miller and Anna Keitt, affirmative; Eugene Fieg and William Moore, affirmaitve; and Howard McCuen and Dale Young, negative.

This Novice Tournament, open only to beginning debaters, is the second one held here on campus. It included three rounds of debates, two in the afternoon and one after the spaghetti dinner which Pi Kappa Delta prepared for the participants. These were decision debates judged by coaches of the attending schools and by Maryville faculty members of the Social Science Division. Its primary purpose is to give experience and practice for larger tournaments later in the season.

Those who helped in organizing the tournament were the Pi Kappa Delta officers, Eleonore Koster, president; Bob Bogle, vice-president; and Margaret Patterson, secretary-treasurer; Keith Ham, who was chairman of the tournament; and Corita Erwin, who prepared the dinner.

Another tournament ahead for the Maryville squad is the Seventeenth Annual Appalachian Mountain Forensic Tournament at Boone, North Carolina, on December 5, 6, and 7.

Theta Has Banquet

On Saturday night, November 16, the members of Theta Epsilon had their annual banquet in the dining room at the Capri Restaurant. Dinner music, candlelight and white decorations provided atmosphere for the occasion. Miss Massey attended as guest of honor.

Members are reminded to do their "Mighty Deeds" for their Secret Sisters. This Saturday night a Thanksgiving program is planned.

Mr. Beard Shows Work

An exhibit of Mr. Beard's oils and water colors is being displayed at Byron's on 123 West Harper Street in Maryville. Mr. Beard, head of the art department, has had three one-man showing of his works during the five years he has taught at Maryville. This present exhibit will be shown until November 25.

Muddy Sophs Bow To Seniors, 13-0

by Joe Quinn

The class tourney ended in a big splash literally as the Seniors slushed to a 13-0 victory over the Sophomores.

The game was enjoyed both by the crowd and the players themselves. Every play brought one kind of a spill or the other. The field was a mass of mud due to the heavy rain here on Saturday morning.

Both teams, despite the handicap, played a good game which saw the breaks set up both scores. There was no scoring in the first half, but in the second half, Will Roberts picked off a Soph pass and went down the sidelines for the score. Don Wiley then hit Joe Quinn in the end zone for the extra point and the Seniors led 7-0. Minutes later Don Wiley skirted end for another tally and the game ended 13-0. Thus the class title is held by the Senior Class. Another tourney will probably be held in basketball.

Favored Eagles Fail To Trounce Powerful Scots

by Pete Nix

With 15 seconds remaining, tailback Bryant hit his right end in the end zone to save a 13-13 tie for the Carson-Newman Eagles. A surprising Highlander T-formation and an even more surprising defense forced the highly favored Eagles to come from behind to pull it out. The Scottics scored twice in the first period, once on a keeper, and again on a quick opener; and then relied on a rejuvenated defense to contain the powerful Eagle ground attack. The Eagles drove 98 yards in five minutes for the tying score.

On Maryville's first play from scrimmage, quarterback Earl Lawson, faked a handoff to Ken Chambers on the dive play, kept the ball and scampered 30 yards for the T. D. Bud Beam had blocked an Eagle punt to give the Scots the ball on the Carson-Newman 30. Beam's extra point attempt was wide.

Midway through the first quarter, Earl Lawson punted to the Eagle 7. The Baptists were then penalized to the two, and a return kick was out of bounds on the Carson-Newman 30. Two plays netted 7 yards then, on third down, fullback Chambers took the handoff and scampered 23 yards for Maryville's 2nd T. D. of the night. Beam converted to give Maryville a 13-0 lead.

Carson-Newman with a bruising ground game reeled off six straight first downs as they marched to the Highlander 18. Bryant on a fourth down pass play was caught before he could get the ball away to halt the drive.

After two quick first downs Earl Lawson got off a beautiful 45 yard kick that rolled dead on the Eagle 12. The Eagles trying desperately to score before time ran out in the half were thrown for three straight losses by the hard charging Highlander line. The half ended with Maryville still in possession of a 13-0 lead

Second Half

Early in the third period Spoon partially blocked a Maryville punt and Sheely recovered for the Eagles on the Scottie 37. After a first down at the 26, Eagle tailback Graves scampered 26 yards off tackle to score. Bryant added the point after, to cut the Carson-Newman deficit to six points.

Late in the period Ken Chambers grabbed off an Eagle aerial to halt a drive.

With about 4 minutes gone in the 4th canto, Bob Beam pounced on a Carson-Newman fumble on the visitors 47. Lawson and Chambers carried to the 10 to give the Scots a 1st and goal situaion. A 4th down pass from the two failed and the Eagles took over.

Led by tailback Groves and fullback Jones, the Eagles aided by a 15 yard roughness penalty, marched 98 yards down the field for the tying score. The payoff came on a Bryant to Butchelor aerial with 15 seconds remaining. Bryant's attempt was wide providing a 13-13 final score. The Eagles successfully tried an on-sides kick but time ran out before they could put the ball in play.

Soccer Team Loses

by Pete Nix

The Maryville College soccer team playing its second intercollegiate game in the school history dropped a 3-2 decision to King College of Bristol, Tennessee. Maryville offense was late in getting started, as both their goals came within the last five minutes of play.

King College, displaying a group of Mexican and Hungarian stars, jumped off to an early lead and dominated play in the early part of the match. Stan Mont, Maryville goalie, was forced to make many fine stops as a swift King offense put pressure on the Scots.

The Maryville offense became more aggressive as the game progressed. And late in the game Ted Engle smashed through the two Maryville goals. The third attempt with only five seconds remaining just missed, as it was headed over the cross bar.

The soccer team plays King in a return match this Wednesday on Wilson field.

Council Corner

by Margaret Longfellow

There was no town night violations this week; however, the subject of the extra town night for last week-end was discussed. There were six girls who did not understand the ruling for last Saturday. It was found that the town night had been only a suggestion and had not been passed on as originally thought.

Joann Antes announced that there is now a town night map indicating the town night boundaries. It has been approved by Miss Massey and will be in use this year and in future years.

The problem of low class and student body attendance and the low voting percentages was discussed. It was suggested that pictures of the candidates and signs announcing the particular election accompanying the voting booths. It was hoped that this would increase the voting percentages. Concerning the class meetings it was mentioned that many of the students feel that the class meetings are cut-and-dried and that nothing can be accomplished in them anyway. This was suggested as a possible reason for the low class attendance.

The question of more intermingling with town and campus students was posed. It was suggested that the town students may feel left out when the campus students are elected to council. A suggestion was made that a position for town students be made on the council. Further information will be gathered on the subject.

It was wondered by the administration if the men's initiations at night are not tending toward hazing. Opinions on the subject were offered by council members, and the concensus was that the initiations are not unduly hard.

It was mentioned that several people in authority did not feel that last week's dance was well attended. Someone stated that the stag girls do not feel that enough stag boys are going to the dances and dancing. It was also mentioned that there were decorations planned for the last dance which were not allowed to be put up, the fact that only one person is This action was questioned as was to serve as chaperone for all the school's dances. A committee was set up to investigate this program.

Miss Ware has requested through the council that the silverware and dishes be returned to the dining hall. It was suggested that this be handled through the W.S.G.A. and the Men's Student Co-Op through the dorms.

The girls in Memorial will be glad to note that a milk machine will be installed in their dorm.

The powder in the news for women today is for more than just the nose. In fact, the dust will fly when the Chi Beta society and the Theta Epsilon society battle it out in the powder puff football game. It will be Saturday afternoon, November 30.

The Women's Athletic Association has begun the volley ball tournament between the rival Chillie and Howie teams. The Howies took the first game and the Chillies will be looking for a revenge win. All volley ball fans are welcome to come and watch these exciting matches.

Last Tuesday night at the Carson-Newman Vs. Maryville football game, the Women's M-Club presented five Senior members of the squad with memento footballs This is a traditional gesture by the Woman's M-Club to show the appreciation felt by all for the boys on the squad. The balls are large enough to be autographed and so provide a record of the team with whom the senior members played their final year. That about fisinshes the woman's sports news for now. See you on the field.

Dance . . .

the student body do not participate in dancing, it should be considered and maintained as only one of several popular forms of social recreation on the campus. Students who do not dance should not be set apart or deprived of the opportunity for other popular types of recreation.

2. The social program at Maryville College has produced many original, clever, and varied types of recreational activities, which have become a unique and valuable part of Maryville campus life. Care must be taken that dancing, which is so easily arranged, does not gradually displace these other desirable forms of recreation.

3. Expenses must be kept low, to accord with the Maryville program and objectives. This means that music should usually be from records, otherwise by a volunteer student orchestra; that the number of dances and the various items of expense should be limited.

4. To insure tone and atmosphere befitting to the College, there must be proper supervision, both student and faculty. The proprieties of dancing as observed in the best of situations should pertain here. Participation by non-students should be carefully controlled.

Guided by these principles the Social Board and the Student-Faculty Senate recommend that the following revised regulations be adopted to govern dancing:

1. There may be casual dancing in the Intramural Gymnasium from 6:30 to 7:15 each weekday evening except Saturday. This will be under direct supervision of the Director of the Student Center assisted by student committees appointed by the Social Chairman from time to time. Student committees will attend to music, conduct, and incidental arrangements. Non-student guests will be requested to present guest-cards approved by the Dean of Women or the Director of the Student Center. Such persons are subject to the same regulations as are students.

2. Small groups scheduling parties in the Y-rooms or other small social rooms by arrangement with the Dean of Women and those responsible for the premises involved, may be permitted to dance.

3. Occasional informal, all-college dances may be held at the discretion of the Social Board and with the approval of the Faculty Committee on Scheduling of activities. Each dance will be managed by a student dance committee and faculty sponsors selected for the occasion by the Social Board. The dance committee and sponsors in cooperation with the Dean of Women and the Director of the Student Center, will make all arrangements and supervise the dance. Music will be from records, there will be no admission fee, and no expense will be incurred for decoration or refreshments. Dating will not be required, and corsages will not be allowed. Any student may have a guest, but a guest-card must be secured in advance from the Dean of Women. Such guests while on the campus are subject to the same regulations as students.

4. One formal, all-college dance may be held in the Fall and one in the Spring, at times to be defor the occasion. The dance comcided upon by the Social Board mittee and sponsors, in cooperation with the Dean of Women and the Director of the Student Center, will make all arrangements and supervise the dance. Music will be by a volunteer student orchestra sponsored by the Social Board, or from records. An admission fee will be charged of not more than $1.20 (including tax) per couple, and only couples will be admitted. These will be program dances. Refreshments will be served. Corsages will be limited to not more than $3.00 each. Any student may have a guest, but a guest-card must be secured in advance from the Dean of Women. Guests are subject to the same regulations as are students.

An amendment to the above regulations limits the time for the informal, all-campus dances to 11:45 and to 11:30 for formal all-campue dances. The reason for the time difference is the fact that the informal dances are usually after games and thus do not begin until comparatively late in the evening. The 11:30 dead-line for formal dances allows time for the clean-up committee to work before mid-night.

cult German word order has greatly helped these beginning students to improve their conversational German.

During the first days of the German table, German menus were printed to aid the students. The students were amazed at how quickly words and phrases could be picked up, and soon they were all able to converse in German sentences with increasing confidence.

The table has had guests from the faculty from time to time. Some of the guests at the German table have been Dr. Lloyd, Herr Reber, and Mr. Fisher. Last Sunday there were two German tables to accommodate their guests, who were Mr. and Mrs. Fisher, Herr and Mrs. Reber, and Miss Mary Miles. An illustrated German menu was posted on the window and a United Nations flag was attached to the window sill. The table plans to have many more guests from the faculty in future.

One obvious characteristic of this table is the relaxed friendly attitude of its members. They tease and joke in German as much as they would in English. These German students were very helpful in teaching German phrases to a recent visitor to their table from the Echo staff. Although the reporter knew no German previously, she was able to follow the dinner conversation, aided by elaborate gestures from the others at the table.

Back in England, Harold was having troubles on another front. His brother, Tostig, had been ousted as Earl of Northumbria. In bitter hatred, he had fled to Norway with tales of the crisis in England and a full account of the weakness of the island's defenses. The king of Norway, Harold Hardrada, saw a chance to re-establish the Scandinavian power in England and outfitted a fleet to sail to England.

Harold was thus besieged on both sides. While he waited in London to see which invasion would strike him first, he received news that Hardrada and Tostig were invading from the north. In a decisive battle, Harold defeated the Norseman. Hardrada was killed in the battle, and Tostig was executed by Harold. But no sooner were the Norsemen defeated than Harold received word that William and the Normans were attacking from the South.

This battle Harold lost, though the English fought valiantly. Harold himself was killed in the battle, and William became king of England by right of conquest.

Thus began the making of modern England.

Cap Plays Roulette For Special Studies

by George Roselli

Cap Johnson, a senior from Blue Ridge, North Carolina, has a very interesting project for his special studies. Being a physics major, Cap decided to do his special studies on probability. What is probability? Probability is a branch of math which deals with chance.

A very simple illustration of this is the tossing of a coin. When you flip it into the air, you don't really know whether it will turn up heads or tails. It is just your guess.

The interesting part of his studies is that it involves the use of a roulette wheel. Cap explains that the number of times you turn the wheel, the more chance you have of winning, or better still, coming out even.

The final application which easily demonstrates probability is that concerning a true and false test. If the whole test, and let us say the test consists of 500 questions, were on the true and false basis, your chances of getting half or more than half right if you stick to one answer throughout the entire exam are very good. Chances are improved with study.

SRAPPAUC Meeting Held Last Month

Mr. Layman, the treasurer and business manager for Maryville College, and Mr. Brown, the campus engineer, attended the SRAPPAUC October 20, 21, and 22. The letters SRAPPAUC stand for Southeastern Regional Association of Physical Plant Administrators of Universities and Colleges. The meeting was held on the campus of Mississippi College.

Now Dorm . . .

Under the leadership of Miss Clemmie J. Henry, the fund was built up to approximately $100,000, chiefly in gifts from DAR sources and from individual friends.. Then, in 1954, Presbyterian women designated this dormitory as the special object of their Opportunity Gifts for Christian Education that year and added more than $75,000 to the fund.

Other contributions have brought the total now in hand to above $200,000. The College's application for a college housing loan of $400,000 from the Federal Government, half to complete this building, and half to renovate the old dormitories, has been approved.

Selected Site

The location selected is that east of Pearsons Hall and Willard House on the high ground where the Lamar residence stood for nearly three quarters of a century, above what is now called the "golf course." It will give an open view of the Great Smoky Mountains to the east and of the twin cities and the distant Cumberland Mountains to the west.

The building will have three stories and a basement, and will be of contemporary design and fireproof construction. Principal materials will be concrete, steel, brick, glass, and aluminum. A light colored brick, probably a gray, and lustra dry glass are specified for the outside walls.

Size

In size, the building proper will be approximately 160 feet long and 70 feet deep. This equals the length of Carnegie Hall, and each residence floor is over fifty percent deeper than those of Carnegie or any of our present dormitories. There are also lattieed walls to create an outside court at each end of the building, which increases the overall ground

There will be rooms to house ninety-six women students, a housemother, and four guests — a total of 101 persons. All student rooms are on the second and third floors, with 24 double rooms on each of these two floors. A house mother's apartment and office and two double guest rooms are on the first floor separated by a large lobby seventy-five by fifty feet.

The first floor is considerably smaller in area than are the other floors. The second floor forms an overhang of about thirteen or fourteen feet all around the first floor, thus creating not only an interesting appearance but valuable sun and rain protection. The lobby walls will be of lustra gray plate glass with sliding glass doors.

Inside Features

Other features include various utilities including baths, laundry equipment, storage rooms, study lounges and a kitchenette. In the student rooms, there will be built in dressers, and wardrobes and study tables. There will be the large first floor lobby and a recreation hall seventy-five by twenty feet.

Choir To Make One-Day Tour

Maryville College Choir will make its first off-campus appearances of the 1957-58 season on Sunday, December 1, 1957, when they will journey to Harriman, Tennessee, where they will participate in the morning worship service of the First Presbyterian Church of Dr. J. Hayden Laster, one of the members of the College Board of Directors.

After dinner at the church, the Choir will travel to Spring City to present a Vesper Service at 4:00 in the local Presbyterian Church. The Choir will conclude its one-day tour with 7:30 evening concert at the Methodist Church in Harriman.

A. Book Arrives On College Campus

by Jeanette Wiley

My name is A. Library Book. When I arrived in Lamar Memorial Library, I knew only that I had been bought from the publisher and sent for by this college in eastern Tennessee. My introduction to the campus came when I was unloaded with a multitude of other packages in the college post office where I waited on a shelf marked "Library" for someone to come after me. Finally after seeing many of the friends I had made during the journey being taken away by their owners, I was claimed by a student assistant who had been sent over to the post office to bring me to the library.

Upon arriving there, I was placed on the mail table, and the student assistant disappeared. No sooner had I resigned myself to another period of waiting when another person whom I took to be a student assistant came poking around the table, noticed me, and uttered a glad cry when she realized that I was a "rush book" that everyone had been waiting for since I was ordered some weeks before. Weilding a pair of cssissors and with a gleam in her eye, this person snipped open the package in which I was encased, took me out tenderly, and placed me on a desk in the office.

I anxiously awaited the next development. Already I had learned that I had been expected, but I was eager to find my ultimate mission. I had barely settled when another young lady appeared on the scene, glanced over to where I lay, and then reached into a drawer, picked out a piece of yellow slip and inserted it between my pages. Enjoying this attention, I was all ready for the next step, which consisted in being placed on a shelf marker "To be accessioned." I glanced around at my companions, and we made minutes fly by discussing our publishers, our bindings, and our eagerness to begin service to our readers, for we had been informed that we were being published to help further knowledge.

Our discussions came to a halt when we were taken from the shelf, stamped with a number in two places; and before I knew it, someone had discovered that the proper cards which described me had come. The catalog librarian scrutinized me from cover to cover to determine for sure that I was what the cards stated I was. After a few final adjustments I was handed to a typist who completed the typewritten record of my addition to the library collection, stamped a date due slip for my inside back cover; and presto, I was whisked away to have my date due slip pasted in, the library ownership stamp emblazoned on my inside front cover, and to have my spine decorated with the number which the cataloger had assigned me in my subject field. Following a whisk up my spine with a shellac brush, I was taken to the new book table for a few days public appearance before being shelved in the stacks. This is done, I understand, to catch likely readers who might never get to the stacks to peruse the shelves.

If my subject had been of such heavy import, I might have had to resign myself to a dull life broken only by an occasional trip outside my home; but I believe I shall be saved from that sort of existence since chatting with my kissing kin who had circulated some seventy-seven times since arriving two months ago. We were written by the same author, and my cousin predicted a harried life for me when I confided my title was Twisted Tales from Shakespeare.

First Being Is Dead

In nothingness
The eye opened
And it could see
And from stillness came motion
So, there was Being.

The voice declared
And the power proceeded
And it brought forth chaos
And chaos turned
So, there was darkness and light.

The light penetrated
And the darkness escaped
And the darkness returned
And the light retreated
So, the battle began.

The light and darkness
Had formed the boundary
And created all the heavens
And put the spheres in place.

But the spheres called each other
And asked for sustenance
And linked with nothing
And neighbors became
So, harmony began.

There was breathing breath
And there came to be life
And it rested on the spheres
And there it multiplied
So, first life began.

With majesty the mount was crowned
With might the hills were strengthened
With rolling water the ocean was shaped
With rushing streams rivers were cut.
So, order began on the earth.

With beauty the days were blessed
With bountiful rain the green meadow bathed
With colors the leaves were painted
With white snow the mount was capped
So, the seasons began.

With excellency the clay was touched
With breath the life was formed
First swimming then creeping
Then running, then flying
So, second life began.

There was great joy
So, the voice called a rest
And rested.

From out of deep rest
Again the eye opened
And saw the great sword
Then the fainting voice pronounced
"You living beings be free"
And then the voice died out
So, the first being is dead.

Happy Holiday!

Vol. 43 MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE, DECEMBER 14, 1957 No. 8

Mrs. Lloyd Plans New Organ Fund

Back in the mid-thirties a Maryville College graduate and her husband were visiting the campus. She was a music major and walking up from the old chapel toward the post office she said, "I'll never be satisfied until I see a pipe organ in the chapel." Her husband took a dollar bill from his wallet and said, "Edna can start the fund with this."

That dollar grew with other contributions and amounts raised from various projects to $4000, and the pipe organ was dedicated in the Voorhees Chapel in 1939.

About a month ago Dr. Lloyd received a money order for $10 signed by "Conscience" saying it was in payment of a bill owed to Dr. Lloyd's uncle, a physician, who had died without its being paid.

"Use it as you see fit" was the request. "The Organ Fund!" was Mrs. Lloyd's eager suggestion. Thus the second Chapel Organ Fund is beginning to grow.

Mrs. Lloyd presented a plan to the girls in the three dormitories at their house meetings that we try to raise $1000 tduring this Christmas vacation by each one who felt she could having a New Years benefit project and bringing back $10. It is hoped that 90 such benefits may be going on in our home towns. It may be earned, given by the individual, solicited from friends or relatives or contributed at a benefit tea or coke party.

To add to this $900 the Maryville College Town girls will join with Mrs. Lloyd in a benefit tea to be given at Morningside on the campus on New Years afternoon from two to five o'clock.

The Knoxville girls have come up with an idea of presenting Mrs. Victor Schoen in a Benefit Concert in Knoxville on New Years Day or sometime during the Holiday Week. Further announcement will follow as the plans are worked out.

New Echo Heads To Be Samples And Springstead

Betty Springstead and Bob Samples have been elected editor-in-chief and business manager, respectively, of the Highland Echo.

Betty is a senior English major from Roselle, New Jersey. This is her third year on the Echo. She was editor-in-chief last year and senior staff editor this semester.

Bob Samples, a sophomore business major from Tennessee, was a member of the Echo business staff last year and was business staff assistant this semester.

The present editor, Carolyn Cones, is graduating this semester. The retiring business manager is Mary Kirklin.

ECHO FORUM

Dear student body:

In the Highland Echo throughout this semester the members of the staffs have been trying to make the Highland Echo a better paper and organization. But the members of the staffs can't do it alone. You, the rest of the student body, must aid in the support and the work of the Highland Echo. Why should only a few people be representative of the whole student body, when more are able to be also? Now, however, it is evident that if the Maryville College students want a newspaper they must start going out and working for it more faithfully. For the Highland Echo can't change by a few people's efforts only; they must be aided by the whole student body both in interest and in work. Does Maryville College student body want a newspaper? Well — if they do they had better get busy and start working for it. Interest and work counts!

Mary Kirklin

Return To The Manger

We had known it would snow from the moment we had awakened that morning. The air in the bedroom was cold, and frosty flowers adorned the pane of glass which was the window facing the apartment house next door. Here it was the day of Christmas eve, and there was a promise of snow — a white Christmas.

All day the sky looked dark, dark not only because of the December weather, but dark, too, because of the grey, sooty smoke from the factories which hung everywhere like a feather bed of goose down. Snow was sure to come with the sky like that.

We had tomato soup and crackers for lunch, then the children hurried outdoors. They were back in less time than it had taken to dress them for the cold weather.

They it was who brought the news — it had begun to snow.

Christmas eve, children, snow; the perfect setting for Dicken's Christmas Carol, a fire and pop corn, but no we had to put the chains on the '57 Plymouth and drive to the country!

It was an old custom for the people of First Congregational Church, of which we were members,, to make an annual pilgrimage to the country for a Christmas eve service. The congregation had met in a barn for a Christmas service back in 1916 when the church had burned down, and it was decided that such a "return to the manger" as the minister had called it, was a "valuable and enriching experience." There was only one farm family left in the congregation (the church was in the heart of the city now, for the city had grown), and so naturally they, Elsie and Aldus Summers, were the hosts each year on Christmas eve.

We started for the Summers' farm at 6:30. This would give us plenty of time to get there, for the farm was not far from the city. I had put the chains on the car and started the motor earlier, because the first few fleecy white flakes of the afternoon had developed into a series of icy streaks which steadily slanted earthward. The children, bundled from head to toe, crowded into the back seat and wrapped up in an army blanket fragrant with cedar from the attic chest, and we were soon on our way.

Our spirits were Christmas high as we drove past flashes of red and green lights which glowed from store windows and then dwindled to an occasional blue or multicolored tree on the lawns of homes in the suburbs.

We sang familiar carols, and even recited the Visit of Saint Nicholas together. Then we were in the country, and could recognize the other cars on the narrow road as belonging to friends from our church.

When we arrived at the Summers' farm we had to park our car along the main road, for the lane to the barn was beginning to drift shut. Most of the others had already arrived by the time we drove up so we fell in line and joined in singing "Oh Come All Ye Faithful" as we walked.

Inside, it was surprisingly warm, warmer perhaps than that night long ago. The worshipers were hushed, and we spoke in whispers. We walked silently into the stable where the service was always held, spread our blankets on the hay, and made ourselves comfortable. The rock-walled room was lighted by lanterns, and the cows in their stalls shifted as though in welcome.

At the far end of the stable the young Mary sat by a rough manger, and Joseph, a boy of sixteen wearing cotton whiskers looked down at the manger from which beamed a halo of light from a flashlight. — The service was simple; the minister read the nativity account from Luke and Mat thew,, kings dressed in bath robes marched in and presented their gifts of gold, frankinsence, and myrrh. When the tableau was complete the congregation joined in singing, and then the journey to the manger was over for an-

20th Century Nativity

Strife is mother of all
Did she not bear the war?
Six thousand times leaves have fallen;
Six thousand times castles were destroyed,
Now Red and White are ready to match
For the coming morn'a final victory.
Desolation watches over the inhabitants
And waits around the corner.

My soul is longing
For where the hope has gone.
My heart is crying
For the coming of the ill-winds.
The pale heart and weakened mind
Now drip cold tears,
Look for the breaking dawn,
The time of campaign.

Oh, the strife conceived the babe of trouble.
Now is the time of birth.
All things are waiting,
The winds are calm,
The forests stand still,
And the streams are silent.
The rocks are ready to leap
When the strife bears her son.
The waste will be king of the lands;
The habitants will cease.
The little child shall cry for help.
No one shall be there.
The towns turn into the dens of animals,
And there wild grass will grow.
Is it not tomorrow?
The day must come to pass.

I sang the song of the forlorn.
Every soul must face it.
I hope the moan will be mother of joy,
That happiness will accompany.
But the night is at hand;
The path lies in darkness.
I swam with warning voice
In the midst of the people.
But the crying is vain,
Even the echo is fainting.

The hearts are content
When the neighbors starve.
The envys are the cause
For which the common strive.
"Wants" are head of the family
Around which it centers.
The neighbors' new car is the cause of the cancer.
Hatred grows in the heart.
The face is masked with politeness.
The heart is full of lies.
The eyes are full-blinded;
Even they can not see tomorrow.
I tell you, men of the science age
The strife conceived the babe.
It is the prelude to the march.
The waste will greet the morn.

THE GIFT OF THE ROCK

The thin despairing cry of a child came from the little house hidden in the shadows just beyond the arc of light the street lamp cast. The ancient blinds were drawn down, but the light from within threw on them a tableau of silhouettes. The heavy form of a woman was bent over something low, perhaps a bed, and several small figures clutched at her skirt. The faint shadow of another form could be seen in the background. Night women, lovers, and occasional shoppers taking a short-cut home passed by the house, none of them knowing of or caring about the tragic drama within.

Andrew huddled wretchedly in a huge worn chair in a corner away from the bed. His face was pale and frightened looking and etched with lines of worry. At eleven he was afraid of the future and the thought that he soon might be the man of the house. He glanced over at the wasted, motionless figure on the bed and at his mother bending over it, the grey hairs straggling on her neck and forehead. The younger children hung, crying, onto her skirts. Time to care for them was scarce now that another life was ebbing away.

Andrew knew how much his mother loved his father and how hard she had to work now to keep the family together. Father had not been well since the war, and then two months ago the influenza had made him bedridden. With the recent heavy snowfall and raw, bitter weather had come. What Mom feared was pneumonia. She spent long hours tending for father and was greatly worried by the sound of his rumbling, chesty cough and burning skin.

"Andrew," she said now, "run get the pastor. I'm afraid that your father doesn't have much time." Her eyes were wet, and her chin trembled, but she was not crying.

At first every muscle in Andrew's body grew rigid. Then he jumped from his chair, grabbed his coat and cap from the peg rack by the door, and raced from the house.

The night was cold and raw and pregnant with fresh snow. Andrew hurried by the "nice" houses in town. They looked warm and inviting with Christmas trees lit up and framed in picture windows. Their sloping well-kept lawns were blanketed in pure white snow, looking like white velvet shimmering with flashing diamonds. "The look like a fine lady's dress," Andrew thought. "Why even the rich people's snow is better — whiter and sparkly. Ours is all gray and dirty with factory dust. Why should they have everything and we so little. Haven't I read from Granny's old, torn Bible every morning and said my prayers every night by my bed? Didn't my teacher in Sunday school tell me that God loved everyone — even the poor people? Why? Why?" Andrew's mind was greatly troubled and his thoughts became bitter as he thought of his dying father and over-worked mother. Tears chased themselves down his cheeks as he hurried on sobbing.

The tower of the big gray stone church was not far ahead. Andrew could hear the Christmas carillon pealing forth, clear and lovely in the crisp air. He had even forgotten that this was Christmas week. The Christmas spirit was certainly not in his heart. Life had dealt him a bitter blow this season, so that a feeling akin to hatred welled up inside him. Nearing the church at a trot he paused a moment to pick up a jagged piece of rock from the snowy walk with his blue fingers.

No one was in the side court-

"Miracle On 34th St."

For the Christmas season the College Theater presents tonight the film, "Miracle on Thirty-fourth Street," starring Maureen O'Hara, John Wayne, and Edmund Gwenn. This movie was voted one of the ten best films of the year in which it was produced. Since that time it has become a Yuletide classic.

Christmas Eve — 1943

She was still running. Her feet were numb, and they moved automatically. The tears that had made everything dim and hazzy, causing her to stumble as she ran, now flowed freely down her cheeks. She choked back a sob, for already her throat burned. The sound of her breathing echoed in her ears as the sound of the crashing bombs still echoed in her mind. She slowed down to a walk. The city seemed far behind her now. Its noise, and flame, and smoke, and confusion now faded as the darkness, and cold, and tiredness crept through.—

Cold air—icy cold—freezes clear through to the soul—cold and hungry, hungry and cold—on Christmas eve — remember — no don't—Christmas eve—warm, fire food—"God rest you merry gentlemen"—"comma after merry children, comma after merry"—"let nothing you dismay—Remember Christ our Savior was born on Christmas day"—tomorrow tomorrow — yesterday — in the movies it was always black and white, not color, and no screaming just roar crash bang—never thought of it before, no color—run run—Christmas eve and run run run.

snow — cold — "and what will poor birdie do then? he'll fly to the barn to keep himself warm and tuck his head under his wing the poor thing the poor thing"

"to save us all from Satan's power when we were gone astray" 'the poor thing the poor thing the poor thing" cold cold cold.

"He'll fly to the barn"—barn cattle warm smell—Chrismas eve—barn—the Christ Child—do they really kneel?—"Ring around the moon"—

Ring—light—star—the Christ Child—Nannie said they kneel—Face in the moon—Nannie—the Christ Child—warmth—the barn, I see the barn—"Silent night"—'the poor thing"—they do kneel! —Sleep in heavenly peace"—sleep—sleep—

Snow did come soon, and the world was pure again. On Christmas morning near the road, not far from the bombed out city, there lay a heap in the snow beside the foundation of what had once been a barn.

CHRISTMAS

Calmness, calmness, calmness
Hovers like a bank of fog;
Reaches out engulfs the land.
Inlets on the quiet isles
Stir with silent solitudes.
Tuned ears hear peace.
Muted voice asks why, asks how?
Answer comes from dim unknown,
Spirit has just born a son.

Special Vespers Planned Tomorrow

Three choral organizations and a brass ensemble are preparing special Christmas music to be featured at the annual Christmas Vesper Service this Sunday evening at 7:00 o'clock.

The service is to open with a prelude consisting of a group of organ selections played by Mr. James Bloy. He will be assisted on several numbers by violinist Mr. Kent Perry.

Preceding the antiphonal choral introit by the combined choral groups, the brass choir under the direction of Mr. Ralph Moore will play In Dulce Jubilo. The special Christmas carols by the Men's Glee Club and the Girl's Choir under the direction of Mr. Dan Kinsinger and the Vesper Choir under the direction of Mr. Harry H. Harter will conclude with an English carol, Tyrley Tyrlow by Peter Warlock, which will be sung and played by all the singers and instrumentalists.

Two of the features of the service will be the candlelight processional and recessional by the one hundred, twenty-five singers and the postlude of carols sung from the Court of the Chapel.

A Christmas Poem

Mary's Child
Mary's Son
King of all the world to Come:
A human Boy,
The God in Man
And for us—this was God's plan.
Adored by Kings
Scourged by fools,
For us He died; Salvation's Tool.
His day nears
Not far away
The Day for which the faithful pray.

Christmas

What is Christmas?
It is a time for being at home—
A time for joy and gladness
Or at an altar on bended knee.
That is Christmas.

What is Christmas?
It is a warm glowing fire and decorations
Candles burning—relatives and friends coming;
Glistening snow resting lazily
On housetops and evergreens.
That is Christmas.

What is Christmas?
It is a time for beauty and wonder—
The wonder in the face of a child
Is not unlike that of the shepherds
So long ago on that first holy night.
That is Christmas.

What is Christmas?
It is love—true love
God's love shown through Christ, His Son;
It is happiness, fellowship and giving;
It is peace from Christ our King.
That is Christmas.

In Farewell

It is customary for the retiring editor to step down from the editorial "we" in his or her last issue and discuss the progress, handicaps, and future of the Highland Echo.

This semester has seen the addition of several new columns—Council Corner, Rim Shots, Campus Capers, and In This Corner. These columns have helped to fill the gaps in regular news coverage and furnish more emphasis to certain phases of campus life.

I have done some experimenting with lay-out and head-line writing, and several new and hybrid forms have been the result. The first impression of a newspaper is produced by its physical appearance, so such experimentation is a necessary step to improvement.

We have had two "specials" and one "extra" this semester. The Homecoming issue was designed to be suitable for a souvenir copy. This Christmas issue which you are now reading was the result of long-range planning and employed the work of many individuals. An "extra" announced the beginning of the Fred Hope Drive.

The path of the Echo this semester, however, has not always been an easy one. The financial problem has always been before us, and although I wanted very much to have more pictures, the budget would not allow it. The relatively small number of column inches of ads in most issues has also meant difficulty in securing enough copy to fill the paper. It takes a very considerable amount of copy to make one issue, and when the staff is small, as it is now, the difficulty in obtaining enough articles is sharply increased. It is now plain that if the students really want a newspaper, they must be willing to take an active interest. The Echo badly needs more members, both on the business and the editorial staff.

The importance of the business staff cannot be over-estimated. Putting out a newspaper is an expensive proposition. It costs $110 for the printing of each issue, and there are also other expenses, such as office supplies and repair of the Echo typewriters. Each student pays $.75 for the Echo through the student activity fee, but this amount does not begin to pay the total cost. The rest must come from ads.

The editorial staff desperately needs more active participation. The Echo constitution allows a maximum of twenty-five members, yet the number on the current staff falls far below this maximum. This means that a greater amount of work and responsibility is placed on a few. To make matters worse, three staff members are not planning to return to Maryville after this semester. The time has now come for action——unless the student body wants to see the newspaper die. If the disinterest continues, students should prepare for some sweeping changes. Either there will be no Echo at all or so few Echoes a semester that its value as a source of news will be greatly diminished.

The argument most people give against joining the Echo staff is that it takes time. Certainly it takes time. Any worth-while activity does——but the Echo does not take an excessive amount of time. This is my seventh semester on the Echo staff, and I really do not feel that the paper has taken anything near an unreasonable fraction of my time. This semester, of course, has taken a considerable greater amount of work, because the job of editor always does, but even here I do not find the time argument to be strictly valid.

The above points I leave to you to ponder over. I hope that you will give them serious thought for they are of great importance to the future of the paper.

In closing I would like to say that I have enjoyed serving the student body this semester. The task has been difficult at times, but I hope that it has not been in vain. I have not tried to please everyone, because I learned quite early that this is an impossibility in newspaper work. I have tried to have as wide and thorough a news coverage as possible and to include a variety of features which would be of interest to the majority.

I want to thank the staff for its faithful support. I could name a number of members who have worked diligently and well, but I want to single out one person who has worked especially hard this semester——the managing editor. She has attacked her job with enthusiasm and willingly gave her time to writing last-minute articles when copy was low, and it looked as if there would not be enough copy to fill the paper. Thanks also to my room-mate, who helped me proof-read and who stuck beside me when the major and minor crisis arose.

I leave you in good hands. Betty Springstead brings with her a year's experience as Echo editor. I hope that you, the student body, will give her the support she will need to put out your newspaper. Merry Christmas to all of you.

Well, here I am. Not that it seems to matter any more, with Rudolph and Frosty, and all my other buddies so much better known than I am any more. I bet you don't even know me. Do you? Oh maybe you've heard of me, and thought, oh is that so, or you may even have thought, in passing, oh yes, but I know that you haven't thought now I wonder where he went to. Not that it matters to me, you understand, it just deesn't. It makes no difference that nobody ever thinks of me, or comes to see me. Not even if no one sends me a Christmas card any more. It doesn't hurt me, or make me sad, in fact, I never even think about it. It's just that at This Particular Time, sometimes I begin to think, now I wonder what ever happened to my old buddies, the kids, and then I begin to wonder just how every one is. And then, I turn around in my darker part of the campus and think about some happy things like the time that it snowed ten feet of snow, and no one couldgetout to chopple, let alone take exams. And then I miss some of those HA HA, Tra la la times that used to be at Christmas time, and I think, just because you are happy today does not mean that Santa Claus is, or that you won't get coal in your stocking.

One Christmas, that I remember, that you probably don't, my friend, and they certainly don't make them like they used to, my friend Rudolph came to see me. You understand that people don't often journey into my damp, unpleasant corner of the campus, but one day, after several years of Staying Away, Rudolph came to see me. He is quite a Happy fellow, you know la de da, Happy Times, and all that sort of thing, well he came to me and was quite unhappy. In those days, I was a little better known, although I never have been too well known, with sometimes and occasionally, people coming to see me. Of course, I always appreciated the effort, as it does take a long time to come by the chopple organ pipes when one has a busy day. I mean you just never are in the chopple, and it is a long trip just to see me. Well, in those days, Ruddie was a Very Good Friend, not that I blame him for Completely forgetting me, after he got to be very well known, you just can't blame people for that, if they want to, they will. But he did came by every Now and Then, and then was one of those times.

Hello, he said. How are you, said he.

Just the same as always, not that Some people ever come down to this dark and gloomy place to ever find out, I said.

Can I talk to you, he said, a little doubtfully.

Of course, I know that there are some people that you come to with your problems, and don"t come to them unless you have a problem, and if they live in a gloomy part of the campus, especially you just don't come and see them unless you have a problem. I can understand that, and I certainly won't hold it against you, since I know that you have lots of Happy things to do, and all sort of friendly places to go where they just don't want another person along. And I'm not hurt, how could I be.

Well, said he, rubbing his nose thoughtfully, and thinking it would be a Very Good thing to be outside, Santa has asked me to do something for him, I can"t make up my mind if I should, or not.

Oh yes, of course you must. Do things for your friends, put yourselves out for them, but just don't expect them to come into your damp and gloomy home to visit you.

But you haven't heard what I must do, Ruddie insisted, rubbing his nose again.

Do you have a cold? Sickness and misery, well it comes to all of us, I said, noticing his nose. You may get pneumonia, probably will if you stay in this Very Damp part of the campus much longer.

That's part of my problem, he said. Since it is a Very Foggy Night, Santa can't get through to the kids, and with my cold, I've gotten a Very Red Nose. He says that the light from my Very Red Nose will be enough to light the way. Do you think I should do it?

Go on, I said, desert all of your old friends on Christmas eve, leave me alone, it won't make one bit of difference to me. Go have your Happy Tims, sing carols and be gay. You don't have to live in a damp and gloomy part of the campus, you can have Fun.

I just can't help thinking that if I hadn't given him that Very Good Advise, he never would have gotten where he is now, not that I mind his forgetting all about me, but I used to be pretty well known myself, and I know how fickle people are. They used to talk about me every Christmas when they said "not a creature was stirring, not even A. Mouse." That's me.

Christmas trees, as most people know, did not originate with Christianity. They were taken over from pre-Chirstian religions, as were many other customs and ideas. The early Christians were also members of the society in which they lived, and it was natural that many things should be carried over into Christianity with new symbolisms.

So it was with the Christmas tree. In the pre-Christian religions, the evergreen symbolized life. This was especially true in the northern countries where the evergreen was the only plant which stayed green throughout the long winters and deep snows.

When the tree became a Christian symbol, little change was required in the symbolism. Where the tree had been a symbol of life, it now became a symbol of the Christian life in Christ, which was eternal.

One of the richest fields of Christmas legend lies in this field of the Christmas tree.

My favorite legend of the tree concerns St. Boniface, the early missionary to the Germanic peoples. It goes like this.

One cold and wintery night, Boniface and a companion struggled through the deep snows of a northern winter, seeking shelter for the night. Suddenly in a grove of trees, they came upon a small group of people. These people were sacrificing a small child to the god Thor, and the symbol of worship was to bind a child to a mighty oak which was Thor's tree.

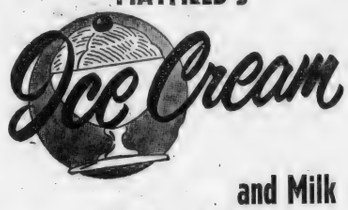
Boniface pushed his way to the front of the group and quickly untied the child and took the knife out of the priest's hand. Filled with indignation at this heathen worship, he siezed an ax from a man standing nearby and with mighty strokes began chopping down the tree. The people were terrified, expecting that Thor would strike down this blasphemer with a thunder bolt. But nothing happened, and the people were too frightened of Boniface to stop him.

Finally the oak fell with a thundering crash, Boniface threw the ax aside and turned to the people.

"Your oak has fallen," he told them, 'And so has your god Thor. See his tree lies dead as he is dead." He pointed to the fallen tree.

"But now see, I bring you a God that is living", he continued, "and I show you his tree."

Their glance followed his pointing finger. Over in a corner of the grove stood a small evergreen tree piled high with snow.



"You know that the evergreen stands green and living even in the deep snows. So it is with your God. This tree is his tree because He is eternal life that grows and flourishes even in the most miserable conditions found in this world. Take the tree of your true God, and give it honor, and turn away from and forget the fallen oak of a fallen God."

And the people gathered around the new tree, with its green branches, and its pointed top reaching toward heaven; while Boniface further explained this new God to them, and converted many.

The Maryville College wrestling squad dropped their first match of the year to Knoxville Y.M.C.A. by an 18-16 score. The inexperienced Scotties showed unexpected strength, as they gave the Y veterans a rough tussle. The Scots dropped a decision in the 130 lb. class and lost by pins in the 123, 147, and 157 lb. weight classes. John Anderson and John Hawkins provided 10 of the Highlanders 16 points on pins. RIM SHOTS

by Lottie Jerkins

The major sport for the season that is now upon us is "Ring around the Cnristmas tree." Also "Friend or foe under the mistletoe" gains in popularity. Speaking of Christmas parties, of course we were, the Women's M-Club held a surprise party for W.A.A. As all good parties have, there was food, games, entertainment and much merriment. After wild and wooly games, Miss Heron eased the pace with selected Christmas readings. The party ended with much clapping of hands, clicking of fingers and weird hand motions in the air. Some called it Indian Rhythm; it looked like Christmas confusion.

The end of volley ball tournament brought the Howies victory and ended W.A.A. for this semester. Plans for next semester every day in every way get bigger and better. Rumor has it that coeducational tournaments for sports such as ping pong and horseshoes are part of the plans. The crackling of the chestnuts are calling. So until next semester when Rim Shots will be running the same old circles, I'll see you at the fireplace.

yard of the church. Soft lights shining against the stained glass panes made colored patterns on the snow. Andrew started toward the study door. He knew there was no time to lose, but some thing deep inside him compelled him to raise his arm and with all his might to send the rock in his hand crashing through one of the windows. A shiver of fear shot through him as he heard the tinkling of glass fall into the church. He turned and ran as fast as he could. A passer-by yelled "Stop him, stop him," and someone in Andrew's path caught him by the arms and held him fast.

Andrew squirmed and kicked, but the man was too strong and it was no use. The boy watched with horror as the pastor approached him. The air pulsed with the electricity of the moment as he stopped in front of the trembling child — the rock piece in his hand. Andrew began to sog uncontrollably. 'I didn't mean to do it. I don't know why I threw the rock. My Daddy is dying, and I hated God. Please come and see my daddy now, even if I am bad."

The pastor's voice was kindly, yet stern. "Let the boy go. I'll see to him now." He took the boy's cold hand in his and they began to walk away from the church. "You know, Andrew, that breaking the beautiful window was not the right thing to do. You said that you did it because your father is dying, and you hated God. There is a time, son, when every man must die. Your father soon will be with God in heaven and will no longer have the burden of his sick body. Do not forget that God gave you the parents that you love so dearly and the brothers and sisters you cherish. He will give you strength in this time of need, and will help you be the man you must be. Do you think now that all you have to bring the Christ Child is this rock I found beside his manger bed in the creche scene?"

Andrew did not answer but hung his head, his tears dropping in the snow. "Perhaps we can make arrangements for you to begin paying for the window that you broke. And do not feel that your Christmas is lost. You father will be sent to the hospital if they can help him at all, and the church will arrange for you to have a good meal. My son, God will provide for his children. Remember to give thanks for all the blessings he has already showered on you."

The pair left the arc of light as they hurried on, and stepped into the house hidden in the shadows.

Chi Beta Takes Powder Puff

by Pete Nix

Capitalizing on a hard-charging defensive line. Chi Beta grabbed a safety in the 2nd period and carefully protected their two-point lead for the remainder of the hard-played Powder Puff classic. Throughout the first half Theta Epsilon had their backs to the goal, as the hard-charging Beta line kept the pressure on. In the 2nd half Theta turned the tables and threatened often but could never get into scoring territory.

Helen Franklin and Libby Turner were offensive standouts for Beta, while their defensive line as a unit deserved special recognition. Joanie Schultz, Jo Farley and Sue Kindred led the Theta offense, while Evelyn Crane and Diane Wadas were defensive standouts.

Highlanders Drop Five In A Row

by Joe Quinn

The Maryville College basketball team closed its pre-holiday schedule this past week losing to the U-T freshmen 88-61. The defeat was the fifth in a row for the young Scots. Tom Morris led in individual scoring by netting 25 points.

The Scots are plagued by inexperience, which should correct itself as the season progresses. There are a number of freshmen and sophomores on the team — two of which are starters, Bill Gwenby and Neal Wormsley. Keith Day, another good-looking yearling, has been sidelined with illness.

This year the Scots will lose the services of Pat Flynn and Jim Gregory due to mid-year graduation.

The Scots opened their season by losing to the highly-regarded Tenn. Wesleyan quintet, 89-74. Tom Morris hit for 29 points to lead individual scorers.

Following this home game, the Scots traveled to Tuscu'um where the Pioneers dealt us an 84-74 setback. Again Morris proved the big gun with 30 points.

The Scots continued on to Kentucky where they ran into a stone wall at Georgetown, 102-58.

The following night Centre dealt us an 84-74 defeat with the bright spot being Tom Morris's 33 points.

The team, though lacking in experience is certainly not lacking in spirit. It's going to be a long season but a rewarding one, as the Scots have shown the potential is definitely there.

The next home game on our schedule will be Wednesday, Jan 8 when we tackle the U-T Frosh for the second time.

Council Corner

by Margaret Longfellow

Student Council meeting of December 14:

Harry Crane reported from the Projects Committee that the milk machine for Memorial Hall will be located and installed in the dorm after the holidays.

A council member asked that the use of the upper rooms in Thaw for study be investigated. There has been some question about students studying there at night.

Bob Goodlin read a letter proposing a compromise between the newspaper strike proposal and the standing rules. Discussion followed on the topics proposed.

Topics to be brought up at Student-Faculty Senate were discussed. They are to be (1) the matter of sudents being represented on the disciplinary board, (2) the question of a student-faculty cut system committee.

The subject of honor reports was talked over. A committee was set up to see if there are better ways of checking on church attendance.

The subject of chapel worship was discussed. It was agreed that the students appreciate the improvement of the chapel services on the part of the faculty.

Student Council meeting December 11:

Gray Clark reported that the Social Committee is getting new curtains for the student center.

Jack Emory stated that the Athletic Committee had met and approved the football lettermen.

Bob Goodlin appointed the Leadership Training Committee. They are chairman, Joan Neckerman, Peggy Longfellow, Larry Stearns and Jeanne Greaves.

The pros and cons of having a student on the disciplinary board was discussed. It was pointed out that there would be great responsibility involved. Perhaps the students chosen would be "set apart" for a while until the tradition of such a position would be accepted. The council voted to propose to Student-Faculty Senate that such a plan be put in action.

Smith, Hawkins To Pilot Football

by Pete Nix

The highlight of the football banquet was the election of next year's captain, Earl Smith, and Co-captain, John Hawkins. Local businessman Jack Proffit served as toastmaster. Short talks were given by President Ralph Lloyd, Dean Frank McClelland, Coaches Lombe Honaker, Marvin Mitchell, John A. Davis and Tom Cragan.

To begin what is hoped will become an annual part of the banquet, the Alumni Association presented trophies to Bob Beam, who was selected by his teammates as the most valuable player on the 57' squad, and to Earl Lawson, who was selected by the coaches as the year's most improved player.

After we had received the benediction Mrs. Summers served cookies and hot chocolate, and it was then time to depart for home.

Although the snow had continued, and the wind had drifted the road shut, the county road crew had cleared the main highway, and we were home again in a short time.

All this took place a good many years ago. Since then we have moved to California, and the children are grown and married with homes of their own, but every Christmas with the singing of the carols I think of our "return to the manger." It seems to have been a good idea. I wonder if the people of First Congregational Church still observe the tradition. Maybe someday I'll drive back East and see.—

A Christmas Poem

Mary's Child
Mary's Son
King of all the world to Come;
A human Boy,
The God in Man
And for us—this was God's plan.
Adored by Kings
Scourged by fools,
For us He died; Salvation's Tool.
His Day nears
Not far away
The Day for which the faithful pray.

New Students Here Come From All Sections

Kris Ramsey and Phyllis Stine

The Highland Echo wants to extend a since welcome to all the new students on campus this semester. So that the student body will become better acquainted with these new people, we have interviewed three of them. We are sorry that it was not possible to find out more about all of them but time and space would not allow. Other than those three interviewed, the list of new students for the second semester includes: Horace Downey, Maryville; Richard Heischman, Columbus, Ohio; Kenneth Huff, Knoxville; George Moody, Birmingham, Michigan; James Morrow, Knoxville; Lenville Powell, Walland; Mrs. Sara Sine, Maryville; John Talmage, San Francisco, California; Clay Vandergriff, Maryville; all freshmen. Franklin Griffith, LaFollette; John Llewellyn, Maryville; Wanida Mantharanij, Thailand; all sophomores, and:

Alex Hody

Alex Hody is one of the new students on Maryville campus this semester. Alex was born in Viskunhalas, Hungary living in Budapest until the revolution in 1956 when he came to America. Astoria, Long Island is his present home. Several organizations and a friend in Long Island helped to establish home in this country.

Alex is a freshman taking histroy, Bible, biology, and physical education. As for his ambition, Alex hopes to become an American citizen in four years and at the end of his college education a professor of history in a university.

Herb Thompson

In case you've been wondering who that tall, blond boy in Vesper Choir is, he is Herb Thompson form Momence, Illinois who came to Maryville this semester, having attended Western Illinois State College, Macomb, Illinois, for the past two years and Maryville his freshman year. He has three brothers, two of whom are former Maryville College students. Sports and music are two of Herb's favorite interests and he is majoring in Music Education. In addition to being a member of Vesper Choir, Herb belongs to Kappa Phi. He likes Maryville in every respect.

Edgar Moros

One of the new peronalities on campus this semester is a friendly young man, Edgar Moros, whose is in Caracus, Venezuela. Edgar came to the United States on January 6 of this year, and on the eighth of January began classes as a freshman here at Maryville College. He is taking Bible, physical education, biology, and English. Edgar's native language is Spanish, but he has no trouble with English, having formerly studied it along with French, Latin, and Greek.

After graduation from college, Edgar plans to enter medical school and return to Venezuela to practice medicine. Because of his desire to be a doctor, Edgar came to the United States where he could receive better training. He learned about Maryville through contacts at the "Colegio Americano", a Presbyterian secondary school in Caracus, which he attended for four years before entering Centeral University, Caracus, for one year of college work.

Edgar is interested in music, both playing instruments and singing, and is fond of sports. He is very happy here at Maryville and likes everything about it "expect the rain"

Susprizes, Sneezes Part Of Theta Fun

by Peggy Reid

"Si Deus nobiscum, quis contra nos?" resounded from the walls of Theta parlor as the new semester began with Theta spirit renewed. Our president, Judy Cummings, had a longer vacation than most, giving the Vice-President, Ruth Wagner, a chance to call for reports from Doris Watt, Secretary and Carlah Petersen, holder of the purse strings. Lou Lewis is our Chaplain, while Charlotte Cathey and Peggy Moorehead, Program Chairmen, are responsible for our activity planning. With what has been in just two weeks as an indication of what is to come, we predict a big year for Theta.

With a crash and a clatter Helen Moore entered Theta parlor and unpacked a suitcase of "susprises", revealing various and sundry articles belonging to sister Thetas. In order to reclaim them, a little "action" was involved. Grey Clarke even succeeded in bringing us the Alpha Sigma gavel!

Have you ever been in a sneezing contest? Most Thetas tried their skill following the directions of Karen Kennedy, as a part of last Saturday's "Game Night."

If you are looking for a Theta tonight, you will find her bundled up, heading for the Amphitheatre in the woods, where with other hardy souls she will cook hot dogs by a blazing bonfire, and from five o'clock till seven have a lot of Theta fun.

Sheriff Joseph D. Lohman Will Be Speaker At Lecture Series Monday

Sheriff Joseph D. Lohman of Cok County, Illinois will be the lecture at Maryville College will Lecture Series, Monday, January 27, at 8 p.m., in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall. His topic for lecture at Maryvilel College will be "Juvenile Delinquency."

The territory which Mr. Lohman presided over as sheriff includes the city of Chicago. Because this city is one of the most populous and important in our nation, Sheriff Lohman's position is one of outstanding importance. He is recognized as one of the nation's distinguished sociologists and criminologists and as an authority on juvenile delinquency and the causes of crime.

Mr. Lohman has served on the faculty of the University of Chicago and he has been Chairman of the Illinios Parole and Pardon Board under Governor Stevenson. At times he has been mentioned for the governorship of Illinois. Sheriff Lohman was given the Medal of Freedom for meritorious service with Prisoners of War in Korea.

Second Lecture

The second lecture for this semester will be held on March 6 in the Music Hall. Donald Grant, from Great Britian, will speak on the current events of Europe and the world. Mr. Grant was very well received at Maryville College when he spoke on International Affairs several times in previous years.

Dr. Cartledge

On April 15, Dr. Groves Cartledge, will speak to us on the interesting topic of "Atoms and Ideas." Dr. Cartledge, who is the father of a member of our faculty, Miss Mathilda Cartledge, is also a widely known chemist for the Oak Ridge National Labratories.

The public is cordially invited to attend these various lectures this semester in the Music Hall of the Fine Arts Center.

Mr. Arthur Bushing Dean of Men

Mr. Arthur Bushing, assistant professor of English, is now the Dean of Men.

Mr. Bushing was born near the Canadian border in the state of Washington. Later his parents moved to Middle Tennessee. He received his B.A. degree here at Maryville. Later he studied for a year at the University of Stanford.

During the month of January in 1943, he taught physics here at Maryville College. He then entered the armed service for a three year period from 1943 to 1946. He fought in the second world war in the European campaign. At the end of his term in the army he studied for a short time at the University of Paris.

On his return to the United States, he taught at the University of Tennessee. In 1947 he came to Maryville to teach while attending classes at the University of Tennessee. He received his M.A. degree from thi university. He also took several summer courses at the University of Iowa.

On July 1, 1957, Mr. Bushing was appointed to the office of Dean of Men. One of the main jobs of the Dean is counseling. He is available for counseling on vocations, individual problems, and social problems. He works closely with the pastors who provide counseling serwce on campus so that the students will have every opportunity for any help they might need even if its nothing more than a little understanding.

The basic job of the Dean's office is to provide a link between the administration and the student body. The Dean is able to carry to the administration the feelings and views of the students and to the students the views and feelings of the administration. In this way the administration is better able to adopt school policy for the good of all.

The office of the Dean is not just a problem corner, though, but a place where the students can come to understand the administration and the administrators. Dean Bushing encourages the men on campus to come to him with anything that they feel could be improved upon. The Dean's office is always ready and willing to listen to constructive ideas from the students. Dean Bushing personally said that one of the things he liked best about his job was the opportunity he had for hearing the good ideas that come from the student body.

He also keeps in touch with the various men's organizations on campus. He does this to keep in touch with the men themselves, and so he will know their feelings on different things and how they are getting along on campus.

Dean Bushing says that half of the battle is to get the students to bring their problems, differences, and ideas to him. A sore, if not taken care of, will festr and spread. Don't let this happen to any difficulty you may be having. Use this opportunity provided to get help. Dean Bushing may be reached during the fourth period in the morning, and from 2:00 o'clock on in the afternoon.

MC Alumnus Writes A Vivid Biography

Elbert B. Smith, who was raised in East Tennessee and attended the University of Tennessee and Maryville College, has written a well-rounded portrait of one of Tennessee's most illustrious former residents, Thomas Hart Benton. The new biography is entitled "Magnificent Missourian," and is the life story of the man who was the personification of noisy, brawling, egotistical America in its great age of growing pains. J. B. Lippincott Company will publish "Magnificent Missourian" on January 22.

Nineteen-year-old Thomas Hart Benton came to Tennessee from North Carolina in 1801, with his widowed mother and family. They settled on a homesteadd of 2,560 acres on the West Harpeth River, twenty-five miles south of Nashville. When he later moved to Missouri, Thomas Hart Benton went on to serve in the U. S. Senate for thirty years; he was the great Senatorial spokesman for Jacksonian Democracy, and helped to create and led most of the land, tariff, debt, currency, banking, expansion, and foreign policies which made up the program of the Democratic Party for almost two decades.

Elbert B. Smith has an A. B. degree from Maryville College ('40), and was a part-time student at the University of Tennessee. After receiving his Ph. D. in history from the University of Chicago in 1949, he became associated with the faculty of Youngstown Uni-

The Tournament will be on Jan. 31st and Feb. 1st. Dan Ellis, Keith Ham, Ross McGill, Bob Goodlin, Dale Young and Howard McCuen will enter the men's division. Corita Erwin, Eleonore Koster, Betty Miller and Anna Keitt will enter the women's division. Other events will include oratory, after-dinner speaking, and impromptu and extemporaneous peaking. Dr. James Hine To Lead The February Meetings

The February Meetings will begin next Wednesday morning at 9:45 a.m. This is one week earlier than the date printed in the Catalog last spring.

Dr. Hine

A team of three able leaders has been invited. The speaker is Rev. Dr. James R. Hine, Director of the McKinley Foundation at the University of Illinois and Pastor of the McKinley Memorial Presbyterian Church. Dr. Hine graduated from Purdue University with the degree of Bachelor of Science in Mechanical Engineering and entered the engineering profession. In due time, however, he wa convinced he should enter the ministry and took theological work at McCormick Theological Seminary. After graduation he served for six years as Pastor of the Hanover Presbyterian Church and a teacher in the department of religion at Hanover College, Indiana. He was then called to what is perhaps the largest university student center which the Presbyterian Church sponsors in America, that at the University of Illinois. During his fifteen years of service there he has become widely known as a leader in the college student field. He lectures regularly at the University of Illinois, gives lectures each year on pateral counseling at McCormick Seminary in Chicago, speaks widely among colleges and universities, is active in the National Council of Family Relations,, and has written at least three volumes in the field of marriage and the family.

Dr. Hollis

The song leader will be Rev. Dr. Joe Ed Hollis, Minister of usic and Education at First Presbyterian Church, Daytona Beach, Florida. Dr. Hollis holds a Ph. D. degree in Music Education as well as the B. D. degree and, although a relatively young man, has established a reputation in the three fields of music, education, and the ministry. He takes the place of Rev. Dr. John Magill, who has led the singing for the past five years but could not come this year.

Barrie

Dr. Henry Barraclough ("Barrie"), of Philadelphia, will be the accompanist for the seventh time and his return will be welcomed by his hosts of friends here.

As in former years, the chapel service each day will be at 9:45 a.m. and the evening service at 7:00 p.m.

Tomorrow, the Sunday preceding the opening of the Meetings, there will be a special introductory service at the New Providence Presbyterian Church at which President Lloyd will be the guest preacher and the Maryville College Choir will play a prominent role. At the Vesper service that evening Dr. Francis W. Pritchard, pastor of New Providence Church, will be the speaker.

ON THE FACE OF THE DEEP

Writer's Workshop Column—

When it was all over, the man sat with his back against a shell-shattered tree trunk and gazed with half-dead eyes at the scene in front of him. A smoke-like haze filtered the brilliant sunlight as the songs of a few remaining birds broke the stillness af a late spring afternoon.

His thoughts wandered and seemed often to fix on the lump-like objects that had once been men, lying in the stark, torn earth surrounding a small, softly-rounded hill.

Yesterday, had it been only as short a time ago as that?

He reached down and adjusted the bandage on his side.

Why can't I remember? It must have been important.

It seemed important when it happened but now I can't even remember why.

His hand wandered into the pocket of the dirt-incrusted shirt and came out holding a small, black leather-covered book with gold lettering on the front which seemed to mean something but yet meant nothing. It was all erased from his memory.

Why can't I remember, why, why Those men out there, dead, all dead. Am I dead too or just dreaming?

Maybe I'll wake up and Marianne will have breakfast ready.

He smiled.

Forget, Marianne's dead, just like everyone else, like those out there. You are lost and gone forever, oh my darling Marianne. Ha! Rhyme doesn't make any sense. No rhyme or reason. Supposed to be Clementine but she's dead too. Doesn't matter, all dead, all gone. Bang! Shut up, you. You are not the least bit funny. Oh, no! You don't think so? Bang! There, you're dead too. Not funny today, but it's not today, it's yesterday and I don't even know what yesterday was. Yes, sir, private, you are on the ball. Yes, sir, yes indeed.

A slight breeze began as the sun reached its zenith and began the long afternoon trek that would end in nightfall.

Sleep, sleep, weep no more my lady.

He drank deeply from the canteen and dozed fitfully for a while. When he awoke, the sun shone brightly in his face, causing him to smile and blink stupidly.

Hello, old Sun. You're not dead, are you? you and me and the birds. Those out there are. They are waiting for the birds. That's all they have to wait for now.

His eyes rested on a small, spring flower.

Well, you're here too; all kinds of company. Go to hell!

Savagely he pulled the flower and tore it into a dozen small fragments which slowly drifted away on the fresh, spring air.

Watch is broken. Yesterday, I guess. No matter, no time anymore, but it will be night soon. Night and sleep.

Through the long afternoon he sat gloomily watching the field in front of him and trying to remember what had happened the day before. Or was it today? He couldn't recall.

Finally the sun began to sink and as its last orange rays disappeared, his memory began to clear.

Yes, yes, I remember now. Marianne, I'm coming home, home to you at last. I can now because it's all over. Now I know. Yesterday, yesterday was big. It was the day of, of —

All was quiet then. The sun had gone entirely and no moon or stars shene in the black, cold sky. The birds and insects were silent and the air was calm and quiet. The day had ended and there was darkness . . .

Wake Up 'Lil Students

As this is the first issue of the Echo published this year, you, dear reader, undoubtedly expect certain things of the first editorial of the year. These, we solemnly promise not to give you. There will be no smiling welcome back, for if you are welcome, then you are no doubt aware of the fact, and if you are not, you are equally painfully aware of the fact. So, we do solemnly promise not to welcome you back.

Equally solemnly, we promise not to tell you what the Echo hopes to accomplish this semester. If you read the editorials at all, and you must, or you wouldn't be reading this, you will remember the last editorial published last semester. In it was a list of achievements and hoped-for achievements. Newspaper policy doesn't change much. What we aim to do is have a good paper in the way which seems best to us. By a good paper, we mean a student's paper. You all know that.

We need more support, but we won't even mention that. You know it, and my mentioning it won't make you jump up and join the staff. So we'll let that go, also.

So what is left to write about? An incident which happened at Morehead College, which has caused some controversy on their campus.

During an exam, some movies were taken of the students, unknown to the students. The instructor had rigged a camera in his room in such a way that there was no indication whatsoever that it was present. He passed out the exams and left the room, as was usual proceedure feor him. He even gave the door an extra big slam as he left, so that the students would feel that they were alone. Then he pushed a button, and the cameras ground away.

Wha showed up on the film, which was clear and distinct? Evidence enough to have three students thrown out of school. The instructor said that he would not have the students expelled but gave fair warning that he intended to use the camera again, and that next time it caught students cheating during exams, the proper punishment would be administered.

We wonder what would happen if a camera were rigged here at Maryville, with its emphasis on fair play and honesty. Since we, too, have taken tests, and normally do not walk around with our eyes closed, we think we have some idea of what would happen. Let us vetnure to guess that in a normal class, the camera would have missed a few, if it caught only three. Those unwilling to face reality will say that this is totally erroneous, and those who know what we are talking about will say that this is conservative. The fact is, though, that we are in the same situation as Morehead, except that we have not had the pictures taken to prove it.

Sudents at Morehead blame the instructors, for lack of proper supervision. They are partly right, we would say. The instructors blame the school's program for lack of a emphasis on the importance of honesty, and the value of truthfulness. This may also be a part of the answer, we are not in a position to judge this.

There's the problem. We are not going to try to solve it, for larger minds than ours have tried unsuccessfully. We have no intention of pointing a long skinny finger at you and pronouncing the magic words, "don't cheat." This would not only be a waste of time, but would be an insult to the intelligence of most college students. We just wonder, though, what it is in man which would make him spend a thousand dollars for the opportunity to cheat.

Confessions of a Mouse

Hi, my name is William. You all know me, I live in the library. I guess some of you would never notice though, I'm a mouse. As a matter of fact, I'm Rodney's cousin or something like that. You see, way back when old Anderson Hall was first built, our common ancestor, old Rodney the 1, moved in and set up housekeeping.

I am a descendent of his first wife's family, who moved out of Anderson and over to Thaw, when she died, and old Rodney married again. As you can probably gather, there is still a bit of hard feeling in the family, in fact, I thought it rather unfair when Rodney had a whole column to himself and nobody even mentioned me, especially since my branch of the family has always been considered the literary branch through our long contact with the the library. Well, I have my chance now, and I really don't want to seem bitter.

Like I said, I live in the library, and let me tell you, it's no life for any decent mouse. For years I've had a little nest back in the old part of the library known as the museum or the reading room. Things have been nice and quiet until last semester. Then what happens? First, they rearrange things. They put the 100's back right on top of where my nest used to be. And then, to add insult to injury, they put that noisy microfilm machine back there, and add this record table for the language students. Not that I'm opposed to languages as such, like I said my family has a long literary history. But, it was getting to the point where every time I tried to take a nap, I'd either find myself dreaming in French or Spanish or else I'd be thoroughly aroused by that infernal microfilm machine. So I did what any self respecting mouse would do. . . . I moved!

Now, in past years, one of the quietest places in the whole library has been the card catalogue. It seems that most of the students would come and ask the librarians questions before they would ever think of looking in the catalogue. So packed up my family and we moved into the card catalogue (into the drawer marked mor-mum, of course.) We setled down for some peace and quiet. Well, I guess I should have known better. I'd forgotten that it was second semester, and what I didn't know was that the library had started a new policy of giving the freshmen a detailed tour of the library before they started on their freshmen term papers, with special emphasis on such things as the use of the card catalogue. (So they wouldn't ask so many questions, I guess, although I don't think that its done much god along those lines.)

Anyway, you can imagine what happened. I think every freshman (and junior) in the school must have hit that card catalogue in one night. It was mobbed! I had to laugh at one thing that happened though. There was one of those real tall freshman fellows who couldn't find room on the little table by the catalogue, to set his tray. So he set it up on op of the catalogue and used it there. He was tall enough to manage nicely, but it sure did look funny.

Mob Hits!

Well, I had settled down for a nice night's sleep, when the mob hit, and was I disgusted! I couldn't do much else but move. So I decided to try once more, and curled up behind volume eight of the Encyclopedia Brittannica. But no luck. In the first place, the library was so noisy, I couldn't sleep. I've never seen so many people wandering around. The poor librarian was doing her best to keep things quiet, but there were just too many of them for her. And then those freshmen started on the encyclopedias. Gee, but they asked a lot of questions. There was a little group of them who put their heads together and tried to figure out the edition date on the Encyclopedia Americana. Finally they had to go ask the library assistant, who didn't know either (she should have) and she had to ask the librarian-in-charge. Then there was another fellow who kept wandering around looking for volume fourteen of the Catholic Encyclopedia. I don't think he ever found it, since I happen to know that it's missing from the library. That reminds of something else that happened. About this time the head librarian herself came through looking for a Dummelow Bible Commentary that nobody could find. I don't think she found it either. I hope she does.

On To The Circulation Desk

By this time I was thoroughly disgusted, and I had given up completely any hope of sleeping. So I figured I might as well wander over to the circulation desk and see what was going on. Plenty was, I mean the place was hopping! Those poor library assistants were being worn to a frazzle.

These student assistants are a rare bred of a cat (excuse me, I mean a rare breed of person). For some reason they seem to like working here. After a night like that one I begin to wonder just why. They get asked more questions and they don't SEEM to mind. But I did see one of them looking darts at a freshman who kept asking where Life and Time were. Finally she took him by the hand and guided him to the bound periodicals. He caught on and didn't ask any more questions, about periodicals, that is.

Those assistants must be really dead on their feet by the time 10:00 P.M. rolls around. What with stamping books until their hands ache and carrying those big periodicals up from the basement. . . . Did you know that the bound issues of the New York Times must measuree at least three feet by two feet? I don' see how some of those smaller girls manage to carry them. But they stay with the job. I overheard one of them talking the other night.

"It's a rat race," she said, (Did she have to use that particular term?) "But it's doing the service of getting the information to the people. It's working wih books and people, wo of my favorite objects."

Well, what a high-falutin' way to put it! But I guess she really meant what she said. But anyhow, I wandering from my subject. I was reminded of all this while I was sitting under the circulation desk, watching all the sutdents coming.

Tired, I tell you!

So goes life in the library. I really don't know why I told you all this, except that I get so tired of hearing about Rodney. I want you students to know that I'm here too. Right now my living arrangements are rather flexible. As I've told you, I've been evicted twice and I really don't know where we're going next. I've thought about the basement, but it's not quiet down there any more since all those assistants keep coming down for pre-1930 periodicals. I've even considered moving ou of the building completely, but I do have a certain family dignity to uphold, and anyway, things can't be this bad all the time. Maybe after a while, when term papers and special studies are well under way, things will quiet down a litle. I sure hope so.
